SAYS BELGIANS MAKE GOOD IMMIGRANTS.

Hon. Alston Grimes has Ten on His Farm Near Grimesland.

Hon. Alston Grimes, of Grimesland, is in the city, and tells of ten Belgian immigrants which he has on his farm near that place. Mr. Grimes is loud in his praise of his newly acquired laborers, and intends them as the nucleus of a colony which he will start in Pitt county.

"They are smart, cleanly and industrious," he says. "I have only had them on my place a short time, and have not worked them yet, so can say nothing of their worth as farm hands compared against the negro labor. They are the most intelligent lot of immigrants I have ever seen, though. They like their new home well, and much better than they did South Carolina, from which State I secured them."

Mr. Grimes says that his new tenants were puzzled at the permissiveness which grew on his land, mistaking them for plums, which they had often seen. He says that if they come up to his expectations he will secure more of them in the fall. There are 10,000 of them in Chicago out of employment, but by the time he requires more these will probably have secured work and he will send to Europe for four or five families.

"They are great lovers of fine clothes," says Mr. Grimes, "and every day after getting through with their household work, in which the men as well as the women help, they 'dress up' in rich silks and French slippers and broadcloths to spend the evening."

The ten which Mr. Grimes now has are all of one family, father, four sons and five daughters. The sons all speak excellent English.—Washington Messenger

Manager L. C. Steele Banquets Salesmen.

Among the New Year's celebrations last night none was more prominent than the banquet given by Manager L. C. Steele of the local Stieff Piano Company to salesmen, tuners and polishers, in The Fairfax. The table was daintily arranged for twenty-five, and one of the features of the dinner was a miniature piano made of ices and fruit, which was displayed greatly to the enthusiasm of the guests. The "creation" was the work of the steward of the hotel.

Manager Steel was presented with a handsome gold watch and fob by the employees, which was a complete surprise to him.

After dinner was concluded Mr. Steele, in a happy little talk, presented two cash prizes—one to G. G. Fineman of Greenville, N. C., for the largest sales made since last September when the prizes were offered, and one to T. Foy Simmons for the greatest amount of cash collections on sales.

After the dinner the host and guests repaired to the Stieff Company's rooms, where each made resolutions to sell more pianos in 1908 than any year of past history.—Norfolk, Va. Virginian-Pilot.

BIRDS' WEAPONS.

They Are Not Confined to the Beak and the Spurs.

Many people are inclined to think that a bird's weapons are practically confined to beak and the spurs with which the legs of some birds are provided. There are, however, a good many instances of different armament. A moment's reflection recalls to any one the mulelike kick delivered by the foot of the ostrich, which requires no spurs to insure effectiveness.

Besides this, many birds use their wings very effectively as weapons. People who have spent their childhood in the country will recall how fiercely the domestic gander uses his wings, and among domestic fowls the cocks not only use their wings to blind their adversaries, but batter their opponents quite severely with them. Although doves have been selected as emblems of peace, yet they are rather pugnacious and when quarreling among themselves bring their wings into play to good advantage.

Birds using the wing to strike a blow usually attempt to land on their adversaries with the wrist joint. This demand for a wing weapon among birds has in some species brought about remarkable and formidable developments. The spur winged geese of Africa have a spur on the bend of the wing sometimes attaining a length of one and one-half inches and fully as savage an appearing weapon as that of a gamecock. One of the wrist bones known as the radiale projects beyond the others and is capped with the spur.

A now extinct species of bird which formerly inhabited Rodriguez was flightless, but an outgrowth of bone at the joint of the radius and metacarpus formed a knob that rendered the short wing as dangerous among birds as a policeman's billy.

Some of the Australian pheasants and other gallinaceous birds have blunt tubercles on the wings, increasing their effectiveness as weapons. Africa, Asia and South America produce a number of species of spur winged plovers.

The jacanas, tropical or semi-tropical birds of both hemispheres, have many of them more or less developed spurs on the wings, while one genus, though without spurs, has the bone of the wing widened and flattened, forming a sort of scimitar.

The screamers, birds related to ducks, are the most formidably armed birds as to wings. They are provided with two spurs on each wing instead of one, the inner and longer one of which is a three sided stiletto of needlelike sharpness.

Some birds while young have a claw on the wing which is used by the bird not as a weapon, but as an assistance in dragging itself along, after the manner of a bat. The gallinules are an example of birds having such claws while young, the structure being lost before the birds reach maturity.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Feat of a Greek Scholar.

It may safely be said that no feat of translation in any age has ever equaled that achieved by Professor Jebb in rendering Browning's "Abt Vogler" into Greek verse. This fine soliloquy of the musician is less obscure, no doubt, than many other of its author's productions, but it abounds in imagery and in turns of thought which even an Englishman finds it not very easy to follow and of which he could hardly have conceived it possible that any Greek equivalents could exist. Yet they did exist, for Jebb found them, though it may be doubted whether any other Greek scholar living would have been equally successful in his search.—London Telegraph.

His Majesty's Knee.

A Norwegian journal tells the following story about the crown prince of Norway. Too much attention from those about him made little Prince Olaf somewhat headstrong and, like most children, inclined to be a little tyrannical toward his playfellows. The other day he became angry with another little boy who had placed himself on a certain chair. "You mustn't sit there!" he cried. "It's my father's place." King Haakon happened to be present and took the offending boy on his own knee by way of consolation. Prince Olaf was angrier than ever. "You mustn't sit there either," he insisted. "It's my mother's place."—Dundee Advertiser.

WEDNESDAY JAN. 8th 1908

Now for more disgusting doses of the Thaw trial.

Did you keep your new year resolutions through the first week.

After all that long Powers trial, the jury failed to agree on a verdict.

Congress is in session again. If it gets very busy it will be something out of the ordinary.

Yes, the roads are bad, and are going to be bad until the people make up their minds to have better ones.

The plea entered for Thaw at the present trial, is that he was crazy at the time of committing the act. Kind of convenient insanity.

Kitchin and Craig both say they are sure of it, but we do not see how both are going to get it, unless one waits and takes a turn after the other.

There are people who, like certain animals, make a tremendous noise, in the dark but when seen in the open are very insignificant. There is nothing in them but noise.

A Washington City correspondent reports District Attorney Harry Skinner, of Greenville, as declaring for Taft, with the statement that the North Carolina delegates to the Republican national convention will be for him.

The prohibition sentiment that is growing so rapidly throughout the country, has aroused a lot of Louisville whiskey sellers to organize what they call the "Model License League." Their platform is to purge the whiskey business of the lawless element and have it conducted by respectable men. If that is not a hard job we don't know what it is.

Some of the politicians and some of the newspapers are taking issue with ex-Governors Jarvis' statement, in a recent interview in The Reflector, that if a special session of the legislature is called a State prohibition law should be passed. There is not a wiser man in the State than ex-Governor Jarvis, and we had as soon risk his opinion on a public question as any man living.

A magazine writer says Bernard Shaw talks equally well on subjects that he knows a good deal about and subjects that he knows nothing about. Surely nature equipped that man for a political career.

Tough meat, says one doctor is just as nourishing as the tender. Quite likely, doc., but it unfits a jaw for talking purposes.

WHO'S WHO AND WHY

Who made the best crop in Pitt County during the year 1907

EVERYBODY admits that this has been a bad crop year and as a whole it has been, but some planters had bounteous yields in return for their labours.

Why because they used Cotton Seed Meal as a Fertilizer.

DR. BONSTEEL of the Bureau of Soils of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in his address to the planters of Pitt county strongly advised its use, stating that as a fertilizer stable manure was the best adapted to our soil and the next best was cotton seed meal.

WINTERVILLE MEAL IS THE BEST OF THE "NEXT BEST"

IF you did not use it last year inquire of someone who did and you will try it in 1908.

WE will buy your cotton seed and sell you meal at reasonable prices, or we will exchange Meal for Seed on a liberal basis, delivering the meal at any railroad station in the county.

SACKS furnished to seed shippers upon request.

WRITE or telephone us at once how many seed you have, what station you can ship from and whether you wish to sell for cash or exchange for meal. All enquiries will have prompt attention

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

How Economy Was Practiced in a Big Family.

"We have to be awful economical down at our house," said the boy. "There's such a big family."

"Yes?" inquiringly.

"That's so, for fair! My biggest brother is a bartender and of course has to wear a white coat. So ma buys a whole suit for him; says wearing the overalls saves his pants. When they've been washed a few times of course they don't look nice enough for a bartender, so ma gets him new ones and hands over the others to Bill. Bill works in a meat market."

"Gets two wears of them that way, eh?"

"Then dad's a painter. When the white suit gets too dirty for Bill dad wears it as long as he can to paint in. Course in time they get pretty well caked up with paint; then ma uses 'em for kindling the fire, and, being soaked with paint, they burn fine."

"So that's the end of them? Well, you certainly do!"

"No! Ma uses them again along with the wood ashes to make soft soap of."

"You don't say!"

"Yep! After that she pours the soap suds on the back garden. Best thing in the world, she says, to make things grow."—Puck.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease. In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

A CHINESE CONCERT.

It Had at Least the Virtue of Not Becoming tiresome.

An amusing story is related by Maurice Baring in his book, "A Year in Russia." "A Chinaman came from a house in a tumbledown village at which a midday halt was made. His child was ill, and he sought a doctor. To save the bother of explanation Mr. Baring, who had been picked out by reason of his red correspondent's badge on his arm, said he was a doctor and went to the house, where lay a brown and naked infant. "I made him put out his tongue. It was white. I asked what he had been eating lately. The Chinaman said raw Indian corn. I prescribed cessation of diet and complete repose.

"The Chinaman appeared to me to be much satisfied and asked me if I would like to hear a concert. I said very much. Then he bade me sit down on the khan—the natural divan of every Chinese house—and to look (smotri, smotri," he said). Presently another Chinaman came into the room, and, taking from the wall a large and twisted clarion like the wreathed horn old Triton blew, he blew on it one deafening blast and hung it up on the wall again. There was a short pause. I waited in expectation, and the Chinaman turned to me and said, "The concert is now over."

"When we had finished luncheon and just as we were about to resume our journey the Chinaman in whose house I had been entertained rushed up to me. 'In your country,' said he, 'when you go to a concert do you not pay for it?' The concert," adds Mr. Baring, "was paid for."

"Out of Order."

The familiar cry of "Order, order!" was once ruled "out of order" by Mr. Speaker Peel. On April 16, 1885, Arthur O'Connor was speaking on a motion relating to the postoffice, and as members generally were not paying attention to his remarks his colleague, T. M. Healy, endeavored to recall the wandering thoughts of the house by persistent cries of "Order, order!"

"The honorable and learned member should not be so demonstrative in his remarks," said the speaker. "Am I to understand that it is out of order to cry 'Order!' in this house?" asked Mr. Healy.

"The tone and the way in which the honorable member expresses himself are out of order," answered the speaker.

"In that case," said Mr. Healy, but the speaker pulled him up sharply with the reproof: "The honorable member is not in order in addressing the chair in that way. If the honorable member continues, I shall have to take notice of his interruption."

Too Costly.

When Stephen Massett, so well known years ago as "Jeems Pipes," was the editor of the Marysville (Cal.) Herald, Mr. Hittell, the well known California pioneer and author, engaged him in argument on religion, which Mr. Hittell attacked, finally winding up by saying, "See here, Massett, you ought to get my book on 'Evidences Against Christianity.' That will convince you."

"Very well," said Massett, "I will." So the next time he entered a book store he asked for it. The clerk showed him the work in two volumes. "How much is it?" said Massett.

"Three dollars," replied the clerk. "What?" exclaimed Massett. "Three dollars! Take it back, sir; take it back. I prefer to remain a Christian."

A Provident Plant.

There is a plant found in the Mexican desert of Sonora which is stated to surpass the camel in its ability to husband its supply of moisture. This is known as the quarequi, a relative of the pumpkin, and it inhabits a locality in which practically all the rain falls within a period of six weeks. The base of the stem of the plant is formed by a hard, woody structure, which is really nothing more than a vegetable reservoir designed to hoard up the scanty moisture received with the greed of a miser, exercising all a miser's thrift in doling out the precious fluid to its own advantage in time of need.

Quoted Ancient History.

"You were a long time in the far corner of the conservatory with Mr. Willing last evening," suggested the mother. "What was going on?"

"Do you remember the occasion on which you became engaged to papa?" inquired the daughter by way of reply.

"Of course I do."

"Then it ought not to be necessary for you to ask any questions." Thus gently the news was broken that they were to have a son-in-law.—Pearson's Weekly.

SUMMIT OF MOUNT BAKER.

A Freak Among Freaks Is the Great Tableland.

There is no evidence of recent activity of this volcano, nor are there any alarming indications that it will ever be active again, says Forest and Stream. True, there are live vents on the sides of the cone where the vapors and sulphur are continually emitted, where the lava is still hot and steam jets issue with rumbling and violence, but the snows of recurring seasons have blanketed it for centuries, as if to smother out the internal fires, and it can hardly be considered now more than the lingering of heat which once warmed the surrounding regions to fluorescence, the base of the mountain to bright red, and where it is now buried under a mantle of perpetual snow its summit once shone with a luminous glare whiter than the electric arc. But the freak among freaks in this interesting region is the tableland already referred to.

It rose in its magnificence and grandeur from the bowels of the earth as did Mount Baker, of which it is simply part and parcel. It probably rose to its present eminence above its surroundings and especially out of its immediate bed of porphyry somewhat later after it had cooled enough to hold its shape by renewed pressure directly under it, shoving it up like a cork out of a bottle.

The writer was strongly inclined to take the plug clear out and look inside to see exactly what was the cause of it. There is much evidence that the secondary uplift came at a much later day than the volcanic eruption or eruptions which produced the main features of this district, the most important of these evidences being the fact that the disintegration about the vertical walls of this tableland is very much less than about the sides of any other cliffs around, irrespective of height, position or material to be eroded.

The walls of it are crumbling away and accumulating about the base in rock slides, somewhat faster on the sunny sides. If it were possible to count the annual layers of rock on these slides, which have flaked off the walls above by the action of the summer sun and frosts of winter, like the age of trees by the rings of growth, it would be easy to determine when Mazama dome last made a move to rival Coleman peak or get in better view of the parent cone.

Proof of Property.

The teacher had found a lead pencil on the floor of the school-room.

"Children," she asked, holding it up, "does this belong to any of you?"

"For several seconds there was no answer; then a little girl timidly raised her hand.

"Is it yours, Bessie?" said the teacher.

"Yes'm."

"You are sure of it, are you? How do you recognize it?"

"I don't like to tell."

"But you will have to tell or I can't let you have it."

"I—I recognize it, teacher, by the way it's sharpened. If it wasn't sure enough mine, I'd be mighty clear of ownin' up to such a job as that."

Bessie got her pencil.—Chicago Tribune.

A Compromise.

Four-year-old Gordon was the devoted owner of a cloth doll called Maudie, from which he could not be parted even after it became so dilapidated that the other members of the family would have dispensed with its company without a murmur. One morning he started on a walk with his grandmother, and as usual Maudie was hugged close in his arms.

"Oh, Gordon," exclaimed his companion, "do throw that dreadful looking doll away, and grandmother will buy you a new one!"

An agonized expression spread over the little fellow's countenance. "Oh, grandmother," he replied sadly, "I couldn't throw Maudie away, but I'll try to lose her."—Lippincott's.

Where He Fell.

Down the postoffice steps the Rev. Dr. Fythly carefully picked his way, and then his feet suddenly shot out, and he went down right in the midst of a group of stock-brokers.

"Ah, good morning, doctor!" laughed the stockbrokers, recognizing the minister. "You remind us of the wicked man whose foot slipped."

"Nay," retorted the good minister, "but rather do I seem like the man who went down to Jericho."

"How is that?" chorused the brokers.

"Because he fell among thieves," murmured the doctor as he got up and moved decorously away.

THE TYPEWRITER.

Various Tests That Should Be Applied Before Purchasing.

Always look a typewriter over well before buying or renting.

The first test which a stenographer makes of a new typewriter is to ascertain whether all the keys work and whether the types are all perfect or not.

The sentence "The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog" is the one which is usually used, for it contains every letter of the alphabet. Many use "Now is the time for every good man to come to the aid of his country." But this one is not so good, for four or five letters are missing.

After punching out the test sentence on the small letters it should be repeated, using the capital letters. Then the figures should be punched in rotation, for they are often inaccurate.

The most vulnerable points in a typewriter are the keys and types. With a little use they are apt to fly off, and it is highly important to ascertain that these are all securely affixed.

Another point is the action. If the typewriter does not have a free and easy movement, you are certain to have trouble with it.

In buying a second hand machine or in renting always look carefully at the types, for usually they are worn uneven from use or have been jarred slightly out of place. If two or three types are inaccurate, they will ruin the whole appearance of the typewritten sheet.

It has been found by many large firms that the renting of machines is much cheaper than the owning of them. A typewriter needs constant attention and repairs. Usually the renting company includes the repairing in the rental contract, and that is where the saving comes in.

A typewriter is as delicate as a watch. Never attempt to repair a break yourself. It will probably evolve into a series of complications which will make a costly repair job.

Always keep the machine clean. The work will be neater and cleaner if the machine is clean and well oiled, and the life of the typewriter depends directly upon the cleaning and oiling.—New York Herald.

As a Brother.

A certain curate was of a painfully nervous temperament and in consequence was constantly making awkward remarks—intended as compliments—to the bishop and others. Having distinguished himself in an unusual degree during a gathering of clergy to an afternoon tea at the bishop's palace, he was taken to task for his failings by a senior curate, who was one of his companions on the way home.

"Look here, Bruce," said the senior curate, "you are a donkey. Why cannot you keep quiet instead of making your asinine remarks? I am speaking to you now as a brother."

Loud laughter interrupted him at this point, and for the moment he wondered why.

Effect of Lime on the System.

A medical scientist is authority for the statement that children and old people especially suffer from a lack of lime in the system. Persons who habitually drink soft water, while they may enjoy immunity from certain of the ills of life, expose themselves to others perhaps quite as much to be avoided. Hard water helps the teeth and the bones by furnishing lime, which is necessary to health, growth and development. Old persons who drink but little lose their teeth more quickly than those who take a reasonable amount of drinking water. Lime or food products in which it abounds should be a part of the regular supply furnished to the system.

The Call of the Past.

"Every little while I get an awful hankering to get in the back end of a grocery and settle a few of the national questions," said a Wall street man who lived in the country until he was twenty-five years old.

"I believe some suburban grocer could make a bunch of money by fitting up a big place with an old Ben Franklin stove and then advertising that every one who desired to loaf and talk politics would be allowed to do so at so much an hour and furnish his own tobacco."—New York Press.

The White House Design.

The White House is an exact copy of the Duke of Leinster's palace, Dublin. In March, 1792, the commissioners on building advertised for "a plan for a president's house to be erected in the city of Washington." The prize offered was $500, and that of James Hoban, a young Irish mechanic, was accepted. The design was supposed to be original, but when the house was completed it was learned that Hoban had copied it from the duke's palace.

TO MY FRIENDS.

Having been away for several months I wish to announce to my friends and patrons of the "Empire" of Pitt, that I am still connected with the firm of Chas. M. Stieff, and if bachelors are allowed to misuse the happy term home as a synonym for a "hanging out place" I still call Greenville my home, and while I intend to be away from Greenville a great deal of my time during this fall a postal care of box 325, Greenville, will reach me within a day or two. We now have a number of slightly used upright pianos, some of which have been rented during the summer months, others which were temporarily used by artists at the exposition and for orchestra work, at bargain prices.

We also offer a special school piano for $225 00 fully measuring up in standard to any $350 00 instrument. This piano is especially built for college and school work for the special price named above and is full guaranteed by my firm for 10 years. Those interested in a school piano or in a good slightly used piano for the home should write me at once and will profit by it, and as ever I am always mindful of my patrons' protection and interest as well as my firm's interest. Grateful of past patronage. Very resp't., G. G. Fineman, Box 325 Greenville, N. C.

The Worst Possible.
The actor whose duty it was to play the part of the dashing hero of the melodrama was rather disappointing. He stammered over his lines and sometimes forgot what he ought to say; but, worst of all perhaps, he did not lay his hand on his heart often enough, neither did he roll his eyes like a fish out of water.

These things combined brought him into disfavor with the gallery. Just before the crisis of the play he clasped the heroine to his manly bosom and said:

"Sweetheart, keep a brave heart! The worst is yet to come!"

Thereupon there came a plaintive appeal from the gallery.

"Oh, please, mister," moaned one of the gods, "you ain't a-goin' to sing, are you?"—Liverpool Mercury.

Chicks and Chickens.

The cocks and hens of the barnyard are unique among feathered animals in the fact that they have no specific name. We call them chickens, but as a matter of fact a chicken is a young barnyard fowl, and the term should not be applied to an old fowl. We have become so used to calling them chickens, however, that there is little chance of making a change. It seems strange that the naturalists did not give them a suitable name at the outset.
