IT IS TO BE A GREAT INSTITUTION.

EX-GOVERNOR T. J. JARVIS EXPRESSES OPINION.

He is Delighted With Spirit Shown by Board of Trustees.

To give an idea of the feeling of the trustees and the outcome of their meeting to organize and plan the beginning of the work on the Eastern Carolina Teachers' Training School to be located in Greenville, The Reflector asked ex-Gov. T. J. Jarvis, the resident member of the board of trustees this question: "How are you pleased with the spirit exhibited by the different members of the board of trustees, and what do you think of the outcome of their meeting?"

To this Governor Jarvis replied: "I am delighted with the spirit shown by every member of the board at the recent meeting on the 10th and 11th. They demonstrated by their words and actions that they realized that they were laying the foundation of a great institution, which would render great service to their State, and become an important factor in its educational forces. They seemed determined to profit by the experiences of the past in adopting all the good and avoiding all the errors that have been made in planning for such an institution. They wisely availed themselves of the services of Mr. H. Buckenham, an experienced landscape architect, to lay out the grounds and suggest the location of the various buildings now and hereafter to be erected, so that we may have an artistic plan to work up to."

I think we are especially fortunate in the selection of architects to get up the plans for the buildings now to be erected. The board selected as architects the firm of Hook & Rogers, of Charlotte, N. C. who have had large experience in planning and erecting school buildings, and H. W. Simpson, of New Bern, N. C. who has also had large experience and lives near at hand and is thoroughly identified with the section to be served by this institution. The board has secured the services of these three experienced architects at the compensation usually paid for one architect, to wit: 5 per cent of the cost of the work.

Through the liberality of the town of Greenville in appropriating $50,000 to the erection of the buildings, and the county of Pitt in appropriating a like sum for that purpose the board has at its command with the appropriation of $15,000 by the State, fully $100,000 for the erection and equipment of buildings after paying for the site. While the board will aim to keep within the limits of the funds in hand in the present expenditure, its object will be to adopt such plans and systems as may be added to and developed hereafter in perfect harmony with the plans made by the landscape architect. The board elected T. J. Jarvis, J. Y. Joyner and Y. T. Ormond an executive and building committee and charged them with the duty of having the plans prepared in detail for a subsequent meeting of the board to be held on Thursday, the 16th of April. The executive committee at once held a meeting with the architects and went over the general outlines of the plans. The architects are to prepare these plans in detail with estimates of the cost to be submitted to the executive committee at a meeting to be held April 14th. As soon as the plans are matured and adopted work on the buildings will commence. Something like two million brick will be required and other material in proportion. It is earnestly hoped that those desiring to furnish brick and other material for these buildings will keep in mind that it is for a great public institution and that they will enter into the spirit which seems to animate everybody to contribute something to the public service, and that they will make their prices for material as low as possible. We do not expect to obtain material and labor for nothing, nor do we expect anybody to charge more than a reasonable compensation for either.

So I may say that I am greatly pleased with the outcome of the meeting of the board of trustees and that I look forward with bright hopes to the future work of the board in connection with the institution.

First Baptist Church in Raleigh Damaged by Fire.

Raleigh, N. C., March 11.—Fire this morning broke out in the furnace room of the First Baptist church, that apartment being in a blaze all over and the smoke pouring into the handsome new church auditorium above. The fire department extinguished the flames in a very few minutes so the fire damage was confined to the furnace room and stairway, the damage being $1,000 or more. The damage by smoke in the church is rather serious. Only a few months ago the congregation spent $30,000 in enlargement and in interior decorations

Joint Architects.

After going over the matter carefully, the trustees of the Eastern Carolina Teachers' Training School, Wednesday afternoon decided to place two architects in charge of the plans and specifications for the school buildings. Mr. Charles Hook, of the firm of Hook & Rogers, of Charlotte, and Mr. H. W. Simpson, of New Bern, were engaged as the architects for the school buildings.

He is at the Wharf.

It was reported yesterday that Capt. M. Roberson had sold out his load of oysters and gone. This is a mistake. He is right at the wharf selling as fire oysters as you ever saw, and has some yam potatoes also.

$500 Reward.

I will pay the above reward for evidence to convict party or parties who poisoned my team and burned my house on Saturday night, March 7th.

CHARLOTTE FOLKS VERY THIRSTY

A Tin Can, Tin Cup Brigade Catches Up Liquor Which Officer Emptied.

When United States Revenue-Albright emptied three barrels of confiscated liquor into the gutter opposite the federal building this morning, Murt street was lined with the thirsty, all holding various and sundry receptacles. Some had cans, some had pitchers and the rest had wash basins, cups, quart jars, tomato cans and dippers.

"Hurry up, give me another can," or similar expressions were heard as the darkies stopped to dip up the liquor flowing down the gutter in a regular stream.

The gutter was lined with both white and black all the way from Trade street to Fourth. "I have been in the business eleven years, but never have I witnessed anything like this," said Mr. Albright.

The three barrels contained 150 gallons. The stuff was emptied from the brick platform in front of the postoffice building and flowed to the curbing where it dipped suddenly into the gutter. This was the most advantageous point for filling the cups, as whenever a barrel was tipped a dozen vessels were extended. It is estimated that 30 to 40 gallons were caught.—Charlotte News.

Don't be a Growler.

When one finds he is out of sympathy with his town, and can only say a good word for it coupled with an apology, he ought to get out. Many people fall into a sort of unconscious growling. But it's a miserable habit. Such people make of themselves a dead weight while of course they imagine themselves particularly independent. The individual has about all he can do to get along under his own loads, and he wants help and encouragement from those going his way, and who are identified with him in interest. So with the town. It has its interest to care for and it needs all the co-operation and helpfulness its citizens can provide and bring to bear. Every man is a part of his town. The town embraces the fortunes, and in some measures at least takes on the character of the man. So loyalty to one's self, and this loyalty is in the line of all well-shaped human nature. Therefore it is right to say that the man who does not stand up for his town is in some way dwarfed. There is something wrong about him. His fellows will pass this judgment upon him and the chances are that while he may add to the discomfort of others he will not escape making himself unhappy.—Atmore (Ala.) Spectrum.

Will Equip Camp Glenn.

Raleigh, N. C., March 10.—The permanent camp site of the North Carolina national guard at Morehead City, will be equipped at once with water and light plants, all requisite buildings and store houses, sewerage for accommodations, encampments and rifle practice. At least an order to this effect was issued today by Quartermaster-General Francis A. Macon, from the office of the adjutant general here, improvements to be ready for encampments this summer.

"It is an ill wind that blows nobody good." When it rains on show nights the hackmen get an inning.

MOB WOUNDS IMMIGRANTS.

Greek Laborers Fired on by Whites and Blacks.

A cooperage factory at Belhaven which does a large business, employed a lot of Greek immigrants to work in the factory. Sixteen of the Greeks arrived Tuesday, and during the night a mob of whites and blacks, who were opposed to the immigrants coming in to work, gathered around the houses occupied by the latter and riddled the houses with bullets. Several of the Greeks were wounded.

TRADE REPORT.

Richmond, Va. March 12. Bradstreets Saturday will say for Richmond and vicinity.

A number of late buyers and a number who postponed their usual early spring purchases have appeared in the market and there has consequently been some increase of sales in shoes, dry goods, hats, clothing and kindred lines and indications are that business for this month will be better than it has since the fall. Jobbers of groceries and provisions report fairly satisfactory conditions, with here and there evidences of improvement. Produce is in fair demand, with a supply ample for needs. Manufacturers of trunks and bags are looking for a fair amount of orders. There have been no important resurrections among saw mills, but a hopeful influence is felt in that trade and prospects seem brighter than for some months past. Some building operations have been planned for the near future and a fair number of residences and some smaller work are in course of erection. Retail trade continues dull. Collections in some lines are improving.

Married Men.

There is an expression in the face of a good married man who has a good wife that a bachelor's face cannot possess. It is indescribable. He is a little nearer the angels than the handsomest young fellow living. You can see that his broad breast is a pillow for somebody's head, and that little fingers pulled his whiskers. No one ever mistakes the good married man. It is only the erratic one that leaves you in doubt. The good one can protect all the unprotected females, and make himself generally agreeable to the ladies, and yet never leave a doubt on any mind that there is a precious little woman at home worth all the world to him.

Charlotte Gets Convention.

By a vote of 49 to 29 the State Democratic executive committee last night selected Charlotte as the place for holding the next Democratic State convention, and the time fixed was Wednesday, June 24th. Charlotte and Greensboro presented invitations for the convention, and both cities were ably and eloquently represented.—News and Observer.

Colonial Opera Co. Pleases.

The large audience Wednesday night was well pleased with the Colonial Opera Co's presentation of "Fra Diavolo." The Trocadero Quartette was especially good. The company left this morning on the launch Eagle for Washington, and were to stop at Professor's seine near Grimesland for a fish fry.

GOOD PROSPECTS.

For Greenville to Get Public Building.

The Greenville delegation who were in Washington City to appear before the congressional committee in the matter of a public building for Greenville, has returned home. Mayor F. M. Wooten, one of the delegation, tells The Reflector that they were well received by the public buildings committee, and there is a good prospect of Greenville being included for an appropriation for a site in the bill that will pass the present session of congress.

Congressman John H. Small is active in his efforts to get Greenville on the bill and the committee has promised him every consideration.

DEMONSTRATION FARMS.

To Be Established in Pitt, Beaufort and Hyde Counties.

Mr. C. R. Hudson, of the United States Department of Agriculture, and Mr. T. B. Parker, of the State Department, will leave today for Greenville, Washington and Englehard to establish demonstration farms and co-operative work. They will be absent from the city several days.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Barely Missed It.

A Bethany doctor who is noted for incisiveness of language was sitting in his office the other day when the telephone bell rang. "Hello," answered the doctor. "Hello," came a voice. "Is this the undertaker's office?" "No," replied the doctor, "you've missed it a little," and hung up the phone.

HOW DOES THIS SOUND?

Let's all take a turn at talking hard times and see how much we can check a return of confidence and block business. Don't try to help the situation. Don't take any progressive steps. Don't advertise and push business. If you have any money hold it tight. Don't pay anything you owe with it, don't think of putting it in bank for safety or to let it circulate, but just hide it in some old place around the house. If anybody wants to borrow any, charge two or three rates of interest. Yes, take advantage of the situation to make all out of it you can. You may never need a favor, hence are under no obligation to show any. Just talk hard times and make folks believe there is a panic anyway.

Isn't the foregoing fool talk? It would be if it was serious. But honestly, don't you think the actions of many people are in keeping with it?

You can always look for the unusual in South Carolina. That State elected a United States senator to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Latimer, deceased, with the understanding that he is not to be re-elected. A senator of one year will hardly be able to do anything but draw his salary.

Some crank keeps jumping up talking about cutting down Southern representation in congress just like the South cared anything about it.

If Mr. Cannon should happen to be speaker again he may get a chance to even up with some of them.

Courts Often too Slow.

Courts are good things, of course. Without them it would be difficult for a civilized community to even exist, because there would be turmoil, and perhaps, bloodshed always, but at the same time the courts of this country do not in many instances move with rapidity sufficient to subserve the ends of justice. The still throbbing mayoralty contest in New York city is an illustration of this. Almost three years ago an election was held there for mayor. McClellan was declared elected, but Hearst protested and contested. He claimed the right to have the ballot boxes opened and another count of the ballots made. So the contest went to the courts, and has been see-sawing there ever since. Now the New York Court of Appeals has decided that the ballot boxes must be opened and another count made, but even at this the end does not appear near. So doesn't this exemplify the slow working of courts in some important particulars, and slowness, too that must prove detrimental to justice. This question should have been settled long ago. Almost three years afterwards and still undecided. It will not be long before Mayor McClellan's term expires and he may be holding office through fraud. The evidence is in his favor, but that has nothing to do with the slow working of the courts. And it is such that often acts as a bar to justice and stirs up trouble within the breasts of folks. Court action should be quick and fair.—Wilmington Dispatch.

THE TIME TABLE.

Its Part In the Daily Life of the Locomotive Engineer.

The principal anxieties of an express driver have to do with keeping time. His employment depends upon his doing so. He is there in the cab of an express engine just, in fact, because he knows better than other men how to get the best results from a splendid piece of machinery. And they are demanded of him. No railway company in competition with another can afford to be lax about the running of its trains, and an express driver who means to keep his place has to remember this.

If the train is late from any fault of his he must expect to be reprimanded. If it is late at all frequently he may be either fined or in the end reduced. The checks upon him are strict. In every signal box he passes the time of his passing is recorded. He checks the record with his own time sheet, which is checked by the guard of his train in turn. He need not fear injustice, true. So many independent records establish the facts beyond mistake or cavil and enable his superintendent to say at once whether the fault lies between him and the engine or elsewhere. But time is one of his constant preoccupations.

He cannot forget it, as he may forget his perils. It is evidently not a matter to which a driver can become indifferent in the least, and there are times when it is oppressive. Engines differ, like pianos from the same famous workshop or watches made by machinery. They differ so notoriously that there is a railway saying, "A good engine makes a good driver."

Among modern express engines there is probably not a disappointing one in twenty. But every engine has her idiosyncrasies. She may respond to firing less readily than another or need more oiling or be oftener docked for small repairs. For better or worse the driver is married to her until he can show sufficient cause for a divorce. The time table is their moral law, enforced daily under the penalties aforesaid.—Keighley Snowden in Fortnightly Review.

Trifles That Cause Bravery.

On one of the streams in Yorkshire a man and a boy were seated in a boat fishing when suddenly the boy lost his balance and fell overboard.

The man gallantly jumped into the water and rescued the little fellow.

"Bravo!" remarked a farmer standing near. "They ought to give you the Humane society's medal."

"An' what for becos?" asked the old chap.

"For so nobly saving that poor lad's life at the risk of your own," replied the man.

"Now, look here, mister," he rejoined, "I don't want no praise w'ere no praise ain't doo. If you'd been me you'd 'a' done just the same."

"Why?" said the farmer.

"Why? Why, 'cos the young imp had all the bait in his pockets, that's why—an' a good why, too, mister."—Pearson's Weekly.

Immaterial.

The janitor of a small church on the south side raises a few chickens in a small inclosure in his back yard. The eggs of these he sells to some members of the church in which he works.

Last Saturday one of his customers asked him if he could spare a dozen eggs within the next two or three days.

"Oh, yes, ma'am," replied the janitor. "I'll bring you a dozen fresh ones tomorrow morning."

"Oh, no," protested the housewife. "I shouldn't want you to bring them on Sunday—not on Sunday, John."

"Well," replied John, "all right, ma'am, if you say so. But it don't make no difference to the hens."—Harper's Weekly.

A Hopeless Lunatic.

"Yes, sir," said the strange looking individual, "we are entirely satisfied with the flat we have now. There is plenty of room, the neighbors never bother us, no one within hearing plays the piano, there are no children in the block, my wife has no trouble in keeping help and the janitor is so kind and obliging that the heat is always exactly right and"

But they didn't wait to hear any more. They simply held him gently, but firmly, while some one went and phoned for a padded ambulance from the insane asylum.—Bohemian.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

During the month of March the subscription list of The Daily Reflector will be revised so as to comply with the law of the Government Postoffice Department which goes in effect April 1st. Under this law daily newspapers cannot be sent to subscribers who do not renew within 3 months after date to which their subscription is paid. To send it more than 3 months longer than it is paid for will require a 1-cent stamp on each paper.

Therefore we ask every subscriber to The Daily Reflector who owes for 3 months or longer, to send a remittance at once so we can keep your name on our list. The publisher can have no choice in this but will have to comply with the law.

If subscribers prefer to remit for three months at the time it is all right, but in that case they will have to pay every 3 months, or they can pay as many months at the time as they like so as to save the trouble of remitting oftener.

We hope every subscriber will attend to this promptly as we had rather not drop a single name from our list. But bear in mind that The Daily Reflector cannot be mailed after April 1st to any person who owes for 3 months or longer.

What Is the First Law of Nature?

"Self preservation is the first law of nature," answers Johnny Jones.

Correct, Johnny. Go right up to the head of the class. This law applies to a community as well as to an individual. Under the severe operation of this law a town that does not take care of itself, that does not look after its own interests first, that does not look out for Number One, soon falls into a bad way.

That's just as sure as shootin'. It's the law.

We must obey the law or take the consequences. If we in this town and community do not work together for our own good, the mutual good of all of us, in all lines of business, we have only ourselves to blame if the place slides down the inclined plane instead of climbing the golden ladder of prosperity and progress.

For instance, if we do our retail trading with big city stores that have no interest in us except to get our money and keep it, local trade must suffer and shrink, town property values and farm land values must decrease—and there you are!

Johnny Jones, who knows the law, is a wise lad, but how about his papa and mamma?

Do they obey the first law as applied to the old home place? If they don't, Johnny may have to apply the law to himself when he grows up. He may have to go to the city to make a living.

Let's all think it over.

THE STAGECOACH.

An Ancient Economist Who Said It Would Ruin Business.

The first stagecoach seen in England was about the year 1553, and another 120 years passed before stagecoaches began to run. They were not received with much favor. In 1673 a treatise was published in London by "A Lover of His Country and Well Wisher to the Prosperity Both of the King and Kingdoms," in which were used many elaborate arguments and violent tirades against them.

"These coaches and caravans," said the writer, "are one of the greatest mischiefs that hath happened of late years to the kingdom, mischievous to the public, destructive to trade and prejudicial to lands."

He laments the decay of good horsemanship, which would follow if everybody rode to London in a coach. He calculates that a coach would have forty horses on the journey to the capital and carry eighteen passengers a week. In the whole year it would carry about 1,872. Suppose there were returning passengers. There would be 936, and for these forty horses would be sufficient, but if people traveled in the good old fashioned way then at least 500 horses would be required for the work. The use of so many horses would give employment to many who were by the stagecoach thrown out of work, such as cloth workers, drapers, tailors, saddlers, tanners, curriers, shoemakers, spurriers, lorimers and fellmakers. The inns would also suffer, for the stagecoach stops only at a few, but when gentlemen traveled on horseback, accompanied, as they usually were, by two or three servants, they stopped at any and as often as they liked and thus encouraged trade.

Farmers will be ruined, he says, by the stagecoach, for how can they dispose of their hay, straw and horse corn? Moreover, the influence on health would be bad—men called out of their beds before daylight, hurried from place to place until far on into the night, in the summer stifled with heat and choked with dust, in the winter starving and freezing with cold or choked with filthy fog, obliged to ride all day with strangers and with sick, ancient and diseased persons and with children crying, poisoned with fetid breaths and crippled by the crowd of boxes and bundles. Besides all these troubles there were accidents arising from the rotten coaches and foul roads.

In short, the writer is fully convinced that if stagecoach traveling becomes popular the country will go to ruin. Had he lived to see the railway he would have been bereft of his senses.

Anent the Graveyard.

A lumbering old stage was winding in and out over a remote road in the Adirondacks. There was only one passenger, and he had chosen to sit beside the driver. Several times he had tried conversation, but had met with so little encouragement that he had given up and was silently watching the landscape.

Presently they came to a tiny mountain burying ground, containing a few gravestones and a few unmarked graves. The passenger looked at it, struck by its air of loneliness, which seemed to stir in him afresh the desire for human intercourse. He turned again to the driver, pointed toward the graveyard and observed:

"People around here don't seem to die very often, do they?"

And without turning his head the driver said:

"Just once."—Home Magazine.

Taking No Chances.

A tall man impatiently pacing the platform of a wayside station accosted a red haired boy of about twelve. "S-s-say," he said, "d-d-do you know ha-ha-how late this train is?" The boy grinned, but made no reply. The man stuttered out something about red headed kids in general and passed into the station. A stranger, overhearing the one sided conversation, asked the boy why he hadn't answered the big man. "D-d-d-ye wante see me g-g-get me fa-fa-face punched?" stammered the boy. "D-d-dat big g-g-guy'd tink I was mo-mo-mocking him."—Argonaut.

Fifty Kinds of Headache.

"There are more than fifty kinds of headaches," said a physician, "and sufferers from the more common forms may cure themselves accordingly. The more frequent forms are a dull pain across the forehead, due to dyspepsia; a pain in the back of the head, due to the liver; a bursting pain in both temples, due to malnutrition; an ache on the top of the head, as though a weight pressed on the skull, due to overwork; an ache between the brows just above the base of the nose, due to eye strain."—Fur News.

THE RECORD GORILLA.

An Ape That Measured Over Eight Feet From Finger to Finger.

It was Mr. Paschen who killed the record gorilla whose stuffed skin is now to be seen in the Hon. Walter Rothschild's museum at Tring, Hertfordshire, England. It is without question the finest mounted specimen of the big ape in the world. It was killed by Mr. Paschen during a hunting trip in the Cameroons. He was strolling one afternoon alone a little way from his camp when a band of natives suddenly confronted him. They told him that a "big monkey" had made its appearance in their neighborhood, of which they were afraid. Mr. Paschen subsequently set out to find "the monkey," accompanied by some eighty natives. After about fifteen minutes' walk they came to a dense and swampy thicket, where the natives said the beast was hidden. At last the animal was discovered hiding in a tree, so situated that no one could get at it.

The daring hunter at once took out his bush knife and after considerable trouble managed to cut a path to the foot of the tree. Its curiosity aroused, the gorilla looked down through the leaves, but at that moment the hunter's gun was heard, and the huge beast received an ugly wound in the jaw. It fell head first out of its perch and caught hold of the branches before it reached the bottom. But a second shot, well directed, brought the monster to the ground at the very feet of the slayer. It was not only a giant, but a magnificent specimen of its class. The skin was beautiful, and the teeth were perfect. Twelve men carried it back to the village—no easy task, as the monster turned the scale at 500 pounds. The animal was then skinned. This and the beast's bones were embalmed and sent to Europe. An account of the method pursued in the mounting of the gorilla will give an idea of the general system followed at this interesting establishment.

On the receipt of the skin and bones numerous measurements were taken. Then a clay model was made to guide the taxidermist in his task. The skin was then cleaned and tanned, a process which occupied several weeks. The real labor in connection with the mounting was that involved in building a suitable framework, or "manikin," to receive the skin. To accomplish this a wooden skeleton was made and firmly bolted to a stout platform. This was padded with excelsior, on top of which was laid a thick layer of modeling clay. This latter was a close copy of the real animal on a slightly smaller scale, to insure a perfect fit of the skin. When the skin was stretched and stitched on the clay model the task was by no means finished. Here and there little bald places had to be covered with artificial hair. A few parts of the body required a little coloring to render the whole harmonious, while the ears and great open mouth demanded considerable manipulation to give the animal a life-like appearance. This huge beast, it may be stated, stands five feet five inches high and measures over eight feet from finger to finger.—Scientific American.

An Old Problem.

An old problem that seems almost beyond belief is based on geometric progression. It is related that a certain king, pleased with some service of one of his subjects, told him that he would give him whatever he asked for a reward. The subject, a crafty man, told the king that he would be content with one grain of wheat for the first square of the checkerboard, two for the second, four for the third and so on till the sixty-four squares had been covered. The king laughed and told him to count out the grains. Before the squares were half accounted for the king stopped him and asked if he would be content with half of the kingdom instead, for he then saw what sort of bargain he had made. By continuing the multiplication till all the squares are accounted for it will be found that the total amount of the contract called for 44,000,000,000,000 bushels of wheat. Counting at the rate of 200 a minute would require one man about 419,000 years to count the individual bushels.

A SHREWD LITTLE GIRL.

Prompted a Question Which Saved an Old Woman's Life.

Elizabeth Janfield, afterward Lady Falkland, was called an "odd child." Sometimes her father, who was a judge, took her with him to court. On one of these occasions a woman was brought before him on a charge of witchcraft. It was said that she had bewitched two or three persons to death. The frightened creature when asked if this were so fell on her knees and, weeping, confessed that the accusations against her were true.

"Did you bewitch — to death?" asked the judge.

"Yes," was her reply. "Did you come in the form of a black cat and breathe on him so that he languished away?"

"I did." And then the judge heard a whisper at his ear, and his little daughter — she was only ten years old — begged him to ask the woman if she had bewitched John Symondes to death.

The question was put and immediately answered in the affirmative. How had she done it? Then she told one of her former stories, at which all the company laughed. The reason of the merriment was that John Symondes was the judge's brother-in-law and at that moment was standing near him in court. The judge then asked why she had made such a statement.

"Alas, sir, I knew him not," replied the woman. "I said so because you asked me."

"Are you no witch?" "No. God knows I'm not." "Nor did you ever see the devil?" "No; never in all my life."

On further examination she said she had been told that if she did not confess she would be tortured until she did, but that if she admitted all the accusations mercy would be shown her. She was thereupon admitted, and she owed her release and probably her life to the shrewdness of a little girl.

Earth as Food.

In New Caledonia, New Guinea and in the Malay archipelago the consumption of earth as food is comparatively common. In Java and Sumatra a certain kind of clay undergoes a preliminary preparation, being mixed with water, reduced to a paste and the sand and other hard substances removed. The clay is then made into small tablets or cakes about as thick as a lead pencil and baked in an iron saucepan. When this process is over the cake of earth resembles a piece of dried pork. The Javanese eat small figures roughly modeled from clay, made to imitate the animal birds or men.—Kansas City Journal.
