MR. KITCHIN SPEAKS TWO HOURS

LARGE AUDIENCE OUT TO HEAR HIM.

Speech Largely in Defense of Criticism Against Him.

Hon. W. W. Kitchin, one of the candidates for the nomination for governor, spoke to a large audience in the opera house here Friday night, many of the number being ladies. After some selections by the Aeolian band, the speaker was beautifully presented to the audience by Dr. D. L. James, in fact the introduction was the only real oratorical production of the evening. When he said he wanted to make an apology for his brother standing on the same platform last week and introducing as the next governor of North Carolina the Hon. Locke Craig, there was a general outbreak of applause, some at the mention of Mr. Craig's name others that he inferred that honor should go to Mr. Kitchin. Then in choicest words he paid high tribute to the distinguished speaker.

When Mr. Kitchin arose there was prolonged applause. He began by saying that on the eve of the primary is too late to discuss party principles. The time for discussion of issues between Republicans and Democrats is not now, but will come later in the fall. We will show then how the Republicans who have been making promises for 15 years have failed to keep them.

All I can expect to do now, said Mr. Kitchin, is to answer the unjust charges and false declarations that have been made against me. They have given you many reasons why Kitchin should not be governor. First, that I am a dangerous man. Did you ever hear anybody say Kitchin was dangerous? The people of my district did not think I was dangerous, or they would not have kept me in congress for 12 years. If I was dangerous I would not have been kept on the national congressional committee for 10 years, nor would have been sent into seven districts of the State in different campaigns to preach Democracy. No man who stands for right and truth can fail to have the hostility of those who oppose wrong. I have been dangerous only to the enemies of Democracy and the plunderers of the people.

It was no news to me when a year ago the Asheville Gazette-News called attention to the Southern Railway and the American Tobacco Co. being against me. I need not show why they are my enemies and for 10 years have fought me. I have always opposed the railway subsidy, I had a telegram from New Bern today that a prominent man had charged me with voting four times in favor of the subsidy before turning against it—that charge is false, I always voted against.

If these corporations could select the candidate for governor it would not be Kitchin. I do not want it if I had to be under obligations to them. Every special interest would prefer either of my competitors to me, for I have been tested and they would prefer to take chances with one who has not been tested. They know they cannot control me, but would hope to control the other. If either of the others is nominated the corporations would expect him to feel under obligations to them, and my successful opponent would feel under obligations to the special interests that took the nomination away from me and gave it to him. It is whether the special interests or the people shall control. If they leave Kitchin they will hold him up as an example to threaten others who oppose them.

It is not a time to tell anecdotes, nor to go into the flower gardens of rhetoric to entertain the ladies here, I must go after facts to make you Kitchin men do your duty at the primaries tomorrow.

Again, the claim is made that I have had enough. The man who never wanted me to have anything said that. People who have honored me do not think I have had enough. The fifth district did not nominate Kitchin out of pity, but because they thought it was best.

And they say Kitchin, you tried to fuse with Marion Butler. (Here he paid his respects to the New Bern Sun for the fusion charge against him, saying that paper had only one parallel for untruthfulness in the State—the Lexington Dispatch—which said no good Democrat would vote for Kitchin.) The New Bern Sun said I did not deserve credit for carrying the fifth district as Butler's party had fused to help me. There was never a greater falsehood. If Phillips wrote that through hostility to me he must have been laboring under something equal to the two $2,000 checks the Raleigh evening Times got from the Southern Railway.

They say that in 1898 Kitchin favored a proposition to fuse. I did. The committee opposed fusion as proposed by the Populists, but three of us (giving names) favored tendering a counter proposition offering to divide offices with them according to the vote of each party. As a fair and honest man the Sun should have told its readers that Locke Craig was at the head of the only fusion ticket the Democrats had ever made with Populists. I approved that fusion and approve it now.

In the afternoon paper here I notice somebody signing "A" who had not the courage to sign his name, asks some questions for me to answer. If "A" had thought he was making a point against me he would have been glad to place his name to the article (He then dealt in a bit of sarcasm that produced laughter.) On that Saturday "A" asked about when the Crumpacker bill was up I was making speeches for Kitchin trying to get as far ahead of Craig as possible. As to the times I was absent from roll call in congress I was paired with a Republican member. "A" ought to have known that I was paired, and he ought to know that when the Crumpacker bill was up some years ago that Kitchin was the man who answered Crumpacker so effectually that the papers all over the South complimented me. Wants to know how many roll calls I have missed? If the people of my district were satisfied with what I was doing whose business is it down here? My own opinion is if "A" is an honest man he will in tomorrow's paper apologize to me and tell who misled him into making this attack. It was people after my character that brought me away from Washington, I had to come to defend myself against such unjust charges.

And then some say Kitchin, if we can't say anything against you what can you say of your competitors? Don't understand me to say that they are with the corporations and trusts, but the trusts and corporations are with them. It is no fault of mine or my friends that Mr. Craig has not been honored, he lived in one congressional district and I in another, and his people might have honored him as my people honored me, and if they failed to do this it should not be charged to me. If the mountain Democrats failed to do their duty in honoring him don't blame me for it.

Mr. Craig says Kitchin has been running for office since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. I have never run for so many offices as Craig, but I have been successful. (Here Mr. Kitchin made reference to the "Big 4" using about the same language as in a former speech here, and also referred to the party precedent in alternating between the east and west for the candidate and declared that it belonged to the east this time.)

Seeing they could do nothing else against Kitchin my enemies went to work and induced another eastern man to run and divide the votes in the east with me. (Then he read some newspaper extracts in reference to statements Craig had made.)

At Greensboro just on the eve of the primary, and just before Craig was to speak there, someone put a banner across the street reading "Vote for Kitchin—always a Democrat." The Charlotte Observer with its usual vituperation denounced this as an outrage. I am proud to say I have always been a Democrat. It sounds better than saying I once voted for a Republican but have since been a Democrat. Even the Populist who has come back to us can not make the proud boast that he was always a Democrat. When I was only 18 years of age I was in Asheville as the Scales-York campaign was about to open with a speaking at Marshall. An excursion was run out from Asheville and I went along and hollered myself hoarse for Scales, while Craig was sitting back in Asheville studying the life of Blaine for whom he voted three months later.

Mr. Kitchin spoke for nearly two hours, and it is impossible to give even a synopsis of all that he said, but it was mainly in keeping with the extracts given above. He referred to Senator Simmons' recent letter as a new doctor being called in to aid his sick competitor and that even "Simmons' liver regulator" would not save him. The close of the speech was an ardent appeal, in which Scriptural quotations were freely used, to every Kitchin man to be out early at the primaries, go into the highways and byways and compel me to come in and vote for Kitchin, to keep a lookout for Kitchin enemies and to sweep all the enemies down before them. "Don't anybody get the idea that I don't want the office and want it bad."

There will be a moonlight excursion next Thursday night, June 11th, on the launch Eagle for the benefit of the Episcopal rectory. Make your plans to go, you will enjoy it.

FEDERAL BUILDINGS.

Statement of Method Employed by the Treasury Department in Securing Sites.

The last session of congress having appropriated $10,000 to secure a site for a public building in Greenville, the following showing the method of the government in selecting a site will be of interest:

Upon the enactment of a law authorizing the acquisition of a site for a Federal building the treasury department invites, through a local newspaper, proposals for the sale or donation of a suitable corner. This advertisement gives such information as to the dimensions of the site and the general requirements as will enable intelligent preparation of proposals.

The offers are opened in Washington at the time stated in the advertisement, and as soon thereafter as practicable an agent of the department is sent to make a personal examination of the proposed locations and such others as he deemed desirable. Upon this report, together with representations in writing from other sources, the department selects the site and, if the property is to be acquired by purchase, accepts the offer of the successful bidder, subject to the conditions stated in the advertisement and the attorney-general's approval of the title.

Whenever the department is unable to purchase an acceptable site at a reasonable price, or where acceptable title can not be secured by voluntary conveyance, a selection is made and the title acquired by condemnation proceedings, in which the price to be paid is judicially determined.

The buildings (if any) on the site should be reserved by the vendor, to be removed upon notice after payment for the land has been made. Generally, notice to move is not given until the construction of the Federal building is about to begin, if the vendor is willing, pending such removal, to pay a reasonable ground rent.

Plans for public buildings are taken up in order in which the titles to the sites therefor are vested in the United States, and the contracts for their construction are let at as early a date as practicable.

Expression of Respect and Esteem.

Our brother, Geo. S. Pritchard, left us in the early hours of a peaceful Sabbath morn, May 31st, 1908, and will be with us no more in the flesh. In his going a valuable citizen, an energetic business man, a devout Christian, a loving husband and father, a noble and true man has quit the fields of strife for the rest that remaineth to the people of God. For fifty years he had walked the pathways of earth looking up and lifting up as he went. He lived above the dust and trusted to the larger hope. We feel the loss that has come to us, and as members of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist church, we desire to put to record the following resolutions:

1. That our appreciation of his valuable services in all that made for the welfare of the church and Sunday school is hereby acknowledged.
2. That the beautiful life lived in our midst will be cherished and the new place given the Sunday school work in Greenville, will not be forgotten by us.
3. That we assure the greatly bereaved family of our continued sympathy and prayers in these hours.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family and also be furnished the press for publication.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL BRIEFS.

The Visitors Here and People Who Travel.

Mrs. B. H. Hearne returned Friday from New Bern.

Miss Mae Schultz has returned home from school in Richmond.

Mrs. C. W. Gold, of Raleigh, who had been visiting her sister, Mrs. J. G. Moye, returned home Friday evening.

Hon. Ashley Horne, one of the candidates for governor, was here a short while between trains Friday evening.

AYDEN ITEMS.

News Notes From a Hustling Town, Briefly Told.

Ayden, N. C., June 6, 1908.

Wednesday morning at 7:30 at the home of R. W. Worthington, father of the bride, Mr. Merrimon McKinney, of Belhaven, and Miss Roberta Worthington were united in marriage, Rev. C. W. Howard, of Kinston performing the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. McKinney left on the 8:10 train for Baltimore where they will spend several days with the mother of the groom. Among the many beautiful and useful presents given by relatives and friends was a roll containing one thousand dollars from the parents of the bride, Miss Worthington was one of our popular and charming young ladies and will be greatly missed from the circle of sincere friends with whom she mingled while here. Mr. McKinney is a former resident of Ayden but is now doing a large and lucrative drug business at Belhaven where he has made his home. After their visit at Baltimore they will take in New York and Niagara then return to their home in North Carolina. Many are the kind wishes for their future and all wishes for them a happy life. W. S. Blount, G. C. Moore and W. J. Hemby have come home from Raleigh where they have been attending Federal court. The Pythians after the regular routine of business was concluded, Wednesday night, had a delightful cream supper. The protracted meeting in the Methodist church still continues. Rev. Mr. Ormond is preaching powerful and practical sermons which seem to be well appreciated.

Tom Dawson, of Gritton, is here on a visit to his sister, Mrs. F. G. Buhman.

Mrs. S. R. Smith has returned from her recent visit to the country.

B. F. Manning, tax lister, made his appearance here yesterday in a bran new turn out. He must be expecting big things from that tax list.

Mrs. Elias McLawhorne and daughter went to Williamston Thursday on business.

J. S. Hines is erecting a large two story eight room residence in East Ayden, and has it nearly complete. Mrs. McLawhorne is building a nice cottage in West Ayden.

The Masons held their regular communication here Thursday at which time they transacted much business had a nice barbecue dinner and elected the following gentlemen as officers for the ensuing Masonic year:—J. F. Johnson, W. M.; W. H. Smith, S. W.; U. S. Jackson, J. W.; S. A. Jenkins, Sec.; J. R. Smith Treas.; C. E. Spear, S. D.; Richard Wingate, J. D.; J. S. Hart and J. J. Edwards, Stewards; J. H. Rives, Tyler.

SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1908.

They are giving the Republicans a fine opening of which the latter will be likely to try to take advantage.

As one is as good a Democrat as the other, we cannot see that a man is an enemy to Democracy if he votes for either of them.

You don't know who the State convention will put up for you to vote for as governor, so it is best not to say too much beforehand.

Today practically ends the contest so far as Pitt county is concerned, but it will be best to wait until after the 24th to do any shouting.

If a billion dollar congress means Republican defeat, as was the case in 1890, the Democrats have got a good chance before them in the election this year.

Beaufort harbor has been selected as the place for the presentation of the silver service to the cruiser North Carolina, and the presentation will be made about July 23rd.

From Washington City comes the information that Governor R. B. Glenn, of North Carolina, is being prominently mentioned as a running mate for Mr. Bryan on the presidential ticket.

The Durham Herald expresses a truth when it says "a whole lot of people will be satisfied if there is a tie-up in the convention and some man is nominated who has not as yet entered the race."

A Pennsylvanian arises to say that if there is an attempt made at Chicago to re-nominate Mr. Roosevelt the president himself will stop it. We are not prepared to believe that yet, especially if such an attempt should have a prospect of success behind it.

In his speech here Friday night Mr. Kitchin frankly admitted that in 1898 he did advocate a proposition of fusion with the Populists on a basis of the voting strength of the two parties. Then we fail to see why some of his zealous supporters have been rushing into print with denials of it. Of course his advocating the proposition was nothing against him, but the emphatic denials are not exactly understood. Those who wrote the denials owe somebody an apology.

AN ALCHEMIST IMPOSTOR.

Fate of Dubois, Who Duped Louis XIII. and Richelieu.

There have been many alchemists who claimed to be able to make gold from the baser metals. A strange adventure in this connection was that in which the dupes were persons of no less importance than Louis XIII., king of France and Navarre, the Cardinal Minister Richelieu and Francois du Tremblay, Father Joseph, called "the gray eminence." This was in the seventeenth century. The alchemist's name was Dubois. He was an ex-Capucin monk, a contemporary of Father Joseph, and he informed the latter he had the secret of manufacturing gold. At that particular moment the cardinal was short of funds for his own personal use as well as that of the king. Father Joseph induced the cardinal to believe that Providence had sent a man, a maker of gold, to help him. The cardinal, who as a rule was pretty wide awake, was on this occasion blinded by his necessities. He consented that Dubois should be allowed to experiment in the presence of the king and queen and the assembled courtiers.

In his record, "Tableau de Paris," Mercier gives the sequel to the story. A royal carriage was dispatched to fetch Dubois, his powders and his furnace and bring them to the Louvre, where in one of the galleries the highly interested witnesses were awaiting results. Dubois lighted the furnace and in a loud voice said, "May it please his majesty to command his soldiers to give me twelve musket bullets and I will turn them into gold." The bullets were handed over to a courtier, who cast them into a cupel. Dubois added a few grains of a certain powder, covered the whole with cinders and placed it over the lighted furnace. In an anxious half hour's time Dubois exclaimed, "The gold is made!" Louis XIII. permitted no one but himself to blow away the burning hot cinders. But he blew so hard that the onlookers were smothered with them. Every one cast a look at the bottom of the cupel and exclaimed, "There is gold!"

Every one was joyfully astonished. The king embraced Dubois and knighted him offhand, and the courtier who handed over the bullets was rewarded with a gift. On the suggestion of the queen the gold was assayed. A goldsmith was sent for, who declared that it was 18 carat gold, the mint standard of the coin in circulation. But no one was much impressed by that accusable fact. Dubois was at once commanded to supply 800,000 livres' ($160,000) worth of gold every week, which he undertook to produce as soon as an adequate installation had been erected. He obtained the funds required for the purpose, but delayed, with vain excuses, its realization. The cardinal lost patience, grew angry and finally had the monk incarcerated in the Chateau de Vincennes. He was convicted as an associate of the criminal "Union de Saint-Sulpice." On July 25, 1637, Dubois was hanged.—Chicago News.

The Mediterranean.

The evaporation from the surface of the Mediterranean is much greater than in the Atlantic ocean, owing to the heat coming from the African deserts and the shelter which the high mountains afford from the north winds. It is in consequence of this fact that its waters are saltier than those of the Atlantic. It is a mistake to suppose that the Mediterranean is tideless. In the Adriatic as well as between that sea and the coast of Africa the tide rises from five to seven feet.

Not So Very Far.

"Is it far from here to the next town?" asked a tourist of a man he met on a rural road.

"Well, it ain't so very fer, nor it ain't so very nigh, an' yit it ain't as nigh as might be if it wa'n't so fer as it is. Still, it'd be fether if it wa'n't so nigh, so I reckon one might say that it is betwixt an' between fer an' nigh."—Kansas City Newsbook.

A Fair Offer.

A Scottish preacher, who found his congregation going to sleep one Sunday before he had fairly begun, suddenly stopped and exclaimed:

"Brethren, it's nae fair. Gie a mon half a chance. Wait till I get along, and then, if I'm nae worth listening to, gang to sleep, but dinna gang before I get commenced. Gie a mon a chance!"—Dundee Advertiser.

The Proper Mood.

"Gee whiz!" said George for the twentieth time. "It makes me mad every time I think of the $10 I lost today. I actually feel as if I'd like to have somebody kick me."

"By the way, George," said the dear girl dreamily, "don't you think you'd better speak to father this evening?"—Philadelphia Press.

Cocaine.

Cocaine is an alkaloid of a small shrub found in Peru and Bolivia. The official name of the drug as used in medicine is cocaine sulphate, a salt derived from the shrub treated with sulphuric acid. Cocaine is composed of carbon, hydrogen and nitrotyl reduced to a sulphate. Each element of the compound has a direct influence on the nervous system, blood and lymphatics. It possesses the singular property of killing all sensation of pain in the parts where it is locally applied while elevating the mind of the patient to a high pitch of exaltation.

With Father's Music.

Bragdon, the composer, was working on his symphonic poem when the baby's lusty cry was heard from the nursery. Bragdon bore it manfully for five minutes, expecting baby's mother to come to the rescue. Then he opened the door and shouted upstairs: "What is the matter? Harry, are you teasing the baby?" "No, papa." "You must be doing something to make him cry." "No, papa—truly! All Ethel and I did was to try to sing him to sleep with your lullaby."

All the Gold IN GEORGIA Could not Buy-

Roding, Ga. August 27, 1906.
Messrs. E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ills.
Gentlemen:—
In 1897 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. Some physicians told me it was Dyspepsia, some Consumption of the Lungs, others said consumption of the Bowels. One physician said I would not live until Spring, and for four long years I existed on a little boiled milk, soda biscuits, doctors' prescriptions and Dyspepsia remedies that flooded the market. I could not digest anything I ate, and in the Spring 1902 I picked up one of your Almanacs as a poor emaciated Dyspepsia wreck will grasp at anything, and that Almanac happened to be my life savor. I bought a fifty cent bottle of KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE and the benefit I received from that bottle ALL THE GOLD IN GEORGIA COULD NOT BUY. I kept on taking it and in two months I went back to my work, as a machinist, and in three months I was well and hearty. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic.
May you live long and prosper.
Yours very truly,
G. N. CORNELL.

How Many Bricks Have You Sent Away?

That sounds like a funny question, addressed to every citizen of this town and community, but it's really a serious one.

Listen: There is now just completed a magnificent building of red brick exterior and concrete interior right in the business heart of one of the biggest of American cities. It occupies a whole block and calls itself in a large lettered sign "The Largest Monolithic Building in the World." It has many floors, with about a hundred acres of floor space. The entrances are of solid marble. The floors are beautifully tiled. Altogether it is a credit to the big city in which it stands. Oh, it's a Jim Dandy!

Now, how many bricks have you sent to the city to go into this big building? Honest, how many?

Of the hundreds of thousands of bricks put into the walls of this building the city where it stands has contributed not a single red brick. Country people, the people of small towns and cities far away from the big metropolis, have sent in the bricks for the construction of this splendid edifice.

You may have sent in a few hods of bricks yourself without knowing it.

Listen: This magnificent structure, which ornaments a city you probably never will see yourself, is built of bricks bought with the dollars of people living in towns just like ours—towns that would like to have some new brick buildings themselves now and then. Every dollar contributed to the city building fund means a nice, hefty hod of bricks for this big, beautiful skyscraper, "largest in the world" of its kind. This building was put up, through the kind donations of their unknown country cousins, by a firm that ran a small store in that city a few years ago.

But this firm conceived the cute idea of having thousands of strangers contribute bricks to build its fine, large, new store.

And the building is a Mail Order Store. See?

EUGENE ARAM'S LIFE.

The Remarkable Career of This Famous Murderer.

A SCHOLAR AND A SCOUNDREL

The Hero of Bulwer's Novel and Hood's Poem Was Really a Vile Criminal Who Abandoned Wife and Children and Knew No Remorse.

Eugene Aram, the scholar and murderer who inspired two of the masterpieces of English literature—Hood's poem and Bulwer's novel—was hanged on Aug. 6, 1756.

Aram was born in 1704 in Yorkshire. By the time he was fourteen years old he was regarded in the neighborhood as a prodigy of learning. His fame for piety and gentleness as a scholar spread, and as a result he was invited to Knaresborough to open a school in 1734. There a strange development took place in Aram's character. He formed an association with a drinking, turbulent crowd of men, the opposite of himself, among them Daniel Clark, who kept a little cobbler's shop, and Richard Houseman, a flax dresser.

In 1745 Clark married a woman with a small fortune of $1,000. Immediately he and his companions devised a scheme to rob her and her friends. Clark was to obtain all the goods he could on credit and hand them over to Aram and Houseman, who were to deposit them in a safe place. Then after securing the plunder Clark was to decamp, leaving his wife to shift for herself, and the property was to be sold and divided among the three men.

Clark went about procuring a wide variety of articles on credit. He pretended he was about to give a great wedding feast and borrowed silver tankards, salvers, spoons, etc., from whoever would lend them. As fast as the different articles were obtained Clark, accompanied by Aram and Houseman, carried them to a place called St. Robert's cave.

When Clark had "borrowed" about everything valuable his acquaintances had to lend, the plotters decided it was time for him to disappear. So in the early morning of Feb. 8, 1745, he, Aram and Houseman went to the cave to divide the spoils before Clark left. Aram and Clark had quarreled a good deal during the progress of predatory operations. At the entrance to the cave the quarrel was renewed, and Aram pushed Clark away and rained down tremendous blows on his head and chest. Clark fell dead.

Houseman, terrified at the sight and, as he said, afraid of meeting the same fate, turned and ran away. Aram did not show a particle of remorse or fear. He gathered up the booty and carried it to his house, where he buried part of it in the garden. He buried Clark's body and heaped stones over the grave. In the afternoon he went for Houseman and threatened him if he disclosed the murder and made him believe he was equally guilty in law.

Clark's disappearance was not noticed for a day or two. Then the people from whom he had "borrowed" jewelry and plate began to make inquiries. Suspicion was directed to Aram in some way. The village authorities searched his house and found a bundle containing battered plate and clothing stained with blood. Notwithstanding this, no action seems to have been taken by the authorities, nor was it suspected that Clark had been murdered. The neighbors began to jeer at the learned schoolmaster, however, and Aram suddenly left his wife and children and walked to London.

For fourteen years his family heard nothing of him. He spent the greater part of the time wandering about from place to place, at last finding a situation as usher in a school at Lynn. In June, 1758, a horse dealer who had known him in Knaresborough met him in the Lynn market. Aram denied his identity. By a singular coincidence, almost the day the horse dealer accosted the now gray haired schoolteacher, a skeleton was found by some workmen digging a pit in Thistle hill, in Knaresborough.

A country town has a keen recollection of everything that has occurred to disturb it, and immediately the disappearance of Clark fourteen years before was remembered. Houseman still alive, got drunk first and then joined the crowd of villagers looking at the exhumed skeleton. "Clark," he said with drunken gravity, "was never buried here."

The latter, still too drunk to realize the gravity of his position, muttered that Clark's body would be found in St. Robert's cave. The crowd made a rush for that place, and soon a skeleton was exhumed.

"I did not kill him!" gasped Houseman, now thoroughly sober and terrified. "It was Aram. I had no part."

Houseman was taken to the village jail, and a warrant was sworn out for Aram. When the officers took him away from the school the pupils cried. The government used Houseman as a witness to convict Aram. The latter's speech in his own defense has come down complete—a masterly attack on circumstantial evidence, showing the intellectual power of the man. Aram made a half confession the night before his execution, followed by an attempt at suicide. According to the custom of the time, his body was hung in chains, and it swung in Knaresborough forest until 1778. Years later, when the details of his crime were dim, his remarkable career attracted Hood and Bulwer, and thus the obscure, talented, perverted man became a part of English literature—Exchange.

Better Than Spanking.

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constant demand for the trouble. Mrs. M. C. Miller, Box W. No. 10, Danville, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

JAUNDICE.

It is Only a Symptom and is Not a Disease in Itself.

Jaundice, or icterus, is not a disease, but only a symptom, occurring in the course of other diseases. But it is so striking a symptom and one so easily recognized that it is often regarded as a disease in itself, while the underlying condition of which it is a symptom is looked upon as its cause.

It consists in a straining of the skin, the eyes and indeed all the tissues of the body, with the coloring matter of the bile, which is not cast out, as it should be, but is taken up by the blood and carried to all parts of the body.

It is produced in one of two ways—by obstruction to the outflow of bile or by the action of some poisonous substance which alters the constitution of the bile. The first form, "obstructive" jaundice, is the result of more or less complete closing of the channels through which the bile escapes from the liver. This obstruction may be due to plugging of the passage by gallstones, to the presence of a tumor pressing upon the passages or to inflammation and the resultant swelling of the mucous membrane lining these passages.

The other form, called "toxic" jaundice, is an accompaniment of certain general diseases, such as malaria or yellow fever, of poisoning by phosphorus and other chemical substances or of acute atrophy of the liver.

The color of the skin varies, according to the intensity of the jaundice—that is, according to the amount of bile coloring matter circulating in the blood—from a light lemon to a bright saffron hue or even a dark yellowish green. The eyes are frequently the first to show the yellow color and in mild cases may be the only parts where the jaundice is visible. The saliva, perspiration and other secretions are usually stained yellow.

There is generally an increase of perspiration. Itching also is very common, and this, like the perspiration, may be general or limited to certain parts of the body and grows worse at night.

Sufferers from jaundice, unless fever is present, usually have a slow pulse. Headache and sometimes dizziness is complained of, and the patient is likely to be exceedingly irritable.

There is no treatment for the jaundice itself. An endeavor must be made to discover the cause, and if this can be removed the skin will speedily resume its natural color, and with this will disappear the itching, the headache and the other symptoms so often associated with the jaundice.—Youth's Companion.

A Genuine Grouch.

A certain farmer noted for constant complaining was met by a friend one morning.

"Fine weather, James," said the latter.

"For them as ain't got to work," was the response.

"Your farm looks in fine condition."

"To them's as ain't got to dig in it."

"Well, James, I'm glad your wife's better."

"Them as don't have to live with her may be!"—London Family Herald.

WASHINGTON PIE.
A Wide Difference of Opinion as to Just What It Is.
Almost every one has heard of Washington pie, but there seems to be no agreement of opinion as to what member of the pie family rightly bears the name of the Father of His Country.

"Washington pie?" says the man from way down east, which is beyond Boston, repeating the question. "Why, sure I know it. There are three layers of spongy cake with two layers of jelly or strawberry preserves in between and white frosting on the top. It's bully, too, and I wish I could get it here."
"But that's not Washington pie," interrupts the woman from the west. "That's simply layer cake. Washington pie, though, is something like cake. But there are only two layers of cake, and in between is a creamy filling made of eggs and milk and sugar and a little flavoring. And you put powdered sugar on the top."

"That's Boston cream pie," chorus two persons from Boston itself, who speak with the assurance that betrays their habitat. "And, what's more, we never heard of Washington pie. Do you think it fitting to name a pie after an important historical figure?"
"I've been making Washington pie for years," interposes mildly a woman who lives in New York and isn't ashamed of it, "and my Washington pie is a pie and not a cake. I grind apples into a pulp and mix the pulp with sherry and use that as a filling for an ordinary open face pie. The completed article looks much like pumpkin pie, and it's the toothsomest thing I know."
Now, what is Washington pie?—Washington Post.

Curious Fishes of the Bahamas.
The fish found in Nassau waters are of never ending interest to the stranger, says Leslie's Weekly. With the aid of a native water glass, which is a common wooden bucket with the bottom knocked out and a glass bottom put in; it is possible to watch the finny creatures swimming about, apparently regardless of prying eyes. The parrot fish, with a body the shape and color of a goldfish, only ten times larger; the cowfish, with a comical face curiously like a caricature of its bovine sponsor; hogfish, with snouts; grouper, hine, amberjack and turbot, whose exquisitely tinted skin is dried and used by the natives as scrubbing brushes, are all there. But the most beautiful of all is the angel fish, with its blue and yellow winglike fins. Angel fish are so numerous in Nassau and their flesh is so delicate in flavor that they are a frequent item on the menu of the large tourist hotel.

A Model Young Man.
An old gentleman, strongly opposed to tobacco smoking and late hours, was introduced to a lady recently. His pet aversions formed the subject of this brief conversation. "Have you any children, madam?" "Yes, sir, a son." "Ah, indeed! Does he smoke?" "No, sir. He has never even touched a cigarette." "So much the better, madam. The use of tobacco is a poisonous habit. Does he frequent any club?" "He has never been to one in his life." "Allow me to congratulate you. From any other cause does he keep late hours?" "Never. He goes to bed directly after dinner." "A model young man, madam—a model young man! How old is he?" "Two months!"—London Family Herald.

Placing the Flower.
An amusing story is told of a head gardener who played a joke on a young woman visitor to his master's house. She was a frequent guest and had many times delighted the old fellow by her knowledge of botany. He was showing her around the grounds and houses one day when, being a bit of a wag, he conceived the idea of a little sport. "Do you know what that is, miss?" he asked respectfully, pointing to a flower. The young woman, thinking that he was inquiring about the scientific name, surveyed it critically and finally shook her head. "Don't you know?" queried the old fellow in pretended astonishment. "Why, that's a rose!" The woman joined heartily in the laugh which followed.—London Globe.

Not Very Polite.
John Clerk, afterward known as Lord Eldin, was limping down the High street of Edinburgh one day when he heard a young lady remark to her companion, "That is the famous John Clerk, the lame lawyer." He turned around and said, with his "not unwonted coarseness": "You lie, ma'am! I am a lame man, but not a lame lawyer."
Lord Justice Braxfield, too, appears to have failed in courtesy to the fair sex, for when told that a brother judge would not sit that day on account of having just lost his wife he, who was fitted with a Xantippe, replied: "Has he? That is a gude excuse indeed. I wish we had a' the same."—London Chronicle.

His "Kick."
"Say, there's a mistake in this bill you sent me the other day."
"What's wrong with it? Is it too big?"
"No, but—"
"Any mistake in the figures?"
"No, it's not that. It's—"
"Don't you think that bill has been running long enough?"
"I reckon so, but—"
"Then what are you kicking about?"
"That's what I am trying to tell you, There's a mistake in the name. You sent it to the wrong man, confound you! I don't owe you a cent and never did!"
"Oh!"—Chicago Tribune.

A Triumph of Science.
"I have been taking some moving pictures of life on your farm."
"Did you catch the hired man in motion?"
"I think so."
"Ah, science kin do anything these days!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Popular Act.
Mr. Grampus—Here, dear, is $10, and it has bothered me a little to get it for you. I think I deserve a little applause. Mrs. G.—Applause? You deserve an encore, my dear.—Pathfinder.
