MR. KITCHIN TO SEN. SIMMONS. CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR ANSWERS SENATOR'S LETTER.

Thinks Senator Should Hold Hands off Since He Was Elected by Friends of all Candidates.

In the course of his speech in Winston-Salem last night in reference to the letter of Senator Simmons, Mr. Kitchin said:

"In February of last year, Senator Simmons assured me he would be impartial and hold hands-off in the gubernatorial contest. I was guilty of the folly of believing it. Within three weeks before the Legislature adjourned, he encouraged Mr. Craig to run and told him he would support him if he ran. He did not tell me of his change of mind until the following December. Heretofore our Senators elected by friends of all candidates, occupying a special position and influence, have not seen fit to throw the great weight of such influence and prestige in favor of either candidate, and this Senator never did it before either two, four or six years ago, in behalf of any of the dozen candidates who have been before the people, and even now he does not, in his open letter, give his weight to any candidate for Corporation Commissioner, or Lieutenant Governor, for Commissioner of Agriculture or other position. It is remarkable also that in this instance he throws his weight against Colonel Horne and myself, from his section of the State, when by the custom of a generation the nomination should come east, and he gives no reason for seeking to break this custom. He does not say there is any political exigency of a public character that justifies it. He does not say that no man in the East has the character, experience and ability to fill the office. He does not say that any man in the West towers so far above all Eastern men as to justify it. But the Senator studiously tries to make the public think this is a contest involving himself and Governor Aycock. He does this for the purpose of arousing their friends against Col. Horne and myself. He knows that he and the beloved ex-governor are not involved in this contest except in so far as they aggressively sought to involve themselves in it. He even speaks of the right to defend himself. Will Mr. Craig's defeat be any assault upon him? Has he guaranteed Mr. Craig's nomination? Will it be his defeat? If so, why did not the senator let the public into the secret reasons that support his position, instead of in his letter, carefully leaving the public to its guesses. The public will think, as I think, his reasons are personal rather than patriotic hostile to me as well as friends to Mr. Craig, for he advances nothing in Mr. Craig's favor that has not been claimed by his friends all over the State for him. He merely adds the public use of his name to conjure with, when his favorite has had the private use of it for fourteen months.

I regret exceedingly the position of the Senator and the ex-Governor. I realize the heavy burden they put upon my shoulders in this campaign. It is unfortunate for other candidates that they did not get their approval before announcing their purpose of running for the high office of Governor. When they and the Charlotte Observer line up for my Western competitor, it is more serious to me than the opposition of the Southern Railway and the American Tobacco Company. It may be serious to the people. If the Senator and the ex-Governor now, cannot they and the one they name hereafter constitute a triumvirate, who will operate a more powerful machine in naming candidates than the one I am now up against? The Democratic party shall not, with my consent, fall under such ring rule. Never before in the history of this State has such a bold attempt been made against the time-honored custom of letting the people choose their nominees free from the undue influence and hypnotic suggestions of the mighty ones whom the friends of all candidates have raised on high. After I am nominated I shall have the consolation of knowing that I made a bold and open fight with charity to all and malice towards none, and did all in my power to keep the Democracy near to the people and free from the bossism which ever threatens its usefulness as well as free from that wrongful influence of foreign corporations that ever seek unjust advantage over the public.

Good Crops.

It is encouraging to take a trip through the country these days and observe the splendid condition of crops and note the look of gratification on the faces of the farmers. Prospects are better at this season than they have been for several years. We hope there will be nothing to set them back between now and harvest time.

MR. CRAIG'S ADMIRABLE SPEECH.

ADDRESS LARGE AUDIENCE IN OPERA HOUSE.

Able Answers Charges Made Against Him and Rings Clear on Important Issues Before the People.

A very large audience, almost filling the building, was in the opera house Thursday night to hear the speech of Hon. Locke Craig, one of the candidates for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The introduction was by Mr. F. G. James, who made a bit when he said his attention had been called to a mistake that had been made that needed correction; That a few weeks ago when a certain gentleman was being introduced to an audience here, and enthusiastic admirer presented him as "the next governor of North Carolina." That was the mistake I am going to correct, for I am here to tell you that "the next governor of North Carolina" is the gentleman who will now address you, the Hon. Locke Craig.

When Mr. Craig arose there was an ovation, the applause being so prolonged that he had to wait some moments for it to subside. He spoke for an hour and a half with great ability and elquence, was listened to intently and frequently greeted with applause.

Had I known in advance, said Mr. Craig, of the arduous labor this campaign has required, I doubt if I should have entered the race, much as the honor of the nomination is desired, but in going over the State I have been taken by the hand by so many friends of my youth and encouraged with their support that I have been greatly cheered. When I first entered the race for this nomination I thought that Mr. Kitchin would remain in congress to which the people had elected him, that Mr. Horne would remain with his business in Clayton, and that I would remain at my home in Asheville, and that there would be no such campaign as has resulted, and the like of which I hope the State will not see again.

I have no charge to make against either of my competitors, and wish to say that either of them would make the very best governor he possibly could, yet I think I would make the best one. (Laughter)

Before I entered the race I took the advice of many Democrats whose Democracy is above question, and they were generous enough to say they thought the honor of this nomination should be conferred upon me. Other Democrats had been honored and they thought I should be honored too. Another reason why I became a candidate is that the people among who I lived insisted that I should. The great western section of the State covering nearly 300 miles above Salisbury, that had always come to the call of the east, had not had this nomination in 46 years, at the same time it has always stood loyally by the nominees. Conditions in west were not the same as in the east, and there were times when the west did not approve of principles advocated by the east, yet the west always responded when the call went up for help, as was shown in the constitutional amendment.

Another Democrat who said he would be glad to see me get the nomination is Mr. Kitchin, but he wanted me to wait four years for it. He has been frequently honored, and if there are any people who can afford to wait four years it is Mr. Kitchin and his family.

I regret that since becoming a candidate some unkind things have been said about me, but I do not believe they are endorsed by the rank of the party. I regret that these things have been said. But one charge they made against me is true. They say that I voted the Republican ticket 24 years ago. I did vote for one man on that ticket—J. G. Blaine for president—but voted all the rest of the Democratic ticket and I have voted the Democratic ticket ever since. I made a mistake then, being young and not identified with any party, but it looks like the 24 years of service I have since rendered should atone for that mistake. They even charged that I voted the Republican ticket when I lived in Bertie county, but circumstances were such that I had to move away from that county at the age of 15, and I never heard of 15-year-old boys being allowed to vote in Bertie. Other Democrats have made mistakes similar to the one I made, some of them even in mature years, but their action does not justify my mistake. Mr. Kitchin made a mistake in his proposition of fusion with Butler, yet that does not justify my mistake, but I had rather have made the mistake of voting for one Republican in boyhood than to have made the mistake of offering the hand of fusion to Marion Butler with the smell of a thousand negroes on him. Many men who have made mistakes have been given positions and filled them worthily, and I cannot understand the kind of justice that would draft me into service in every campaign for 24 years and then disfranchise me from holding a position of reward.

Mr. Kitchin has been running for congress for 12 years and in every campaign the people have sent me to the district to help swell his majority. What do you think of the justice of the man whom I had helped keep in office for 12 years, saying, just because I happened to get in his way, that I was not worthy of a place in the Democratic party.

AYDEN ITEMS.

Newsy Notes From a Hustling Town, Briefly Told.

Ayden, N. C., May 29, 1908.

Allen Cannon and Dixie Cannon came home Wednesday from Chapel Hill to spend the summer at home.

Miss Anna Belle Kittrell, of Grifton, is here visiting her aunt, Mrs. W. E. Hooks.

Miss Hattie Kittrell, of Winterville, attended the commencement here Thursday.

Little Miss Letha Fair, who has been very sick with fever, we are pleased to learn is now getting along finely.

Oh these candidates! Irrepressible and never ceasing candidates. They were here yesterday and if there is one among us who can tell what he is, where he is, or when he is, he is a mighty smart man. Everybody says we are for anybody, somebody, in fact for everybody.

There were so many of our distinguished friends here to hear Locke Craig yesterday it is just impossible to mention all.

Contentment gave the largest majority, by far, than any township in the county. The majority was big if it had not rained yesterday everything would have been dry right now.

Miss Nancy Coward, who has been teaching school in Beaufort county, is now at home for a rest and we are all glad to see her too.

At the next regular meeting of the Masons here they will elect officers for the coming Masonic year. They will also have refreshments. All members of the lodge are expected to be present.

Elias Turnage says he can't sell goods on account of so many pretty girls passing. It gets him sorter frustrated and he has to stop and look. The same over in this direction. We stop, too.

In a game of ball here yesterday between Ayden and Jacksonville, the score stood 6 to 5 in favor of Ayden. Our boys always bear the binner.

Our tobacco warehouse is just a'growing. From the talk of the farmers we expect to be compelled to build another right away. Everything is enthusiastic. We expect to open with the first sales in the county the coming season.

F. W. B. T. S. COMMENCEMENT.

The week we have had the commencement of the Free Will Baptist Theological Seminary, an institution of which Ayden feels proud. There has been a large attendance and all the exercises were much enjoyed.

The commencement began Tuesday night with an address before the Amphyction Society by Mr. Dickinson, of Wilson, Wednesday Dr. St. Claire, of Georgia delivered the address before the A. C. F. Society and Thursday morning he delivered the annual sermon.

Thursday afternoon Hon. Locke Craig, of Asheville, one of the candidates for the nomination for governor, delivered the literary address. The largest crowd in attendance upon any of the exercises was out to hear Mr. Craig, and his speech was much enjoyed even though he delivered it under great disadvantage. Arrangements were made for the speaking to be out of doors, and after an introduction by Mr. F. G. James the speaker had barely started before a shower came that stopped him and run the crowd to shelter. The crowd came together again

Band Making Rapid Improvement.

The Aeolian Band went to Ayden Thursday to furnish music at the commencement, and also played at the Craig speaking here Thursday night. For the last two weeks the band has been under the instruction of Mr. Ola Forbes and the improvement it has made is remarkable. The music Friday night was excellent and received many compliments. Greenville is proud of the band. Why not erect a band stand for them either on the court house square or near the graded school so the people can enjoy open air concerts these summer nights.

FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1908.

Congress did not skidoo on the 23rd but is still chewing the rag at the same stand.

Mr. Craig made a great speech in the opera house Thursday night, and it made him friends.

As the question of prohibition is settled, more interest will now be taken in politics and baseball.

Governor Glenn expresses himself as gratified at the great victory for prohibition. He has a right to be.

Federal Judge Purnell is said to have declared that he will help to enforce prohibition by inflicting heavy punishment on those who may be convicted in his court of selling whiskey illegally.

You are all right as long as you agree with the other fellow, but all wrong when your own opinion happens to be different. At least that is the view some take of it. Queer condition of affairs, when men are supposed to be free to think for themselves.

Danger Ahead.

The Greenville Reflector has this to say:
 "The campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor grows more and more disgusting. It is making strength faster for the Republican party in North Carolina than anything the Democrats have ever done before. There are three good men aspiring for the nomination, yet the supporters of one malign the others just as if they were enemies instead of belonging to the same party, and vice versa. Some want to make the support of a certain man a test of Democracy, and some think everybody is a rascal who does not agree with them. The campaign for the nomination is a reflection on the party by which the enemies to Democracy are profiting"

And with the sentiment expressed we are in accord. The scramble for the governorship in North Carolina becomes more and more undignified. The campaign was pitched on a wrong key to begin with; and the lesser lights have caught up the refrain and vied with each other in mud-slinging ability. False charges have been made and all kinds of apparitions have been appealed to for the purpose of "stirring up the boys."

Another campaign or so like this and the Democratic party will wake up a sadder and a wiser party. Such contests conducted in such a spirit mean party disintegration.—Kinston Free Press.

"Negro night riders have appeared in Kentucky", says the Nashville American. That being the case, we confidently expect to hear soon that the chicken crop has gone to join the disappearing tobacco crop.

UNCLE SAM'S I. O. U.

The Payment For Stuart's Portrait of George Washington.
 The Columbian Historical society recently has come into possession of the papers relating to the negotiations between one of the Carroll family and the government of the United States for the payment of the money due for the famous portrait of Washington by Gilbert Stuart. This was the portrait which in the war of 1812 was rescued from the burning White House by the intrepid Dolly Madison. Stuart painted this portrait in Philadelphia in 1795, when in the height of his glory. He but recently had returned from London, where he had counted among his subjects King George IV., the Prince of Wales, Mrs. Siddons and many other celebrities, and he had the temerity to ask congress for $800 for his painting of the first patriot.

The solons were aghast at such a price, promptly refused to pay it and intimated that any one so unpatriotic might as well go back and paint kings, for he was not suited to paint patriots. But Daniel Carroll of Duddington threw himself in the breach, urged the claim of the artist and put before the congress what a figure they would cut before the eyes of the world if they failed to meet an obligation incurred. Carroll offered to pay the money himself if the government gave him promise of remuneration. After much quibbling a promissory note was given at 8 per cent, and it was twenty years before the Carroll heirs received the whole of the $800 which Stuart received for the finest portrait ever painted of the Father of His Country. During the hasty cutting of the picture from its frame when the victorious British were marching on the capital the signature of Stuart was destroyed. The picture lay in obscurity for a dozen years, and there was some doubt thrown on its authenticity when it was hung in the White House. It now adorns the blue room with Martha Washington by the same artist, and the two form the sole decoration of the throne room, as the dainty blue room is dubbed by those who like court phrases. For over seventy-five years it hung in the east room.—New York Press.

THE CREATIVE POWER.

"Science," said Lord Kelvin, "Affirms the Existence of a God."
 I cannot at all accept the view of those who assert that ether is atomic, since all my own investigations have clearly demonstrated to me that its structure is totally nonatomic. In fact, it has no structure in the accepted meaning of the term. Neither can I accept the view of those who assert that science neither affirms nor denies the existence of a Creator. On the contrary, science most positively asserts the existence of a creative power. We cannot escape from this conclusion when we study the physique and the dynamic of living beings and the "dead" nature which we see around us.

Modern physiologists again firmly declare that there is something else outside gravitation and the physical and chemical forces. This something is a vital principle. Science places before us an unknown. In thinking of this unknown we all become agnostics. We only know God in his works, but we are forced by science to believe with perfect confidence in other than physical, dynamic or electrical forces. There is no middle term between absolute scientific belief in a creative power and the acceptance of the theory of a haphazard coming together of atoms. Here scientific thought is forced to accept the notion of a creative power. Forty years ago I asked the great Liebig during a walk in the country if he believed that grass and flowers grew solely as the result of chemical force.

He replied, "Not any more than I believe that chemical force can translate a book upon botany describing the phenomena of vegetation." Every act of the will is a stupendous miracle for chemical, physical and mathematical science. If your intellect is strong enough you will be forced to believe in God, the foundation of all religion, and you will see that science is not at all hostile to religion. Far from that, it must be looked upon as its auxiliary.—Lord Kelvin.

The Exact Figures.

"Well, suh," said the old dorky in reply to a question of the judge, "I ez 'bout ez ol' ez what de ol' tree is what stan's in my white folks' yard."
 "And how old is the tree?"
 "Well, suh, ter git down exac', dat tree is de same age ez de brick house whar de white folks live at, wich is 'bout ez ol' ergin ez what de barn is an' twice ez ol' ez de mule stable!"

Are You a Trust Buster?

Hey—You!
Yes, YOU'RE the man we mean.
You're always talking about the harm the trusts are doing. The country's going to the demerit bowwows, you say, because of the uncurbed trusts. Rich growing richer, poor getting poorer. Used to be that a poor man could go into business for himself in a modest way and make a good living. Now he must become a clerk or a roustabout or a hodcarrier for some corporation—some combination that has grown to be a Goliath of bigness, that has devoured the fat of the land and is still gourmandizing upon it, till there's not a scrap of bone left for the under dog.

That's your line of talk. You're still handing it out, and you're proud of it.

Well, now, let's see: Are YOU a trust buster YOURSELF?

Didn't we see you stalk up to the postoffice just now and mail a letter with the address of a city Mail Order Store on the envelope? Hey! Didn't we?

Don't you know that the Mail Order Store is a trust—one of the most dangerous in the crowd? Don't you know that it is secretly and slyly closing the doors of opportunity to the young men in country towns and small cities like ours? Don't you know that the Mail Order Trust is collecting the patronage of town and country people by the mail route, thereby cutting down the patronage of the smaller merchant, the local man who is trying to build up a modest, independent, antitrust business?

Hey!

Didn't that ever occur to you?

N. B. (which means note well): Why don't you trade at home instead of helping to build up a trust that hurts your home place?

LEGEND OF OLD JAPAN

The Story of Chobel, the Leader of the Duelists.

A MAN WHO KNEW NOT FEAR.

Rather Than Tarnish His Reputation For Bravery He Accepted the Prince's Invitation and Went Voluntarily to Assassination.

The following legend of Chobel has been handed down in Japan as indicative of the courage of the "braves" or duelists, who flourished in Yeddo during the sixteenth century, forming a sort of Japanese St. Herimidad. Chobel, the leader of this clique, was a redoubtable swordsman, whose constantly recurring duels forced his master to expel him from his retinue. Unwilling to enlist with another of the feudal lords, he assembled all the D'Artagnans of Yeddo about him until his power incited even the princes to envy, although they declined to recognize the outlawed duelist.

On this pretense he was excluded from a popular tea house one day at an hour when was expected Jurozayemon, the leader of the Hatamotos, then the most influential political party in Japan, who had arrogated the city of Yeddo for the official residence. But Chobel, with a shrug of his shoulders, forced his way past the attendants into the apartments reserved for the prince, where he removed his garments and cast himself on a couch in feigned slumber.

"Who is that brute?" demanded the prince on his arrival. "The leader of the swordsmen," they answered him. Jurozayemon seated himself in silence and began to smoke. Having smoked his pipe, he emptied the glowing cinders into the pretended sleeper's nostrils, repeating this five times, when he paused, astounded by such courageous endurance. Chobel, noting this, yawning, rubbed his eyes like one awakening from profound slumber and exclaimed: "You, oh, most noble master! And I, having drunk too much, should have slept uncovered before your eyes! How shall I excuse my vulgarity?"

"I have so long sought your acquaintance that you are forgiven. Be seated and accept this cup of wine. I beg you."

Politeness forbade Chobel to refuse a drop of the proffered cup, a huge beaker of powerful wine, offered him in the hopes of overpowering him. But Chobel drained it easily and, replenishing it, presented it to his host, who accomplished this feat with the utmost difficulty.

"Will your highness permit me to offer you some gift of value?" Chobel asked humbly.

"Surely."

"What do you most desire?"

Thinking to render the brave ridiculous before the whole city, the prince said promptly:

"A plate of macaroni!"

"Ah, Chobel," thought he, "the whole town will soon be telling how the great duelist was permitted only to offer a plate of macaroni to the president of the Hatamotos."

After a whispered colloquy the attendant disappeared, leaving the two enemies alone, smiling, but impassive. But soon a great noise penetrated the apartment, and the prince discovered a crowd of workmen busily constructing an immense wall of macaroni around the tea house. All Yeddo was assembled to view this unique and royal gift. Discomfited that the "bravo" should have outwitted his ruse, the prince departed to plan revenge. The following day brought with it an invitation from Jurozayemon to breakfast. Despite his comrade's remonstrances Chobel insisted on accepting it. As he entered the prince's dwelling the samurais threw themselves upon him with drawn swords. Chobel's immense muscular strength enabled him to disarm them, when he proceeded unannounced to the rear apartment.

"Pardon me, your lordship," said he, "for announcing myself. Your attendants have forgotten to do so."

"Surely. Perhaps they have sought quarrel with you. 'Twas but a joke, for I wagered that all six could not disarm you. Perhaps you would like a bath to refresh yourself."

Who shall say that Chobel was wise? Alone in his enemy's house, he discarded his weapons, removed his garments and crouched in the bath. The water that was at first hot was soon boiling. Chobel dashed from the bath, but ten spears held by invisible hands forced him back. Suffocated by steam, exhausted by blood, Chobel fell dying to the ground.

The samurais were still congratulating themselves on their success when a loud knocking was heard. Inquiry revealed the dueling confederates who were come to seek their leader.

"He is drunk and cannot see you." "Our leader is dead. We have brought his bier."

The samurais were dumb with astonishment. Chobel had divined the trap, yet, preferring to sustain his reputation of daring untarnished by any accusation of fear, had voluntarily gone to his assassination.

Hawaiian Girls.

The Hawaiian girls are almost universally handsome. They are brown in color (not black); their eyes and teeth are magnificent; their hair straight, jet black and often falling below their knees. Their heads are handsomely formed and their expression alert, intelligent and amiable; their forms in youth voluptuous, but heavy and overstout after youth; their features full and nose and upper lip slightly tilted; their voices extremely sweet.

A LITTLE LEARNING.

Come Amusing Blunders Made by English School Children.

Here are some amusing blunders, or "howlers," made by English school children: Q. How were soldiers in early times different from those of today? A. They weren't; they had big dark eyes and long black hair. "Ich dien" is the motto on the Prince of Wales' feathers. "The Dutch and English after the armada struck a medal; Jehovah blew, and they were scattered on it." John Bull was persuaded to meet and fight France, where he afterward died in mental agony. "In 55 B. C. Julius Caesar crossed over to Britain and conquered it, and in 54 B. C. he crossed over again to drive out the Druids; this shows, therefore, that he laid the foundation of the French language and French civilization and also made Italy safe from any attack from the Barbarians." "Hamlet has a touring show, panorama, etc., and acrobats in the Curzon hall, Birmingham." "Cleero was a Grecian historian; he led the 5,000 Greeks after Xenophon was killed."

Social questions are sometimes treated after this fashion: "In one of the slums of Liverpool, in the back yard, was a girl filled up with cabbage stalks and tea leaves." "In the houses of the poor the drains are in a fearful state and quite unfit for human habitation." "In nearly all poor houses the landlady lives in the center of the room, keeping a tenant in each corner." "The best way to improve poorhouses would be to put a thick plank on the floor and a cast iron beam on the ceiling."

The Bible provides some quaint instances: "When Lot's wife looked back she was turned into a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night." "The city of refuge was heaven." "Amos was a very doleful person or an optimist." "A synagogue was not used as a swimming bath or a tanner's shop." "The Passover lamb might not be older than eight days or younger than one year."

BURNING A DIAMOND.

The Experiment as Made by Davy and Faraday.

That diamonds will not only burn, but will blaze, was proved as long ago as 1814 by Sir Humphry Davy and Michael Faraday. The experiment was carried out at Florence, where the two scientists were visiting the great Duke of Tuscany, whose burning glass was the medium through which the sun was induced to operate. This burning glass consisted of a couple of convex lenses, distant from each other about three and a half feet, the large lens being some fourteen inches in diameter, the smaller about three inches. The diamond rested on a rod of platinum which had a cup shaped receptacle at the top, pierced with holes to admit of free circulation of gas. This rod was fixed in the center of a glass globe of twenty-two cubical inches capacity, exhausted of air and filled with pure hydrogen.

Intense heat was brought to bear upon the diamond when it was exposed to the sun, the second lens greatly reducing the focus. In the course of three-quarters of an hour it was necessary twice or thrice to cool the globe. Then it was noticed that the diamond was slowly diminishing and becoming gradually opaque. Suddenly it burst into flame. They removed the stone from the focus, and it blazed away merrily. It glowed brilliantly, with a scarlet light inclining to purple, and continued to burn for about four minutes.

The glass was then cooled and the diamond again submitted to the action of the sun. Again it blazed, but not for so long a period as at first. Twice more this was repeated, and then the diamond was totally consumed. This was the first occasion on which, so far as is known, a diamond had been seen to burn.—Chicago News.

How to Test a Restaurant.

The man was enthusiastic about a restaurant he had discovered. "Best place I've eaten in in months," he said. "Everything first class. You'd better try it." "Were you very hungry when you went in?" asked his friend. "As a bear," said the man. "Go back some time when you are not so ravenous," his friend advised, "and see how you like it then. I make it a point never to experiment with a restaurant recommended by a person who was very hungry when he ate there. To a person who is half starved anything tastes good."—New York Press.

Delicious Banana Cream.

This recipe is highly recommended by one of our correspondents; try it for dessert tomorrow. Peel five large bananas, rub smooth with five tea-spoonsful of sugar. Add one teacup sweet cream beaten to a stiff froth, then add one 10c package of Lemon JEL-L-O dissolved in 1-2 teacups boiling water. Pour into mold when cold garnish with candied cherries. Serve with whipped cream, or any good pudding sauce. JEL-L-O is sold by all Grocers at 10c. per package.

after the shower and Mr. Craig spoke perhaps a half hour when another and harder rain came and drove all to shelter again. Then after a delay of sometime waiting for the rain to stop, Mr. Craig finished his speech to as many people as could pack in the Free Will Baptist church, which did not hold more than half the crowd. It was a magnificent educational speech that made a lasting impression on all fortunate enough to hear it.

Thursday night there were five original orations by pupils in contest for a medal, and six declamations, these being interspersed with music. The medal was won by E. B. Jones, of Georgia and was presented in an appropriate speech by Mr. G. W. Prescott.

Diplomas were also presented in timely words by Dr. St. Claire to two graduates, Marcellus Woodard, of Speight's Bridge and Claudius McGowan, of Pacolus.

The Free Will Baptist Seminary the past session, which was its best so far, had pupils from five States, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Ohio. Dr. T. E. Peeden, of Ohio, is president of the institution and is assisted by four able instructors.
