Farmers.

Be sure to clear out all old tobacco trash from your pack-houses after you finish grading and selling your crop. If you do not you will certainly have tobacco bugs, and they do much damage to tobacco, particularly good tobacco. Tobacco bugs fly around a lamp in the summer time and look like gnats.

Postmaster Flanagan Confirmed.

The United States senate has confirmed the nomination of Mr. Roy C. Flanagan as postmaster at Greenville for another four years, and both "Uncle Sam" and the patrons are correspondingly happy. Better postmasters than he are not easy to find.

MR. C. J. TERRELL DEAD.

He Was Once a Resident of Greenville as W. U. Telegraph Manager.

The Warrenton Record publishes the article below concerning the death of Mr. C. J. Terrell, who was at one time a resident of Greenville and is yet remembered by people here. In the early 80's Mr. Terrell came to Greenville to take the management of the Western Union telegraph office, and the present manager learned telegraphy under him and succeeded him when he was in the spring of 1884 transferred to a larger town.

The Record says: "The many friends of this highly esteemed gentleman will be surprised and grieved to hear of his death, which occurred in Milledgeville, Ga., Tuesday morning, February the 25th. He was buried in the Baptist cemetery at Warren Plains Thursday evening, Rev. T. J. Taylor conducting the funeral services. A large number of sympathizing friends followed him to his last resting place.

"His father and mother and seven brothers preceded him to the spirit world; and five brothers and two sisters survive to mourn their loss, among whom are Capt. W. S. Terrell, of Warren Plains; and B. T. Terrell, of Warrenton; Mrs. Pattie Perkinson, of Wise.

"Mr. Terrell was a native of this county. He was born and reared at Warren Plains. In early life he made a profession of religion and united with the Baptist church in Warrenton. When he left this county he took his membership with him, and wherever he lived united with the Baptist church in that place.

"Mr. Terrell was by inheritance and training a railroad man, and spent much of his life in the employment of the Seaboard Air Line railroad. During the last few years he has devoted himself to journalism, and published a weekly paper in Johnson, South Carolina."

MEETING OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES

East Carolina Teachers' Training School March 10th, 1908.

There will be a meeting of the trustees of the East Carolina Teachers' Training School at Greenville, N. C., Tuesday, March 10th, 1908 at 12 M.

This is the first meeting of the board and it is earnestly desired that every member of the board shall be present and shall come prepared to remain two days if necessary.

This meeting will be for the purpose of organization and for the consideration of the preliminary matters necessary to determine the number, location and character of the buildings to be erected. The board will be glad to give information to and receive suggestions from all architects, builders and contractors who may wish to be present and confer with the board.

J. Y. Joyner, Chairman Ex-officio Board of Trustees.

Delays are Dangerous.

Some men decline to insure their lives because they expect to die of old age, and yet, out of five hundred and twenty six death claims recently paid by one insurance company in a single month only one was due to the effects of old age. The Mutual Life of New York is the best, because it has been tried.

CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH.

HORRIBLE FIRE IN LARGE OHIO SCHOOL.

Caught in Basement From Defective Furnace and Shot Up Through Rooms Containing 300 Children.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 4.—Death in one of its most terrible forms claimed between one hundred and sixty and one hundred and seventy school children of the North Collinwood school, in the village of Collinwood, an eastern suburb, today, when the school building, catching fire from a defective furnace in the basement was gutted in the space of half an hour. The building being inadequately protected by fire escapes, the children were unable to make their way to the lower floor in time to escape the flames as they shot up from the basement and cut off egress. Starting about 9.30 o'clock in the basement from the overheated furnace, the fire gained tremendous headway before its presence was noted. The fire drill was inaugurated at once and those in the rooms on the lower floors quickly moved out of the building. But when the panic-stricken little ones in the upper rooms attempted to make their way to the stairway, the jam of uncontrolled and fear-stricken children grew until but few were able to extricate themselves and they perished almost within reach of safety.

MRS. WALTER BARFIELD DEAD.

On Monday morning, March the 2nd, the spirit of Frances A. Barfield, the beloved wife of Walter Barfield, at home in Greenville, N. C. took its flight to the God she served. Her death was not unexpected as she had been declining very rapidly for the last few years. It seems that age and a complication of diseases was the cause of her death. She was one of a large family, most of whom lived to be aged, but all have now passed over the river except two; Mrs. Patsy Davis and Mrs. Nancy Barfield of Ayden. Her father's name was Gardner Jones who has been dead near fifty years.

Aunt Frankie, as she was known had many fine qualities and was greatly beloved by a host of admiring relatives and friends. For many years she had been the faithful devoted wife of her husband, standing by him for the past 43 years. Was a good housekeeper, neat in her home and given to hospitality. Was a crown to her husband and adorned her life by being a devoted Christian. She has been a member of the Free Will Baptist church for many years. Holding membership at the time of her death with the Ayden church. We are satisfied that Aunt Frankie is now in a glorious rest, free from all pain, anxiety and care. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

Her remains were brought to Ayden on the noon train, Tuesday, and thence through the country to the Jones burying ground near Ormondsville. And in the presence of a number of weeping relatives and friends she was laid to rest by the side of her little children that have long since been in the glory world, and near father, mother and several brothers and sisters that have preceded her.

God comfort the lonely and desolate husband in this dark hour of his grief. May we all be permitted to meet Aunt Frankie in a land that is fairer than this—Ayden Baptist.

MAY COME HERE.

Effort Now Being Made to Play Large Musical Show Here Next Wednesday.

The well known Colonial Opera Company now playing the larger cities of the South, is open for engagement next Wednesday night, owing to a misunderstanding similar to that which enabled Greenville to secure "The Clansman" last season.

One of the company's agents telephoned here last night offering the attraction to Greenville provided a hundred seats (at $1) were guaranteed by noon tomorrow. High class musical productions seldom play the medium sized cities now a days, partly owing to increased theatrical railroad and hotel rates which amount to quite a daily item on a quarter of a hundred people and an extra carload of scenery, costumes and electrical effects.

It is earnestly requested that our representative people socially and musically inclined, will phone the Reflector Book Store this evening or tomorrow morning at latest stating how many seats they will engage. There is no question of the high standing and merit of the Colonial Opera Co. and this opportunity should not be overlooked.

Trade Report.

Richmond, Va., March 5, 1908.

Bradstreet's Saturday will say for Richmond and vicinity:

Trade in most lines shows improvement over that of a similar period of last month and dealers generally have a more optimistic feeling. Although lumber continues dull other building material shows more activity and contractors anticipate a resumption of construction work in the near future. Produce and provisions are in more demand. Wholesale dealers in feed and garden seed have had a satisfactory season and sales generally have shown an increase. As a coffee market Richmond holds a conspicuous place and continues to grow in importance; wholesale brokers and roasters of coffee report satisfactory and increasing sales. The leaf tobacco market is active, sales are in large volume and prices which are high, are well maintained. Sales of dry goods show a slight increase. Retail trade is fair, and collections slow.

Baseball, Baseball.

To the citizens of the town of Greenville:

There will be a mass meeting in the mayor's office, Friday night, at 8 o'clock, to ascertain whether the people of Greenville want to get into the Eastern Carolina league, of six towns, to be selected out of Raleigh, Wilson, Durham, Rocky Mount, Tarboro, New Bern, Wilmington, Washington, Greenville and Kinston. Come out and show your interest.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—United States Senator Redfield Proctor, of Vermont, died at his apartments at the Champlain here at 4:50 o'clock this afternoon after a short illness following an attack of grip.

Are Children Now as Studious as Formerly?

With all the educational enthusiasm that marks our time, there is a question whether the children of the present are as studious as were the children of four or five decades ago. In the time when the beginners used the "blue back" speller, those a little advanced a reader of some kind and the higher classes had to work a long time in the arithmetic, the grammar and geography, there was more down-right hard study than there is today when every child is loaded down with a book bag containing as many books as five such children carried forty years ago. We may be classed an old fogy, but we do honestly believe that children now-a-days have so many things to study, so much scribbling over various exercises that they become confused and lose interest in their work. Years ago the ten-year-old would come home from school and tell his mother that he had "turned a leaf" that day with just as much pride and triumph as the twelve-year-old to-day exhibits an essay on Shakespeare marked "fine" by the teacher who passed upon its literary excellence. Set us down, if you will, as a critic of some things in the present rush in books; but we do believe that children are hurried through school at too rapid a pace. Of course there are other sides to the question. Now, college students graduate with degrees younger than students entered college forty or fifty years ago. The mad craze for business success demands that beardless youths shall be in business and in the professions with the rank which men a third of a century old took fifty years ago. And there you are.—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

Generous Restitution.

In one of the Northwestern states they like nothing better than to tell how, a few years ago, there came to that section a Boston newspaper man whose mission it was to "write up" lynching in that quarter, although it appeared that there had not been an illegal execution in the state for a long time, says "Lippincott's." The natives took the questions of the eastern scribe in good part, and even "jollied" him into believing that for down-right lawlessness the community wherein he was for the moment sojourning was about the most conspicuous portion of the United States.

"Don't you ever make a mistake in these lynchings?" guilelessly asked the Bostonian. "That is, don't you ever lynch the wrong man?"

"That happened once," put in some one: "but we tried to do the square thing by the widow."

"Indeed!" "Yes; we appointed a committee to inform her that the joke was on us, and we gave her the choice of the crowd for her second husband."

With Ohio setting square down on Foraker, it looks like he has a slim chance of getting any following in the convention.

"Governor Hughes Won't Tell" is the big headline in an exchange. That's nothing. There are 473 people in Greenville who are just as efficient as New York's governor. Ask either of them which way the state is going from Five Points and he won't tell.

The investigation of the recent hazard at the A. & M. college has been called off, presumably on the promise of the boys to be good. One of the reasons given by Dr. B. C. Beckwith in making his report, says: "The students are reluctant to give information to one another and will not unless compelled to do so. The necessity of investigating cases of this sort." The man who will help cloak a crime is any better than the man who commits it. We think the action of the students since their discharge from the college is a greater injury than the hazarding itself.

The Savannah man who claims to read every issue of the Congressional Record from beginning to end evidently wants to be regarded as different from everybody else.

A St. Louis exchange reports that a young man wearing three coats and four pairs of trousers was taken into custody by the police. It must be a crime to wear too many clothes in St. Louis.

"Bin, the button man," who has "never made a mistake," says the tickets will be Taft and Hughes against Johnson and Bryan, and is getting his buttons ready accordingly. Later Bin may find that he got the button hook.

The other day a San Francisco bank depositor asked for his money, and was chased into the street by the president of the institution who was armed with a gun. Little incidents like this always make New Yorkers content with their own lot, hard as it may be.

At Mugh's Muir, near St. Andrews, is a monument to Archbishop Sharp, marking the spot where he was slain—a saevic inimicus. Some descendant of the covenanters objected to the inscription and chipped off the top bars of the E, making the inimicus "salvis," which, in view of the failure to bring them to justice, is not far from the truth. It will be readily seen that "Slain by 'cruel' enemies," as the original inscription implied, bears a very different meaning from the perverted reading, which may be translated, "Slain by 'uninjured' enemies."

Not True Love.

Grace (to her bosom friend, who is caressing a bleary eyed poodle)—I hear your engagement with Fred has been broken off.

Bertha (with a sigh)—Yes, I found that his love for me was not the deep, true love which nothing on earth can change, so I was compelled to let him go.

Grace—Why, how did you find it out?

Bertha—Easily enough. He got so angry every time poor Flossie bit him.—London Mail.

About eighteen months ago I had grown so much worse that I could not digest a crust of corn bread and could not retain anything on my stomach. I lost 25 lbs; in fact I made up my mind that I could not live but a short time, when a friend of mine recommended Kodol. I consented to try it to please him and I was better in one day. WHEN A PYTHON KILLS.

Painless Death Without Terror For the Serpent's Prey.

When I was a youngster in India a friend gave me an Indian python. It was tame to handle, but it was a dull, uninteresting thing, and we used to leave it undisturbed in its resting place, an old beer chest, with bars at the top. It was over ten or eleven feet long, so it was never extended. It used lazily to change its position, but seemed to prefer complete rest even when wakeful. We used to give it six live rats a Sunday. When not having been fed for a week; it would be moving about, but was never quick and lively.

One rat at a time was put into the cage and never seemed scared or disturbed, but just moved about in the open places and sometimes even on the snake. The latter for a time took no notice. Then it would wake up and slowly work itself into position with more motion, particularly in the head and neck for about two feet.

The quickness with which it then struck and seized its prey was wonderful. In less than a moment the rat was tacked into a fold and squeezed tight, being instantly killed without any apparent fear or anticipation of death. It was far more merciful and natural than a steel trap.

After waiting several minutes before changing the position to feed, the python would slowly move and get the dead rat straight end on, relax its grip and gradually swallow the prey until it came to the first kink at the end of the first fold, when the position had to be changed to pass the rat farther down, the same process being repeated with each rat, getting slower at each mouthful until it had swallowed five. It never ate the sixth, which was the perquisite of an expectant terrier and had a more painful end. It was plain to see how many rats had been swallowed by the bulges in its length. It would be torpid till Friday, gradually wake up and be hungry Sunday.

Can there be any doubt, with its rapid movements and constricting power, the python's victim is instantly caught, enveloped in a coil and at once killed? No snake can afford to risk a struggle, for if the skin is injured, the natives state, no snake recovers from such a wound, for the ants and flies will torment it to death.—London Field.

Scratched Furniture.

When the varnished furniture becomes scratched the spots should be gone over with a camel's hair brush and shellac varnish until they disappear. Nothing should be allowed to touch the places until the application is thoroughly dry. Another method is to take just a spoonful of turpentine and mix with this an equal quantity of linseed oil. Take a small soft brush, dip it in the mixture of oil and turpentine and pass quickly over the scratch. In half a minute the scratch will disappear. Instantly wipe off the mixture with a soft cloth and rub for a few minutes.

What Is the First Law of Nature?

"Self preservation is the first law of nature," answers Johnny Jones.

Correct, Johnny. Go right up to the head of the class. This law applies to a community as well as to an individual. Under the severe operation of this law a town that does not take care of itself, that does not look after its own interests first, that does not look out for Number One, soon falls into a bad way.

That's just as sure as shootin'. It's the law.

We must obey the law or take the consequences. If we in this town and community do not work together for our own good, the mutual good of all of us, in all lines of business, we have only ourselves to blame if the place slides down the inclined plane instead of climbing the golden ladder of prosperity and progress.

For instance, if we do our retail trading with big city stores that have no interest in us except to get our money and keep it, local trade must suffer and shrink, town property values and farm land values must decrease—and there you are!

Johnny Jones, who knows the law, is a wise lad, but how about his papa and mamma?

Do they obey the first law as applied to the old home place? If they don't, Johnny may have to apply the law to himself when he grows up. He may have to go to the city to make a living.

Let's all think it over.

THE RECORD GORILLA.

An Ape That Measured Over Eight Feet From Finger to Finger.

It was Mr. Paschen who killed the record gorilla whose stuffed skin is now to be seen in the Hon. Walter Rothschild's museum at Tring, Hertfordshire, England. It is without question the finest mounted specimen of the big ape in the world. It was killed by Mr. Paschen during a hunting trip in the Cameroons. He was strolling one afternoon alone a little way from his camp when a band of natives suddenly confronted him. They told him that a "big monkey" had made its appearance in their neighborhood, of which they were afraid. Mr. Paschen subsequently set out to find "the monkey," accompanied by some eighty natives. After about fifteen minutes' walk they came to a dense and swampy thicket, where the natives said the beast was hidden. At last the animal was discovered hiding in a tree, so situated that no one could get at it.

The daring hunter at once took out his bush knife and after considerable trouble managed to cut a path to the foot of the tree. Its curiosity aroused, the gorilla looked down through the leaves, but at that moment the hunter's gun was heard, and the huge beast received an ugly wound in the jaw. It fell head first out of its perch and caught hold of the branches before it reached the bottom. But a second shot, well directed, brought the monster to the ground at the very feet of the slayer. It was not only a giant, but a magnificent specimen of its class. The skin was beautiful, and the teeth were perfect. Twelve men carried it back to the village—no easy task, as the monster turned the scale at 500 pounds. The animal was then skinned. This and the beast's bones were embalmed and sent to Europe. An account of the method pursued in the mounting of the gorilla will give an idea of the general system followed at this interesting establishment.

On the receipt of the skin and bones numerous measurements were taken. Then a clay model was made to guide the taxidermist in his task. The skin was then cleaned and tanned, a process which occupied several weeks. The real labor in connection with the mounting was that involved in building a suitable framework, or "manikin," to receive the skin. To accomplish this a wooden skeleton was made and firmly bolted to a stout platform. This was padded with excelsior, on top of which was laid a thick layer of modeling clay. This latter was a close copy of the real animal on a slightly smaller scale, to insure a perfect fit of the skin. When the skin was stretched and stitched on the clay model the task was by no means finished. Here and there little bald places had to be covered with artificial hair. A few parts of the body required a little coloring to render the whole harmonious, while the ears and great open mouth demanded considerable manipulation to give the animal a lifelike appearance. This huge beast, it may be stated, stands five feet five inches high and measures over eight feet from finger to finger.—Scientific American.

An Old Problem.

An old problem that seems almost beyond belief is based on geometric progression. It is related that a certain king, pleased with some service of one of his subjects, told him that he would give him whatever he asked for a reward. The subject, a crafty man, told the king that he would be content with one grain of wheat for the first square of the checkerboard, two for the second, four for the third and so on till the sixty-four squares had been covered. The king laughed and told him to count out the grains. Before the squares were half accounted for the king stopped him and asked if he would be content with half of the kingdom instead, for he then saw what sort of bargain he had made. By continuing the multiplication till all the squares are accounted for it will be found that the total amount of the contract called for 44,000,000,000,000 bushels of wheat. Counting at the rate of 200 a minute would require one man about 419,000 years to count the individual bushels.

Hypnotism.

The actual foundation of modern hypnotic suggestion was discovered by Liebeault of Nancy, the famous "father of the therapeutic application of suggestion." After several years of practical experience, in 1866 Liebeault wrote his first book on the subject. It was shelved, and he was called a lunatic. Hypnotism remained a curiosity, and Liebeault's book was not reproduced till six years after Charcot, in 1878, began his study of hypnotism. In 1884 Bernheim wrote his work on suggestion, and this created a demand for Liebeault's book, which then gave him his lasting reputation.—New York American.

FISH THAT GLOW.

Some Deep Sea Creatures Able to Shed a Phosphorescent Light.

The inhabitants of the ocean vary in many respects, according to the depth at which they live, but most of all in their powers of vision. Fish that live at very great depths have either no eyes at all or enormously big ones. There are two methods of getting about in the gloomiest abysses—by delicate organs of touch and by sight—that collects the few rays of light due to phosphorescence or other accidental sources.

The fish which live near the top of the ocean have smaller eyes than those say eighty fathoms down. One hundred and twenty fathoms deeper, where daylight disappears, the eyes are bigger still. Beyond the depth of 200 fathoms small eyes prevail, with long feelers to supplement them.

At this depth, in fact, sight is practically useless. In the greatest abysses the fish are usually blind, feeling their way about solely by means of their sensitive bodies. Some indeed show signs externally of having once possessed eyes, but that is all.

In others—the oldest and most confirmed abyssal species—the eye has disappeared altogether externally, though traces of it are still to be recognized, embedded deeply in the tissues of the head.

Many deep sea fish have a curious system of hollows in the skull or about the body which hold a kind of phosphorescent slime. Others have round or oval shining opalescent spots, placed on the head or along the body or tail.

All of them are abundantly supplied with nerves, and they are apparently organs for the production of phosphorescent light. If so, such a fish must swim about surrounded by a faint glow, somewhat like that thrown by luminous paint.

One scientist even suggests that these fish may have the power of directing their rays in any direction, like a searchlight.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Devonshire Joke.

A few days ago a Devonshire showman played a practical joke at Barnstaple. As the country folk passed his tent they were interested at seeing the following notice: "Come and see the musical dog; admission twopence." Naturally a good many people paid their twopences and entered the tent, which was empty save for a big dog wearing a large metal collar, but no "musical dog" was visible. At last impatience mastered curiosity, and one of the audience asked the showman when the performance was going to begin. He seemed much surprised at the question and made for the tent door. Once there and in easy reach of the open ground, he pointed to the dog in the tent, saying: "Why, that's the musical dog. Can't you see the brass band around his neck?"

Peace on Earth.

Have you ever thought seriously of the meaning of that blessing given to the peacemakers? People are always expecting to get peace in heaven. But you know whatever peace they get there will be ready made. Whatever making of peace they can be blessed for must be on the earth here; not the taking of arms against, but the building of nests amid its "sea of troubles" (like the halcyons).

Difficult enough, you think? Perhaps so, but I do not see that any of us try. We complain of the want of many things—we want votes, we want liberty, we want amusement, we want money. Which of us feels or knows that he wants peace?—John Ruskin.

Astonishing Information.

Two men wrote to the editor of a correspondence column of a magazine, Mr. A. asking what to do for teething babies and Mr. C. asking how to get rid of grasshoppers. The editor in answering got the names mixed, so the man asking about babies got the reply:

"If you want to get rid of the little pests cover them up with grass and set fire to it."

And the one who asked about the grasshoppers got the reply:

"If they are teething, give them a warm bath and rub their gums with bonaset every day."—Judge's Library.

Easy Practicing.

Mrs. Fizzletop has been making an earnest effort to induce her son Johnny to learn to play the piano. A few days ago Mrs. Fizzletop called upstairs:

"Why aren't you practicing your piece, Johnny?"

"I am."

"You are not. You haven't touched the piano for the last half hour."

"I've been practicing all the same. There are pauses in the march, and I am practicing them over and over until I know them perfectly."—Pearson's Weekly.

IN A NEW LIGHT.

How a Different Point of View May Change the Whole Aspect.

Discontent or satisfaction with an object often depends entirely on the way in which it is regarded. A difference in the point of view changes the whole aspect. This truth is well illustrated by a pleasing little incident of Robert Dale Owen's childhood, told by himself in "Threading My Way."

Near the isolated country seat where I spent my boyhood there was a footbridge but little more than a mile away. For the first ten years of my life I was forbidden to cross it, and until then I never walked on the turnpike road.

One day father told William and me that he would take us to walk over the bridge and to the other side of the river. This was blissful news.

He conducted us by a winding country road up the opposite bank of the stream. Suddenly the view called out my youthful admiration. Across the river appeared a large house standing in beautiful grounds not very distinctly seen through the trees. Spacious gardens were surrounded by walls, there was a large greenhouse, and beyond stretched a meadow.

"Oh," I exclaimed, "what a beautiful house, papa! Don't I wish I could live there! What a time we could have!"

"My father smiled. 'We are going to live there, my son,' he said.

"Truly, papa?"

"Yes."

"Oh, I am so glad! There must be plenty of nuts there."

"You have never seen the house before?" asked father.

"Of course not. We have never been here before."

"True. Take a good look at the grounds. What do you think of them?"

I did so and announced they were much larger and finer than ours.

"My child," said father, "you are doing what much wiser and older people have done before. You are looking from a distance at a beautiful place with envious eyes. It is a very pretty place. It is Boxfield, your own home, where you have lived all your life."

His Dream.

"There is some money, my love," said the husband. "I don't want any," replied the wife. "Come, now, darling, take this five pound note and go out shopping." "Thank you, dearest, but I really don't care to. I would rather stay at home and see to the housework." Then the husband awoke and found that he had been dreaming.—Liverpool Mercury.
