

CREDIT TO WHOM IT IS DUE.

Grifton, N. C., Nov. 27, 1907.
Mr. Editor:—The prohibition election has come and gone and the liicker question forever settled so far as Grifton is concerned. It was a battle royal between the devil's forces and God's children. There were three elements that were warring with each other up to the last hour prior to the election, to wit: The open saloon element, led by—well, I won't say who; the dispensary element, whose leader I will not mention, and the prohibitionists (I will say who) were led by W. Z. Overton, the Methodist preacher here.

The whiskey men were like the ole feller who crept up behind the old sow which was a very vicious critter. His taking hold of her hind leg made her mad and she tried to turn around to him. So he held on for dear life scared to death, and commenced hollering for some one to come and help him turn the old sow loose. But nobody would go his rescue until just before the sow was about to get loose from him, when some good Samaritan came to his relief. The open saloon men caught the leg of the sow when they brought in their petition before the board for an election for saloons and worked and hurrahed like whiskey men will do. When the situation began to loom up before them they began whistling to keep up their courage, and the nearer they approached the crisis and saw their utter destruction they commenced looking around for some one to help them loose the hold of open saloons. But they had put their foot in it, and, Bro. Editor, the prohibition leads a very generous offer of protection under the wings of prohibition and took them in "out of the wet" with the understanding that they would go the "whole hog or none," and the poor, scared fellows did so.

They call themselves now the "Open Saloon Prohibitionists." Great Jehoshaphat, Mollie, what a name! A man could call himself a "Hell of a Christian" with as good a face and equal sense. They remind me of the colonel after the war. The colonel hired some men to build him a house and every day or two he would have them tear up and alter the plans until one day the men said to: "Colonel, we can't believe you know what you do want." The colonel replied he might not "know what he wanted, but he'd—d if he didn't know what he didn't want." The whiskey men wanted whiskey first, last and all the time, if they could get saloons, in order to defeat the dispensary. Seeing that they would be beaten by the dispensary and prohibition factions they sacrificed their idol—whiskey—and voted for prohibition; not that they loved whiskey less, but that they hated dispensary more. Now they are inclined to claim the victory of prohibition when they only did what their spite made them do, for which no credit is due them. It was a case where the Good Lord sent us a blessing, but the messenger who brought it was the devil. So we accept His grace if it does come through the devil. All we want to know is that it is from God, Himself, for He "works in a mysterious way His wonders to perform."
Oh, whiskey man, you go "way back and sit down." You "can't" claim any honor in this fight, if you did vote for prohibition.

You sacrificed your principles and had to do as you did (help destroy your neighbor, the dispensary) or take (what Pat gave the drum) a "hell of a beating." If there was any chance for you to get open saloons again prohibition would go to the devil so far as you are concerned in order that your wishes could be secured.
So, now, we will bid you adieu. If the devil won't take you I don't know what you'll do. Goodbye,
Your true friend,
Vanderbilt.

What Strangers Thought of It.

Two strangers returning from the hotel, Thursday night, were discussing the play "Young Mr. Winthrop." We heard one of them remark "I never saw finer amateur work. I have many a time paid $2 for a seat in a theatre and did not see as good a play as that presented to-night."

Only Delegates to be Entertained

A. & M Wins from Virginia.

There was much interest here Thursday in the game of football played at Norfolk between the teams of the A. & M. college, of North Carolina, and the University of Virginia. Carolina Club received by telegraph a descriptive report of the game and enthusiasm was high in the club rooms as the game progressed. It was a hard fought battle. The first half closed with Va. 4, A. & M. 0, but the North Carolina boys ran up their score to 10 in the last half without letting the Virginians make any more, the final score being A. & M. 10, Va. 4.

In a game played at Richmond between the teams of the University of North Carolina and Virginia Polytechnic Institute the score was 20 to 6 in favor of Virginia.

Press dispatches from New York state that the banks of that city and throughout the country will soon resume the payment of currency in place of certificates. In the opinion of men prominent in the financial world, the issuance of treasury certificates and the activity of the great corporations of the country in promptly taking them up, has enabled the banks to increase the bank note circulation, thus relieving the situation.

A BIRTHDAY SOCIAL.

Winterville, N. C. Nov. 27 1907.
A most enjoyable occasion was the birthday party last Friday night, given by Misses Halda and Magdalene Cox at their home in honor of Messrs. N. C. Duncan and Harvey Cox.

The invited guests arrived at an early hour and were cordially greeted, and soon were lost in the various amusements provided for the evening. Several games were played and some excellent music was rendered. Mr. Duncan is good on jokes and toasts. Many faces turned red as he gave them some of his composition. We will mention a few of them:

That is a merry group all interested in each other; the two young men with those girls on the sofa, are just from the dormitory, and are laughing up their sleeves, John and Henry can give the younger boys a few points on courting.

Miss Olive is not a politician but it's plain to see that she's fond of Bryan, and Bruton has a mania for fruits especially "Olives".

Miss Roland is dreaming by the fountain, and the fountain is pouring forth a stream of eloquent language of the dream.

Miss Janie thinks it a "Royal" party, and Roy well he's busy now. Will ask him later.

Magdalene is over there asking about the moon, perhaps "Newton" can tell her how to spoon in it.

Miss Elsie has caught a bachelor, but Theodore is enjoying the fun.

In the midst of these gayeties the tinkling of a bell announced that there was something awaiting us in the dining room; hither all repaired: Miss Olive Butt with Mr. Bruton Bryan, Miss Magdalene Cox with Mr. Herbert Cox, Miss Venetia Cox with Mr. N. C. Duncan, Miss Miriam Johnson with Mr. Heber McGlohorn, Miss Elsie Vincent with Mr. Theodore Cox, Miss Roland Cobb with Mr. Fountain Cox.

Miss Junie Kittrell with Mr. Roy Cox, Miss Carrie Johnson with Mr. Henry Lichfield, Miss Katie Belle Henderson with Mr. Harvey Cox, Miss Nina Dixon with Mr. Jesse Rollins, Miss Eva Langston with Mr. John Flanagan, Miss Corinne McGlohorn with Mr. Oscar Rollins. The dining room was handsomely decorated and a table in the center was tastefully arranged with flowers and delicious refreshments of which all bountifully partook.

After the refreshments were served came the answering of conundrums which each person found hid under a bouquet of flowers at his plate. There was much interest and laughter while these were being asked and answered around the table. The prize for answering the most of these, was carried off by Mr. N. C. Duncan.

Mr. Duncan and Mr. Cox were the recipients of many beautiful and useful presents, and the good wishes of all for many happy returns of the day.

The Misses Cox certainly know how to delightfully entertain, and everybody expressed themselves as having had a most pleasant evening.

In Washington City confidence is felt over the success of the treasury plans to relieve the money stringency. National banks are taking the new treasury certificates as a basis of circulation, the Chicago banks purchasing $2,500,000 of the new issue for that purpose.

"YOUNG MRS. WINTHROP."

Local Talent Scores Great Success.

Thursday night in Masonic opera house, this fine society drama was presented by a company of local talent, selected and directed by Mrs. T. J. Jarvis. The rendering of the play was marvelous, for such superb acting on the part of an amateur was hardly expected. There are plenty of professional actors on the road who do not fill their roles near so well as did these home people. If the characters had been selected first and then this play written especially with the view of assigning each particular part, we do not believe the part and character could have fitted better. Every part was filled to perfection and the large audience was delighted. Everybody left the opera house praising the performance. As so much credit is due every performer, and each part was rendered so well, we do not single out any for special comment.

BETTER FIRE ALARM NEEDED.

Present Alarm of Very Little Value.

One thing discussed several times lately in aldermanic and fire department circles, is the need of a better fire alarm. The present alarm, which is the rim of a locomotive drive wheel suspended above the engine house, was a gift to the fire department some years ago, through the efforts of Capt. A. J. Griffin who was then chief of the department. Of course this alarm is better than nothing, but it does not meet the requirements of the present time. It cannot be heard within doors, much less awaken sleepers at a distance. And when it clangs out an alarm there is nothing to indicate the location of a fire and it can only be learned by running around and inquiring, or phoning central telephone office if it so happens the information has been sent there. Finding the whereabouts of a fire in this way, even if the alarm is heard, loses time in getting to the scene and handicaps the firemen accordingly. We do not know just what remedy to suggest, but there should be something done.

Thanksgiving Observance.

Greenville had a real pleasant Thanksgiving and the day was observed after the usual custom of our people. Business was almost entirely suspended and the day had much the appearance of Sunday. Interesting services were held at 10:30 a. m. in both the Baptist and Methodist churches, with good music, large congregations and liberal collections for the orphanages. Besides the church orphanages being well remembered, the Masons and Odd Fellows sent large contributions to their orphan homes.

Several hunting parties went afield, but no accidents were reported nor was the slaughter of game large enough to do much bragging over. So far as is known everybody here enjoyed the day.

According to the statement of Col. John M. Carson, Chief of the Bureau of Manufactures, the value of the annual production of the manufactures of the United States is fifteen billions of dollars. The aggregate value of domestic merchandise exported last year was $1,834,000,000, an increase of $136,900,000 over the preceding year.

THE MANUFACTURED "PANIC" FAILS.

The following editorial from the Atlanta Journal so completely and tersely states the causes of the present financial condition, as well as the means by which its evil influence has been counteracted, that we give place to it full, believing that the editorial columns of The Reflector cannot be used to better advantage. The Journal says:

The true inwardness of the recent financial crisis has now become known and no doubt remains in the minds of those who are familiar with the facts that the "panic" was shrewdly manufactured in New York.

It was an organized assault on the Roosevelt administration, and the policies it represents, cooked up by the New York banks to bring about demoralization and embarrassment. As the inside facts become known it is apparent that it was the deepest and most despicable conspiracy ever entered into by the financial interests of New York.

The public is already familiar with some of the aspects of the situation. We know that long after the New York banks had safe-guarded their deposits by issuing clearing house certificates long after the government had deposited millions of dollars in the financial capital, long after gold had begun to flow in from Europe, the New York banks persisted in their refusal to send money to the south and west for the purpose of moving the cotton and grain crops, or even to permit the banks of those sections to withdraw their own money. The New York conspirators, bent upon breaking the strength of the federal administration, and determined upon a policy of reaction, held the situation in the hollow of their hands.

Up to that point they seemed to hold the winning cards, and appeared to be in a fair way to embarrass the administration.

Then came the surprise of the contest.

When the president announced his determination to issue fifty million dollars worth of Panama bonds and a hundred millions of certificates of indebtedness, it came like a bolt from the blue. The Wall street conspirators were not expecting any such flank movement, and it knocked them in a heap.

Their first move was to try to discredit these securities. They attempted to cast doubt upon the legality of the certificates of indebtedness, if not upon the Panama bonds. But the legality of the issue was promptly established and the willingness of the country to subscribe for the securities was promptly demonstrated.

A wave of confidence swept over the whole country. The tension which had existed in financial circles for the past three weeks immediately began to relax and the business of the country began to assume a more hopeful aspect.

This improved feeling has gone on gathering strength every day since the announcement of the new issue was made and the result is that in well informed circles the feeling prevails that the stringency is practically over.

It was a question as to whether the banks would go to the president or the president would go to the banks—and it was the latter who had to knuckle under.

It is difficult to find language in which to describe the depravity of the financial interests in New York which, in furtherance of the policy of reaction against the administration crusade, was willing to strangle the commercial interests of the whole country and bring on a period of demoralization at a time when the country itself, substantially considered, was in the most prosperous condition it has enjoyed for years. And yet such is the plain, simple fact.

It is the story of the fight that failed, and the New York conspirators are covered with contumely.

That the shrinkage in values will continue for some little time to come is not only natural but inevitable. At the same time it is equally certain that the worst of the stringency is over. Money is beginning to reach the west with which to move the grain crop and in a short time it will be coming south to move the cotton crop. As soon as the latter movement is well under way we may expect to see the price of cotton advance materially and business in general resume its normal condition.

There is every reason to indulge a more hopeful feeling and to consider the worst of the "panic" over.

At the same time the country in general will not soon forget the Wall street conspiracy.

If the president takes chances at throwing "heads and tails" with coins, he has no right to complain if his boy should try his luck at a game of poker or take a few rounds at cotton futures.

While examining into the affairs of the Tobacco Trust in New York it was shown to the government that the trust raises and lowers prices to suit itself. While this may be news to Uncle Sam's officials the common people, especially those who grow and handle the tobacco crop, have known for years that this was true. Now that the government knows it is possible that efforts will be made to remedy the evil.

PRECOCIOUS CHILDREN.

They Should Be Held Back Mentally and Built Up Physically.

All those intrusted with the care of the young are faced by a grave problem in the case of children who inherit or display precocity. The guiding to maturity of the simple, normal child, who passes naturally from stage to stage of its development, is a comparatively easy matter. The trouble is largely that the nature of precocity is not understood. Most parents, for example, hail the signs of it with delight and do all they can to foster them. They treat precocity as a gold mine, to be "worked for all it is worth," but here they make a great mistake.

There are several types of precocious children, presenting varying degrees of peril to the training system, and this peril is greatly lessened by a capacity to classify the types. There are certain children, born of healthy and intellectual stock, with fine physiques. They inherit usually very active nerve centers, which imply, among other things, quick and eager brain processes. These children are hailed with justice as the legitimate flowering of their heredity, and then all concerned, including, of course, the poor child itself, hasten to work havoc with the fair prospect by a cruel and shortsighted system of forcing.

These children, being naturally strong and well, can bear an enormous amount of the system without breaking down, but they do not make the men and women they would have made under wise restraint.

They should be kept much with other children, noticed little by their elders, interested in physical pursuits and molded into symmetry by a persistent holding back.

There may not be much wrong with the child who reads the Greek Testament at four years of age, but there is certainly something wrong with the parents who let him.

There is another very different type of precocious children. These are the offspring often of gouty or tuberculous parents and inherit, if not actual disease, at least faulty physiques. They are often beautiful, engaging children of great mental brilliance. They often have phenomenal memories, which are developed at the expense of all other mental faculties. They are not physically strong enough for any sustained effort, and after a brilliant childhood they exhaust themselves and become commonplace.

These children should be made to lead physical lives, every effort being directed to form a good constitution. A country life is almost a necessity in their case, and the mental development should be made as gradual as possible.—Youth's Companion.

How to Make Luminous Paint.

Get a few good oyster shells and thoroughly clean them, after which insert them into a clear fire for twenty minutes or so. When cold hammer them into a powder, rejecting all parts that are not white, for the gray portions are totally useless for your purpose. Then put layers of this powder, alternating with flowers of sulphur, into a crucible and seal up the lid, which may be done by means of a paste made of sand and beer. An hour's baking on a good fire will follow next. When quite cold remove the contents of the crucible and make up into a paint with gum water. Two or three coats of this on any article will make such painted surface luminous for many hours after-dark, but it is understood that it must be exposed to daylight previously in order that it may be able to store up the phosphorescence which it yields later.—London Express.

To Polish Wood Floors.

Take strong boiled coffee and strain it twice through a fine strainer; then to three cups of the coffee add one-half cup of common sweet oil and beat well. Put it in a bottle and shake well each time before using. Apply the polish with a soft cloth and then polish with a dry cloth. The coffee dries the oil into the wood, and you will be surprised at the polish you will have on the floors. You only have to put it on once in two weeks. Now and then just wipe up the floors with a dry mop when they need it, and they look like mirrors.—New York Journal.

Needle Threading Machine.

A machine which threads a thousand needles a minute is at work in a Swiss factory. The purpose of the machine is to thread needles that are placed afterward in a loom for making lace. The device is almost entirely automatic. It takes the needle, carries it along, threads it, ties the knot, cuts the thread off a uniform length, then carries the needle across an open space and places it in a rack. The work of threading these needles was formerly done by hand.

FALTERED FOR AN INSTANT.

But That One Moment Had Given Marlborough Victory.

At 5 o'clock Marlborough launched the great attack. Slowly at first, but gathering momentum as they advanced, the long lines of horsemen came on. The air was full of the clangor of scabbard on stirrup. The squadrons were just stretching themselves out into a gallop as they reached the summit of the ridge when they were smitten by the fire of the French infantry and artillery. So deadly and close was the volley that the leading squadrons went down before it, and for a few wild minutes, under the canopy of whirling smoke, Marlborough's horsemen were in fierce confusion.

That was the moment for a counterstroke! Tallard saw it and gave the word to his cavalry to charge. They were more numerous than the British, yet they faltered. "I saw an instant," wrote the unfortunate Tallard afterward, "in which the battle was gained if"—his cavalry, in brief, had charged! But it failed to charge. The moment of possible victory vanished, and over the crest, with bent heads and wind blown crests, the gleam of a thousand swords and the thunder of innumerable galloping hoofs, came the British cavalry.

Tallard's center was broken as with the stroke of a thunderbolt! His infantry was swept into ruins, his cavalry hurled into disordered flight and his army fairly cut in twain. His left wing fell back, fighting desperately, but his right, the elite of his army, was hopelessly shut up in Blenheim itself. As night fell Marlborough drew his lines closely around the village. Webb, with the queen's regiment, blocked one avenue of escape, and a cavalry force, one regiment of which consisted of Scots grays, guarded the other. The French general in command of Blenheim, believing the situation to be desperate, ignobly abandoned his men and tried to swim his horse across the Danube and was very properly drowned in the attempt.—Cornhill.

STATE NEWS.

The slayer of Ella Pryor, who was shot to death at her home, in Mecklenburg county, Monday night, has been captured. He is a young white man named Amzi Helms, and is said to be a former lover of the young woman. Helms acknowledged the killing to the Charlotte jailer but claims that it was an accident. According to his story he was passing by the Pryor home and saw a gun by the fence. In a spirit of fun he picked up the gun, which he thought to be single barreled, unbreeched it, took out a shell and knocked at the door. When the young woman came into view he snapped, as he thought, the unloaded gun, and was so badly frightened when it fired and she fell that he ran off as fast as he could. Helms also says that he believed at the time that it was the mother and not Miss Pryor, whom he had shot.

Today was not Monday, but the morning seemed very much like it.
