HAPPENINGS IN NORTH CAROLINA

ITEMS TOO SHORT FOR SEPARATE HEADING.

Goldboro is talking of having street cars.

Mr. W. A. Barber, aged 92 years, died in Chatham county a few days ago.

Dr. T. D. Haigh, of Fayetteville, one of the oldest and most prominent physicians of the State, died Tuesday.

Charlotte dispatch, March 24: Rev. M. H. Hoyle, sixty eight years a Methodist minister, died at his home in this city this morning, surrounded by his family consisting of one son and several daughters, one married.

THE LYMAN TWINS.

Give Good Show and Please the Large Audience.

The Lyman Twins in presenting "Yankee Drummers" in the opera house, Wednesday night, was fully up to expectation. The audience was large and nothing but praise is heard of the performance. The twins made great fun and the singing of the chorus girls was a strong feature. It will be no trouble for this company to get a large house if they come this way again.

Honor to a Worthiest Son.

Sunday next will be the ninetyeth anniversary of the birth of Wade Hampton, whose death occurred but six years ago. The State of South Carolina has already erected a stately monument to his memory, and it is now proposed that Charleston, his birth-place, erect a monument of its own by popular subscription. The Charleston Daughters of the Confederacy ask that the people of the city observe the anniversary by contributing not less than $5,000 for a shaft worthy in its dignity and simplicity to bear the name of Hampton. It is believed that this sum will be forthcoming without any formal canvass. "That is a small amount," well says the Charleston Evening Post in cordially approving the plan, "but the offering of it spontaneously on the ninetyeth anniversary of his birth would be a great thing in its evidence of a people's appreciation of nobility and worth, and public service, which were illustrated so perfectly by Wade Hampton." General Hampton's memory is indeed worthy of veneration—he was a hero whose deeds of war and peace should be a perpetual treasury of inspiration to his people. Charleston will permanently enrich itself by honoring him in the manner proposed.—Charlotte Observer.

Overman Introduces Bill.

Washington, March 25—Senator Overman's amendment to the Aldrich bill introduced today, provides for a monetary commission of fifteen members consisting of five senators, five representatives, and five appointed by the president. The committee is to investigate the causes of the recent panic and the relation of banking thereto, and whether abuses exist in trading on margin. It is to suggest such remedies in the way of legislation as it may deem necessary. The commissioners are to receive $625 per month and to employ such experts as necessary. An appropriation of $150,000 is provided for.

ADVICE FOR THE FARMER.

Behooves Them to Have an Eye to the Future—Plant Less Cotton and Make More Hog and Hominy.

While I am not in the lead of the cotton farmers' movement now, I am by no means blind to the situation and I cannot be silent.

At this time of financial depression to all business interests, save that of the farmer, it behooves that class of men to look carefully into the future and by so doing he will see that upon his good judgment this crop year depends the regaining of a solid financial foundation to every business of our State.

Just so surely as the farmer makes debts for mules, fertilizers, provisions or other obligations, depending upon the sale of cotton to pay the obligation, and plant a large crop of cotton, neglecting the planting of feed and food crops, just so surely will there be financial distress next year on the farm and in every business interest of our State.

Owing to the wet condition of land, almost the entire time since October, there is a smaller acreage of wheat and oats than has been the case in some years. With what crop will the land intended for wheat and oat crops be planted? If in cotton we may as well right now calculate to sell the cotton for a very low price.

The future prosperity of the banker, the merchant, the professional man, the mechanic depends upon how much cotton is planted within the next sixty days. If these men who may think they have no interest on the farm, will look at the present cotton conditions, they will see that it is clearly to their interest to use whatever influence they may have with cotton planters, to reduce the acreage this year, below what it was in 1907.

Every man in North Carolina should preach daily, hog and hominy, less cotton and no debts for 1908. C. C. Moore.

In Charlotte Observer.

Jury Said It Was Gambling.

The case that has attracted most interest at the present civil term of Pitt Superior court, was a suit by J. H. Parker & Co., members of the cotton exchange, of New York, against R. W. King, for an alleged error in account, the plaintiff claiming to have through error overpaid defendant something near a thousand dollars in settlement of contracts for cotton futures, and brought suit to recover the amount. Under the laws of North Carolina debts made in gambling cannot be collected by law, and the jury construing that dealing in cotton futures is gambling rendered a verdict for the defendant. The transaction out of which the suit grew occurred more than four years ago.

$1,000,000 Disappears.

Pittsburg, Pa., Mar. 25.—More than $1,000,000 has disappeared from the vaults of the Farmers' Deposit National Bank, of this city, according to information reluctantly divulged by officers of the bank and officials of the federal government. Two arrests have been made and the men taken into custody are Henry Rieber, paying teller, and John Young, auditor of the bank. Embezzlement is the charge against them, and in the statement it is alleged that they misappropriated $65,000 of the bank's money.

KILLED-ON THE RAIL.

Sam Roberts and Turney Bailey, White Men, Meet Terrible Death.

Wilson, N. C., March 25.—Yesterday Sam Roberts and Turner Bailey were in Wilson and when they left here for their homes in Nash county they were much the worse for whiskey.

They left here for Bail-y's over the Norfolk and Southern road, but when they reached Neverson, got off the train. Before they could get aboard, the train moved off and left them. They proceeded on toward their destination, but were warned that it would be dangerous for them to pass through a deep cut between the stations.

They heeded not the warning, but proceeded on their way to death and destruction—when they met the eastbound train, when both were ground to death beneath the wheels.

We are informed that the head of one of these unfortunate men was found about an eighth of a mile from where the body was discovered.

Being Honest.

Last week we wrote for this column some observations about being truthful. We have been as profoundly impressed about honesty as we have been about truth. In fact, the two virtues are entirely inseparable. A person may be diligent in business to a degree that is beautiful and commendable; a person may even be kind and thoughtful for the comfort of others, and yet be dishonest. But the person who is always truthful is always honest, and the person who is always honest, is likewise truthful. And honesty does not consist only in paying one's just debts, when he can—and one who will not do this is not strictly honest; honesty does not consist in refraining to take the money of another unjustly when one could do it without detection. But honesty consists in doing absolutely the right thing to other people under any and all circumstances. Have I treated every human being fairly? is the test question. Whoever cannot answer that question in the affirmative has not at all times been altogether honest. Of course any unfairness to another which one does not intend is not to be reckoned dishonesty if he make amends when he can. An expression of words concerning another intended to produce a false or unfair impression can be classed as dishonesty. Many a laborer deals dishonestly with his employer in a way that the dishonesty cannot be detected. When one is paid a wage or salary for certain service and willfully neglects to render service commensurate with the compensation, or the best he can under the circumstances, he does not measure up to the full test of old-fashioned honesty. One of the surest methods of being honest with others is to be honest with ourselves. "To thine own self be true, and it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any."—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

Washing Machine Cases.

It was not exactly wash day around the court today, but the court was occupied in suits growing out of the washing machine right swindle that was worked in this county a year or two ago.

President's Message.

Washington, D. C. March 25.—A special message from the president was read in both houses of congress soon after convening today, and in both it was closely followed.

In the house, the president's declaration that the time had come for a revision of the tariff elicited handclapping on the part of the Democratic members. Democratic approval also was given, by way of pounding desks, to the suggestion that congress could with advantage forthwith remove the tariff on wood pulp, with a corresponding reduction upon paper made from wood pulp.

The Republicans waited and confined the applause to the message as a whole.

In the Senate the message was received without comment of any kind.

A Card.

On the first Saturday in April I will be at Greenville North Carolina to distribute circulars and talk to the farmers on the advantages of Simpkins, Prolific cotton over others. Please meet me there one and all. I will talk to you on truck growing and tell you how I grow 3 bales of cotton per acre. Meet me at court house at 11 o'clock on Saturday, April 4th.

Very truly,
W. A. Simpkins

Always Welcome.

There are some characters who carry their wealth with them, who are rich without money. They do not need palatial homes or a large bank account. They do not need to buy admission to society—everybody loves them. They are welcome everywhere, because they have that which money cannot buy—a genial, helpful, sunny, cheerful disposition.

Of course, everybody wants them, because it is a joy to be with them. Everybody loves the sunshine and hates the shadows and the gloom.

There is no bank account that can balance a sweet gracious personality; no material wealth can match a sunny heart, an ability to radiate helpfulness and sweetness.

But such graces and charms never live with selfishness or self-seeking. It is the people who have something to give, not who are trying to get something, that are wanted everywhere. Ex

Wonderful Warblers.

The wife of a Methodist minister in Ohio has already been married three times. Her maiden name was Partridge, her first husband was named Robbin, her second was named Sparrow, and the present one is named Quayle. The children are now as follows: Two Robbins, one Sparrow and three Quayles in the family. One grandmother's name was Swan and another was named Jay; he is dead now and a bird of Paradise. One grandmother was named Ostrich and the other was named Byrd. This very interesting family of feathered songsters, at least in name, now reside on Hawk Avenue, Eaglesville, Canary Island, and a lyre bird says so, and as spring has now just arrived, of course they are pluming their wings and pouring forth sweet songs of praise and thankfulness that they have not ere this been mistaken by some sportsman for the real thing and been shot.—Durham Sun.

The Murderer of Chief Benton.

Fayetteville, March 25.—Sam Murchison, alias Sam Melvin, the negro who murdered Chief of Police James H. Benton, of this city, on February 23rd last, is on trial for his life in the Superior court to-day. At the hour of noon adjournment, the jury had been completed, and the examination of witnesses for the State will begin immediately upon reconvening. The jury is composed entirely of residents of the country districts, the only town man offered being refused by the defense. From the line of questioning of respective jurors by the prisoner's council it appears that they will make their fight on the alleged lack of premeditation, in an effort to secure a sentence of imprisonment instead of the death penalty. It is not probable that the accused will go on the stand.

Federal Court Jurors.

For the term of Federal court to be held in Washington beginning April 21st, the list of jurors drawn contains the following in Pitt county: R. D. Whitehurst, Sr., Murphy Woolard, Thos. Perkins, W. J. Teal and Warren Chance, (col.).

In two months from today—May 25—the State will vote prohibition.

O. T. Boney, of Kinston, was here today.

It does not yet appear that Spain has sent in a request for a visit by "Uncle Sam's" fleet.

China is also to come in for a visit by our touring fleet. We will show them all a sample of what we have.

So far as they have been held over the State, the Republicans of Pitt are the only ones who did not have a wrangle and split in their county convention.

Whenever people send The Reflector on article promoting the candidacy of any person for nomination for office, they should bear in mind that there is a charge of half a cent a word for publishing such articles. In sending such articles the words should be counted and the proper amount enclosed to cover the cost, otherwise they will not be published.

Instead of trying to make it easier and more attractive for people to travel with them, it looks like the railroads in the red tape regulations in connection with the use of mileage tickets are only trying to put the public to as much trouble and inconvenience as possible. It is the spirit that the railroads show towards the public that makes the people want to retaliate whenever they have opportunity. As long as this goes on the railroads may expect to have trouble.

How quickly you can tell a live town from a dead one by simply looking over its newspapers. A poor skim milk sort of a newspaper with a few lines advertisements, and those looking as though they were run at half price, betokens a dead town just as sure as a corpse indicates a funeral; while a good, lively, well printed newspaper, filled with good, fresh ads, and displayed locals, shows that the town is prospering and thriving. It never fails.—Durham Sun.

Judge Webb, of the Superior Court bench, has waded in and the effect will probably be to break up a practice obtaining among mayors and justices of the peace. He held some time ago that a criminal could not be sentenced to more than 30 days on the roads by such a court, that this is the limit of jurisdiction. The custom has been to fine a prisoner and if he does not pay to sentence him to work the fine out on the roads, the usual wage being 25 cents a day and board. In many cases a man is fined as high as $30 or more and when he is sentenced to work this out on the roads he must stay over a hundred days. In other words, Judge Webb holds that an inferior court cannot take jurisdiction beyond 30 days on the roads, so that hereafter then a defendant cannot be sentenced for more than 30 days. Under his ruling a convict on the roads of Mecklenburg, fined $45.00, and sentenced to work it out on the roads, was yesterday released.—Greensboro Record.

THE UMBRELLA.

It is Probably as Ancient as the Race of Man.

The umbrella is undoubtedly of high antiquity, appearing in various forms on the sculptured monuments of Egypt, Assyria, Greece and Rome, and in hot countries it has been used since the dawn of history as a sunshade, a use signified from its name, derived from the Latin umbrella, a shade. In the east the umbrella has even been a symbol of power and royalty, and in many countries it has become part of religious as well as royal symbolism. The Chinese date the first umbrella back to 4,000 or 5,000 years anterior to the Mosaic date of creation.

Among the Greeks and Romans the umbrella was used by women, while its use by men was considered effeminate. Less than 100 years ago a large umbrella was kept hanging in the halls of good houses in England to keep visitors dry as they passed to and from their carriages. At hotels and restaurants also they were occasionally used in the same way for the benefit of invalids or aged people. But nobody ever thought of carrying an umbrella in the street.

It is said that Lord Cornwallis when he had been dining with a friend and was about to enter his carriage to return home stopped a moment at the door to speak a parting word to his host. It was raining in torrents, and a servant standing by took up the house umbrella to hold it over his lordship's head when the old soldier exclaimed wrathfully: "Take that thing away! Do you suppose I am a sugar doll to melt in a shower, or do you take me for a woman, who is afraid of her fine headgear? I have not been all this time fighting my country's battles to be frightened now at a little cold water. If powder and lead didn't annihilate me, a shower of raindrops may be risked."

The largest umbrella in the world was made in Glasgow for a king of east Africa. It can be opened and closed in the usual way and when open is twenty-one feet in diameter. The staff also is twenty-one feet long.

New York and Philadelphia are the centers of the umbrella industry in this country, and more than 8,000,000 are made annually. The wood used principally for umbrella sticks is that of the pimento or all-spice tree, which grows abundantly in South America and the West Indies. From the single island of Jamaica an average of 2,000 bundles of sticks are sent annually to England and the United States. A bundle contains from 500 to 800 sticks, each of which represents a young pimento tree.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Subtraction.

The teacher was giving a lesson in subtraction. It had taken them several terms to master the mysteries of addition, and in this rule she found them no less dull.

Driven to desperation by the stupidity of their replies, she rashly promised three whole pennies to the child who gave her the smartest answer.

"Of course," she explained for the twentieth time, "you can only subtract things of the same name. For instance, you can't take eight tables from sixteen years or four horses from sevenpence."

A hand shot up at the back of the class, and the teacher broke off to inquire what was the matter.

"Please, miss," squeaked a small boy's voice, "can't you take three pennies from one purse, then?"

He won the prize.

A Cardboard Capital.

Every time I come to Paris I am struck with the unreal appearance of the town, especially in the less busy quarter which lies all round the Champs Elysees. The tall, blank gray houses, with their gray wooden shutters, look no more real than the cardboard houses in a stage play. Moreover, it seems impossible that any one is alive inside the houses. You never see a face at a window, and no one ever seems to emerge through the great brown doors—doors which are obviously made of painted cardboard and not of wood. The grayness, the monotony, the absence of colors, the comparative silence, are incredible after the warm colors, the red brown skies, the portentous, seething "movement" of London.—London Sketch.

Imagination Left Unassisted.

A Germantown woman discovered one morning recently that her maid Nora had broken the thermometer that hung in the reception hall.

"Well, Nora," sighed the mistress of the house in a resigned way, "you've managed to break the thermometer, haven't you?"

"Yes, mum," replied the maid in a tone equally resigned. "And now, mum, we'll jist have to take the weather as it comes!"—Harper's Weekly.

This is what Hon. Jake Moore, State Warden of Georgia, says of Kodol For Dyspepsia: "E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ill.—Dear Sirs—I have suffered more than twenty years from indigestion. About eighteen months ago I had grown so much worse that I could not digest a crust of corn bread and could not retain anything on my stomach. I lost 25 lbs; in fact I made up my mind that I could not live but a short time, when a friend of mine recommended Kodol. I consented to try it to please him and I was better in one day. I now weigh more than I ever did in my life and am in better health than for many years. Kodol did it. I keep a bottle constantly, and write this hoping that humanity will be benefitted. Yours very truly, Jake C. Moore, Atlanta, Aug. 10, 1904." Sold by Jno. L. Wooten's Drug Store.

HIS SHARE OF THE LOAD.

A Story of Archduke Albrecht and a Peasant Girl.

The Archduke Albrecht of Austria was fond of hunting and spent a month or two every summer in the Tyrol and upper Austria in pursuit of the chamois. On these occasions he wore a hunter's uniform, which was chronically in a shabby condition. One day he wandered away from his party and, finding that night was coming on, began hastily to descend the mountain toward Ischl. Soon he overtook a girl of nineteen or twenty, who was carrying an enormous load of firewood, on the top of which was perched a chubby child about two years old.

The archduke hailed her, and the girl greeted him with anything but a friendly look.

"What do you want?" asked she.

"Can you tell me the shortest road down to Ischl?"

"I am going there. You can follow me," she retorted curtly.

The archduke went on beside her, but it made him uneasy to see her bearing so great a load.

"This is far too heavy for you, my girl," said he. "Give me that child. I will carry him."

"Much you know about carrying children, old fool!" she exclaimed.

"No. You take the firewood and I will keep the youngster. You may well do that, for if you hadn't met me you'd run a good chance of spending the night on the mountain."

The archduke undid the scarf and transferred the fagots to his own shoulders, so that, with his gun and game bag, he was pretty heavily laden. Then the girl fell to chaffing him about his ridiculous appearance, and as he trudged on for about an hour he began to be a little tired of his bargain.

Suddenly at a cross path he came upon his suit, and their greeting at once betrayed his identity to the girl. She fell on her knees before him, and tears sprang to her eyes when she saw two of his hunters removing the fagots from his bruised shoulders.

"Don't cry; there's a good girl!" pleaded the archduke, distressed. Then he pressed a purse into the baby's hands. "Here is something to buy your mother a donkey," he said, with a kindly smile. "She might not always find an old fool to help her carry her firewood!"

Glazed Currant Buns.

Soften a cake of compressed yeast in one half cup of scalded and cooled milk and add to a pint of the same. Stir in about three cups of flour, beat until very smooth, then cover and set to rise. When light add one-half cup sugar, one-half cup softened butter, one teaspoonful salt, three eggs, one cup of cleaned currants and about three cups of flour. Knead until elastic and set to rise. When doubled in bulk, roll out into a sheet and cut into rounds. Set the rounds a little distance apart on a baking sheet, and when doubled in bulk bake about twenty-five minutes. Brush over with a thin starch (a teaspoonful of corn-starch to a cup of boiling water), sprinkle thickly with granulated sugar and return to the oven to glaze. Repeat the glazing process until a heavy coating is formed. This recipe makes two pans of buns. —Boston Post.

"Rooter," "Bug" and "Fan."

It must, indeed, be admitted in all justice that, although lexicographers have not as yet devoted their acumen to the subject, there does exist a nice distinction among the terms "rooter," "bug" and "fan." Any one may be a rooter if he attends a baseball game only once in a lifetime and yells. A bug, too, need not be a steady patron. His chief requirement is ability to quote data and statistics dealing with averages, games and players. But the fan! He is as far above the others as a mahatma above a cooly. To him baseball is sleep, meat and drink. It becomes a fetish. Having passed through the stages of rooter and bug, the soul of a fan frequently achieves a Nirvana that enables him to express untold passion by a mere eye glint. Again, he may elect to roar. He is the sublimation of baseball fervor, getting out of it all there is in it.

Not His Funeral.

Mrs. Smith repeatedly reminded her husband that the silver was hers, the furniture was hers, and so on, until poor Smith almost wished he had married a girl without a penny. The other night Mrs. Smith awoke to hear strange voices in the lower part of the house and, vigorously punching her husband in the ribs, called: "John, get up! There are burglars down below!"

"Eh?" inquired Mr. Smith sleepily.

"Burglars downstairs!" shrieked Mrs. Smith.

"Burglars?" said Smith as he turned over. "Well, there's nothing of mine there!"

A MISPLACED SWITCH.

Which Explained Why the Minister Didn't Touch the Salad.

Headless of the fact that it was Sunday evening and that the larder might be, and in fact was expected to be, rather low, Deacon Black had invited the minister to supper. Mrs. Black, mindful of the fact that a small salad was all that could be placed on the board, was horrified at her husband's invitation, but with true hospitality attempted to make the best of the situation.

Leading from the parlor to the dining room is a passage, dark and so narrow that but one can pass in comfort at a time. With a woman's quick wit, Mrs. Black, who had come into the parlor after laying what she could find on the table, determined to use a variation of the "family holdback" that so often plays a part when the unexpected guest has come. Following her husband into the passage on the way to the table, she clutched an arm and, pulling down his head, whispered vehemently:

"Don't touch that salad, for goodness' sake!"

"All right," he answered in a similar whisper. Then the party proceeded to the table.

"I am very sorry, Mrs. Black," exclaimed the minister as the party seated themselves, "but I feel a little indisposed from the heat today, and I think I will have only a cup of tea."

"Why, that's too bad!" the wife remarked. "I did want you to have a good supper."

"You didn't say anything to me about feeling ill," put in Deacon Black, who despite the warning had helped himself to a large portion of the main dish. "If I had known that I wouldn't have pressed you to come."

The clergyman passed the situation off with some light remark and after a suitable period took his departure.

"Well, John," said Mrs. Black, "I'm glad for your sake that the doctor couldn't eat much, for there was so little, and I know how fond you are of salad."

"Yes," said her husband, "but there would have been enough to go around, I guess. I can't understand why the doctor accepted my invitation if he was ill."

"Anyway," she answered, "I'm glad I caught you in the passage and warned you about the salad."

"Passage! Salad! What are you talking about?" he exclaimed.

"John Black, didn't I speak to you in the passage?" his wife almost screamed.

"Why, no. The doctor let me go ahead of him after we started!" cried Black. "What did you say?"

Thread and Needle Trees.

Did you ever hear of the thread and needle tree? Rather a handy tree to have in the garden, don't you think, especially when there are boys in the house, with buttons continually coming off their clothes? This strange tree grows in nearly all tropical countries. At the tip of the leaf there is a sharp thorn, which is the needle. If you grasp it firmly and pull it out a long thread of fiber comes with it, and there you are—with a needle already threaded for your sewing. The fiber thread is very strong, and the Mexicans use it for weaving a coarse kind of cloth as well as for sewing. The leaves of the tree they use for roofing their houses instead of tiles, and a fine roof they make with them, strong and waterproof—just the sort of roof that is needed in a country where the rain pours down in sheets.

Saved His Molasses.

A traveler came along to the gate of a humble cabin in a town in Alabama just as an old negro handed a couple of jugs to his son, who was about ten years of age, and said, "Now, Julius, yo' gwan down to de grocery an' git a quart o' treacle in one ob dem jugs an' hurry back." When the boy had gone the traveler said to the father:

"You didn't tell him to get anything in the other jug. Is he going to leave it at the grocery?"

"No, sah; gwan to bring it right back home," he replied.

"But why send two jugs to get a quart of treacle?"

"It's jes' dis way, sah: If he has a jug in each hand, he can't go dippin' his finger in the treacle an' eatin' it as he comes along."—Detroit Free Press.

THE FIRST RUBBER SHOES.

They Melted in Summer and Became Brittle in Winter.

India rubber shoes were first manufactured in Roxbury, Mass., in 1833, and verily they were "fearfully and wonderfully made." They really bore no resemblance whatever to a shoe. They had the appearance of having been run into molds or blown, the same as glass bottles are made. They were made of pure rubber gum. No attempt was made to imitate the shape of the shoe or foot they were intended to cover. In shape they were hollow tubes, tapering toward the toe.

At the place where the opening to pull on the overshoe should be was an irregular hole, without shape, just as they came from the mold. The hole was enlarged with a sharp pair of shears to fit the instep or cut high or low to suit the taste or caprice of the customer. The work was done by the salesman after the buyer had selected, according to his requirements, heavy or light, thick or thin. Men's sizes were very heavy, the soles being frequently from one-fourth to a half inch in thickness. They were tied in pairs and stuffed with straw or hay to keep them in shape for shipment. A lady's foot, incased in such a huge, ill shaped mass of india rubber gum, weighing at least a pound, presented a clumsy appearance indeed, particularly when compared with the light and truly artistic appearance of the present styles.

The first attempt at making overshoes of india rubber did not prove a success, a large amount of capital being sunk in the experiment, as well as all the unsold stock. They answered the purpose in cold weather, but would not stand the heat, melting into a disgusting mass.

Experiments to remedy this difficulty resulted in reaching the opposite extreme, the cold weather freezing them brittle, so they could not be drawn over the shoe until they were thoroughly warmed, and this obstacle to success was not overcome until Charles Goodyear discovered his process of vulcanizing rubber, which has rendered his name immortal.

Rapidly following this era of improvements, the india rubber shoe began to assume beauty of proportions and practical utility. — St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Some Pockets.

"Most people know what a 'poacher's pocket' is, but how many have heard of a muste pocket?" said a tailor. "Many professional singers have their overcoats fitted with such a receptacle. Usually they are placed in the back of the coat just above the waist line and will hold half a dozen pieces of music without crushing. Some detectives, too, have their business suits fitted with a handcuff pocket in the sleeve. The special advantage of this is that the manacles can be withdrawn unseen. When an obstreperous prisoner sees the officer's hand seeking a pocket he knows what is coming and acts accordingly. But with the special pocket the 'bracelets' are out and snapped on his wrists before he can resist.

"One of my customers makes a point of having his trousers lined with leather from the knee downward. Why? Because a dog once bit him severely in the calf, and he doesn't want it to happen twice." — London Answers.

Building Walls With Bags.

The practice of constructing breakwaters and the submerged parts of piers with concrete enclosed in bags has been largely developed in Scotland. The concrete is prepared as near as possible to the place where it is to be used. It is inclosed in bags to protect it temporarily from the effects of contact with the sea water while it is lowered into place. The bags are placed in a box suspended directly over the spot where they are to lie. The touching of a trigger opens the box and allows the bag to drop out. A line of bags having been deposited, the lower axis of each bag in the next series is so arranged that the meeting edges of two of the bags in the lower row will be covered. Thus a regular wall is built up, and as the concrete hardens it becomes solid and immovable.

The Soot's Gratitude

An old farmer coming home from the Paisley market lost his pocket-book, containing a considerable sum of money, in the station. He looked for it, but could not find it, and had given up all hopes when a newsboy said to him: "Here, mon. A've fun' yer book."

The gruidman was overflowing with gratitude and expressed himself thus: "Thank ye, ma lad. If ye happen ta be passin' oor farm-house, step in, an' A'll gie ye a guid drink o' soor, milk." — Dundee Advertiser.

To Cough Properly.

Few people know how to cough properly. It never occurs to the ordinary individual that there is a right way and a wrong way of doing it. Yet it is a matter of no small importance. If every sigh means a drop of blood out of the heart, as people say, every cough means some greater or less proportion of time knocked off one's life. Most people cough as loudly and forcibly as they can. But it is rather costly noise, for the single reason that it tears and inflames the lungs. The lungs consist of an extraordinarily delicate spongelike tissue, which sometimes gets inflamed and choked with phlegm. When we try to get rid of this substance we cough. But obviously if we remove it violently we must necessarily injure the delicate lung tissue. Therefore train yourself to cough as gently as possible.

Mrs. Marble after the death of her husband went to Mr. Stone, a dealer in headstones, and consulted him in reference to an inscription. She said, 'Put on it, 'To my dearest husband,' and if there be any room left, 'We shall meet in heaven.'"

Entering the cemetery and going to her husband's grave, she noticed the headstone and quickly rushed to see how he had engraved it.
