SOME MEMORIES OF THE PAST.

Awakened by Reading Current Events.
Names That Many of us Remember.

Editor Reflector:

I returned this morning from a protracted professional visit. Today is Sunday, and a sweet toned bell is sounding from a church steeple across the way summoning all respectable persons to be taken to task for not trying to save themselves from the "wrath to come"; but here I sit amid a sea of memories with emotional waves sweeping over me.

As Mark Twain observes—"Twas your paper what done it today."

Have just finished reading two articles in The Reflector, namely—The old plank road, and the death of Francis Smith. "Tank", as he was familiarly called at school, was one of my old friends and school-mates, and I loved him.

Memory has taken a trip to the past, and I am a child again.

Pardon me, Mr. Editor: You don't know how dearly I love the old towns of Greenville and Washington, and how dear, how sacred to my heart are the recollections, the scenes, the haunts of my boy-hood days. Again with Henry Blow; Lil Blow; John Harri s; Jim Yellowly; Ben Patrick; Bill Evans; Ed Clark; Hugh Murray; Tom Smith; Tank Smith; Charles Warren; Frank Durand; and others, I am up and down the "Old plank-road," in and around the old academy and the old red Hanrahan store, sporting in Greene's mill pond and Tar river, and under the old bridge beneath the shadow of the cypress trees.

I remember another boy towards whom my heart was strangely drawn, and I have thought of him often and with much affection. His home was about four miles from Greenville, on the road to Falkland. Forbes was somewhat melancholy but musical, and died in the spring time of youth.

The following are some lines of his favorite song:

"The roses that crowned me are blighted,
The garland I cherished is dead,
The vows so confidently plighted
Are broke and my loved one has fled."

"The sun is now sinking in billows
That roll in the far distant west.
The morn'-sun will shine through the willows,
And me forever at rest."

The loss of our relatives, friends and companions impress hourly upon us the necessity of our own departure. We find that all our schemes are quickly at an end, and that we must lie down in the grave with the forgotten multitude of former ages, and yield our places to others, who like us, shall be driven awhile by hope or fear about the surface of the earth, and then like us be lost in the shade of death.

"A little more rain,
A little more sunshine,
A little more poverty,
A little more gold,
And the eventful tale of life is told."

In this life some amuse themselves with entails and settle ments, provide for the increase and perpetuation of families and honors, and contrive to obviate the dissipation of fortune, which it has been the whole business of their lives to accumulate.

Some (like your humble servant) fan themselves with the belief that they are working for the advancement of medical science and the alleviation of human sufferings.

Others, more refined and exalted, congratulate their own hearts upon the future extent of their reputation, the lasting fame of their performances, the reverence of distant nations, and the gratitude of unprejudiced; but no ray of comfort can proceed to cheer the gloom of the last hour but hope; and that hope only is rational which we are certain cannot deceive.

Yours Sincerely,
Billie.

SENATOR GETS CANED BY LAWYER

Became Involved in an Altercation in Little Rock.

Little Rock, Ark., Mar. 31.—United States Senator Jeffreys Davis and Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Thomas Helm became involved in an altercation on the streets here today. Helm, it is said, struck Davis and the latter then went into his office. Davis soon reappeared and bystanders claim that he was looking for Helm. Helm says that Davis made an insulting remark to him which he resented with several blows.

Senator Davis was arrested this afternoon on a warrant charging him with carrying a revolver in the streets with murderous intent. The case was docketed in police court. In a statement Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Helm says that he met Davis in the street and accosted him, the latter having slandered him during the recent State campaign, repeating false charges concerning the celebrated Hartley case. Helms says he struck Davis twice in the face and subsequently chased him into his office. He then picked up Davis' cane and went to his own office.

Davis made the following statement:

"Helm attacked me from the rear as I was going to my office, using a loaded bat, which was attached to his wrist by thongs of leather. This is an attack such as I have warned the people of Arkansas would be made by political rings of Little Rock to further their desires. Helm simply acted under instructions of his superior.

Senator Davis, it is alleged, charged in the recent campaign that Helm received $1,000 when Charles Hartley, of New Albany Ind., was robbed here last year of $6,000.

The cane was presented to Davis by the Arkansas legislature and the Senator has carried it through four State campaigns.

MINERS QUIT WORK INDEFINITELY

Quarter Million Men Idle Until a Scale is Adopted Between the Mine Workers and Operators.

Indianapolis, Indiana, March 31.—Two hundred and fifty thousand picks dropped from the hands of as many bituminous coal miners of the United States this evening, not to be used again until a wage settlement has been reached and a scale adopted between the members of the United Mine Workers of America and the coal operators of the various fields. Tomorrow morning 250,000 men will be idle.

The situation, however, does not indicate prolonged strike. An open winter and industrial depression have left a large stock of coal on hand, and the differences between miners and operators are very slight. It is practically agreed that the present wage scale will be continued, but some politics in connection with the change tonight in the national officers of the miners organization and local differences between operators and miners have resulted in temporary suspension from work until a new wage scale is agreed to either by districts or individual mines.

Woodmen will not meet tomorrow night. Meeting called off.

L. D. Wade,
Com-Commander.

There will be no prayer meeting in the Baptist church tonight.

DRIVE THEM OUT.

Causes of the Anti-Saloon Movement.

The present temperance upheaval is the revolt of the American conscience against what it considers to be wrong. The American saloon can blame itself largely for the present opposition to it; it is essentially bad. Aside from the inherent danger of the business under the wisest possible restraints, the liquor dealers of the nation have set themselves to do their very worst to provoke alarm. The saloons are the breeding-place of all kinds of vice and crime. In them the thieves, the murderers, ballot-box stuffers, grafters, purchasers of law, and the debauched find their education and protection; and from the lawless hordes go forth to prey upon society. The only wonder is that the people have stood this menace to our civilization as long as they have.

While it is not universally so, it is too often the case that the saloon fosters and promotes the social evil. The public sentiment is greatly outraged at the intimate relationship between the saloon and the disorderly house. The public is very angry because so many drinking-places are gambling hells.

Another thing that has stirred the public against the liquor traffic has been the relationship between the politician and the saloon. No feature of American public life is so abominable and discouraging as this open and notorious copartnership of the liquor traffic with politicians of all parties in the business of crime. It is an astounding fact that most of the great cities of the country are ruled by rum, and have been for a generation or more. Every privilege for every kind of crime is bought and sold for money. Fabulous corruption-funds and thousands of the criminal classes are organized to hold up the public and compel it to deliver. Three saloon keepers of Chicago have absolute authority in wards one and eighteen, where the traffic in vice is maintained; and men of their stripe rule in some other wards; so that the political complexion of Chicago is determined by the saloon influence. In New York City a large proportion of the Tammany leaders who determine the policy of their party in the city and State are or have been saloon-keepers. In Philadelphia and in some other cities the connection between the saloons and the political leaders of the opposite party is just as marked as it is in Chicago or New York.—From "The Nation's Anti-Drink Crusade," by Ferdinand Cowle Iglehart, in the American Review of Reviews for April.

Modern Dairy.

Messrs. O. L. Joyner and B. N. Sikes are equipping a modern dairy out at Ingletarre farm. Mr. Joyner already had a large herd of fine cattle, and now the necessary appliances are being put in for making butter in large quantities for market. The opportunity to get fresh butter every day right from the dairy will prove a great convenience.

Your Attention Ladies.

Don't make aprons for your little children, nurses and cooks. The Parochial Society of St. Paul's church will do this for you. A sale of aprons will take place Tuesday, April 21st, and special orders will be taken. Phone your orders to Mrs. Charles Skinner.

Millinery Announcement.

On account of having more space to show our Pattern hats we will hold our Opening in the store next door to Sam T. White on Thursday and Friday April 2nd and 3rd. Will be there only for the opening. The honor of your presence is requested.

FORTY-SIX CHURCHES

From New Baptist Association—Prohibition Mass Meeting and Great Demonstration.

Enfield, N. C., March 31. The Roanoke Union of Baptist churches met at Enfield. There were preachers and delegates from a large number of counties, the attendance being estimated at several hundred. The Union was organized at the First Baptist church Friday night by the election of Prof. Wilson, of Scotland Neck, as moderator and Rev. J. A. Sullivan, of Washington, secretary. The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. J. L. Rodgers, of Whitakers.

On Saturday from 11 to 1 o'clock the most important work of the meeting was done. At the last meeting of the Tar River Association it was decided that that body was so large that it would be expedient to divide it. The Union was therefore converted into a committee to take preliminary steps for the formation of the new association, and Mr. T. M. Arrington was elected temporary chairman.

Forty-six churches were enrolled, which will join the new association, the churches extending from Aurora to Spring Hope. The first meeting of the new association will be held with the church at Rocky Mount, on Tuesday, October 13th, next.

At 3 o'clock on Sunday evening a prohibition mass meeting was held by Rev. B. Craig who made a powerful speech, in which he exposed the great evils of the whiskey traffic. There was hardly standing room in the church, and at the close of the speech every man, woman and child by rising and waving their hands pledged themselves to the cause of temperance.

The Baptist church being unable to accommodate the crowds on Sunday the M. E. church was opened for other services.

THE ANDEAN WALL.

Crossing the Chilean Cordillera in Winter and in Summer.

The wall of the Andes begins at the Caribbean and runs all the way down the western edge of South America until it trails off into the Antarctic like a jagged dragon's tail. It is a very high wall and a very wide one—sometimes scores and sometimes hundreds of miles across—and except in a few places all but impassable. There is the Oroya railroad in central Peru, the highest in the world, which will take you from the drowsy tropical coast at breakfast time and by early afternoon set you on the roof of the dirde, shivering and breathing fast, 15,600 feet above the sea. There is a railroad up to Lake Titicaca from Mollendo, in southern Peru, which crosses the shoulder of the Andes at an altitude about a thousand feet lower, and there is a railroad running down into Chile and the coast from the Bolivian plateau. The only railroad highway which crosses the continent, however, is that which climbs the Chilean mountains to the pass of Uspallata and runs thence across the pampa to Buenos Aires. Some day this will be a through line from sea to sea, and in a dozen or more places tunnel gangs are nibbling under the upper cordillera. But now it is open only during the summer, and even then the fourteen kilometers over the Cumbre, or summit of the pass, must be made by stage. In winter no attempt is made to cross, and from Mendoza, in the Argentine foothills,
over to Los Andes, on the Chilean side,
about 150 miles, the road is closed.

The Andes in these parts rise to appalling heights, the loftiest of which is Aconcagua's 24,000 feet, and the pass itself is at not far from 13,000-3,900 meters, to be exact. During the winter
—the months of our northern summer—
it is buried in snow, the deadly temporal is likely at any time to whirl down on the traveler, and crossing the cordillera is as different a thing from crossing it in summer as crossing a prairie carpeted with spring violets is different from venturing into it during a blizzard, when a man may lose his way and freeze to death a furlong from the ranch house door. Whoever tries to cross after the 1st of June is supposed to take his life in his hands.

FATE OF A RARE STAMP.

Craved by Collectors and Burned by a Careless Domestic.

In the year 1851 a twelve penny black Canadian postage stamp was printed by the government at Ottawa. The public did not regard this somber issue with favor, so few were issued.

One of these stamps was sent to the Hamilton postoffice, where it was sold to an old gentleman, who said it was a shame to print the queen's picture on a stamp that might be handled by profane hands. Tenderly the old gentleman put it on a parcel, sending it to a friend in the United States. Here, in the wastebasket, it lay for many a day till an errand boy found it and quickly transferred it to his album.
Despairing of getting a good collection and his fever for stamps somewhat abating, he sold them to a dealer. The new owner, on looking at the catalogue, found that what he had paid $5 for was worth $25.

Accidentally the stamp was slipped into a 25 cent packet and sent to a dealer residing in Hamilton. When the latter opened the packet he was astonished to find such a valuable stamp and, being honest, wrote his friend to inform him of what had happened, offering him $1,200 for it. The offer was accepted, and the stamp again changed hands. By this time the stamp had increased in value, and not a few came from a distance to look at the treasure. One day an English na-bleman, who, through a Canadian friend, had heard of the stamp, offered $1,500, which offer was accepted. The English lord, falling in love with an American heiress and wishing to gain the favor of her brother, presented him with the stamp as a token of esteem. Here, in its new and luxurious American home, it came to a sad end, for one day the maid, by mistake, swept the stamp, which had accidentally fallen out of the album, into the fire. In an instant the stamp which thousands had heard of and longed for went up in smoke to the broad,
blue sky, leaving not a trace behind.

Antiquity of the Oath.
The oath is practically as old as history. As far back as we can go we find some form of appeal to the forces that are stronger than man. The oath calling God to witness is of course much later than that made in the name of the powers of nature, fire, flood and tempest or the ferocity of wild beasts or the terror of the pestilence. The gesture of the raised hand and the formula, "So help me God," are of Jewish-Christian origin, although the ancient nations swore in the name of their gods.

A Lively Play.
"I heard one man," said the playwright, "who attended the premier of my new play last night complain that it was so late when he got out."
"Yes?" queried the critic.
"Yes, and yet the final curtain fell before 10:45."
"Ah, perhaps he overslept himself!"

DISRAELI PHRASES.

Maxims and Witticisms Which Appear to Have Been Borrowed.

A writer in the London Spectator draws up a list of "maxims and witticisms ascribed to Disraeli which have the appearance of being derived from external sources," or, in other words, borrowed. The bill of indictment is specific:

The phrase "men of light and leading," used by Disraeli in a speech in 1858, came from Burke. Disraeli's assertion that only those nations that behaved well to the Jews prospered had been made long before by Frederick the Great. Disraeli said, "Youth is a blunder, manhood a struggle, old age a regret." This is based on Seneca's famous saying, "Initium cœcitas progressio labor, error omnia." In 1864 Disraeli said of the French revolution, "When the turbulence was over, when the shout of triumph and the wail of agony were alike stilled; when, as it were, the waters had subsided, the sacred heights of Sinai and Calvary were again revealed," etc. This simile had been used by other orators again and again. Canning used it in proposing the vote of thanks to the Duke of Wellington after the battle of Vittoria, and Shiel used it in his speech on the Irish state trials in the house of commons in 1844. Sir Walter Scott also introduced it in his "Life of Napoleon." Disraeli's phrase "stateswoman" comes from Swift. "Anecdote" was derived by Disraeli from his father, who in his turn derived it in conversation from Rogers.

In "Sybil" Disraeli compares Fox to Catiline. Canning described Fox as "the Catiline of modern times" in the Anti-Jacobin. Disraeli compared the ministers of Mr. Gladstone's government to "a range of exhausted volcanoes." This was an image used by Wilkes. "How is it, Wilkes," said somebody to the demagogue, "that you sat silent through all the French revolution debates?" "The set is," replied Wilkes, "I am a burnt out volcano." Somebody once pointed out the coincidence to Disraeli, and he is said to have remarked, "It looks like a crib, but it is the first time I knew that Wilkes had ever said anything worth repeating and fit for publication." The advice given to Contarini Fleming by his father is based on that of Lord Chesterfield to his son. Chesterfield, like Contarini Fleming's father, advised his son to "read Rochefoucault," and study French writers and cultivate the society of women. Disraeli wrote of Bolingbroke as "the glory of his order and the shame." This is probably from Pope's description of Erasmus in his "Essay on Criticism":

At length Erasmus, that great injured name,
The glory of the priesthood and the shame—

but a still older writer, Sir George Mackenzie, the "Bluidy Mackenzie" of Scottish Presbyterian hagiology, described Montrose in his "Coelia's Country House and Closet" as

His country's glory and its shame,
Caesar in all things equal, but his name.

Disraeli's phrase "Imperium et libertas" was suggested by Bolingbroke, from whom Disraeli derived so many of his ideas. The words "imperio et libertate" are used by Cicero in the fine passage at the end of his fourth oration against Catiline.

Answered First Time.

The doctor who made the reply noted below was a wise man because he replied to a question which no one could answer in such terms that the questioner thought him wise.

"Doctor," said an old lady to her family physician, "can you tell me how it is that some children are born dumb?"

"Why, certainly, madam," replied the doctor. "It is owing to the fact that they come into the world without the faculty of speech."

"Dear me," remarked the old lady, "now just see what it is to be educated like a doctor! I've just asked my husband the same thing more than a dozen times, and all I could get out of him was, 'Because they are.'"

The doctor laughed.—Strand Magazine.

Couldn't Find It.

Smith was a great cyclist, but had very rarely been on a horse. One day when staying with a sporting uncle he thought he would like to follow the hounds, which were to meet near by. So he borrowed a young horse from his relative which was not much accustomed to the hunting field.

At first he went steadily, until the horse, being startled by a rabbit darting from a clump of grass, broke into a gallop. The rider was flung forward on to the horse's neck.

"What are you doing, my lad, with your arms there?" jokingly called out his uncle.

"I'm feeling for the brake," was the muffled reply, "but I can't find it!"—Liverpool Mercury.

A SNAKE INCIDENT.

The Boy Was Scared, but Had No Reason For Fright.

I stooped low to pass under an overhanging limb and found that I had planted my feet on either side of an ugly looking blacksnake about five feet long, says a writer in Forest and Stream. I knew instantly that the snake was harmless, but a crouching tiger, famished and ferocious, could not have startled me more.

The path was on a steep hillside, sheer ascent and descent on each side, the boy was behind me, and the head and most of the snake's body in front, so straight up was my only line of retreat, and to the very best of my ability I pursued it. I will not attempt to state how high I jumped, nor will I stand for the boy's statement that it was "most out of sight," but I can truthfully say that I jumped just as high as I could and stayed up as long as I could.

The snake sprang into the air at the same time—not trying to strike, but evidently surprised and startled—and when compelled to return to the earth we were about in our original positions. Without a moment's hesitation I jumped again, as did the snake.

With the next jump I combined a kick, which landed and spoiled the snake's jump, and, coming down just right, set my heel with full weight upon it, causing it to thrash about desperately for an instant and then beat a hasty retreat. Straight down the path toward the boy it went with wide sweeps. I could not shoot it without endangering him and could only call out reassuringly: "Stand still. It won't hurt you."

The distance was not over twenty-five feet, and it took but an instant for the snake to cover it. I hoped it would turn aside from the path before reaching the boy, but apparently it had no such intention.

Just as it reached the little fellow—standing wide eyed and motionless—it swerved very slightly to one side. But the quarters were too close. With a yell all out of proportion to his size the boy sprang for a sapling growing near at hand and ran up it like a squirrel. As his feet cleared the path I sent a load of shot into the snake, raking it fore and aft, and, although I deprecate the killing of all harmless serpents, I have not yet felt regret for this one.

A Hard Head.

When Farragut ran the gantlet of Forts Jackson and St. Philip, below New Orleans, the little gunboat Cayuga went in the lead and was everywhere in the thick of the fighting. A colored boy of the crew was passing powder when a spent grape-shot struck a casting near him, shattered and flew in many directions. One piece hit him on the thickest part of his forehead, says the author of "A Sailor of Fortune," and dropped to the deck.

He picked it up nonchalantly, put it in his pocket and kept at work.

When the fight was over and the members of the crew were bragging this boy, who was not over fourteen, stepped up to some of them and pulled the grapeshot from his pocket.

"You hush!" he said to the boasters. "Dat shot done hit me on de haid an' broke in two! Dere's de shot an' dere's de place it hit me. You can see foh you'se'f."—Youth's Companion.

Bungled Flattery.

When Sir Edwin Landseer, the world famous painter of animals, visited the royal court at Lisbon, the old king of Portugal greeted him with the salutation: "Ah, Sir Edwin, I am glad to see you! I am so fond of beasts!"

But for bungled flattery this does not begin to compare with the remark of an unlucky admirer of the great French actress, Mme. St. Denis. Her performance of Zara had just been greeted with enthusiastic applause, and as she stepped from the stage she said, "To act that well a woman should be young and handsome." "Ah, no, madame!" exclaimed the unfortunate man in his anxiety to pay the highest compliment possible. "You are convincing proof to the contrary!"

Ungrateful.

A lawyer brought a suit against a rich corporation for a man of good standing in the community. In the course of his argument he declared in a loud voice for the purpose of gaining the sympathy of the jury: "Gentlemen of the jury, who are the parties to this important litigation? Why, on the one side there is a powerful corporation, with an overflowing treasury, and on the other side there is my poor, simple, uneducated client." "Did you win your suit?" inquired a friend of the plaintiff a few days after. "Yes," was the reply, "I won my suit, but I shall never employ that lawyer again. He called me a fool, and the jury believed it."

Deafness Cannot be cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. C. ENEY & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Drug Stores, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

WONDERFUL INSECTS.

How Ants Bridged a Saucer of Water With a Straw.

Reaumur in his "L'Histoire des Insectes" says that Cardinal Fleury told him that he saw ants on one occasion build a bridge of earth across some bird lime which had been spread on a tree. On another occasion the cardinal saw these intelligent little architects build a floating bridge across a vessel of water surrounding the bottom of an orange tree tub. They used wood in the construction of this bridge, thus showing that they were aware of the nature of the material necessary to make their bridge a success and that they possessed no small engineering skill.

Still more wonderful is the account by Dr. Ellendorf, who writes that he saw ants bridge a saucer of water with a straw. He had placed the legs of a cupboard in saucers of water, thus for a few days preventing the ravages of the ants. Finally, however, they again got access to the cupboard and were as bad as ever. On examination he found a straw in one of the saucers which lay obliquely across the edge of the vessel and touched the leg of the cupboard. The ants were using the straw as a bridge.

"I now pushed the straw about an inch away from the cupboard leg," writes Dr. Ellendorf, "and immediately a terrible confusion arose. In a moment the leg immediately over the water was covered with hundreds of ants, feeling for the bridge in every direction with the antennae, running back again and coming in ever larger swarms, as though they had communicated to their comrades within the cupboard the fearful misfortune that had taken place.

"Meanwhile the newcomers continued to run along the straw, and, not finding the leg of the cupboard, the greatest perplexity arose. They hurried around the edge of the saucer and soon found out where the fault lay. With united forces they quickly pulled and pushed at the straw until it again came into contact with the leg of the cupboard, and the communication was then restored."

In a Hurry, but Could Wait.

"Let me see some hosiery in a hurry, please," said an important appearing person as he rushed into a gentleman's clothing store the other day.

"What kind, please?" queried the clerk politely.

"Oh, anything about half a dollar," replied the fellow, "only hurry, will you? I've only got a second to get a train."

The hosiery was forthcoming in quick season, and the buyer was told he owed the firm 49 cents for the same.

"I haven't got the change," he said. "Here's half a dollar."

The half was placed in the cash box and dispatched to the cashier's desk. That busy person was occupied at the time, and it was several minutes before she got around to making the change. When it reached the clerk the man who was in such a hurry to catch a train was still waiting. He threw the penny into his pocket and darted through the door.—Brocton Times.

How Glaciers Move.

It has been proved that a glacier moves very much like a river, the middle and upper parts faster than the sides and the bottom, the sides and bottom being retarded by friction. The movement of a glacier is quite similar to that of a mass of thick mortar or a quantity of pitch flowing down an inclined trough. Like the piece of shoemaker's wax, which, like ice, is extremely brittle, the glacier, subjected to experiment, reveals considerable plasticity and is much more like a viscous liquid than it was once supposed to be.

There is an Order Higher Still.

You are set in an age when the material civilization of the world has been piled up to a gigantic height, to testify that there is an order higher still; that as the soul is more than the body and eternity than time, so the moral order is above the material; that justice is above power; that justice may suffer long, but must reign at last; that the power is not right; that no wrongs can be sanctified by success, nor can the immutable laws of right and wrong be confounded.—Cardinal Manning.

Audible Conscience.

Bonter—Excuse my yawning. I didn't get a wink of sleep last night.

Jupp—Toothache?

Bonter—No. A woman asked me for some money yesterday, and I refused her. Well, the tones of her voice rang in my head all night. I couldn't close an eye.

Jupp—Conscience stricken, eh? Was it a deserving case, do you think?

Bonter—It was my wife.

Where Four States Meet.

It is odd to reflect that it is possible for one to be in four states at the same time. Yet there is one such spot in the United States. Glancing at a map of the United States, one finds an intersection between two straight lines, where Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Arizona meet. The place is not often visited, as it is not easily reached. The stone erected by government surveyors is on the top of a spur in the Carriso mountains. The nearest railway town is Mancos, Colo., nearly a hundred miles from the "four corners." The region about was once densely populated by cliff dwellers, but there are now no human beings within miles. Some years ago the Indians destroyed the boundary shaft. It was not replaced until 1904, probably because a long time elapsed before the authorities knew the old one had been wrecked.

DANGER IN DELAY

Kidney Diseases are Too Dangerous for Greenville People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills.

Wm. Murrill, corner Washington and Tarboro streets, Rocky Mount, N. C., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills proved in my case to be a valuable remedy for kidney trouble and I have no hesitancy in recommending them to anyone afflicted with this complaint. My wife and I both used them for backache and other annoyances arising from disordered kidneys and they brought us prompt relief."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
