THE HARROWS AND HARROWING.

FARMERS' CO-OPERATIVE DEMONSTRATION WORK.

Mr. Hudson, Special Agent, Giv. Some Timely Advice to Farmers on Breaking Clods.

At this season of the year there is no more important or economical implement on the farm than some form of good harrow. However, there are things they will not do, just the same as there are things they will do and do well.

A harrow is for cultivating the surface after the soil has been broken. Many farmers make the mistake of trying to break land with the harrow by weighting it with chunks, rocks, or by riding on it. They never succeed in this, but often succeed in overworking their teams.

In breaking land the harrow should follow the plow the same day. If the soil is in proper condition, the harrow will pulverize the clods and form a mulch that will prevent the evaporation of moisture. A clod is not much more to a plant than is a rock. We may have had large amounts of rain fall during the winter, but will probably have more or less dry weather during the hot months of summer. Growing crops use large amounts of moisture. Therefore it is important to conserve the winter rains by harrowing.

Another very important use of the harrow is in giving young plants the first one or two cultivations, or even harrowing the soil before the seed are up. This early cultivation not only destroys weed and grass seed that may be germinating, but also admits air and sunshine, two very important factors in securing satisfactory early growth of plants.

The time to kill weeds and grass is when the seed are sprouting in the soil. A mistake is often made in trying to destroy weeds and grass with the harrow after they are an inch or two high. The ordinary harrow will root up some of them, but will merely cultivate the balance so that they will grow all the faster.

Begin harrowing, then, as soon after a rain as the soil will hold up the horse. This will occur a day or two sooner than ordinary plowing can be done. This much time is thus saved and the work well done. The "teeth" of the harrow pass in among the young plants and effectually eradicate weeds that would have to be gotten out later by expensive hand hoeing.

A man with a single team can easily cultivate five acres per day by this method. By using a weeder, or other wide cultivator he can go over eight or ten acres per day. Therefore we find harrows and kindred implements both effectual and economical.

Governor Glenn at Ayden.

Gov. R. B. Glenn will make a speech on prohibition at Ayden tomorrow, and it is going to be a great day for that town and surrounding country. In fact people from all parts of the county are invited and expected to be present. As one of the features of the day will be a horse-back procession, all who can do so are requested to carry saddles with them.

PRESIDENT McNEILL.

Urges Firemen to Attend Convention.

Editor Reflector:

My dear Sir—Being over in Tarboro yesterday to attend a firemen's barbecue, I could not resist the temptation to come over Greenville and urge upon Chief Hyman and the Greenville firemen the importance of attending the 20th annual convention and tournament of the North Carolina State Firemen's Association that will be held in Wilmington June 16, 17, 18 and 19th.

Greenville is now about the only place of any importance in Eastern Carolina, that is not enthusiastically interested in the State association, New Bern, Kinston, Goldsboro, Rocky Mount, Tarboro etc, always being on hand. Practically every department in the State is on the membership roll.

The benefits to every local department are manifold, and it will certainly be of great advantage to the Greenville firemen to get in touch with their State comrades. I have today extended them a most cordial invitation to attend this year and I trust your city authorities will realize that it is to the interest of the city to guarantee their attendance. Every dollar spent by your city to improve its fire service is money well spent, and as the firemen practically give their time and services for nothing, it is as little as can be done for them to give them every opportunity to make themselves more efficient.

Again let me extend them an invitation and urge them to come.

Thanking you for the courtesy of your columns, I am yours,
Jas D. McNeill, Pres
N. C. S. F. Association.

An Overworked Handle.

Some of our contemporaries are overworking the title "Hon." in connection with the names of the new crop of candidates. It matters not how obscure the man or the position he has held or wants to hold he instantly becomes the Honorable So and So. The only citizens of the State entitled to this prefix are the senators and representatives in congress, the governor, the speaker of the house and president of the senate. But the local statesman will continue to receive the distinction, since he is never known to become offended at the misfit. —Salisbury Post.

IS A GOOD SHOW.

Sparks Circus Much Improved—A Bright, Clean Performance.

Sparks' circus that is to give two performances in Greenville on the 23rd, was in Kinston Wednesday, and The Free Press says:

The Sparks shows have improved wonderfully, both in size and appearance, during the past few years and are now classed among largest and best one-ring shows touring the country. The parade was witnessed by throngs of people, who followed in its wake to the show grounds, where a number of very interesting free exhibitions were given. Miss Valentine in her slide for life down a slender wire from the top of the highest center pole, suspended by her hair was both sensational and exciting.

The performance was replete with high-class sensational acts and funny laugh-provoking clowns, and a number of the frantic acts were the best ever seen in Kinston—especially the Millette troupe of French acrobats, and the Fling Valentinos in their high-in-the-air casting act. Another act which drew forth rounds of applause from the big audience was Ashton in his head balancing act. This gentleman performed stunts while balancing upon his head on a slender trapeze bar that would baffle many performers in a natural position.

DON'T LET IT COME NOW.

There is much talk just now as to whether a carnival should be permitted the privileges of the town, tax free, and as might be expected there is a division of opinion about it. There is a tax levied for such privileges, and if the carnival people step up and pay this tax, like other people have to do, they have a right to come, but being permitted to come under a tax dodging proposition is another matter.

But what we started out to call attention to in this article is that if a carnival is to come at all, the time it wants to come, the first week in May, is perhaps the very worst that could be selected. It is so close to the graded school commencement that the pupils would be hindered in the work necessary for their final examinations and in preparation for the commencement. Nothing could so distract the children from their work as a carnival, and for one to come at a time when they are in the midst of their hardest work of the year, on which their standing and promotion depends, might cause the failure of a large number of children to pass examinations. It is more important that our children do not fail and be set back a year in school and thus, perhaps, be discouraged for life, than that we should have a carnival. A carnival and good school work are two things that do not go on at the same time, and for the sake of the children the carnival should be kept out of their way at a time like this.

THE TEACHERS' TRAINING SCHOOL.

TRUSTEES MEET AND ADOPT PLANS.

All Arrangements Ideal for Health and Comfort—Contracts for Buildings. Will be Let Early in June.

All the members of the board of trustees of the Eastern Carolina Teachers' Training school, except one, arrived in Greenville and were in session up to a late hour Thursday afternoon. The session was harmonious and exceedingly satisfactory to all the members. The architects were present with the board and a full and thorough examination of the plans of the proposed buildings was made and all information acquired necessary to intelligent action.

The plans as prepared and presented to the board had been carefully examined by the executive committee during the two preceding days and the executive committee recommended their adoption by the board. The board after hearing the report of the committee, and each member examining the plans for himself, approved the plans and adopted them as the plans of the buildings to be erected. They are very handsome and are in every way up to date with all modern conveniences for work and for health.

After the adoption of the plans an order was made to advertise for bids. These bids will be opened by the executive committee in Greenville during the first days of June, and soon thereafter it is expected that work will begin. The members of the board again visited the site selected and were delighted with it.

From what we saw of the plans and learned from the different members of the board, the buildings when completed, and the grounds when improved will make a school plant of which the State can be justly proud, and we can confidentially predict for the Eastern Carolina Teachers' Training school a career of usefulness that cannot be foretold or measured by its most hopeful friends.

In planning the dormitories are so arranged that the sun at some hour during the day will shine into nearly every room. The dormitory rooms are 11x15 in size to accommodate two girls in each room, giving each one a clothes closet, and these are so arranged that they will be well ventilated. These precautions are taken with a view of preserving the health of the students. A small infirmary has been arranged for in the plans so that if any students are sick they can be removed from the other students and properly cared for. The class rooms are provided for in the central or administration building and they, too, are arranged with a view to health, comfort and the best work. So that we may say the whole arrangement of the entire plant is everything that can be desired.

Jno. Sparks Shows, Greenville, N. C. April 23rd, 1908.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL BRIEFS.

The Visitors Here and People Who Travel.

Julius Brown returned this morning from Bethel. C. C. Skinner, of New York, came in Thursday evening.

Miss Alice Bateman, of Plymouth, arrived today to visit Mrs. J. W. Bryan.

Mrs. Maggie Barden and daughter, Miss Ruth, have returned from Palmers.

Being Good Friday the exchanges took holiday today and there were no market reports.

J. L. Bunting, who has been here looking after his Greenville Heights property, returned to Norfolk today.

J. B. Leigh, mayor of Elizabeth City and one of the trustees of the Eastern Carolina Teachers' Training school, came in Thursday evening and returned home today. He was too late for the meeting of the trustees who had finished their work Thursday afternoon.

C. L. Wilkinson, W. E. Hooker, C. S. Carr, E. A. Kline, A. J. Moore, H. B. Smith, C. S. Forbes, N. W. Jackson and A. B. Ellington went to Kinston Thursday evening to attend the Pythian district meeting, and returned this morning.

ROCHDALE SPROUTS.

Rochdale, N. C., April 16. Thursday night of last week Eld. Summerel preached a good and instructive sermon at Smith's school house and at the close one came forward and confessed Christ. The baptism took place Friday morning.

R. A. Smith, of Farmville, came down Friday to visit relatives in Smithtown and returned that evening.

If you won't take last Saturday for a windy day I don't think I can afford to give you one.

C. D. Smith came very near losing his dwelling house by fire last Sunday night. About 8 o'clock Miss Nannie, his oldest daughter, (her father and mother being away at the time) went down to the cook room to look after something and found there was fire in the back part of the house. She was thoughtful enough after giving the alarm to go for water and throw it on the fire and had deadened it some before help got there. There was not very much damage done except burning 15 or 20 of Mrs. Smith's bed quilts and some cotton ready carded to pad them with. It is supposed that as Jim Bob went up stairs after supper to make some preparation to go visiting struck a match and part of the head flew off and set the cotton on fire, which was in a trunk or box that contained the cotton and quilts and was open.

We can almost hear the wedding bells ringing and before this gets in print I guess two hearts will be made one in our town.

Miss London Sponsor for N. C. U. V. C.

Miss Betsy London, daughter of Major and Mrs. Henry A. London, of Pittsboro, has been appointed by Gen. Julian S. Carr, of Durham, as the sponsor for the North Carolina division of the United Confederate Veterans for the reunion at Birmingham in June.

Miss London is a most charming young lady and is particularly fitted to fill the position.

Fires Liable from Moving Picture Apparatus.

Insurance Commissioner J. R. Young has been informed of a recent fire in Washington, N. C., which was started in a moving picture show. Commissioner Young said that these shows are dangerous and that the city and town authorities cannot be too careful in seeing that the apparatus is properly installed, for even then it is very dangerous. The authorities, he said, should also see to it that there are safe ways of egress from these shows. —Raleigh News & Observer.

Innocent Amusement.

FRIDAY, APRIL 17, 1908.

Sometimes Greenville is like into a man who, instead of getting out in the field and doing some plowing, sits down and waits for the Lord to make his crop grow.

If it is right to levy privilege taxes it is right to collect them. But it is not right to levy and collect privilege taxes out of residents and let floating tax dodgers go free.

As the president's recommendation for four battleships has been put aside, and the committees report for only two adopted, it is likely he is beginning to see that he is not the whole thing.

Danville, Va., has tried both sides enough to know which is best by now. The city was first wet and then went dry. Later it swung back to wet and now has gone dry for the second time. May it stay dry.

When it comes to voting for or against prohibition, no man who has proper regard for himself, his home, his community and his state, should hesitate a moment about what is the right thing to do.

Beaufort is all right in many respects, but seems to be wrong on the matter of local tax for schools. Twice in elections there the local measure has failed to carry. We believe the people will look at it differently some of these days.

We are unable to see any consistency or any fairness in a town taxing her own citizens to the limit and then let a carnival, or something on that order, come in free of all tax and reap a harvest at the expense of the town and community. Surely those people who have signed a petition to open the town tax free to a carnival organization have not considered this phase of it, that it is a matter of tax dodging that should not be countenanced. If a carnival wants the privilege of showing in the town let it come up and pay the tax just like the rest have to do.

All Who Favor Temperance Are Not Fanatics.

Here is a most significant statement from Joseph Chamberlain, the great British statesman, on the liquor question:

"No statistics are needed to show our people that temperance reform lies at the bottom of political, social and moral progress in England. Drink is the curse of the country; it ruins the fortunes, it injures the health, it destroys the lives of one of every twenty of our population. If I could destroy tomorrow the desire for strong drink in the people of England, what changes we should see! We should see our taxes reduced by millions sterling; we should see our jails and workhouses empty; we should see more lives saved in twelve months than are consumed in a century of bitter and savage war."

CLIMBING AN ICE SLOPE.

Vain and Perilous Effort to Scale Mount McKinley.

The long trail to the north brings out the best in men and the worst, declares Mr. Robert Dunn in "The Shameless Diary of an Explorer." As a member of a party which made a vain attempt to reach the top of Mount McKinley he tells something of the hardships of one day's travel:

Furtively, imperceptibly, the steepness had stolen a march on us. As one line of footholds gave out we had to slide dexterously to another. The steeper slope was swept clear and hard. Steps had to be cut.

We have only three ice axes. As I never gave them a thought this morning, all of them were gobbled up when we started, and I was left with only one long willow tent pole. It was never meant to balance you in half cut steps that may or may not hold your toe.

As the steps changed from a stairway to a stepladder the other three betrayed no excitement, no uneasiness. Neither did I at first, but I felt both. It was not dizziness, not vertigo, but simply that as I looked down the sheer 2,000 feet from where we clung by our toes imagination resistlessly told over how it would feel, how long it would last, what the climax in sensation would be, were I to fall.

As hour succeeded hour I lived each minute only to make the false step. Courage is only a matter of self control anyway.

Climbing the highest mountain on the continent with a tent pole! Sometimes I bolted in those dizzy, anxious places that I had put myself in such a position with such men. Yet I must reap my own sowing. Once I asked if it wasn't customary to rope on such steep slopes, but no one but Fred answered, and he said: "Y ain't goin' to ketch me tied up to anybody. A man don't want to take chances with any one but himself, haulin' him down from these places."

One requisite of explorers besides aversion to soap and water is insensitiveness. They can't see; they can't feel. They couldn't do these stunts if they did.

THE HUMAN BRAIN.

The human brain is the most marvelous machine in the world. It occupies less space in proportion to its capabilities than any machine it ever invented. It sends a special nerve to every ultimate fiber of some 500 muscles, to many thousand branching twigs of arteries, to every pinhead area of the numerous glands which keep the machine properly oiled, heated or cooled, to some sixteen square feet of skin, which is the outpost guard of its castle, with such completeness that the point of a pin cannot find an area unguarded. It possesses special quarters for the reception and translation of a constant stream of vibrations that are the product of all things movable or still in the outer world. On the retina of every open eye is a picture of the outer view, a focused imprint of every ray of light and color, and in the visual chamber of the mental palace stands a vibrascope, a magic lantern that receives the retinal picture in its billion speeding series of light waves and throws them upon its mental screen as a living moving picture of light and shade and color. In the chamber of sound is a vibraphone, over whose active wires passes every wave of sound from the dripping of the dew to the orchestral fortissimo, from the raucous screech of the locomotive to the sighing of the wind through the meadow grass. In the chambers set apart for scent and taste and touch are the secret service guards to report upon the air and food which give sustenance to the palace and upon the solid qualities of the tactile world. And, wonder of all wonders, this complex human brain can think in all languages or in no language and even conceive its own physical mortality.—Edward A. Ayres in Harper's Magazine.

Where the Tips Go.

"But I can tell you something you don't know about the tipping system in the cloakrooms of some of the large cafes," remarked a midnight diner to his wife.

"Pocket! Their uniforms are made without a sign of a pocket so that none of the tips can find a lodging there. Those boys get nothing but a salary, which is paid by a man who has purchased the check room privilege for as high as five thousand a year. The tips are all turned into him. You can imagine what the privilege is worth when he can pay down that sum for the right."—New York Press.

The Child's Advice.

Little Arthur stood peering down into the countenance of his baby sister, whom the nurse was singing to sleep. "Say, nurse," he finally whispered, "it's nearly unconscious, isn't it?" The nurse nodded in the affirmative and sang on. "Then don't slug any more or you'll kill it!"—Lippincott's.

A LESSON IN ECONOMY

A STENOGRAPHER in a prominent business house, who operated a typewriter, where the carriage had to be raised to see what was written, wasted eight minutes in one hour in lifting that carriage. She was employed eight hours per day. On this basis she lost 64 minutes that day. She would lose in one year of 300 working days 320 hours. She was paid $2.50 per day for eight hours' work, 35.7 cents per hour. Her employer, therefore, would have paid her $114.24 in one year, for which he received no equivalent. There were ten stenographers employed in this office, and if they all lost the same amount of time, he would have paid in one year $1,142.40 for which he enjoyed no benefit. In ten years he would have paid $11,424.00 for nothing. Every business man using a typewriter that does not write in sight, but on which you have to raise the carriage to see the writing, is losing money in the same proportion.

WHICH IS BETTER— to have that saving of money in dividends, or pay it out for wasted time?

SHAKESPEARE'S TOMB.

Its Would Be Desecrators and the Poet's Imprecation.

The fact that would be desecrators of Shakespeare's tomb have not dared to risk the falling of the curse invoked in the lines cut upon his tomb is a striking testimony to the powerful effect upon mankind of such an imprecation. J. O. Halliwell-Phillips, writing in the eighties, said:

"The nearest approach to an excavation in the grave of Shakespeare was made in the summer of the year 1736 in digging a vault in the immediate locality, when an opening appeared which was presumed to indicate the commencement of the site of the bard's remains. The most scrupulous care, however, was taken not to disturb the neighboring earth in the slightest degree, the clerk having been placed there till the brickwork of the adjoining vault was completed to prevent any one making an examination. No relics whatever were visible through the small opening that thus presented itself, and as the poet was buried in the ground, not in a vault, the great probability is that dust alone remains. It is not many years since a phalanx of trouble tombs, lanterns and spades in hand, assembled in the chancel at dead of night, intent on disobeying the solemn injunction that the bones of Shakespeare were not to be disturbed. But the supplicatory lines prevailed. There were some among the number who at the last moment refused to incur the warning condemnation, and so the design was happily abandoned."

A correspondent of the London Athenaeum wrote in 1881: "I remember on a visit to the grave of Shakespeare in 1827 or 1828 remarking that it was little creditable to the authorities that the raised covering to the tomb should have been allowed to fall into such decay, for I could see into the grave through the hole formed by the slinking of the stones. The reply was that, 'on account of the anathema inscribed upon the tomb, no workmen could be persuaded to meddle with it.'"

An earlier incident is thus set forth by a contributor to the Monthly Magazine of Feb. 1, 1818:

"Notwithstanding the anathema pronounced by the bard on any disturber of his bones, the church wardens were so negligent a few years ago as to suffer the sexton in digging the adjoining grave of Dr. Davenport to break a large cavity into the tomb of Shakespeare. Mr. — told the writer that he was excited by curiosity to push his head and shoulders through the cavity, that he saw the remains of the bard and that he could easily have brought away his skull, but was deterred by the curse which the poet invoked on any one who disturbed his remains."

The attempt at a later day to meddle with the tomb had no more effective ending.—New York Tribune.

South American Animals.

Many curious animals haunt the marshy parts of South America north of the pampas. Frogs big and ferocious (the ceratophrys), given to making vicious springs when closely approached; the capybara, a cavy "contorted with the bulk of the sheep;" the huge coypu rat and the swartly tapir are frequently seen. Along the forest margins troops of peccaries are often met with, occasionally the jaguar, sometimes the puma; likewise that toothless curiosity the great ant bear, long in claw, long nosed and remarkably long tongued. Very plentiful, too, are those "little knights in scaly armor," the quaint, waddling armadillos. Long toed jacanas pace about upon the floating leaves. A familiar object is the great jabiru, a stork with a preference for the desolate lagoons, where it may often be observed statue-like on one leg and wrapped in prospect.

Big Tips For Little Favors.

"It is surprising," said a veteran Pullman porter, "how big a tip a porter sometimes gets for doing a very little thing." He added: "A passenger once tipped me extra because he said I did not leave his shoestrings coiled up inside his shoes after I had blacked them. He said nothing made him madder than to slip on his shoes in a hurry in a sleeper only to find that he had to take them off again because the shoestrings were inside. Ever since that time I have been careful not to leave shoestrings inside of the shoes I black, and more than one passenger has thanked me for being thoughtful. But it wasn't me that did the thinking. The tip did that for me, and I never forgot it."—Leslie's Weekly.

In the Right Direction.

Bishop Blomfield was led into a controversy one time with a learned man as to the mental superiority of the east over the west, and his opponent as a parting shot said:

"Well, at any rate, you can't dispute that the wise men came from the east."

"Surely that was the wisest thing they could do!" retorted the bishop.

A Futile Boast.

"Love me and the world is mine," he said.

"What's the use of saying that?" she replied. "I've been loving you for weeks and you haven't even succeeded in getting a good job."—Chicago Record-Herald.

BORN WITHOUT FEAR.

Yet Minds of Children Are Made Bogy Houses by Parents.

"My little boy is naturally so timid." "My little girl is so easily frightened. We are trying to cure her of it, but she was born with that sensitive nature, and we have to be very careful." So fond parents are sometimes heard to say when a child shows some special form of fear.

Yet, according to Clara Louise Burnham, who writes in Appleton's Monthly on "How to Keep Your Child From Fear," almost all children are born without fear, and fear is carefully instilled into them by parents and nurses.

Nature, she says, generally hands the child to the parents physically perfect, and still more often she hands him over full of optimism and faith. "Nothing is too good for me," is his natural attitude. Then comes perhaps his first fall. Straightway the anxious mother rushes to him with a cry and picks him up "with such manner and words that he screams with terror," and so the instilling of fear goes on.

"I'm afraid," begins too many of the remarks parents make to their children, says this author. Christian parents constantly disobey the Bible, which is full of commands to "Fear not," "Rejoice always," and while professing to believe the Bible undermine the child's native confidence by teaching it that the world is beset with "snares and pitfalls to health and happiness." So the child becomes, as it were, mentally slouching and stoop shouldered instead of facing life, as he was born to do, with an upright, joyous carriage.

Fear, disaster, sickness should not be talked of in the presence of children. Even though they may not seem to understand it at the time, it sinks into their little minds. It is a disturbing, a distorting influence. Even worse in its influence is the mistake of the anxious mother who is always imagining that her child is ill. "Are you sure you feel all right, dear? Haven't you a pain anywhere?" It need not take much of such insistence to make the healthiest child, if not physically ill, at least nervously upset. The unwise nurse does no end of harm. "She may be kind and loving," says Mrs. Burnham, "and yet consider the mysterious bogy man and the obvious policeman her legitimate allies in enforcing a paralyzed obedience." And so fresh elements of fear are introduced into the child's horizon.

Another thing this writer strongly denounces is the "strange tradition" that into every pantomime or play for the entertainment of children monstrosities must be introduced—cardboard giants, weird figures with goggle eyes and awful grins—which strike terror into the baby hearts. She makes a special remonstrance concerning Captain Hook and his pirate band in "that otherwise charming play, 'Peter Pan.' No child under twelve should have his nervous system shocked by these gentlemen and their awful captain," she says, and she describes how at one performance she saw a child with its head buried in its mother's lap, begging piteously to know if "the pirates had gone."

A Little to One Side.

"You think you have unusual presence of mind?" said Mrs. Jenks to her husband in a tone which was somewhat tinged by the recollection of her recent wrongs connected with a forgotten basket of kindlings.

"I do in reason," said Mr. Jenks boldly, turning his back to the wood box.

"Humph!" said Mrs. Jenks. "Well, while you've been two hours and a half at the store getting me a yeast cake I've been reading the paper a few minutes to rest my back after doing a lot of work no woman ought to have put on her, and I've been reading of a man that really had presence of mind. What should you do first off if you saw a man fall out of a balloon way up in the air?"

"First off," said Mr. Jenks, turning a calm gaze on his inquisitor, "I should wait to see where he landed, meanwhile standing from under if possible."—Youth's Companion.

Bills and Coins.

All kinds of guesses have been made as to the number of one dollar bills that would be required to equal the weight of a five dollar gold piece. The guesses range, as a rule, from 50 to 500, and when a humorist in the subtreasury asks a visitor which he would prefer, all the five dollar gold pieces he could lift or the same weight in one dollar bills, the visitor immediately votes for bills, imagining, as he does, that the proportion will be about ten to one in favor of one dollar bills as against the gold. As a matter of fact, there is very little difference between the weight of one five dollar gold piece and five one dollar bills. To be exact, just six and a half bills will balance the five dollar gold piece.

Where Soldiers Must Swim.

In the Dutch army a man must be able to swim as well as to fight. Moreover, if he is in the cavalry he must have a horse which will take a river as easily as a hunter takes a fence. Swimming maneuvers are part of the regular drill there. Collapsible canvas boats manned by a few oarsmen lead the horses so that they do not attempt to land on stone quays and other difficult points. The men swim across with their horses and on them. They do it in swimming costume and in all the accouterments of war. There are few nautical emergencies in which the Dutch army is not prepared. Some of the officers have even reached a degree of proficiency that not only their horses and kit cross the river with them, but their pet dogs sit upon their shoulders and are borne over almost without getting wet.—Stray Stories.

Something For Her Neck.

A ludicrous story is told of a young Japanese engineering apprentice in connection with the Christmas custom of kissing. He was serving his time in the north of England and was astonished when a waitress at the dining rooms which he regularly frequented kissed him under the mistletoe. On its being explained to him that a present was expected in return, he suggested a pair of gloves. The damsel, however, had heard that he was immensely wealthy and gently hinted that something for her neck would be more acceptable. When the present arrived next day she conjured up visions of a pearl necklace as she tremblingly undid the parcel. Then was disclosed to her disappointed gaze a Jap's idea of "something for her neck." It took the shape of a bar of soap!—London Standard.

What Is the First Law of Nature?

"Self preservation is the first law of nature," answers Johnny Jones.

Correct, Johnny. Go right up to the head of the class. This law applies to a community as well as to an individual. Under the severe operation of this law a town that does not take care of itself, that does not look after its own interests first, that does not look out for Number One, soon falls into a bad way.

That's just as sure as shootin'. It's the law.

We must obey the law or take the consequences. If we in this town and community do not work together for our own good, the mutual good of all of us, in all lines of business, we have only ourselves to blame if the place slides down the inclined plane instead of climbing the golden ladder of prosperity and progress.

For instance, if we do our retail trading with big city stores that have no interest in us except to get our money and keep it, local trade must suffer and shrink, town property values and farm land values must decrease—and there you are!

Johnny Jones, who knows the law, is a wise lad, but how about his papa and mamma?

Do they obey the first law as applied to the old home place? If they don't, Johnny may have to apply the law to himself when he grows up. He may have to go to the city to make a living.

Let's all think it over.

BOOTH, IRVING AND TERRY.

Reminiscences of When the Three Stars Played in "Othello."

"Booth's Othello was very helpful to my Desdemona," writes Ellen Terry in McClure's. "It is difficult to preserve the simple, heroic blindness of Desdemona to the fact that her lord mistrusts her if her lord is raving and stamping under her nose!"

"Booth was gentle in the scenes with Desdemona until the scene where Othello overwhelms her with the foul word and destroys her fool's paradise.

"Love does make fools of us all surely, but I wanted to make Desdemona out the fool who is the victim of love and faith, not the simpleton whose want of tact in continually pleading Cassio's cause is sometimes irritating to the audience.

"My greatest triumph as Desdemona was not gained with the audience, but with Henry Irving! He found my endeavors to accept comfort from Iago so pathetic that they brought tears to his eyes.

"It was the oddest sensation when I said, 'Oh, good Iago, what shall I do to win my lord again?' to look up, my own eyes dry, for Desdemona is past crying then, and see Henry's eyes at their biggest, luminous, soft and full of tears!

"He was in spite of Iago and in spite of his power of identifying himself with the part very deeply moved by my acting. But he knew how to turn it to his purpose. He obtrusively took the tears with his fingers and blew his nose with much feeling, softly and long, so that the audience might think his emotion a fresh stroke of hypocrisy.

"Every one liked Henry's Iago. For the first time in his life he knew what it was to win unanimous praise. Nothing could be better, I think, than Mr. Walkley's description, 'De'ingly Italian, a true patriot of the Borgias, or, rather, better than Italian, that devil incarnate, an Englishman Italianate.'

"One adored him, devil though he was. He was so full of charm, so sincerely the 'honest' Iago, peculiarly sympathetic with Othello, Desdemona, Roderigo—all of them, except his wife. It was only in the soliloquies and in the scenes with his wife that he revealed his devil's nature.

"Could one ever forget those grapes which he plucked in the first act and slowly ate, spitting out the seeds as if each one represented a worthy virtue to be put out of his mouth, as God, according to the evangelists, puts out the lukewarm virtues?"

"His Iago and his Romeo in different ways proved his power to portray Italian passions—the passions of lovely, treacherous people, who will either sing you a love sonnet or stab you in the back, you are not sure which.

"We played 'Othello' for six weeks, three performances a week, to guinea stalls and could have played it longer. Each week Henry and Booth changed parts. For both of them it was a change for the worse."

Too Well Done.

"Yes, dear," continued the newly made husband as he gazed despondently at the steak that was broiled almost to a crisp, "you are very charming, and you do several things uncommonly well, but you don't know how to cook a steak."

"And yet, my love," answered the culprit with a becoming penitent air, "you said yourself that it was very well done."

It is scarcely necessary to add that the cyclone was averted.

HIDDEN DANGERS.

Nature Gives Timely Warnings That No Citizen Can Afford to Ignore.

Danger-Signal No 1 comes from the kidney secretions. They will warn you when the kidneys are sick. Well kidneys excrete a clear, amber fluid. Sick kidneys send out a thin, pale and foamy, or a thick, red, ill-smelling urine, full of sediment and irregular of passage.

Danger-Signal No 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys, and warn you of the approach of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's proof:

James Hardison, business address 319 E. Fifth St., Greenville, N. C., says: "My kidneys acted too freely, especially during the night when I would be forced to rise several times. In the morning my back would be very lame and at such times I was subject to pains through my loins. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Wooten's drug store, restored my kidneys to a normal condition. I am now able to sleep well at night and the lameness and soreness across the small of my back is entirely disappeared. I have found Doan's Kidney Pills to be exactly as represented and I have no hesitancy in giving them my endorsement."

Norfolk N. C.

The matter of changing the boundary line of Florida so as to give Pensacola to the State of Alabama, is being agitated. It is argued that Pensacola is more closely allied in interests with Alabama than with Florida. Most of the business of Pensacola, the leading city of west Florida, is with Alabama, and if it were a part of that State its importance as an export point for Alabama products would doubtless be heightened. This argument interests The Chronicle as it applies with much force to the case of Norfolk. Geographically that city belongs to North Carolina. But there are other reasons. Half of its population (if not a greater portion) was born in North Carolina, or born of North Carolina parents. Its largest trade is with North Carolina and by the rules of environment it is a North Carolina town. One of these days, if we can have the support of the Landmark, we are going to advocate a change in the State line so as to run it direct from Suffolk to Cape Charles, thus bringing us into the possession of our own. We believe if put to vote, Norfolk would record her willingness to secede from Virginia and come into the hospitable arms of the Old North State, where she properly belongs. Will the Landmark agree to submit the question to a vote of its people?—Charlotte Chronicle.

Many Should Attend.

If the people of Greenville wish to spend a pleasant and interesting hour, they should be in the graded school building at 11 o'clock tomorrow. It will be the last meeting of the teachers' association for the school year, several medals are to be awarded for best historical essays, and an address will be delivered by State Superintendent J. Y. Joyner.

The Frigate Bird.

That noble hoverer over tropical seas, Fregata aquila, rarely comes to land save during the breeding season. It has the habit, unusual among sea birds, of nesting in trees, large companies of them building together in the tops of the tallest mangroves. Like the cormorant and the albatross, the frigate bird lays but one egg. It lives by fishing and also by robbing other fishers of what they have caught. In plumage the frigate bird is brownish black, with metallic green and purple reflections. The dilatable throat sac in the male is of a bright scarlet, while the female, of a duller general hue, has a white patch on the breast.

Seizing the Opportunity.

"Miss Amanda," said the somewhat elderly but well preserved bachelor to the sparkling young woman with whom he occasionally spent an evening, "I think it is a shame the way you treat that young Hankinson. If I were he I wouldn't let you play fast and loose the way you do. I would simply come and carry you off."

"If you were he, Mr. Upagain," she replied, with downcast eyes, "perhaps it wouldn't be necessary to carry me off."

Upon which hint Mr. Upagain immediately spoke, and the invitations are out.—Chicago Tribune.

Nailmaking.

A common nail is an excellent illustration of the difference between old and new methods. Formerly the metal was cut into strips and then forged into shape with hammers, and an expert took about one and one-half minutes for each nail. Today they are made of steel and are lighter and stronger. Strips are cut with steam shears and fed into automatic nail machines. One man tends three machines, each machine dropping a nail every second.
