WHAT THE MONEY IS WANTED FOR

The $17,500 Demanded by The Government.

There has been a misconception placed on the matter of $17,500 demanded to be paid by the railroads in the proposition submitted to them by Governor Glenn and accepted by the roads, and that is to be passed upon by the General Assembly. The Governor has been misquoted in regard to the $17,500. Some who misunderstood him having said that the money was to defray the expenses of the extra session of the Legislature.

Governor Glenn yesterday said that the $17,500 was not to pay the costs of the extra session, but would go towards paying the costs of the various suits against the State caused by the action of the railroads in disobeying and fighting the passenger rate law enacted by the 1907 session of the Legislature. The Governor said he did not believe that the rate was confiscatory or too low, but the railroads he stated, went into the courts and contested the rate without giving it any test whatever. They enjoined, he said, not only the Corporation Commission, the Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General, but also the attorneys employed by the Corporation Commission, so that they could not act. It therefore became necessary, Governor Glenn declared, to employ other counsel, and he did not think that the State should be required to pay the heavy costs of litigation caused by the action of the railroads. So that when it became necessary to call the Legislature together to pass on the agreement submitted, Governor Glenn said, he felt that the railroads ought to pay enough approximately to reimburse the State to the amount of the costs of the rate litigation.

"Not one dollar of this amount," declared the Governor, "will go toward paying the expenses of the extra session, and probably it will not be enough to pay entirely the costs of the various actions."

Governor Glenn feels that much of what has been said relative to the acceptance of the $17,500 by the State was caused by the idea of the commentators that the Legislature would get a part of the money, which is not so.

Governor Glenn is hard at work preparing his message to the extra session of the General Assembly.—Raleigh News & Observer.

OF PERSONAL NATURE.

Those Who Come and Go—Some You Know some know you.

D. C. James is sick with the grip.

W. G. and Gideon Lamb, of Williamston, are in town.

Miss Henrietta Pate, of Wilmington, is visiting Mrs. D. L. James.

Mrs. Fannie Heilbronner, of New York, is visiting Mrs. L. W. Lawrence.

J. L. Hassell has commenced building a residence on the Grimmer lot on Pitt street.

Rev. W. D. Morton, of Rocky Mount, will preach in the Presbyterian church tonight.

Mesdames J. L. Little and E. B. Ficklen went to Parmele this morning to spend the day with friends.

Lee Shelburn and Walter Patrick returned to Hamlet Wednesday evening where they are doing railroad work.

Rev. W. D. Morton, D. D., of Rocky Mount, came in this morning and will preach tonight in the Presbyterian church at 7:30 o'clock. Cordial invitation to all to attend.

Swell Colored Wedding.

An exceedingly stylish colored wedding took place Wednesday afternoon in the office of Register of Deeds Williams. Several buggies passed up the street and stopped in front of the court house. In the first buggy was the bride to be all diked out in her best with a wreath in her hair and a flowing white veil. It was seen at a glance that it was a wedding procession, and a crowd followed on to the court house.

In the office where the ceremony took place people packed like sardines, and were so thick that for time Maj. Harding, who officiated, thought he was marrying the best man instead of the bridegroom. The salutation to the bride after the ceremony was given with a vim, and was especially amusing to a number of ladies who were present. They said it was the greatest fun they had seen in a long time.

Come to the Meeting.

There will be a mass meeting in the opera house Monday night January 20th, at 7:30 o'clock, to discuss the question of State prohibition and to request the legislature to pass such an act at the coming special session.

A large attendance and a full, free and frank expression of opinion is desired. It is earnestly hoped that the people from the country will attend this meeting. The opera house will be warm and comfortable. Let us have a great meeting.

One needs but to attend the court now in session to see some of the evils produced by whiskey. To remove this curse from our people, to protect the weak and safeguard the young, is a work in which every lover of his kind should gladly join. No one should be too busy to give an hour to this sacred cause Monday night.

We hear that similar meetings will likely be held in Winterville, Ayden and Bethel and other places in Pitt. Now is the time to strike the final blow for temperance and better living.

Weather.

Partly cloudy tonight, colder in west portion, Friday fair, colder in east portion.

Mrs. Travis Hooker Entertains.

Reported for Reflect.

At her residence on Dickinson avenue Mrs. Travis Hooker entertained a number of her friends in honor of her guest, Mrs. Clara Davis, of Greensboro. The evening was one of unusual enjoyment, the lively flow of conversation suspending only to listen to delightful strains of music effectively rendered by the hostess.

Among those present were Mrs. Clara Davis, Mrs. Bateman, Mesdames E. B. Ficklen, Harry Skinner, J. A. Ricks, T. J. Jarvis, W. A. Bowen, C. C. Vines, H. McClellan, L. D. Wade and B. W. Moseley.

Will Repeat Play.

The company of home talent who under the direction of Mrs. T. J. Jarvis recently presented "The Young Mrs. Winthrop" so successfully, will repeat the play one night next week. They have also been requested to give the play in Washing and will do so.

Quinn Worthington, larceny, guilty, 2 years on roads.

Walking.

Country life has taught us much, but it has not yet made walkers of us. Physicians testify that no exercise is so generally beneficial as walking. Every naturalist or nature lover will tell you that no other means is so good for knowing the country. Every walker proclaims that no other pursuit gives so much pleasure. Still no one walks. Men walk no more than women. We are so prone to imitate our English cousins. Why does their love of walking not arouse us to emulation? Conscience, fashion or inclination impels us to ride, drive, row, swim, fish, hunt, golf, play tennis; we even chop trees and saw wood for exercise if we are strenuous and incline to the simple life, to say nothing of making gardens; we own and drive airships, automobiles and motor cars of all descriptions, but we do not, will not and, in fact, cannot walk.—Ella M. Bault in Independent.

The Worst Possible.

The actor whose duty it was to play the part of the dashing hero of the melodrama was rather disappointing. He stammered over his lines and sometimes forgot what he ought to say; but, worst of all perhaps, he did not lay his hand on his heart often enough, neither did he roll his eyes like a fish out of water.

These things combined brought him into disfavor with the gallery. Just before the crisis of the play he clasped the heroine to his manly bosom and said:

"Sweetheart, keep a brave heart! The worst is yet to come!"

Thereupon there came a plaintive appeal from the gallery.

"Oh, please, mister," moaned one of the gods, "you ain't a-goin' to sing, are you?"—Liverpool Mercury.

Chicks and Chickens.

The cocks and hens of the barnyard are unique among feathered animals in the fact that they have no specific name. We call them chickens, but as a matter of fact a chicken is a young barnyard fowl, and the term should not be applied to an old fowl. We have become so used to calling them chickens, however, that there is little chance of making a change. It seems strange that the naturalists did not give them a suitable name at the outset.

Personal Property Sale.

On Wednesday, Feb. 5th, 1908, at the late home of Nathaniel Williams, deceased, in Beaver Dam township, I will sell at public auction for cash the personal property belonging to the estate, consisting of household and kitchen furniture, farming utensils, a lot of cotton seed, fodder, &c. A. J. Moye, Administrator.

A LAND OF SNAKES.

Some Strenuous Inhabitants of the Jungles of Asia.

Contrary to general belief, the python, or boa constrictor, rarely attacks people and is looked upon very differently by the people from the hamadryad and cobra. The python will take up his abode in a neighborhood and will not disturb anything except the hen roosts. These he disturbs very much, as he has a great fondness for chickens; also for a stray dog or small goat. I know of one case, however, in a floating house where a python attacked a woman and, contrary to the preconceived idea, did not crush her in his folds, but attempted to swallow her, commencing with one of her feet. When she was rescued her foot and ankle were badly lacerated by the snake's teeth. The Chinese kill the python to make medicine from the liver, which has a high reputation among them. They also use the dried skin for medicine. Any Chinese drug shop in Siam will have a number of python skins for sale.

One of the most important things to know about snake bites is that the poisonous snakes, such as the hamadryad, cobra, etc., leave on the individual only two punctures of the poison fangs, while the less poisonous and harmless snakes leave, besides the two punctures, the marks of adventitious teeth. This is most important in prognosis, as being called to see persons bitten who were showing great shock it helps physician and patient materially to assure the patient that while he may be very ill, he will not die.

There is only one snake in the far east—that is, in India, Burma, Siam and the Malay peninsula—that will always and at all times attack a man on sight. This is the hamadryad, justly more feared than any other animal that crawls. Fortunately for mankind they are not common, except in limited districts. They are so feared by all that the native shikarris, or hunters, will go miles out of their way to avoid the locality in which they are known to exist. The hamadryad will stalk a man as a tiger stalks his prey. Mr. Leonowens, who as a boy was educated with the present king of Siam and who is interested in teak forests, told me he had seen elephants die in half an hour after being bitten and that he always carried a shotgun loaded with buckshot when in the jungle infested by them. He said that one of his men, a Burmese, was chased by one and escaped by throwing away his clothing piece by piece, the snake stopping each time to bite the clothing. He shot the snake himself just as the man fell exhausted near him.

These two snakes, the hamadryad and cobra, cause the great annual death roll of India from snake bite, about 22,000 people last year. One reason for this great death roll is that Hindoos and Buddhists will not kill the snakes, as it is against their religion to take life. The cobra will go away from you usually, except in the nesting season, and then he will attack you on sight if you disturb him or his mate. It is at this time that so many deaths take place among the Malays and Siamese, as it is coincident with the rice planting season and the peasants are busily at work in the rice fields. The cobra will bite under water, and many people are bitten on the foot or heel while planting rice. Death usually takes place in an hour or less. I have known a large buffalo to be bitten and die in fifteen minutes. It must have been bitten directly into a vein.

In the Malay peninsula and in Siam no one ever walks abroad after dark without a lamp or torch, as it proves almost suicidal to do so.—Medical Journal.

Finger Rings.

From the remotest times women have loved to adorn their fingers with rings, and some of the mummies found in the Egyptian pyramids had their fingers literally covered with them. Sometimes these rings were of gold, but at others they were of glass, pottery or brass, according, no doubt, to the wealth of the wearers. A ring is bestowed in marriage because it was anciently a seal by which orders were signed, and the delivery of the ring was a token that a man gave the bearer of it power to act as his deputy. Thus a woman, having her husband's signet ring, had power to issue orders as he himself would do.

LEGISLATURE SHOULD ACT.

During the past two weeks we have noticed a great deal of comment in the State papers on the recent interview of ex-Gov. T. J. Jarvis in The Reflector in regard to the wisdom of the extra legislature passing a State prohibition law. While a majority of the papers have expressed approval of Governor Jarvis' views, some have spoken against it. Among the objections raised to his position is the suggestion that it would be unfair to thrust prohibition upon the people of the State without giving them a chance to vote on it. We wonder if those papers holding such a view were not in favor of the Watts law that was passed by the legislature of 1903. They should remember that the Watts law completely cut off the sale and manufacture of liquor outside of incorporated towns, and did so without submitting the question to a vote of the people, and four-fifths of the people of the State live outside of incorporated towns. Now if it was right to pass a prohibitory law affecting four-fifths of the people of the State without letting them vote on it, why is it unfair to do the same thing for the other one-fifth? And as fully three-fourths of the people of the entire State want prohibition as early as possible, why not give it to them?

The extra legislature will act wisely if it gives the State a prohibition law, and by so doing keep the question of the next campaign. While prohibition is inevitable and must come soon, the saloon advocates are not going to give up without a bitter fight if the question comes to a popular vote. When it is known that such a large majority of the people are in favor of prohibition, we see no reason why the legislature should not pass it and save the cost and bitterness of a campaign.

The executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League of the State are of the opinion that the special session of the legislature is the opportunity for securing State prohibition. With a view of working to that end a temperance convention is called to meet in Raleigh on Tuesday, 21st, the same day the legislature convenes.

These fellows who have nothing else to do but try to stir up strife between the United States and Japan, ought to be given a term of service on the roads.

One thing every business man in the community should keep before his mind is the meeting of the chamber of commerce next Monday night.

WHO'S WHO AND WHY

Who made the best crop in Pitt County during the year 1907

EVERYBODY admits that this has been a bad crop year and as a whole it has been, but some planters had bounteous yields in return for their labours.

Why because they used Cotton Seed Meal as a Fertilizer.

DR. BONSTEFL of the Bureau of Soils of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in his address to the planters of Pitt county strongly advised its use, stating that as a fertilizer stable manure was the best adapted to our soil and the next best was cotton seed meal.

WINTERVILLE MEAL IS THE BEST OF THE "NEXT BEST"

IF you did not use it last year inquire of someone who did and you will try it in 1908.

WE will buy your cotton seed and sell you meal at reasonable prices, or we will exchange Meal for Seed on a liberal basis delivering the meal at any railroad station in the county.

SACKS furnished to seed shippers upon request.

WRITE or telephone us at once how many seed you have, what station you can ship from and whether you wish to sell for cash or exchange for meal. All enquiries will have prompt attention

Heart Strength

Heart strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves. This clearly explains why as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help. If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with

Jack and the Blue Doo.

JACK didn't believe in fairies any more.

Boys who are eight and a half years old and in third grade at school are not expected to believe in things with wings and wands and spells anyway. Of course Dorothy did; but, then, she was only a girl and Jack's sister.

"Don't you even believe in witches any more, Jack?" asked Dorothy when they were over in the woods hunting for nuts one Saturday.

Jack lay on his back underneath a hickory tree and looked up at the leaves that danced overhead.

"No, sirree bob," he said, "I don't believe in mermaids or things that live in caves or any of those kinds of things. I just believe in Indians and animals and—"

"And Santa Claus, Jack?"

"Sure, and Santa Claus," assented Jack cordially, as every boy must two months before Christmas, "because he leaves stuff around that you can really and truly see. But I mean all the things you can't see. Who ever saw a fairy?"

"I have, only they's always enchanted," said Dorothy softly, hugging her

I am blue. Good reason, isn't it? I am terribly blue. You'd be blue, too, if you had to go around every year and count all the falling leaves, the darning, dancing leaves that have so much fun all summer playing with the sunbeams and the raindrops and the wind. And now that the frost is at last here they have all to dry up and fly away. Why, it makes me feel so blue and sad when I'm counting them I don't know what to do.

"But the leaves don't seem to mind falling off the trees," said Jack, watching a whole bunch scurry and dance away before a quick breeze.

"They don't know any better," said the blue doo. "That makes it all the worse, you know. They are so glad to get down from the tree, and they think they are going to be free. The thistle-down tells them it is fun to be free as it blows away through the air, and the dandelion balloons laugh at them because they have to stay fastened to the branches, and even the birds tease them because they can't fly. So they are tickled to death at the first speck of red or gold that steals over them, and they think it is the greatest fun of all when at last they knees and watching a big black and gold bee stop to chat with a bit of belated goldenrod. "They're always in disguise, and they won't let you see them."

Just then a hickory nut fell down and hit Jack fairly on the tip of his nose. Jack rolled over and started to talk some more, but another nut fell and struck him sharply on the back of his head.

"Quit, Dorothy," said Jack crossly. "If you hit me with a nut again you shan't come over to the woods any more at all."

"I didn't hit you," Dorothy laughed at him, rubbing his head. "They fell down."

Then a nut hit Jack right bang in the middle of his chin where the dimple was, and somebody laughed way up in the branches of the hickory.

"You can't see me, Jack," said a voice up there. "But you believe in me, don't you, Jack? Do you Jack? Don't you, Jack?"

Four nuts came flying down, and every single one was a good shot at Jack. Dorothy never stopped to find out what was up in the hickory. She ran over to the far end of the lot and hid down in the corner of the stone wall. But Jack stared up at the tree. It was one of the boys, of course. It couldn't be any one else. And wouldn't he just fix him when he came down!

"Dare you to come on down," he called.

"Thanks," called the same voice sadly. "I wouldn't if I could, Jack. But I can't. I'm spellbound, and I can't get down from the tree. Have another nut, Jack?"

"You quit throwing at me," said Jack crossly. "I never did a thing to you."

"You did too. You said you didn't believe in me."

"How could I say I didn't believe in you when I don't even know what you are?"

"Well, you did, all the same. You said you didn't believe in mermaids or things that live in caves or any of that kind of things. I'm one of those kind of things, don't you see? I live in a hole up in this tree. At least, I'm living here today. Tomorrow, I understand, I have to move over to the maple. Saturday next I shall be in the chestnut. Yesterday I boarded with the big oak up on the hill. Guess how many leaves it has lost so far? Four hundred and seventy-nine. And there's a whole lot more ready to fly away."

"Are you a squirrel?" asked Jack.

"Now, Jack, do I talk like a squirrel? Can't you tell the difference between a squirrel and a leaf counter? I am a blue doo. They call me blue because swirl down over and over from the tree. Some of them even try to fly away like birds. One maple leaf that I was acquainted with went clear over the stone wall the other day and down to the brook. She flirted outrageously with the south wind. And there was a gray squirrel, too, that nearly broke his neck trying to climb away out on the tip end of a branch to kiss her.

"Is she down there by the brook now?" asked Jack.

"Mercy, no! I kept telling her she ought not to laugh and dance so much; that some day she would tumble down on the ground and dry up, but she didn't believe me, and what do you suppose? She didn't do it at all. The south wind took her and danced her on and on over the hill pasture, over the stone wall and the rest of the dry leaves down to the brookside and right under the nose of a girl—a real girl, I mean—and she took the maple leaf and kissed it."

"What for?" asked Jack.

"I don't know," said the doo. "She loved it, I guess. I saw her put it in an envelope and press it. That is the grandest thing that can happen to a leaf, you know, to be loved and pressed. But, oh, dear me, so few are pressed. It makes me cry every time I think of all the rest that just dry up and blow away."

"Don't cry," said Jack sympathetically. "I believe in you now even if I can't see you."

"Can't see me, indeed. Who ever expected you would see me? Can you see the wind?"

"I don't care," laughed Jack, turning red, though. "I'd rather be a leaf, even if I did dry up, than an old doo. You can't do anything to me."

"Better look out, Jack," said the doo, shying down a last nut. "You never can tell what I might do."

"What would a blue doo do, if a blue doo could do anything?"

"I know the answer to that," said Jack as he ran away, and he shouted back:

"He would do the thing that a doo would do. If a blue doo could do anything."

"I'm it," said the doo sadly. And he went back to counting leaves.—New York World.

The butcher was busily attending to his customers when a nice little boy approached the counter and, with innocent manner, asked:

"Have you any dry herring, sir?"

"Yes, my son," answered the butcher, looking benevolently down at the nice little boy.

WHAT A WATT IS.

The Electrical Unit and Its Equivalent in Horsepower.

In the electrical world one hears and reads a great deal about "watts." The current is measured by watts, the machinery is rated by watts and lamps burn by watts. To the ordinary layman all this talk of watts is mystifying.

The man to whom we owe the idea of the horsepower was a Scottish inventor, James Watt, and when the electric unit involving the idea of working capacity came to be formulated the name of Watt was chosen to indicate this unit, just as that of Volta has given us the term volt and Faraday the farad.

Watt considered that, taking the average, a London dray horse was capable of doing the work of lifting 33,000 pounds through one foot of gravity. The introduction of this time limit, the minute, gave the unit of power, or rate of performing work. This or its equivalent has ever since been called a horsepower.

The electrical unit called the watt is capable of being represented in terms of the horsepower, and in that form it is perhaps more intelligible to those who are familiar with mechanical rather than with electrical expressions. The electrical watt is the product of volts multiplied by amperes, where the volt is the unit of electrical pressure, and the ampere is the unit of measuring the density, or volume, of an electrical current.

Careful experiments have demonstrated that 746 watts per second are equal to 550 foot pounds per second, or, to state the equation in its usual form, 746 watts equal one horsepower.

The form in which electrical power generally is sold is computed on the basis of kilowatt hours. The prefix kilo comes from the Greek chilioi, 1,000. A kilowatt, written also k. w., is therefore 1,000 watts. The kilowatt hour is the performance, or work, at such a rate that 1,000 watts per second shall be delivered continuously for one hour.

The kilowatt hour has a special interest for the man who has his office or house lighted by electric lamps, because the kilowatt hour is the unit upon which the power and light companies base their charges.—Electrical Review.

Garrulous Blind People.

"I'll never buy any writing paper of that man again," said the little suburban matron after she had carefully helped the blind man down the steps. "I'm very sorry for him and want to help him out, but he has absolutely no consideration for my time. He begins to talk the minute he gets into the house, and he talks and talks and then takes up at least an hour and a half. He isn't talking up his goods—oh, no, indeed! He just indulges in general conversation about everything, from the weather to the methods now used in the public schools. Every time I feel an impulse to shut him off I think: 'Poor fellow! He's blind.' And I let him go on until he runs down of his own accord."

"I'm beginning to think it is true of all blind people—that they are tremendous talkers. Once in awhile I employ a blind piano tuner, and I have to go out or he'd talk so much that he'd never get the piano tuned."—New York Press.

Dickens Was Annoyed.

Dickens' relations with the city fathers were not always happy. On one occasion he came up from Broadstairs to attend a Mansion House dinner which the lord mayor of that day had taken into his head to give to the representatives of "literature and art." The worthy chief magistrate meant well, but his words of welcome to his guests were not wholly complimentary. He conveyed the idea that he and his fellow aldermen were accustomed to having princes, dukes and ministers to dine, but that it was, of course, delightful to see gentlemen of another sort. His general tone, according to Forster, was this: "What could possibly be pleasanter than for people satiated with greatness to get for awhile by way of change into the butler's pantry?" Dickens was annoyed.—London Tatler.

English Manners.

Is it no longer possible to be a "gentleman" or a "lady" now that nearly all the rules which regulated the conduct of these characters are disregarded? The "gentleman" and "ladies" formed on the old pattern are armed with rapiers, those on the new with explosives. It is impossible for the former to face the latter without being destroyed. That appears to have been fully recognized, and the characters are generally being remodeled to suit the circumstances of the time. The few remaining "gentlemen" and "ladies" of the old style are regarded as "museum pieces," interesting, but of no practical value to themselves or to others.—London Truth.

TO MY FRIENDS.

Having been away for several months I wish to announce to my friends and patrons of the "empire" of Pitt that I am still connected with the firm of Chas. M. Steiff, and if bachelors are allowed to misuse the happy term home as a synonym for a "hanging out place" I still call Greenville my home, and while I intend to be away from Greenville a great deal of my time during this fall a postal care of box 325, Greenville, will reach me within a day or two. We now have a number of slightly used upright pianos, some of which have been rented during the summer months, others which were temporarily used by artists at the exposition and for orchestra work, at bargain prices.

We also offer a special school piano for $225.00 fully measuring up in standard to any $350.00 instrument. This piano is especially built for college and school work for the special price named above and is full guaranteed by my firm for 10 years. Those interested in a school piano or in a good slightly used piano for the home should write me at once and will profit by it, and as ever I am always mindful of my patrons' protection and interest as well as my firm's interest. Grateful of past patronage. Very respt., G. G. Fineman, Box 325 Greenville, N. C.

Land Sale.

By virtue of a mortgage executed and delivered by A. E. Tucker and wife to J. P. Quinlerly on the second day of January 1914 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt county in Book X-7 page 318, the undersigned will sell before the Court house door in Greenville on Monday the 3rd day of February 1908 the following described two tracts of land, situate partly in Contentnea township and partly in Beaver Dam township: One tract called the Flanagan place being the same deeded to A. E. Tucker by A. C. Tucker and wife April 4th 1898 and recorded in Book K-6 page 94 in the Register's Office of Pitt county containing 181 acres more or less.

Also one other tract adjoining the above and known as the May place and fully described in a deed from W. H. Taylor and wife to A. E. Tucker recorded in Book N-6 page 281 of the Register of deeds office of Pitt county, containing 40 acres more or less. Reference to both of which deeds is hereby made for better description.

Terms of sale: One half cash balance payable in 12 months, or all cash to suit the purchaser.

Said property will be sold in 60 acre lots or as a whole to the best advantage.

This January 3rd 1908. J. P. QUINLERLY, F. G. James Attorney.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

The Cause of Indian Summer and Origin of its Name.

As the boys and girls all know, we usually have a season of comparatively mild, hazy weather some time in November, to which has been given the name of Indian summer. Familiar as the phenomenon is, however, few people know what causes it, chiefly perhaps because they have never tried to find out. Most of the scientists attribute the mildness of the air at that time to a change in the condition of the atmosphere, which confines to the lower strata the heat radiated from the earth's surface. This explanation is not wholly satisfactory to a layman, but it seems to be the best that the scientists can do for us. The hazy condition of the air at that time is more easily explained. It is due to the decay or the slow chemical combustion of leaves, grasses and other vegetable matter under the combined action of frost and the sun. As to the name, Indian summer, several explanations have been given of that, the most plausible being that the early settlers called it so because they believed that the smoky appearance at that time was caused by forest and prairie fires kindled by the Indians. Some people think that the name came from the fact that the Indians took advantage of that period to lay in their winter supply of game.—Chicago News.

A Trusting Monkey.

Poor little monkeys! They get hungry and tired and sleepy just like children. Here is a story of one who lives in Buffalo. He belonged to an organ grinder who stopped in front of a veranda where a kind hearted gentleman sat. When he came up and held out his little cap for a bit of money the gentleman, who is very fond of animals, gave him a red checked apple.

The monkey jumped upon his lap and ate the apple, and between the bites he fixed his bright eyes on the face of his new friend. He must have made up his mind that he could trust him, for as he finished the apple he laid his head against the gentleman's arm and fell asleep. The kind friend of animals paid the organ grinder to play a long time, so that the tired little monkey could have his nap. When he awoke his master pulled the chain, and he followed the organ again, much brighter and happier for the kindness shown to him.

Disappointed.

A bright little girl who sees and hears everything that is going on around her was present during a conversation the other day, in which a gentleman acquaintance of the family was described as a "henpecked husband." A few days later the subject of the gossip happened to call at the house while the little one was in the parlor. She looked at him with great curiosity for awhile and then, slipping over to her mother's side, whispered, "He don't look like a picked chicken, mamma."
