MRS. CURTIS ON PROHIBITION. AN IMMENSE AUDIENCE HEARS HER SPEAK.

Greenville Was Never More Thrilled
Nor Better Entertained.

It was the privilege of the people of Greenville and community on Thursday night to hear Mrs. Nannie Curtis, of Texas, deliver an address on prohibition. Her reputation of being the finest woman orator before the public had already preceded her here, and after listening to her eloquence, her argument for righteousness, her plea for the protection of the home, the wife, the children, Greenville is ready to declare that the half had not been told of this great woman.

Mrs. Curtis is also a woman of strikingly handsome appearance, possesses a voice that is strong yet melodious, speaks rapidly yet with perfect distinctions, and before the audience every movement and gesture has the stamp of grace and naturalness. She carries her audience at will, moving them as if by a move of the hand. She is certainly a queen of the platform and only eternity can measure the good she is doing.

And it was a great audience that faced her in Greenville—there being no vacant seats in the opera house except a few extra chairs on the stage—an audience that does credit to a town and which any speaker might feel it an honor to stand before. They listened for an hour and a half to the matchless eloquence that flowed from the lips of the speaker like a silver stream when sparkling from the fountain and kissed by rays of sunlight; and even after taking her seat the audience lingered as if spell bound and eager to hear more.

Mrs. Curtis was most gracefully introduced by Mrs. T. J. Jarvis, who was greeted with a burst of applause when in comparing Mrs. Curtis with the New York woman whom the whiskey crowd had brought into North Carolina to speak for them said: "I am glad ours is of the South, while they had to draw on the North for theirs."

It is useless to try to give a synopsis of Mrs. Curtis' speech as nothing short of a stenographic report could do it justice. She said so much, and every sentence was so forceful and so appropriate to the subject in hand, that it would be hard to decide which to mention to the exclusion of others.

She gave some statistics bearing on drunkenness which showed the hundreds of thousands of people who annually fall victims to it. Going back to the Bible from which she gave some quotations, and declaring that God was the first prohibitionist and made the first prohibitory laws, she took up and rapidly answered every objection that has been raised against prohibition. She just swept the "personal liberty" fellow right off his feet and left him with nothing to stand on, while the "it won't prohibit" hypocrit, well, he will be ashamed to say that in public any more if he heard Mrs. Curtis. She told the fellow who said God made whiskey and left it here for us to drink "Well, God made rattlesnakes and left them here. Why don't you eat snakes?"

As to the ballot, Mrs. Curtis said it was never given to a man as a means of expressing only his personal liberty, but was intended to be used in bringing the greatest good to the greatest number. The saloon is just as good as the man who keeps it, and the man who keeps it is just as good as the man who votes for it.

We have three potent factors in our civilization—the church, the home and the school—and over against these trying to drag them down are the saloon, the gambling den, the house of infamy. There are three P's that we find standing on the side of the church, home and school; these are the pulpit, the press, the pedagogue. To each of these the speaker paid a fine tribute. But, oh, my! when she took up those who stand for the saloon, the gambling den and house of infamy, how they did catch it.

She said she was an admirer of Sam Jones, whom she paid a great eulogy in passing, and was going to use an illustration learned from him. "How many saloons have you in Greenville?" "Dispensary" a voice answered. "Dispensary? then you are all in the whiskey business, you preachers and all of you." Then inquiring how much revenue comes from the dispensary, the population of the town, and the price of pork, by a quick calculation she showed that a 200 pound hog brought five times as much money as the people of Greenville got per head for selling out to the whiskey business. "Don't you wish you were all hogs? Then you would bring more money."

Mrs. Curtis' appeal to the men to vote for prohibition, protect their homes, their wives, their children, was sublime. If any man heard her and then goes out and votes for whiskey, we can't think that he is fully clothed in his right mind.

MCLAWHORN-TUCKER.

A Beautiful Home Wedding Witnessed by a Number of Friends.

Winterville, N. C., May 15, 1908. On Wednesday evening of this week, May 13th, Mr. Oscar McLawhorn and Miss Mattie Tucker were united in the holy bond of matrimony in the presence of a goodly number of friends, at the home of the bride's father, about 4.30 o'clock by Rev. Kitt Bland, of Ayden.

The bridal party entered the parlor as follows:

Charlie L. McLawhorn with Miss Alma Tucker, Allen Fornes with Miss Lula Tucker, Willie A. Tucker with Miss Corinne B. McLawhorn, and Charlie M. Tucker with Miss Naomi E. Tucker.

Immediately after the marriage they drove to the groom's home where an elaborate reception was held.

The bride was handsomely attired in white silk richly trimmed with medallions, and carrying a bouquet of bride roses.

The groom was dressed in a very handsome black suit.

The bride is a most beautiful and accomplished young lady of this community. She is the daughter of Rev. Henry Tucker, near Greenville.

The groom is one of Winterville's best young men. He is the son of Alfred McLawhorn, who is a successful farmer.

The young couple have a great number of friends throughout the community, and we wish them a long and happy life. We hope their pathway through life may be strewn with flowers and that their days may be spent happily.

WINTERVILLE COMMENCEMENT.

A Great Sermon and Interesting Class Exercises.

Winterville, N. C., May 15, 1908.

The closing exercises of Winterville High School began, as announced heretofore, Wednesday evening May 13th At 8 o'clock Dr. J. W. Lynch, of Wake Forest College, preached the annual sermon. The large auditorium was nearly filled, the weather being ideal. The subject of Dr. Lynch's discourse was "Anxiety and its Cure" from the scripture found in the sixth chapter of Matthew. We shall not attempt to give an outline of this most excellent sermon. He drew some of the most beautiful pictures of life. He pictured old mother anxiety keeping house in the human heart and the turmoil created by her presence. He spoke most pathetically of the worries of life and their effect. Among some of the cures was as follows: (1) go to the country and get close to nature by beholding the beauty of the lilies of the field and the singing birds, all showing the master wand of God; (2) in the country you find the purest and noblest men and women in the world; (3) Have faith in the God who cloths the lilies in the beauty that outstripped Solomon in all his glory, and who feeds the little sparrow of the forest. If he so clothes the lilies and feeds the little sparrow, why should man in God's own image fret and be anxious about the affair of life?

Among the many sermons that we hear through life, only a few stand out in our memories. This surely will be one. He made a deep impression on the large number that heard him.

Thursday night the class exercises were fine indeed. Many people were turned away not being able to get seats.

R. T. Cox, president of the senior class, delivered the address of welcome in behalf of the class. The history of the class was read by Miss Annie Carroll. The class poem was read by Miss Norma McGlohon. The will of the class was witty and striking and brought forth much applause. This was read by Miss Magdalene Cox. One of the leading features of the evening was the class oration by W. A. McGlohon. His subject was "Demands of the Twentieth Century." The class prophesy by Miss Venetia Cox made a decided hit and was warmly applauded. The delivery of the trophies to the class was done by Miss Miriam Johnson and Janie Kittrell. The trophy to the sophomore class was a cabbage head and to the junior class a box of brains. A beautiful Madonna picture was presented to the school which was received by Prof. G. E. Lineberry in a short and appropriate address. The class exercises were a new feature in our commencement occasion and were highly enjoyed by all.

A further report will be made tomorrow. There is a large number of visitors already here, each train bringing a great number.

FRIDAY, MAY 15, 1908.

Cotton is up a little in two ways—in price and out of the ground.

May shows you how to be two sided; after giving the cold shoulder turns the hot one.

When all the governors come together to talk about better laws for the country, you may expect something good to result.

Of course a man has the right to vote as he pleases, but he should think seriously of the consequences if he makes up his mind to vote against prohibition.

The Masonic meetings at Kinston this week were a great event, both for the town and the visitors. Kinston always does herself proud when it comes to entertaining.

What of prohibition? Why, Pitt county is going to register a large majority for it on the 26th. This grand old county could not afford to do otherwise. The thing we want to do is make the majority so large that Pitt can continue to be pointed out as a banner county.

A man with the brain of Tom Settle might be using his talent in a more righteous cause than making speeches against prohibition. The man who raises his voice to debase the home, to destroy manhood, to drag women and children down to poverty and disgrace, is an enemy to mankind.

There has been much talk of and more or less deprecation of the feeling injected into the present gubernatorial contest. The truth is, we're fast coming to the South Carolina idea. Down there they have a State primary and all the Democratic candidates for State offices have a joint canvass and opponents abuse each other without stint. There being practically no Republican party in South Carolina the primary election settles the matter. We have no State primary in North Carolina but we have the legalized primary in a number of counties and we have advocates of the State primary.

Congressman Kitchin has been campaigning the State for about a year and his opponents found it necessary to stir Kitchin and Craig had one joint discussion at Wadesboro and if a joint canvass had been made, which Kitchin insisted on (and he and his friends have tried to make capital out of the fact that Mr. Craig declined to meet him), it's easy to see that the present state of feeling isn't a circumstance compared with what it would have been. And if we go on for a few years stirring up bitter preconvention fights among Democrats it takes no prophet to foresee that the Republicans will get possession of the State. Unlike South Carolina, we have a Republican party in this State and one whose strength is not to be despised.—Statesville Mascot.

WE SHORTEN OUR LIVES.

Human Beings Should Live at Least a Hundred Years.

Every man who dies before he is a hundred years old does so because he has neglected the laws of health. I believe the time will come when men will commonly live to be 150 years old. But to do this they must be born right and be taught matters of health with their A B C's.

A majority of the people of America lose about thirty years of life through not understanding or not following the demand of nature for regular and adequate exercise. Our systems of civilization have worked a vast improvement in production by training men to special lines of work. Thus they become wonderfully proficient. To see a man rattling up long columns of reading matter on a linotype machine is inspiring, to hear a lawyer clearly and incisively summing up a case fills one with admiration, to read a strong, forceful editorial affords pleasure at the thoughts so well expressed, to watch the violinist and listen to the sweet melodies he draws from the strings waits our souls to higher realms, yet the acquirement of each and all these abilities has robbed the trained or talented performers of something else. The linotype is wearing out his nerves in setting type at such a rapid pace; the orator of the lawyer has been acquired at the expense of a dyspeptic stomach; the man who wins us with his facile pen envies the strength of the sturdy laborer shoveling in the street; the virtuoso would fain have the appetite of the performer on the big horn in the little street band.

In thus specializing each is apt to neglect the routine work for all the muscles that nature demands to keep up the physique. Had each of these performers or geniuses done his stint of work on a farm, raising the food he consumed, he would have been less skilled in his vocation, but possessed of vastly better health. And all would live out not only their full seventy, but a round hundred or more of years.—Charles H. Cochrane in Metropolitan Magazine.

OUR FIRST PRESIDENT.

The Average American Knows Very Little About Washington.

Born Feb. 22, 1732; died Dec. 14, 1799; fought Indians; time and place a little vague. Was he not with Braddock? Married a widow named Martha; was commander all through our Revolution; was our first president and had two terms; wrote a farewell address; knew Lafayette and Thomas Jefferson; crossed the Delaware at Trenton just before Christmas and surprised the Hessians; beat Cornwallis at Yorktown and was first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen.

These are all public facts. What does the reader know of Washington the man? More than likely it will be as follows:

Cut down a cherry tree with a hatchet; owned up to having done so, saying, "Father, I cannot tell a lie;" threw a stone very far across some river; climbed up the side of the Natural bridge and cut his initials; worked hard at school; was steady; was very good all the time, and everybody looked up to him; of course very brave, of course very wise and a great patriot; was one of the greatest men in all history; was tall, strong; wore those knee breeches of colonial days and a wig; looked stern; would probably lecture you and tell you to be virtuous and you would be happy. Such, if I mistake not, is the reader's vision of Washington as a man—cold, austere, unemotional, without passions, grand, not merely greater than human, simply not human at all—a sort of marble statue. A figure to prize, to be proud of as an American, a figure to revere, but not a character to love, to be drawn to, to feel any kinship with—in a word, immortal, yet not living.—Everybody's Magazine.

The Preservation of Caste.

It is well known how carefully, apparently at least, the Hindoos are to preserve their caste from contamination with anything of a lower order. In towns where Hindoos and Mussulmans, followers of Mohammed, live side by side the sellers of drinking water supply the liquid through little portholes, one for each religion. The drinker is thus supposed to be ignorant of the caste of the man who supplies the water and his own caste is consequently unbroken.

From Hand to Mouth.

"I'll never speak to him again!" exclaimed the dark young woman. "He called me his queen and asked if I might kiss his hand. I said yes, and after that he kissed me on the lips without asking."

"I suppose," said the light young woman, "he followed along the line of least resistance."

Melancholy Milk.

"Haven't you any milk that is more cheerful than this?" queried the new boarder as he poured some of the liquid into his coffee.

"Why, what do you mean, by that?" queried the landlady.

"Oh, nothing," rejoined the new boarder; "only this milk seems to have the blues."

Mean of Her.

"Everybody says baby is very like me," said young Mrs. Papley fondly.

"Yes, the cute little thing," remarked Miss Diggs. "What fat ankles she has!"—Philadelphia Press.

Evading the Issue.

"Did you break this dish, Mary?"

"No'm; I only dropped it.—St. Louis Times.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore require constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. A GREAT GOLD SCARE

When the Yellow Metal Was First Found In Australia.

AFRAID OF THE CONVICTS.

The English Government Tried to and Did For a Time Suppress the News Because It Feared a General Uprising in the Colony of Criminals.

Gold in Australia was discovered—one might almost be pardoned for saying first discovered—many times. But the news of the earliest discoveries was jealously kept from spreading. The secret of this reticence lay in the presence of the army of convicts which then composed the balance of the population. Had a gold panic broken out it was feared that a general uprising of the prisoners would take place.

Nevertheless the first gold found in Australia was by convicts, in 1814, near Bathurst, New South Wales. The discoverers gathered together a quantity quite sufficient to lead them to believe that they had found a gold mine, but when they reported what they considered their good fortune to the keeper he, instead of undertaking to recommend them for pardon or easing their hard labors in any way, threatened to give them all a sound flogging if they ventured again to say a word about the matter or to spend any more time picking up gold. The next find was made on the Fish River in 1823, not far from the spot where the convicts had come across it many years before. This news, being reported to the authorities, was also ordered suppressed. Within the course of the next two years finds were so frequent that the London government began to take great interest in the affair. But the fact that another region of the yellow metal might be at the disposal of such as might seek was kept rigidly secret until in 1825 a dramatic incident precluded all possibility of further secrecy.

A convict was discovered with a nugget of gold in his possession. When asked how he had come by the metal, he said that he had picked it up in the bush. He was cautioned and told that the authorities had no doubt that he had stolen the gold, but the prisoner stoutly held to his original tale. At length he was taken out and severely flogged in public as a thief. There is now no doubt that the man told the truth. After this, although the public was every now and then keyed up to great expectations by some reported find, no further veins were discovered until 1839, when a Russian nobleman found a rich deposit in the Blue mountains. The British government again became fearful of the consequence of such news upon a colony of convicts and ordered the matter suppressed. Yet sufficient people had heard of it to keep the story alive and give credence to such rumors as arose from time to time. So matters drifted on. Time and time again bushmen, shepherds, convicts and surveyors picked up small nuggets and brought them to the centers of population, but at that day people were nothing like so keen on gold mining as they subsequently became, and the subject of gold in Australia was not pursued as one would expect it to be.

The discovery of gold in California changed all that. Those rich fields, panning out their golden store and filling the coffers of lucky individuals and governments at a rate never dreamed of, awakened a thirst for prospecting all the world over. In every part of the earth men went out with pick and pan, hoping to come across the precious metal.

When the news of California's fortune reached Australia, many took ship to America's shores, and among these was Hammond Hargreaves, an Englishman, native of Gosport, who had emigrated to New South Wales in 1832. In Australia he engaged in farming without much profit and was among the first to rush for California.

On reaching the auriferous region the first thing that struck him was the similarity of the geological formation in California and Bathurst, Australia, and there and then he made up his mind to inquire into the subject should he ever return to Australia. He worked for something like a couple of years in California and then set sail for New South Wales. Returning, he of course carried in his mind the thought that perhaps there might be gold in Bathurst, and when he landed he set to work to make a thorough search.

Before this, however, he had made the acquaintance of William and James Toms and J. H. O. Lister, who were anxious to prospect for gold. Hargreaves taught them how to use pick and pan, the dish and the cradle—in fact, gave them a practical if rough education into the mysteries of gold and gold bearing rocks and gravel. These men struck out, and in April, 1851, the three pupils returned to their old master, and, lo, in their pockets they carried gold to the amount of four ounces! Hargreaves, knowing the ropes, took this gold and full directions to the proper quarter. The news went forth, the rush began, rich finds were made, and Hargreaves was hailed as the discoverer of gold in Australia. In reality he had won the title, for it was his knowledge that first educated the Tomses and Lister, and it was his knowledge again that sent them in the right direction.

COFFEE AS A WEDDING GIFT.

A Custom Which is General in Coffee Growing Countries.

"We have a custom in the coffee raising countries," said a high Brazilian official, "which is unknown in other parts of the world. When a child is born in the coffee country a sack of the best grain is set aside as part of the inheritance to be received on attaining its majority. Usually the sack is the gift from some close friend or relative, and it is guarded as sacredly as if it were a gift of gold or bonds. No stress would induce a Brazilian parent to use coffee which was made the birth gift of a child. As a rule, it is sealed with the private seal of the owner and bears a card giving all particulars about the variety of grain, its age on being sacked and the birth of the child to whom it is given and other details, which are very interesting when the gift is due.

"Generally the coffee is opened for the first time when the child marries. The coffee for the reception or marriage feast is made from the legacy, and, according to precedent, this must be the first time the sack is opened. After the coffee is made for the wedding feast the sack is carefully closed and sent to the new home of the young people and should keep them in this staple for a year at least. When both bride and bridegroom have the birth gift of coffee they have started life under very hopeful conditions, so far as one necessity is concerned. Few people know that the older the un-parched grain of coffee is the better the flavor. Like wine, it grows with age, and that which is over twenty years mellowing under proper conditions will bring from $1.50 to $3 a pound from connoisseurs. The giving of pounds of green coffee is a common practice in the coffee belt. Friends exchange these gifts and compare results. When one cannot afford to give a sack of coffee, it frequently is the case that ten pounds of the best green grain are packed in a fancy case and bestowed on a newly born child, with directions that it must not be opened until the wedding day."

FIRST AMERICAN GLASS.

Made at a Factory Built by a Boston Man in New Hampshire.

The first American glass factory was erected in the town of Temple, N. H. Washington in his diary speaks of glass being made in New Haven, Conn., in the year 1789.

One would suppose by the language he uses that he considers it a new and quite extraordinary affair. It was nine years previous to this and during the very war whose issue first enabled the country to commence its own manufacturing that Robert Hewes of Boston began to carry out the project which he had long conceived, but had hitherto found impracticable if not impossible under English rule, that of making glass in America for America.

In 1780 Mr. Hewes selected a site for his factory secure from the British forces (his glassblowers were Hessians and Waldeckers, soldiers who had deserted from the British army), and he must have had an eye for the beautiful in nature. He chose a spot on the north slope of Kidder mountain, near its base. To the northwest Mount Monadnock rears its granite crown, standing like a giant sentinel; to the north and running east are the Temple mountains, bold and precipitous; to the east a beautiful valley holds in its embrace the towns of Wilton, Milford and Nashua, while to the northeast Joe English hill and the Uncanernucks mountains conceal the city of Manchester.

The place is now reached by a two mile walk over an old road, long a stranger to travel other than by grazing cows and nature loving tourists. The stonework about the ovens and the foundations of the building are all that now remain to remind us that here was another example of the American people's struggle for independence.—Crockery and Glass Journal.

Commoners Not Wanted.

No commoner, however distinguished, however great his worldwide fame as scientist, artist or musician, can hope to belong to the German imperial circle unless he be first dowered by his emperor with the magic patent of nobility. No wife or daughter of a great millionaire, however honorable the source of the husband's or father's wealth, can dream of being presented to the empress. The Prussian nobility form a caste entirely apart from the rest of society, and Berlin, socially speaking, is composed of many different worlds, none of which mingles with the other.—London M. A. P.

Saving Himself.

The owner of an estate had the misfortune to get a charge of shot in his legs from the double barreled gun of an inexperienced sportsman. The keeper hastened to his master. "You're not dead, are you?" he cried. "Of course I am not, you fool!" said the squire, rising. "Well, sir, not seeing you get up after you were shot, I thought you must be dead!" remarked the keeper. "Get up after I was shot—not I!" responded the squire. "If I had got up, the idiot would have given me his other barrel!"—London Scraps.

What Is the First Law of Nature?

"Self preservation is the first law of nature," answers Johnny Jones.

Correct, Johnny. Go right up to the head of the class. This law applies to a community as well as to an individual. Under the severe operation of this law a town that does not take care of itself, that does not look after its own interests first, that does not look out for Number One, soon falls into a bad way.

That's just as sure as shootin'. It's the law.

We must obey the law or take the consequences. If we in this town and community do not work together for our own good, the mutual good of all of us, in all lines of business, we have only ourselves to blame if the place slides down the inclined plane instead of climbing the golden ladder of prosperity and progress.

For instance, if we do our retail trading with big city stores that have no interest in us except to get our money and keep it, local trade must suffer and shrink, town property values and farm land values must decrease—and there you are!

Johnny Jones, who knows the law, is a wise lad, but how about his papa and mamma!

Do they obey the first law as applied to the old home place? If they don't, Johnny may have to apply the law to himself when he grows up. He may have to go to the city to make a living.

Let's all think it over.
