

SKINNER-JAMES.

Brilliant Afternoon Wedding—First in New Methodist Church.

Since the announcement a few months ago of their engagement, Greenville has eagerly looked forward to the marriage of Mr. Charles C. Skinner and Miss Nina C. James, than whom there is not among us a more popular couple.

The eventful day has come, and with it every auspicious surrounding to make a happy union of hearts. All that was anticipated was fully realized, for it was indeed a most beautiful marriage. It was the first marriage to take place in the new Jarvis Memorial Methodist church, and this also added interest to the occasion. Nothing that devoted friends could think of and plan to lend beauty to the scene was omitted.

The windows of the church were screened and the electric lights made the interior brilliant. The entire chancel and altar were decorated in green and white, the alcove behind the pulpit being a pyramid of palms and ferns. Sometime before the appointed hour for the ceremony, 2 o'clock, friends of the couple were arriving at the church in large number, and the edifice was soon filled.

As the bridal party entered the church and passed up the aisles to their respective positions about the altar, the choir sang Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus," Mr. Sam Parish, of Norfolk, presiding at the organ.

First came the ushers in couples up opposite aisles, Messrs. Charlie James and Harry Skinner, Jr., J. B. James and Frank Skinner, T. J. Moore and T. G. Skinner, Jr., W. E. Hooker and N. G. White. Each of the gentlemen wore Prince Albert coat, gray trousers with gloves and tie to match, with silk hat in hand.

Following these came the bride's maids singly up opposite aisles, crossing in front and passing behind the altar rail. These were Misses Kathleen Ballard (Franklinton), Nell Nelson (Halifax), Charlotte Fennell (Wilmington), Nell Skinner, Irma Cobb, Margaret Skinner, Lottie Blow and Mary Higgs. Each of these was attired in white net dresses and carried pink carnations tied with white tulle.

Next came the dame of honor, Mrs. H. A. White and maid of honor, Miss Mary James, up opposite aisles. The dame of honor's costume was of white crepe de chine and the maid of honor's pink liberty silk, the former carrying white carnations and the latter pink carnations.

Immediately preceding the bride was little Miss Ada James, as flower girl, in white chiffon with lace trimming and carrying pink carnations.

The bride entered with her father, Col. F. G. James. She was robed in full bridal costume of white Duchess satin en train, trimmed with panne velvet, Duchess lace and pearls, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

She was met at the altar by the groom who came through the pastor's study with his brother, Dr. L. C. Skinner, of Ayden, as best man.

The ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. M. T. Plyler, soft melody coming from the organ as the marriage vows of the couple were taken.

To the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March the bride and groom passed out the aisle followed by the attendants.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Col. and Mrs. F. G. James.

The callers were received in the hall by ex-Gov. and Mrs. T. J. Jarvis and Mr. and Mrs. H. A. White. At the parlor door they were received by Dr. L. C. Skinner with Miss Mary James. Receiving with the bride and groom in the parlor were Mr. and Mrs. James, parents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Skinner, parents of the groom. Mrs. James was gowned in white Marquise over taffeta trimmed with satin and lace, and carried a bouquet of Parma violets tied with white tulle. Mrs. Skinner was gowned in grey silk with lace trimmings, and carried white carnations.

The receiving party in the library were Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Fennell, Mr. and Mrs. C. Carr and Mrs. James Burton Cherry. Frappe was served in the hall by Mrs. E. B. Ficklen and Miss Ada Wooten.

The decorations throughout the residence were beautiful as well as elaborate. The hall was in red and green with ropes of smilax and a profusion of American beauty roses, the parlor in sweet peas, the library with potted plants.

In the dining room the guests were served by Mesdames J. L. Little, J. L. Wooten, C. O'H. Laughinghouse, R. J. Cobb, J. G. Moye, W. A. Bowen and F. G. Whaley. The decorations were white and green. The table was festooned with smilax, bride roses and marriage bells. The centre piece was a block of ice on a silver waiter wreathed in smilax, a cluster of bride roses, throw over it with Cupid rising out of the roses. A two course menu was served, the ices being in bride roses.

The wedding presents were displayed in the library. These were very numerous and exceedingly handsome. Among them was one from the church in recognition of the bride's faithful service as organist, and one from the Sans Souci club of which she was a member.

Croccia's Italian band was stationed in the upper hall and rendered delightful music during the reception.

The couple departed on the 4:24 train for an extended bridal tour, after which they will be at home in Vondel flats, New York City. The bride's going away gown was a tailor suit of black and white with Persian trimming and hat to match.

The hearty good wishes of all go with the happy couple.

WITH MR. AND MRS. CHARLES SKINNER.

Tuesday evening the bride and groom elect, with the bridal party and visitors, were entertained at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Skinner.

The house was tastfully decorated and the occasion was enlivened by the music of the Italian band.

The receiving party consisted of Mr and Mrs Charles Skinner, Mr and Mrs E. B. Ficklen, Mr. and Mrs Stuart Carr.

Punch was served by Miss Margaret Skinner and Mr. Bert James.

In the dining room delicious viands were served by Misses Whitfield, Whedbee, Ethel Skinner and Mrs. Calhoun.

The bridal party, already numbering many, was increased by the presence of Mrs. Wade, of New York, who arrived on the afternoon train, coming especially Elder T. N. Manning filled his regular appointment at the Free Will Baptist church Sunday morning.

Miss Lala Buck, daughter of Willfred Buck, died Monday evening at 6 o'clock of consumption. She had been lingering for some time, yet she bore her suffering with Christian patience to the end. Three brothers, a sister, a father and a step mother are left to mourn their sad loss. Just blooming into womanhood in her seventeenth year, she was cut off with bright prospects for a useful life.

The funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church Tuesday at 1 o'clock by Rev. B. E. Stanfield, her pastor, assisted by Rev. B. F. Taylor. Nearly all the pupils of W. H. S. were present to pay their last respects to her who had attended several sessions of the school and was an excellent pupil, held in high esteem by both her teachers and schoolmates. At the conclusion of the services, her remains were tenderly borne to the Byrd burial ground where she was laid by the side of her mother to await the final resurrection. Bereaved ones, you have our sympathy, and we pray that God's Holy Spirit may comfort you and help you to be submissive to His will.

Mrs. John Whitfield, of Robertsonville, came in Tuesday evening to visit relatives.

Quiet Times in the Real Estate Market

Special to Reflector.

New York, April 17.—There is no mistake about it that New York is having dull times in its real estate market. According to many real estate brokers prices are at a level that makes it difficult to find buyers, in spite of the fine returns that realty is bringing in. The condition of the money market, while better than a month ago, is still unsatisfactory, and practically prohibitive of operation on a large scale.

Weather.

Partly cloudy and colder tonight. Thursday fair.

ally to attend the approaching nuptials. Her handsome appearance and charming personality won for her at once a place in the esteem of her new friends.

Another special and charming feature of the evening was the vocal music rendered by Miss James, the bride elect and Miss Lottie Blow, and the entire evening was characterized by the same joyousness which pervaded all the ante-nuptial events.

Delmas Fully Sustained His Reputation

Special to Reflector.

New York, April 16.—Delphin M. Delmas came here from San Francisco with the reputation of being the most forceful and convincing lawyer before a jury in a capital case that ever appeared in a Pacific coast court room. When he appeared in the Thaw case he had the handicap of great fame in this regard, and it would have taken a man of almost superhuman power to have come up to the reputation he had. But Delmas fully accomplished it, his speech to the jury being generally pronounced as the most remarkable address ever delivered in a New York court room, and of most convincing character and moving force. He swayed the people, but he didn't show his efforts in doing so, his emotional creative powers being covered with a logical and easy method of analyzing the testimony and grouping the facts to a smoothly flowing story that led to one conclusion.

Guard the Sea Coast With Sea Going Life Boats.

Special to Reflector.

New York, April 17.—The board of trade and transportation is holding a conference today at which they are discussing the establishment of a fleet of sea-going life-boats to prevent a recurrence of the Larchmont disaster. Prominent members of the board took the ground that the United States government provided at different points along the coast big life-saving boats, equipped with wireless telegraph apparatus, and able to go to sea in all kinds of weather, and aid vessels in distress. It is claimed that such a boat stationed at Point Judith Harbor of Refuge could have reached the scene of the Larchmont collision in time to save life. The present government life-saving service, it is charged, is not properly equipped for sea service, except in cases where vessels are actually ashore.

National Arbitration and Peace Congress Dinner.

Special to Reflector;

Washington, April 17.—The National arbitration and peace congress hold a dinner tonight in this city, to which President Roosevelt was invited, but had not been able up to the present to make sure that he could attend. The committee that presented the invitation to the president were Andrew Carnegie, Ex-Secretary of State Foster; Justice Brewer, Prof. Kenks, of Cornell University; Judge George C. Holt, of New York; Prof. Samuel T. Dutton, of Columbia University, and Robert Erskine Ely, secretary of the executive committee of the congress.

Donnelly Re-elected State Committee Chairman.

Special to Reflector.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 17.—Charles P. Donnelly, chairman of the Democratic committee, was re-elected today at the annual meeting of the committee. Many Democrats from all parts of the State expressed themselves as strongly in favor of the re-election of Donnelly, and he was chosen unanimously. Col. James M. Guffey and other prominent Democrats of Western Pennsylvania urged his re-election.

SPIT BULLET OUT.

Injured Husband Fired upon by Domestic Interloper.

Hearing a knock on his door early last night about 8 o'clock, Fred Smith, colored, who lives at Fifth and Red Cross streets, came out and was confronted by Henry Armstrong, also colored, with whom he had previously quarreled on account of Armstrong's intimacy with his wife. Armstrong evidently expected the "lady of the house" to meet him as Smith was supposed to be at his work, and when the man presented himself at the door the interloper fired at Smith, the injured husband. The ball entered Smith's mouth and he spit it out on the piazzas suffering only a slight cut in his lip was of no consequence. The police are looking for Armstrong.—Wilmington Star.

Campaign for Training School.

The campaign for the bond issues in both the town and county, to secure the location of the Eastern training school, is now on in earnest. There will be speakings at different points in the county and the people should turn out and hear this important matter discussed. Pitt county should not miss the opportunity to get the school. The benefit it will be to the county cannot be measured in dollars, and no individual should hesitate about the little mite of cost it would probably be to him, but let him consider the the advantage to his children.

Several Towns Destroyed.

Special to Reflector;

City of Mexico, April 17.—It is now known definitely that a dozen or more cities and towns southward from here were completely destroyed by the earthquake of Monday. Hundreds of people perished in the disaster and the property loss reaches millions of dollars. A tidal wave is reported to have devastated the city of Acapulco.

There is a Coddle creek up in Cabarrus county, near Concord. Perhaps that is where the molly-coddles come from.

Which is the wiser, the man who seizes an opportunity and goes forward, or the man who rejects it and goes backward?

What say the women of the county? Do you want opportunities for your daughters? We are trying to give them to you. Will you speak a word for them?

Who is the man that is a friend to his county? The man who votes for its progress. Who is the man that cares for the girls of the county? It is the man who votes to give them opportunities at the least possible cost.

Did some one tell you not to vote for the school bonds? If so he advised you to vote to locate a school some where else besides your own county and still pay for its maintenance. He advised you to still pay half of the taxes of the State and have these help build up other parts of the State to the hurt of your county.

You say you don't want any but a trained teacher. One-fifth of those now teaching go out of the work every year. That will give next year forty vacancies in Pitt county. Where are you going to get teachers to fill these vacancies? There is only one way, train some. To do this you must have a school.

Texas has passed a law prohibiting trading in futures in that State. This leaves only three of the cotton producing States that do not have prohibitive future trading laws on their statute books. The three exception are Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee. We have been shown a letter from a member of the New York cotton exchange commenting on this, in which was expressed the opinion that cotton speculation is dead and will be for some time. The Reflector is among those who believe that the producers will be benefited by the enactment of these laws prohibiting future speculation. With such speculation removed the price of cotton can become nearer stable and fixed in accordance with its value, based upon supply and demand. Under the speculation that has existed for years the price is never settled and is not governed by value. The species of gambling that exists through speculation in futures is also a great evil and has caused the financial ruin of many people.

Where He Stood Out.

One day at a dinner party, Thomas Raikes tells us in his diary, John Wilson Croker, who was nothing if not dogmatic, flatly contradicted the old Duke of Wellington about some incident in the Waterloo campaign. The duke gave up the point courteously. Shortly after the discussion fell upon percussion caps, and Croker again flatly contradicted the hero of Waterloo. "My dear Croker," said the duke, "I can yield to your superior information on most points, and you may perhaps know a great deal more of what passed at Waterloo than myself, but as a sportsman I will maintain my point about the percussion caps."

Generosity.

Rebecca, aged five, who claimed a handsome, heavily bearded young man, a neighbor, for a sweetheart, was asked by a young lady if she would not give her a claim also on the young man. "No," said Rebecca positively; "I want him all to myself." "But won't you give me a part of him—just a little bit?" pleaded the young lady. "You see, I haven't any sweetheart." "Well," answered Rebecca, deliberating and somewhat softened by the appeal, "you may have his whiskers."—Harper's Weekly.

IN THE TOYSHOP.

A Small Sale With a Large Portion of Human Nature.

"Twas a delightful toyshop, full of all sorts of trinkets—dolls for the girls, guns for the boys and rattles for the babes—says the Reader Magazine. And everything was a different color from everything else, while some things were in spots a different color from themselves in other spots. Surely the end of the rainbow was in that toyshop, and what one found there was better than a pot of gold.

As the front door opened a bell jangled gayly, quite in an old-fashioned manner. A stooped old crone came out of the room in the rear of the shop. She had iron-gray curls and spectacles and wore a little gray cape over her shoulders and walked with a cane, quite like a picture book grandmother.

She stopped short and smiled at sight of her small customer. "How do you do?" she said. "I suppose you have one penny to spend and know exactly what you want for it," for it was a man child.

"Yes; I want a jumping jack," answered the miniature man.

"A jumping jack? What kind of a jumping jack? Would you like a lady jumping jack? It is the very latest thing."

"I should like to see one first," said the small boy cautiously.

"We have two styles of lady jumping jacks. This style, you notice, is very strongly made. It is of very good quality wood and warranted to wear well. The paint will not lick off. This other, you will observe, is a very flimsy affair, a tawdry gew-gaw, not worth considering. Shall I wrap up a style No. 1?"

"No, thank you," said the small boy. "I'd rather have the other kind."

"But it's not half so much for the money," said the old crone, astonished.

"I know, but it's pretty."
"It won't last half so long."
"I know, but it's pretty."

"Oh, very well. It's your penny," said the old lady in a huff as she wrapped up the parcel with a vicious jerk.

The bell jangled again as the little boy went out, tearing the wrapping from the beautiful lady jumping jack. The old crone took up the despised, strong, reliable, well painted wooden thing and held it close for a moment.

"It's a pity to last too long," she said.

A Philadelphia Dream.

"I nearly had a fit in a street car the other day," said one woman with a basket on her arm to another in a West Philadelphia market recently. "I was on my way home from downtown. As the conductor in his round of fare collecting neared me the car stopped, and when we looked ahead every one saw that there was some sort of a block. Every other time this has happened to me I have had to pay my fare just the same, and I was meditating whether I should get out and walk and save my money or take chances on the car starting up again. Just then the conductor himself seemed to realize there was a block, and he actually stopped collecting. 'This may be a long block,' he said, 'and I'll wait until we start again before I get your fare.' From the way the passengers acted at this you'd have thought the conductor was making each of us a present of a ten dollar bill."—Philadelphia Record.

IN SPAIN.

Travelers' Club. Tours by Jour-

The situation in Spain perhaps more easily get a single glimpse of the true and ancient Spain than by acquiring the habit of traveling third class. The seats indeed are hard, but the company is usually excellent, charming in its manners and not offensive to any sense. Here a constant series of novel pictures is presented to the traveler, who may quietly study them at leisure. Perhaps it is a dozen merry girls on their way to a festival, packed tightly together and laden with packages. Some of the more sedate among them wear mantillas, some bright handkerchiefs on their heads or go with hair uncovered; but, however they are dressed, to whatever class they belong, they are all clean and sweet.

Or perhaps it is a less crowded carriage one enters. There are two middle class Spaniards and a peasant group of three—a fat, jolly middle aged man in a peasant's costume, but clean and new, almost stylish; a woman of like age, one of those free, robust, kindly women whom Spain produces so often, and a pretty, bareheaded girl, evidently her daughter, though the man seems a friend or relative who is escorting them on their journey. By and by, when we have been some hours on our journey, he lifts from the seat in front of him the large, heavy embroidered wallet—the alforja, which Sancho Panza was always so anxious to keep well filled—unwinds it and draws out one of the great, flat, delicious Spanish loaves and throws it on the woman's lap. Then a dish of stewed meat appears, and the bread is cut into slices, which serve as plates for the meat. But before the meal is begun the peasant turns round with a hearty "Gusta?" It is the invitation to share in the feast, which every polite Spaniard must make even to strangers who happen to be present, and it is as a matter of course politely refused. "Muchas gracias." Before long the black leather wine bottle is produced from the wallet, and the meal proceeds. At its final stage some kind of sweetmeat appears, and small fragments are offered to the two middle class Spaniards and then, with a slight half movement, expressing a fine courtesy restrained by the fear of offering any offensive attention, to the foreign caballero also. It is not improper to accept this time, and now the leather bottle is handed round, and the middle class Spaniards avail themselves of it, though with awkward unfamiliarity.—Atlantic Monthly.

A Lively Alarm Clock.

There was a new lodger at Mrs. Jenkins', and, like his fellow lodgers, he was a collier. The morning after his arrival he got up early to go to work and in the dark stumbled over a tin bath placed on the top stair. Bath and lodger rolled with a frightful clatter downstairs, and as he picked himself up he heard a sleepy "Right, oh!" and a heavy bump overhead from one of the other lodgers.

The new lodger at breakfast complained of the criminal carelessness of the person who put the bath at the top of the stairs.

"It was John," confessed another lodger. "It is such a heavy sleeper that only a noise like a lodger fallin' downstairs can wake 'im. That's his 'alarm clock.'"—London Queen.

The Bishop's Discomfiture.

There is an anecdote of a London bishop who, having read that story of John Wesley cutting out every word of his discourse that his servant maid did not understand, determined to preach to a country congregation the simplest sermon he could write. He chose an elementary subject and took as his text, "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God." On leaving the church he asked the parish clerk what he thought of the sermon. "Oh, my lord," said he, "it was very fine—very fine and grand. I've been talking it over with Mr. Beard, and we said how fine it was. But, after all, we can't help thinking that there is a God."—Chambers' Journal.

Probable Enough.

"The feelings of woman are far deeper and finer than those of man!" cried the lady orator in a fiery tone. "We are told by those who style themselves the stronger sex that we are much inferior. Is that so?"

A loud chorus of "No!" from the ladies greeted this question, and the orator went on:

"I say that woman feels where man thinks!"

"Is that the reason your husband is bald?" inquired one of the few male members of the audience.

It was lucky for him that he got two seconds' start in the race for the door.—Liverpool Mercury.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

SECRET COST MARKS.

Cipher System Used by Merchants, Pawning, and Customers.

Speaking of old fashioned cost marks, says a writer in the Jewelers' Circular, a majority of the cost marking systems now in use are impracticable, being either unwieldy or too easy to solve.

The first systems were based on the use of words containing ten letters, no two alike, each letter representing a numeral. Probably the most venerable of the words still in use is:

WASHINGTON
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0

Another, somewhat less easily decipherable by the customer, is:
DON'T GIVE UP
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0.

Another is:

BY BRAND KOST
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0

Such marks as these are no secret if one sets himself to pick them out. Usually all that is necessary is to find out what several of the ten letters are and then fix upon the ones most likely to represent 1, 5 and 0. Such secret cost marks can be figured out in this way in five minutes, sometimes. Other merchants use the letters in this way:

A B C D E F G H I J
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0

Or as follows:

Z Y X W V U T S R Q
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0

Still other systems take every second letter in the alphabet or every third letter, beginning at either end.

The crowning argument against these systems is that all betray the fact that they are cost marks. B J X on a tag can mean nothing but cost.

What does it matter? Only this—that the more the customer's mind is diverted from thoughts of what the article costs the dealer the more likely he is to be favorably impressed with the article itself.

The solution of the problem lies in using a cost mark which will appear to be something else. An ideal cost mark is the one that has an easily remembered key, that may be transmitted by voice, that is so simple in form as to minimize chances of error in writing and reading and that is not what it seems. The following is such a one: "1234."

To use it, 1 doubles the figures placed after it, 2 adds 50 per cent to the figures placed after it, 3 deducts a third, 4 deducts a half. The cost mark key is always the initial letter. To illustrate its use:

In marking the cost on an article costing 60 cents one may write it in four ways—130, 240, 390, 4120—as the initial 1 means to double the following figures, the initial 2 means to add 50 per cent to the following figures, the initial 3 means to deduct a third from the following figures, etc., thus: 130 (2x30) is 60; 240 (40 plus 50 per cent) is 60; 390 (90 minus a third) is 60, and 4120 (120 minus a half) is 60.

In writing the cost on the goods under this system the abbreviation "No." or the sign — is placed before the cost. Thus the customer is led to believe that it is the number of the article instead of the cost mark. This makes it a great advantage in a conversation between the clerk and the manager or proprietor before a customer.

For instance, the customer is protesting against the price. The clerk may think a reduction wise and that it will be granted by the manager, or he may desire the manager's indorsement of the price.

The manager does not have to examine the tag or ask its price to learn the cost. He simply asks, "What number is it?" The letter or hieroglyphic system would not permit this simplicity in such a case.—New York Sun.

A Driller.

An Irishman looking for work took his stand in a group at the gate of a large engineering establishment. By and by the foreman came up to the gate and asked:

"Are there any drillers here?"

"Yes," said Pat, stepping forward.

He got the job at once, but he had not been working long at the machine when it broke down. The foreman, in anything but a pleasant mood, then inquired:

"Where, man, did you learn drilling?"

"In the militia," was Pat's reply.

A Feathered Weaver.

The crafts are nearly all represented in bird life, but perhaps the most striking achievement is that of the tailor bird of Asia. When preparing to make a nest these birds choose a plant with leaves about the size of a man's hand. There they proceed to make into a bag. They pluck the boll of the cotton plant and actually spin it into thread with their bills and feet and there-with liberally sew together the edges of the chosen leaves.

TO WHOM THIS MAY COME, GREETING.

I shall be making and placing "concrete curbing" in the cemetery for the next few days and I wish all those who are interested in having their grave lots neatly and carefully preserved and ornamented to come and see for themselves what it is and what it is worth. I am also prepared to place this curbing around the yards of the homes in town or country. I specially wish the people to come to the cemetery and see for themselves the work that I am doing. They will see what they are missing every day.
