A Daily Paper is Costly.

It has always cost much money to publish a daily newspaper, but it costs more today than ever before. This is a big burden upon all newspapers, but particularly upon those with comparatively small local advertising patronage and limited circulation. It costs much to establish a paper. The Fayetteville Observer says that "the daily edition of the Observer sank something over $14,000—without taking into account any pay for editor and city editor—before its income caught up with its expenses." The Observer has been forced to increase its subscription price to six dollars.

The Wilson Times, which has increased its subscription price to five dollars, says that "the first three years, despite the hardest work and most rigid economy with the proprietors living out of the balance of the business with some resources from the outside it ran behind $2,000." It adds:

"To show the trouble that newspaper people are having these times on account of increasing prices of paper and labor, we can cite you one instance: The business men who established the Daily Journal, of Winston, secured the services of a trained newspaper manager and informed him that they would be satisfied if the paper cost them only $10,000 to put it on its feet; that they would be willing to give him all the income of the paper for twelve months and in addition to this put up $10,000 to pay expenses. Before the year was out he called the directors together and informed them that it would cost $12,000 and asked them for $2,000 additional, which they refused to put up."

The money poured out to establish the Raleigh Sentinel, the Raleigh News and the Observer—all finally uniting in the News and Observer—went beyond an hundred thousand dollars and yet when the News and Observer were consolidated there was nothing tangible to show for it outside of subscription list and the intangible good will, though it had large potential value. The present owners of the News and Observer had to spend $7,000 before they got the paper, with long life and prestige, on a self-supporting basis. If the cost of paper and everything else had been as high then as now, it would have required twice that sum.

There is talk of establishing another daily paper in Wilson, whereupon the Times reviews its history and offers to sell out at par if the parties are bent upon establishing another daily in that town. This recalls some sage advice that the late Col. Wm. L. Saunders gave to this writer some years ago when he was thinking about starting a new daily in Raleigh or buying the News and Observer. The price put on the News and Observer seemed too high and being asked what he thought of it, Col. Saunders said: "If you are bent on going into daily journalism, buy the established paper no matter what the price. If you start a new paper, it will be much improved, and before your paper gets to paying you will have to sink twice as much money as the old paper can be bought for now. It don't make a bit of difference what the price is—whether it is ten, thirty, or forty thousand dollars—it is cheap to you if you are bent on running a daily at Raleigh." The young editor, seeking advice from Col. Saunders found later in the dear school of experience that he gave sound advice.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Principles in Education.

Sympathy of the world goes out to the authorities of Swarthmore college in their predicament of having to choose between permitting the students to engage intercollegiate athletics and the college's receiving a fund of $3,000,000 from the estate of Miss Anna T. Jeanes, the Philadelphia octogenarian, whose eccentricity had previously been manifested in contributing to the campaign of the General Education Board of New York city for uplifting negroes of the South. It's a hard nut for Swarthmore to crack in this day when so much in "higher education" is spelled m-o-n-e-y. Fortunately, there is little principle involved in intercollegiate athletics, and, therefore, the decision one way or the other can have no revolutionary effect. But Anna ought to have left her million dollars to some denominational college on condition that it should not be used in promoting denominationalism. Then the country would have had another grand exhibition of the authorities of some institution founded and supported by denominational money for the benefit of the denomination suddenly determining that it was not a denominational college. Such radical shiftings as to principles by denominational colleges are among the greatest advantages offered by the millionaire philanthropy with which American education is now being cursed.—Peter Peghin in Southern Farm Magazine of Baltimore for November.

Widows Who Are Shunned

"The are widows and widows," said the gray-haired man. "Take, for instance, the widow whose husband committed suicide. She's different—that is, everybody treats her as if she were different. There is a belief abroad, deep rooted as the everlasting hills, that it is the easiest thing in the world for a widow to remarry. A general thing this may be true, but in the case of the woman whose husband died by his own hand the belief is a fallacy. They don't find it easy to marry again. I know three most estimable women who attained their widowhood through the revolver and poison route. Their husbands' tragic taking off was in nowise attributable to nerve-racking qualities in the wives. The women didn't nag, they were not extravagant, they were not fickle. The men were driven to their rash deeds solely by their own crazedness; yet in each case the widow was blamed for his self-destruction and is still paying the penalty. Each has received offers from men who felt victims to their charms; but as soon as the prospective bridegroom learned that their predecessor committed suicide they backed out for fear that if they consummated the bargain they might be driven to the same end."—New York Press.

Prohibition Campaign at Grifton

An election will be held in Grifton on the 26th on the question of prohibition. Prof. W. H. Ragsdale delivered a temperance address in the Methodist church Sunday night, and Rev. M. T. Plyler will deliver one in the Christian church, Thursday night. Ex Gov. T. J. Jarvis will deliver an address there on the third Sunday. We learn that there is much interest in the campaign and large crowds turn out to hear the addresses.

Philathea Class.

MAKING A DEW POND.

An Old Method of Securing Water, Even in a Drought.

There is still in England at least one wandering gang of men who will construct for the modern farmer a pool which in any situation in a sufficiently dry soil will always contain water—more in the heat of summer than during winter rains.

According to an account given by G. Hubbard in the Boston Post, this water is not derived from springs or rainfall and is speedily lost if even the smallest rivulet is allowed to flow into the pond.

The gang of dew pond makers commences operations by hollowing out the earth for a space far in excess of the apparent requirements of the proposed pond. They then thickly cover the whole of the hollow with a coating of dry straw. The straw in its turn is covered by a layer of well chosen, finely puddled clay, and the upper surface of the clay is then closely strewn with stones.

Care has been taken that the margin of the straw is effectively protected by clay. The pond will gradually become filled with water, the more rapidly the larger it is, even though no rain may fall. If such a structure is situated on the summit of a down during the warmth of a summer day the earth will have stored a considerable amount of heat, while the pond, protected from this heat by the non-conductivity of the straw, is at the same time chilled by the process of evaporation from the puddled clay.

The consequence is that during the night the moisture of the comparatively warm air is condensed on the surface of the cold clay. As the condensation during the night is in excess of the evaporation during the day, the pond becomes, night by night, gradually filled. Theoretically we may observe that during the day, the air being comparatively charged with moisture, evaporation is necessarily less than the precipitation during the night. In practice it is found that the pond will constantly yield a supply of the purest water.

The dew pond will cease to attract the dew if the layer of straw should get wet, as it then becomes of the same temperature as the surrounding earth and ceases to act as a nonconductor of heat. This practically always occurs if a spring is allowed to flow into the pond or if the layer of clay (technically called the crust) is pierced.

The Claw of the Devil.

In the middle ages people recognized witches and possessed persons by seeking on their bodies for what was called the claws of the devil. It was a more or less extensive part of the skin in which the subject was insensible to any touch or prick. The expert intrusted with this work would close the eyes of the subject and, armed with a sharp needle, prick here and there the different parts of the body. The sufferer was to answer with a cry to each prick, and the claw of the devil on a certain spot was recognized from the fact that he did not cry when this spot was examined.—"The Major Symptoms of Hysteria," by Pierre Janet.

MYSTERY OF THE TIDES.

Queer Reasons That Were Assigned For Their Ebb and Flow.

The tides, those mysterious pulsations of the sea, have been the theme of curious speculation ever since man began to ask the reason of what he saw around him. Many sagacious and clever brains in the ages of the past tried to explain away the periodical ebb and flow of the ocean, and many plausible if erroneous ideas were seized upon and used to solve the problem, and some of the curious notions of these old world philosophers are worthy of interest.

Aristotle, who tried to find a logical reason for everything in nature, thought that tides were caused by the sun, which moves and whistles the winds about so that they fall with great violence on the Atlantic, the only great ocean known to the Greeks, which thus swells and causes the tide. Plato accounted for them as being caused by an animal living in a cavern, which, by means of a huge orifice, created the ebb and flow. The ancient Arabs believed that tides were caused by the moon heating the waters and causing them to swell, while others averred that they were caused by the alternate decomposition of the sea by the air and of the air by the sea, thus causing an ebb and flow. A writer as late as the thirteenth century coolly remarks that tides are caused by the efforts of the earth to breathe.

Saintly St. Jerome explained the mystery by means of caves, and Bede stated that the ebb and flow were caused by an enormous serpent, who swallows and vomits the water. Another old sage thought that they were caused by the melting of the ice at the poles. In Russia, dwellers by the seashore popularly believe that the tides are governed by the water king's daughter.

The Shetlanders used to believe that periodical tides were caused by a monster living in the sea, or, to quote from an old Shetland worthy, "a monstrous sea serpent that took six hours to draw in his breath and about six to let it out again." The Chinese believe that supernatural beings, weird and wonderful, cause the tides, while the Malays aver that they are caused by the movements of a huge crab. Some of these old thinkers have been very near the solution of the problem, while some of their crude notions are only fantastic.—Scottish Nights.

The Original Lemon.

If they haven't the original lemon up in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, they come pretty near achieving that distinction. In one of the cases containing the Edward C. Moore collection of oriental art objects there is a group of pieces of Venetian glassware consisting of cups and vases of various kinds and shapes.

On the lower shelf of this case there is a large sized and perfectly shaped representation of a lemon in bright lemon colored glass that must represent some artisan's idea of a joke, for it has nothing to do with the ordinary sort of pieces those glass blowing shops turned out at that time. As it dates from the sixteenth century, it certainly antedates any lemon known to the present day. It never will be handed out to any one, however.—New York Press.

The Written Koran.

Mohammedans never use printed Korans because in doubt as to the ingredients entered into the composition of the printing ink. They are afraid of being defiled by taking into their hands a copy of the sacred book that may have been produced with the ink in which pig's fat instead of linseed oil has formed one of the component parts. They therefore confine themselves to reading hand written reproductions of the prophet's work, which are naturally very expensive.

Redeemed Himself.

Sir Charles Napier had an effective method of dealing with cowards. On one occasion a flying soldier was stopped by his fellows, who were about to shoot him when the general intervened. "Give the man another chance," he ordered. "Place him in the front rank, and if he turns again let him be shot." The man eagerly embraced this chance of life, overcame his fears and fought bravely for the rest of the day.

Prohibition in Alabama

Birmingham, Ala., October 29.—Revised returns from yesterday's local option election held in this county show a plurality of 1,657 for prohibition with eight rural boxes yet to report. The total vote in the boxes reported was 5,489 for prohibition and 3,932 against it. It is expected that the missing boxes will increase the prohibition plurality to 1,800. The effect of the election will be to close 110 saloons in Birmingham January 1st next: 24 in Bessemer and about 20 in Ensley and Pratt City.

Montgomery, Ala., October 29.—A special to the advertiser from Gadsden, Ala., says: Returns from the election today indicate that Etowah county gave prohibition a big majority. Approximately two thousand votes were polled with 1,600 for prohibition. The city of Gadsden gave prohibition 277 majority.

The Fair Failures Agriculturally.

The State fair last week was a great financial success, indeed the greatest ever yet held, but the exhibits were disappointing. As an agricultural fair, for the promotion of the agricultural interests of the State, it was not a success, to put it mildly, and yet that was no fault of the management. The farmers themselves do not seem to take an interest in the exhibition of their products. The chief attractions at all fairs nowadays seem to be the side-shows and horse racing. The people seem to want them more than exhibits of agricultural products. Without such attractions the crowds could not be gathered. The fairs are also occasions for reunions and social pleasures, when old friends meet and new acquaintances are made.—Chatham Record.

RANDOM REFLECTIONS.

By a Contributor

In view of the assertion that two thirds of the weight of a girl is sugar it is evident from the doings in our divorce courts that a good many married men are finding too much sand in the sugar.

A story from Indianapolis says that Mr. Fairbanks got his hold upon the people by his warfare on free silver. Let's see; maybe cocktails weren't invented then.

Captain Hobson's Japanese war will have to be classed among the theatrical failures of the season.

Mr. Taft wants it distinctly understood that he is not of a retiring disposition.

That Tennessean who declared he was a better hunter than Roosevelt, was, of course, at once arrested and asked to explain.

A rough rider has just been appointed acting postmaster at Dallas, Texas. The general impression that all the members of "my regiment," had been supplied with Federal jobs long ago, is evidently wrong.

Report says Platt feels boyish again. With Rockefeller just turning fourteen, and Platt in the kid class again, please inform us, some one, where does Mr. Osler get off?

Supporters of Mr. Fairbanks assert that he will make no pledges during the race for the nomination. It may be necessary for him to sign one thought.

The heavy expenses of the peace conference might also serve as an excuse for putting off the revision of tariff.

Although retired to private life, David B. Hill manages to get into a line of law practice that causes some of the conspicuous financiers to shiver.

Mr. Roosevelt says he didn't cause the Wall street panic, and there is danger that before the question is settled, the Ananias club will have several more distinguished members.

Uncle Thos. G. Platt's United States Express Company is now to be investigated by the Public Service Commission. There is much nagging of the conspicuous, virtuous these days.

Give the practical politician all the rope he desires, and there is no business or enterprise that he will not tie up.

Congressman Watson has declared that he regards Secretary Root as "the wisest man in the world today on matters relating to the affair of the nations." For a man who wants to run for governor of Indiana, he is not making a strong bid for the white house endorsement.

The beauty specialist who recently declared "Stand on your head for fifteen minutes every morning and you will be beautiful," will have to prescribe some other remedy for women who tip the beam at 200 pounds.

It is not easy for a man to get excited over a panic when his own bank account is overdrawn.

A Boston magazine writer asserts that no one can be happy without working. There may be some truth in that statement, but it is also true that thousands are working without being happy.

A FRENCH WEDDING.

The Way a Marriage in the Country Districts is Conducted. Sometimes a country wedding passed, and that was always a pretty sight. A marriage is always an important affair in France in every class of life. There are long discussions with all the members of the two families. The cure, the notary, the patron (if the young man is a workman), are all consulted, and there are as many negotiations and agreements in the most humble families as in the grand monde of the Faubourg St. Germain. Almost all French parents give a dot of some kind to their children, and whatever the sum is, either 500 francs or 2,000 francs, it is always scrupulously paid over to the notary.

The wedding day is a long one. After the religious ceremony in the church all the wedding party—members of the two families and a certain number of friends—adjourn to the hotel of the little town for a breakfast, which is long and most abundant. Then comes the crowning glory of the day—a country walk along the dusty highroad to some wood or meadow, where they can spend the whole afternoon.

It is pretty to see the little procession trudging along, the bride in all her wedding garments, white dress, white shoes, wreath and veil; the groom in a dress coat, top hat, white cravat and waistcoat, with a white ribbon bow on his sleeve. Almost all the girls and young women are dressed in white or light colors; the mothers and grandmothers (the whole family turns out) in black, with flowers in their bonnets.

There is usually a fiddler walking ahead making most remarkable sounds on his old cracked instrument, and the younger members of the party take an occasional gallop along the road. They are generally very gay. There is much laughing and from time to time a burst of song. It is always a mystery to me how the bride keeps her dress and petticoat so clean, but she does, with that extraordinary knack all Frenchwomen seem to have of holding up their skirts.

They passed often under the wall of the chateau, for a favorite resting place was in our woods. At the entrance of the allée verte, where it widens out a little, the moss makes a beautiful soft carpet, and the big trees give perfect shade. We heard sounds of merriment one day when we were passing, and we stopped to look on from behind the bushes, where we couldn't be seen.—Mme. Waddington in Scribner's.

No Hurry.

The American traveler who endeavors to hasten the comfortably gaited orient against its wish soon comes to a halt. That was the experience of "A Woman Alone in the Heart of Japan."

"Make the rickman hurry. I have a date and can't wait here all day," she said to the "boss rickman" at the station. He blazed like a fiery dragon.

"Vell, you get so mad, you no can wait for dis, you go find nodder rickshaw," he said.

She answered very meekly: "Dear friend, you do not know me. I am not the least bit mad. This is only a gentle American hustle. If you want me to be real mad, I will show you the difference."

"Vell, you vas almos' mad," he insisted. "You seem jus' like mad when you say: 'No can wait. Mus' have rickshaw quick. Hurry up!'"

A Geyser Clock.

One of the most curious clocks in the world is said to be that which tells the time to the inhabitants of a little American backwoods town. The machinery, which is nothing but a face, hands and lever, is connected with a geyser which shoots out an immense column of hot water every thirty-eight seconds. This spouting never varies to the tenth of a second. Every time the water spouts up it strikes the lever and moves the hands forward thirty-eight seconds.—American Home Monthly.

The Game of Chess.

The game of chess is of unknown origin. It can be traced back some 5,000 years or so to India. From India it advanced to Persia, from which country it passed on to the Arabians. The Spaniards got the game from the Arabs and passed it on to France, Germany and England. It is absolutely futile to attempt to determine the origin of the game.—New York American.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. GHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Troubles of the Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, are merely symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of treating symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the result of your ailment, and not the cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. And the Heart, and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weaken these nerves, and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No other remedy even claims to treat the "inside nerves". Also for bloating, biliousness, bad breath or complexion, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write to-day for sample and free Book. ### GOT HIS REWARD.

The Duke, the Cow Driver and a Missing Sovereign.

The father of the present Duke of Buccleuch was not averse to a joke as regarded his identity, and an amusing anecdote, with a somewhat serious ending, is told about him. His grace purchased a cow from a farmer near Dalkeith and gave orders it should be sent up the following morning. Accordingly the cow was sent, and the duke, who was walking in the avenue, espied a small boy who was attempting ineffectually to drive the animal. The boy, not knowing the duke, cried out:

"Hi, mon, come here an' gi' us a han' wi' this beast!"

The duke, greatly amazed, determined to have a joke. He walked on slowly and took no notice. At last the little fellow called:

"Come here, mon, an' help us, an' sure as anything I'll give ye half I get."

This entirely had the desired effect. The duke gave a helping hand.

"And now," said he, "how much do you think you will get for this job?"

"Ow, d'na ken," said the boy, "but I am sure o' something, for the folk up at the house are good to a' bodies."

As they neared the house the duke left the lad and entered by a different way. He called a servant and put a sovereign into his hand, telling him to give it to the boy who brought the cow. The duke then returned to the avenue and was there met by the boy.

"Well, how much did you get?" "A shilling," said the boy, "an' there's the half of it to ye."

"But surely you got more than a shilling?"

"No," said the boy earnestly, "that's all I got."

"There must be some mistake," said the duke, "and as I know the duke if you return I think I'll get you more."

The boy consented, and back they went. The duke rang the bell and ordered all the servants to assemble.

"Now," said he, "show me the person who gave you the shilling."

"It was that chap there," pointing to the butler, who, utterly confused, attempted to apologize. The duke cut all explanations short and ordered him to quit his service instantly. As for the boy, the duke was so delighted with his honesty that he sent him to school and educated him at his own expense.—Kansas City Journal.

An Eye to the Main Chance.

Lucinda had a large box of chocolates. Every few minutes she would pass the box around to her mother and her mother's visitors. "What a dear little thing!" exclaimed one of them. "She is the very soul of generosity. Most children would satisfy the dictates of conscience by passing the box around once, but she seems to wish to share the whole box with us."

Lucinda's mother smiled knowingly, and when the little girl went out of the room she said: "Don't count too much on Lucinda's generosity. I know it looks that way, but as a matter of fact she is merely working for herself. I don't permit her to eat much candy, but she knows that every time she passes the box around she'll get one herself. She knows I won't scold much so long as she is passing her sweetmeats around to others."—Exchange.

Her Sacrifice.

A teacher in a certain Sunday school had been impressing on her girls the need of making some personal sacrifice during Lent. Accordingly on the first Sunday of that penitential season, which happened to be a warm day, she took occasion to ask each of the class in turn what she had given up for the sake of her religion. Everything went well, and the answers were proving highly satisfactory, until she came to the youngest member. "Well, Mary," inquired the teacher, "what have you left off for Lent?" "Please, ma'am," stammered the child, somewhat confused, "I—I've left off my leggings."

The Safe Way.

A coal miner in the east of Scotland was visited by a friend, and among the places of interest shown was, of course, the pit mouth. Seeing the cage lowered into the pit with the stout steel rope, the miner's friend exclaimed:

"My word! I shouldn't like to go down there on that rope."

"Why?" exclaimed the miner, "Aw, wadna like to gang down there without it?"—Dundee Advertiser.

She Had a Reason.

The Rev. J.—Tut, tut! How dare you come before me and ask me to marry you when he is in that disgraceful condition?

Would Be Bride.—Weel, sur, please, sur, he'll no come when he's sober.

—Illustrated Bits.

FOREST ETHICS.

Put Out Your Campfire Yourself and Plant a New Tree.

Be sure to put out your campfire before you abandon it in the morning to take up the trail. Do not leave the task for one of your camp servants, not even for your guide, whose interest in keeping the woods free of devastating fires, being a matter of bread and butter, is therefore the keenest of any of your camp followers, but who, none the less, is apt to be careless. See to it yourself. Leave no smoldering back-log of the night's "friendly fire." Leave no smoking coals that have served to broil (so deliciously) the breakfast trout, for such relics so often are fanned into the tiny flame which, feeding upon nearby leaves or moss or bush twigs, grows within two days to a devouring blaze that consumes acres of forest before its withering touch is stayed. If you are close to a brook use its water plentifully, and if water is scarce knock the live ends of the larger sticks until not a spark is left and scrape dirt over all the coals—not a few handfuls of dust that the wind may scatter at its first breath, but dirt that will bury and smother.

No doubt my average reader thinks I am writing a lot to deliver one small message, but let him consider that hundreds of acres of forest land, worth thousands, measured by dollars, and of inestimable resources of the country, are annually destroyed from just such insignificant beginnings as the campfire which was not put out beyond the power of the passing breeze to re-suscitate. Therefore the warning appeal cannot be too important since we as a nation are using up from three to four times as much wood every year as the country is producing.

Two worthy exhibits of genuine Americanism are, first, not to add to forest destruction by carelessly leaving fire around, and, second, always to plant a new tree—young tree—for every one you destroy. And plant it where it will do the most good.—Outing Magazine.

Proof Not Necessary.

As General Benjamin F. Butler entered the lobby of the Boston statehouse one morning he saw two men whom he knew engaged in a heated argument. "One moment, general," said one of them to him. "Can't you settle a dispute? We are arguing as to who is the greatest lawyer in Massachusetts, and as we can't agree we will leave it to you."

"That's easy. I am," said Butler, with perhaps more truth than modesty.

The two men were somewhat taken aback. "Er—er—but, general, of course—you know—but—but—how can we prove it?" the first speaker managed to get out.

"Prove it? Prove it?" growled Butler. "You don't have to prove it. I admit it!"

Mirrors For Invalids.

"If you have a sick friend who can't get out of bed for awhile and want to provide entertainment for her," said the woman of experience, "give her a hand mirror. Nothing else is quite so fascinating. Often the bed may be placed with the head toward the window so the patient gets no glimpse out of it, but if she has a mirror it is all reflected for her. She can catch a sunbeam in the edge of it or count the clouds as they float past. She can inspect all the furniture in the room, and if she is alone in a hospital she can find company in looking at herself. It is the most entertaining and harmless thing you could possibly give her."—New York Press.

To Err Is Human.

Robert Browning once found himself at a dinner at a great English house sitting next to a lady who was connected with the highest aristocracy. She was very graciously inclined and did her utmost to make conversation.

"Are you not a poet?" she finally asked.

"Well," said Browning, "people are sometimes kind enough to say that I am."

"Oh, please don't mind my having mentioned it," the duchess hastened to say, with the kindest of smiles. "You know Byron and Tennyson and others were poets."—Youth's Companion.

School For Waiters.

It is often a matter of wonder why foreign waiters are preferred to English ones even in English hotels. The reason is a very simple one. The foreigner is a far better waiter. His aim is not always to remain a waiter, but to rise in the hotel business to a higher position. In Lausanne there is a school for waiters. They are taught three foreign languages and not only to wait well, but everything else connected with the working of a hotel.—London Truth.

TO MY FRIENDS.

Having been away for several months I wish to announce to my friends and patrons of the "empire" of Pitt that I am still connected with the firm of Chas. M. Stieff, and if bachelors are allowed to misuse the happy term home as a synonym for a "hanging out place" I still call Greenville my home, and while I intend to be away from Greenville a great deal of my time during this fall a postal care of box 325, Greenville, will reach me within a day or two. We now have a number of slightly used upright pianos, some of which have been rented during the summer months, others which were temporarily used by artists at the exposition and for orchestra work, at bargain prices.

We also offer a special school piano for $225 00 fully measuring up in standard to any $350 00 instrument. This piano is especially built for college and school work for the special price named above and is full guaranteed by my firm for 10 years. Those interested in a school piano or in a good slightly used piano for the home should write me at once and will profit by it, and as ever I am always mindful of my patrons' protection and interest as well as my firm's interest. Grateful of past patronage. Very repect., G. G. Fineman, Box 325 Greenville, N. C.
