BAPTIST STATE CONVENTION.

Great Meeting at Greensboro.

Greensboro, N. C., Dec. 6.—After devotional services this morning, the first business of the Baptist State Convention was the announcement of the committees for the work of the convention.

Rev. Livingston Johnson then read the report of the Board of Missions and Sunday Schools, which showed such remarkable progress during the year, upon the conclusion of the reading, oration, the congregation arose and sang "Praise God From Whom all Blessings Flow."

Rev. Dr. A. T. Roberston, of Louisville, Ky., of the Theological Seminary, was introduced to the convention and made an address on the "Dignity of the Ministry." He made a fine address and was given close attention. When Dr. Roberston had concluded his address on the "Dignity of the Ministry" pledges were received for the Students' Aid Fund of the Seminary at Louisville, Ky., which is for the support of North Carolina young men in school there. The pledges came in fast.

Rev. J. W. Gwatney, of Hickory, made the report of the trustees of the Thomasville orphanage. The report reviewed the work of the orphanage over twenty years ago to the present time, showing a most flattering condition, there being 333 children now there well cared for, contributions of nearly $25,000 having been made for their support.

A class 17 little boys and girls from the orphanage, from 6 to 12 years of age were introduced to the convention, and occupied seats on the platform. It was an inspiring scene, as the sweet little ones sang "Sunbeams" and several other appropriate selections to the delighted audience. Dr. J. M. Frost, of Nashville, Tenn., mounted the rostrum and made a beautiful talk, telling the children the people they saw before them were the Baptists of North Carolina who were caring for them as long as they needed it, and he wished it were possible for them to kiss every one present.

Dr. H. W. Battle introduced Rev. C. H. Detwiler, of West Market street Methodist church, who gave a cordial welcome to the convention tendering the use of the church.

The entire afternoon session was devoted to hearing the report of the Sunday school board and in discussion of that subject. The report was made by the chairman, Rev. Dr. William Lunsford, of Asheville, who captivated the immense audience by a splendid address.

Greensboro, N. C., Dec. 7.—This morning, of the third day session of the Baptist State Convention was devoted principally to hearing reports from the State Board of Missions and the Trustees of the Baptist University for Women, Rev. Baylus Cade, for the State of Missions made the report for the body.

It reviewed the great sum of $30,000 had been raised and expended, and recommended that $40,000 be raised for the coming year. Dr. Cade made a strong plea for State Missions.

He was followed by corresponding secretary, Livingston Johnson, who spoke of the sacrificing work of the home missionaries, and requested some of these evangelists to come to the platform.

Mr. J. W. Bailey addressed the convention making a powerful appeal for the larger support of the State Mission field, more missionaries and better pay for those at work.

The report recommending $40,000 for the current year for State Missions was adopted with enthusiasm.

Rev. J. C. Massee, of Raleigh, presented the report on the Baptist University for Women, and at its conclusion made a splendid presentation of the claims for woman's education and of the progress made by the University in that direction.

Chairman T. M. Pittman, of Henderson, read the report of the foreign missions committee. It showed that the annual gain in contributions was 12 1-2 per cent.

At this afternoon's session of the convention, the committee recommended Wilmington as the next place for the State convention.

N. C. CONFERENCE.

The Methodist Host in Rocky Mount.

Rocky Mount, N. C., Dec. 6.—In all things educational put the Methodists first. Such is the message of President John C. Kilgo to the North Carolina conference today. He stirred the assembly to its depths and set serious thoughts to work among the entire body. He advocated the abandonment almost entirely of private denominational schools and urged the members of the Methodist church, to encourage and support enthusiastically as citizens the commonwealth's great public school system.

Some of the districts submitted reports showing a deficiency financially, but tremendous forward strides in winning converts and a soul expanding and growing in the knowledge of the truth which is not dependent upon anything human, but which is spiritual. Several sections have suffered from unfavorable crop conditions, and these affected detrimentally the material interests of the church; but the cause of Christ has not suffered. There can be no spiritual retrogression in this noble body of itinerant preachers.

The presiding elders all made good report of the work in their respective districts.

The classes of the first, second and third years were examined and advanced.

The board of education in a report recommended that the second Sunday in July of each year be observed as educational day in the Sunday schools and that addresses on education be delivered, and that $2,000 of the assessment for education be appropriated for the establishment of a chair of Biblical literature.

Dr. J. C. Kilgo made a most interesting address on Trinity College.

Rocky Mount, N. C., Dec.—7 Conference did not deviate today from business routine, and nothing spectacular attended the session.

The preachers reported for their charges today. Many churches have suffered a hard year, but in the depths of trouble is the valley of vision, and no complaint is made of spiritual blessings. These preachers are full of all that fills the heart with true delight.

Rev. J. R. Morse, a returned missionary from Korea, delivered a missionary lecture in the church this afternoon. He is a native Carolinian, a son of North Carolina Methodism, and his utterances awakened a lively enthusiasm.

Rev. W. J. May, local elder, surrendered his credentials through Presiding Elder R. B. John, of the Washington district.

Rev. J. D. Saunders, of Lake Landing through Presiding Elder R. B. John, requested to be continued on trial. He was in the class of the second year.

Dr. J. H. Clewell, of the Moravian church, brought greetings to the conference and he declared that he thanked God for such a body as this.

Dr. W. D. Morton, of the Presbyterian church, was presented to conference and brought a word of spiritual good cheer. He said the Methodists had afforded him a great deal of inspiration.

Rev. F. L. Church surrendered his credentials through Presiding Elder John H. Hall, of the Elizabeth City district.

Dr. T. N. Ivey, editor of the Advocate, said the paper had had a prosperous year, 5,000 having been added to the subscription list, and he heartily emphasized the recommendation of the committee to increase the circulation to 10,000.

The educational board heard a committee from Maxton and accepted the offer to establish a female college under church auspices.

Mixed Relations.

In a certain Western town there lives a couple, both of whom before marriage, had been widowed. She had been left with four children to face the battle of life, while he had three to take care of.

Today they have ten children running about the house, and the mother has a hard time to keep peace in the family. Usually the trouble is between the children of the former marriages, but the other day, relates Harper's Weekly, things were somewhat different, and the woman knew not what to do in the case, so she rushed out of the house and shouted to her husband:

"Oh, John; come in quick! Your children and my children are whipping our children."

Petty Criticism.

Cyrus Small's time was largely spent in discovering the faults and shortcomings of things animate and inanimate, while Mrs. Small, as it seemed, was equally vigilant in attempting to bring forward something of which she could say, "There, you can't pick any flaws in that!"

Once she thought this happiness would be hers. A certain man in the town inherited large wealth under peculiar circumstances. It was his under the law, but when the court awarded it to him he stood up and said that in view of all the facts in the case, he believed that the property belonged of right to another heir. His action was generally looked upon as a noble one.

Mrs. Small was loud in her expressions of praise.

"Yes, I know," said her husband, "'twas a fine thing. Few men would have done it, and that's why he felt so awkward to stand up there and say what he did. He showed that he felt embarrassed by the way he stood."

"Cyrus Small, I should hope you would not find fault with his attitude when he was doing such a grand thing!"

"Oh, no; I have no wish to criticize," said Cyrus, "but if I had been on the platform, facing all those people, I should have tried to toe out a little more."

HORSESHOES.

Doubt as to What Nation and Age First Used Them.

Horseshoes were not known to the ancients, and there is much doubt as to what nation and age first used them. An authority on the subject says: "The first kind of shoe known was not a shoe at all. It was a species of sock, often made with woven or plaited hemp. Camels in ancient warfare were thus shod, and so were mules and horses when their hoofs were hurt. In time of heavy snow these socks were necessary to prevent the horses from sinking up to their girths in the snow, according to an old writer. Similar socks are used by the Russians in Kamchatka for their sledge dogs, and this kind is provided with little holes for the claws. Horse soles were also made of woven broom, reeds and bast strapped on, such as are still used in Japan, where they are made by the children, who wait about the roads offering them for sale at a low figure. The next step made by the old Romans and Greeks seems to have been the manufacture of leather soles and shoes. But the great drawback to all these hoof protectors was the galling of the straps, and they were really only of substantial use in the case of baggage animals or when the road was rough and dangerous. Delay were often occasioned by the shoes sticking in the mud and letting the horse go on in front.

"So the old 'mule doctors' had to devise means of hardening horses' hoofs. One advised stone slabs fastened with iron clamps to the ground which formed the stable, another recommended oak flooring, while yet another prescribed the smearing of the bottom of the feet of draft animals with pitch. The exact date when metal shoes were first brought out is not known, but it is said that Nero had the mules attached to 1,000 carriages shod with silver sandals, while Poppaea's mules were gold shod. These may be the hipposandals which have been found wherever the Romans settled—in Germany, France and England. The form of the hipposandal varies. The commonest shape is an oval plate of metal drawn out backward on both sides and in some cases fitted with a curved hook. There are wings to the sides, and in front they are furnished with eyes and rings. Another kind is distinguished by the bending upward of the sides in front and behind, suggesting to the eye the form of an ancient galley. They were fixed to the hoofs by straps passed through clips and rings.

"French horseshoecologists think that the Celts were the first to use nailed on shoes before the Christian era and that they popularized their use throughout Gaul, Germany and England. Many shoes have been found in graves, the favorite horses having been slain and buried with their masters in accordance with primitive beliefs as to the hereafter. Between the French towns of Langres and Dijon, near the spot where Caesar encamped his army at the siege of Alesia (B. C. 52), small fullered shoes have been found at a depth of two or three feet in the ground. Some have nails in the shape of a Roman T and are provided with clinches. Others ascribed by geologists to the sixth century have been found in the Bernese Jura. All these had six large, round nail holes, and opposite to each hole the border of the shoe is scalloped. Some shoes had heels and some had not. But the heels were hardly of any size and, moreover, lacked strength."—Chicago News.

Secret of Success in Journalism.
The first fundamental quality for success in journalism is a keen interest in everything; the power of throwing yourself into any subject, finding a joy in handling it. The second quality is a capacity for forming a very clear idea as to what it is you want to say and a passion for expressing your ideas so clearly that the greatest idiot in the world cannot misunderstand them. Thirdly, you should be inclined to put a cap on your head whenever you get a chance and the ability to sleep up arrears. I do not say anything about what ought to be taken for granted—namely, good health, industry, conscientiousness, and so on. Above all, I should say a journalist should be keen.—W. T. Stead in Grand Magazine.

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

An Atlantic Liner Passenger and the Superfluous Pilot.

Among the passengers on an Atlantic liner when she left New York recently was a charming young woman from St. Louis, who was making her first trip abroad. The vessel had not proceeded far when the fair passenger approached the captain and said:

"The ship appears to be stopping,
captain. Why should we stop here?"

"We are here to let the pilot off," was the reply.

"To let the pilot off?" exclaimed
the young woman in a tone of polite incredulity. "Do you mean to say that the pilot doesn't cross the ocean with us and direct the course?"

"I mean just that," answered the captain.

The fair passenger pondered for a bit. Then smiling as if a bright idea had occurred to her, she added:
"Oh, I suppose after he has set the rudder pointing in the right direction that there's nothing left for him to do, so he goes."—Woman's

RIGHTS UNDER A PATENT.

Each of the Three Constitutes a Separate Monopoly.

To make, to use and to sell are the only ways in which an invention is capable of commercial enjoyment.
The patentee can, if he wishes, sit down and not only not use the invention himself, but prevent others from making or using or selling the patented thing. If any one else makes, uses or sells the subject of the patent the courts will grant the patentee an injunction against further infringement and a recovery of the profits made.

Each of these three rights—to make, to use and to sell—is a separate monopoly and may, by proper instruments, be granted or sold separately. For instance, a patentee of a machine could grant to a manufacturer the exclusive right to make the machines for him (of course under proper restrictions as to price, etc.), and the manufacturer would be an infringer if he used the machines or sold them to others. The patentee could then grant to a jobber the exclusive right to sell the machines (reserving proper compensation to himself, such as a percentage of the profits), and the jobber would be an infringer if he either made or sold the machines. The exclusive right to use the machines could then be granted to a consumer, who in turn would have no right to make or sell the machines.

The exclusive right to use an invention for each of several purposes can be separately sold. For instance, a patentee of a process for making watches could not only sell the exclusive right to use the process but also the exclusive right to use the process for making watches. The exclusive right to use the process for making watches could then be granted to a watchmaker, who in turn would be an infringer if he had made signs and, vice versa, the sign manufacturer would have been retrained from making watch dials.

A process of drying gunpowder was found to be applicable to drying breakfast foods, and the owners, after getting all they had ever looked for from the patent from the gunpowder rights, reaped a second and unexpected harvest from the sale of the rights for breakfast foods. The rights under a patent for a machine can be divided in the same way.—Edwin Prindle in Engineering Magazine.

An Asheboro correspondent of the Charlotte Observer tells an interesting story. Sparks circus was to exhibit in Asheboro last Tuesday. The Sunday evening previous a little band of Christians who had spent the day fasting, met and prayed that God would prevent the circus from exhibiting there. A LITTLE NONSENSE.

Ex-Side Show Strong Arm Lady Max's New and Ideal Job.

A woman who might have been Mrs. Sandow answered the bell. The census enumerator took the name and then asked for the occupation.

"I'm a strong arm woman," said Mrs. Sandow.

"What's that?" "It's like this," she said: "I used to be in a side show. One day a smart looking fellow slipped up to me and said, 'What do you get?' I says, 'Ten an' ten.'" "Well give you twenty," he says.

"Well, I left the show an' went with her. I found she was the president of a woman's club. She took me to a meetin', an' I got my orders before the whole boonch.

"Mary," said the president, "ev'ry Monday mornin' we hev bargain sales at the big department stores. We all like bargains, but the ladies of the club don't stand no show. They are lightweights. They can't get in.

"Now, Mary," she said, "you're a strong woman. You could fell an ox with a blow of your fat. What we want you to do is to take a list once a week of the things we want to buy. Go downtown with it on Monday mornin' and get the goods."

"So that's what I do."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

For Her.

"What I want," pants the comic opera star who had acquired a superabundance of flesh—"what I want is a vehicle for the proper display of my personality. I don't want any ordinary—"

"No, Miss Patyette," interpose the playwright, "you don't want an ordinary vehicle. How would an automobile truck do in these days of auto cars?"—Judge.

Great Work.

"The poets have done a great though unrecognized work for the world," remarked the literary person.

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "They have so many good things which may be quoted that there is no excuse for one being stupidly original."—Washington Star.

Heroism.

Grace—I wonder why Fred proposed to Miss Hasbeen.

Helena—I understand he is making a try for the Carnegie here prize.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Not All Hard.

Housekeeper—I tell you, the price of anthracite these days makes it come hard to the coal buyer.

Wiseman—Yes, but it doesn't make it come hard to the coal cellar. Sometimes it's mixed with bituminous.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Barbecued Rabbit.

Secure a young rabbit and after skinning lay it in salt water for half an hour. Then dip into boiling water, wipe dry and rub the surface with olive oil or sweet butter. Dust with pepper. Put a gridiron over a bed of live coals, lay the rabbit on it and cook tender, turning frequently, so that the surface will not become hard and dry. When done and nicely browned transfer to a buttered serving platter. Have ready a sauce made of four teaspoonfuls of vinegar, one of currant jelly and a pinch of mustard. Pour this over the rabbit, rubbing it in well, and serve at once.

Washing a Sweater.

Use pure soap and water not too hot in washing a sweater. Never rub soap on the sweater. Make suds instead. Rinse the sweater in water of exactly the same temperature as that of the washing water. Every laundress knows that rule for woolens, but not one in a thousand follows it conscientiously. Never hang a wet sweater up to dry. It will sag and stretch and be ruined. Lay it on a clean cloth on the grass in the fresh air and sunshine if you can. If not, lay it on a flat surface anyway or hang it up in a clean cloth bag and let it dry that way.

An Anxious Boy.

While Archbishop Trench was dean of Westminster he delegated Canon Cureton to preach at the abbey on a certain saint's day. On such days the boys of Westminster school attended service and afterward had the rest of the day as holiday. While Mr. Cureton, on the morning of the day he was to preach, was looking over his sermon at the breakfast table his son asked, in a tone vibrating with anxiety:

"Father, is yours a long sermon today?"

"No, Jimmy, not very."

"But how long? Please tell me."

"Well, about twenty minutes, should say. But why are you so anxious to know?"

"Because, father, the boys say they will thrash me awfully if you are more than half an hour."—London Telegraph.

A Bernard Shaw Story.

Arnold Daly, the actor, was talk-
 g about George Bernard Shaw.
 "Mr. Shaw is a vegetarian," he id, "and I once attended a vege-rian banquet in London at which e was the guest of honor. The fare was excellent.

"Mr. Shaw, of course, had to make an address, and I well remember one thing he said. He said that they who persevered in vegetari-anism soon became as fond of vegetables as a certain aged Scot was fond of—was fond of—

"He faltered and said that this Scot was one day observed to limp painfully. A friend stopped him and said:

"What! Lamé?"
 "Temporarily," the Scot replied.
 "I went home sober last night, and my faithful dog grippit me by the leg."

Safe In His Pocket.

The late Duke of Cambridge used to tell with considerable relish the following story of a friend of his, a celebrated colonel:

During the Egyptian war of '89
 Major — was shot in the knee, and the projectile made a hole of some depth. When the surgeons were probing the wound and causing endless torture the poor officer begged to know what they were hunting about for.

"We're searching for the bullet,"
 was the reply.

"What! Looking for the bullet?"
 Why, I've had it in my pocket all the time."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Only an Appetizer.

Many years ago dried solan geese,
 from the Orkneys, used to be imported into Scotland, says the author of "My Strange Pets," and served there as an appetizer, a morsel being eaten at the beginning of a meal.

A worthy farmer gave a dinner to some of his neighbors and in the course of it asked one if he would have "another portion" of the roast.

"I think I will," replied the other. "I ate a bit o' solan goose afore
 I left here, and it has made me very hungry."

"I don't believe in the solan
 geese," broke in another guest. "I et a whole one afore I came awa,
 and I didn't feel a bit the hungrier
 for it."
