AN EARNEST PLEA TO MOTHERS. WHAT THEY SHOULD TEACH THEIR DAUGHTERS.

Paper Read by Mrs. J. L. Butt Before the Mothers' Association of Winterville.

We are at this time waging a warfare in behalf of our boys, let us along with it sound a trumpet to rescue our daughters from an evil that is sapping the life of many a mother and daughter.

I have come with this message to the mothers, and especially to those who are just launching out upon life's ocean of busy work with their little ones.

Webster defines intemperance as an excess in any indulgence. We mothers and daughters are drunk with fashion and pleasure.

We need to restrain our daughters in some of their tendencies, some that sadly hinder their being the ideal women for their sphere in life.

The evil I allude to is well defined in Mary Webster's "Song of the Furbelows."

Work! work! work!
Stitching these fantastics in,
And 'tis oh! to be a slave,
And with this giddy throng,
With never a thought of a soul to save,
Or of life an eternity long.

Work! work! work!
For fashion that never flags,
But what are its wages, when human souls
Are clothed with filthy rags?
Or naked they stand in His sight
That pierceth the hearts of all,
With nothing to thank for their pitiful blank

Save folly's merciless thrall?
Click! click! click!
The tireless machine runs on
Click! click! click!
Till millions of frills are done,
Band and puffing and frill;
Frill and sashing and band,
Bows and flouncing and furbelows' still,
Crowding the brain and the hand.

Oh! women with brothers dear!
Oh! woman with husbands and sons!
'Tis not alone those trappings you wear,
Ye gay and thoughtless ones;
While stitch! stitch! stitch!
Is sown in your hearts, while sewing your gowns,
The seeds of a bitter crop.

Of selfishness, folly and pride;
Bankruptcy, ruin and crime,
Each to the other so closely allied,
Harvest unflinchingly gathered in time;
While work! work! work!
With never a moment to spend;
Except as you go through frivolity's show,
And come to mortality's end."

This poem is rich with truth and in accepting it as my sentiments I do not mean at all to decry the beautiful, for I know that God glories in things that are lovely. He evidenced that when there were so many objects of admiration placed about us.

The truth is, we have perverted the sense for the beautiful and look through other glasses than we should to find the beautiful.

To enjoy this extravagance of frills and furbelows, it requires so much of our God given time, that there can be little left for the spiritual development. I have known mothers to allow their daughters to spend one entire month in beautifying one single garment or a cover for a table, when a less elaborate one to the true sense of beauty would have been admired.

Even mothers themselves fall into this error. Yes, and I have been associated with those who call themselves teachers of children's minds, and too often found them decorating elaborate garments for a summer's outing, when they should have been planning for those sacred charges intrusted to their training. And too, I have known young ladies to spend their entire earnings for wearing apparel and other pleasures. How much like the drunkard's last dime at the saloon is this; one revelling in the drunkenness of dress, the other yielding to the wine. Another picture that comes to my mind is a mother with her five sweet little girls. She spared no pains in using her deft fingers to make them attractive, I have yet to hear a word of admonition for the soul.

There are many panoramas of this kind to be found among life's scenes.

It was my lot to be near the vicinity of Johnstown Pa., at the time of the great flood there. The trimming torn from ladies' garments and arrested by the twigs, and bushes near the river, was a source of comment for many who witnessed the scene. People who beheld the devastation spoke of the littleness of those things, and how hearts in that trying hour turned to prayer and uplifting to God. A number were found closeted in prayer.

In a town not far distant, I heard through the clerk of a store where the father of a family was the head, that the mother and daughters at this merchant's home indulged intemperately in laces, ribbons, etc. When the man failed in business, the clerk attributed it to excess of unnecessary adornments at the home.

This young man became so disgusted at such procedure that when he became the head of a family, his wife and daughters were held to the other extreme.

Oh! that a happy medium of bliss and plenty could reign!

We must remember that our girls are to become the trainers of the men of our country; how necessary then that they should not allow this frilling and furling to be taking the very strength they need to be garnering for this noble work.

The machine is a bane to many a mother's health, it takes the rosiness from many a girl's cheeks, the tucks and frills must be made.

The business man cannot afford to neglect any part of his work, he gives every detail his utmost attention. Why not we then as mothers in this engagement with God, concerning the dear children He has placed in our keeping, go to work with the same determination to succeed that the business man does.

Now let us look for a remedy for this evil, and find a way to start with our daughters, so that the false idea of beauty may not have its beginnings. It can be done by constantly using our time in instilling God's plans into their young hearts, line upon line, precept upon precept.

We send our children to Sunday school and it is the proper thing to do, but it is not the starting point. The Sunday school work serves as a refreshing shower, ordinarily reaching the surface only; the seeds must be planted, deeply rooted and constantly watered to bring the desired fruit.

Right here we can apply God's own plan, given in Deut., 6th chapter, 6, 7 verses: "And these words which I command thee this day, shall be in thy heart, and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shall talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." If the above quoted admonition was suited to those olden times, it surely cannot be out of place now.

The body would become weak and faint with one meal a day, then what can we expect of the soul, but luke warmness and indifference, when its only nourishment is a meal on Sunday, and that often a very meagre one.

There is no strength stored to help in resisting this temptation of following the practice of using so much of our precious time in making many elaborate garments. Let us find what the Prophet Isaiah says in 3rd chapter 16th verse, about the confusion caused by sin. He has it in these words: "Because the daughters of Zion are haughty and walk with stretched forth necks and wanton eyes, and making a tinkling with their feet. In that day the Lord will take away the bravery of their ornaments, and their chains, bracelets and head bands, the changeable suits of apparel, the fine linen and the veils, and there shall be burning instead of beauty." (To be continued)

Mr and Mrs. C. E. McLawhorn went to Farmville Sunday night and Tuesday night to attend a series of meetings that is being carried on this week by the Rev. Mr. Walker of the Christian church.

The farmers were kurnying up yesterday to get in their oats before it rained.

C. E. McLawhorn gathered up a wagon load of the neighbors to take to Farmville to church last night. I said a wagon load and I reckon there was a load, though there were only nine on board and two of them weighed only a little more than four hundred.

The people are talking a great deal of interest in the meeting.

There have been eight additions so far. Great interest is manifested.

FRIDAY, JUNE 12, 1908.

Politics, potatoes and baseball are all demanding attention.

People sometime want to do a thing that they get frightened off from doing.

Our man is going to land at the convention, that is the one who gets it is our man.

It is well enough to change the plan to rule with a whip when you see the people will not stand for it.

It is all over so far as Pitt county is concerned, and now everybody will wait to hear from Charlotte.

The field is now clear to the county candidates, and there is not now so much danger of their being asked who they favor for governor.

They were handsome compliments the county convention tion paid Secretary of State Grimes, Congressman Small and Solicitor Abernethy. And they all deserved it.

Some gentlemen got left in the judicial convention at Durham and also in the congressional convention at Greensboro. Some who are going up to Charlotte will meet the same fate.

As a prominent State official remarked, this gubernatorial campaign is costing the Democratic party severely. That is where the trouble comes in, and the danger is that all the cost is not yet computed.

Some folks seem to have lost all idea that the State convention is called for anything but to nominate a candidate for governor. Even one man in the county convention here Thursday wanted to adjourn as soon as delegates to the State convention had been chosen. There are just a few other offices besides governor to be filled this year, and some of them of equally as much importance to the people of the State.

Send a Check.

Now is the time when the country newspaper men are receiving letters from men they do not know, and possibly never heard of, stating the writer is a candidate for some state office and any aid the editor can bestow will be greatly appreciated. Yes, no doubt it would. On the other hand any aid these politicians can bestow the editor to recompense him for space used in his paper would be appreciated. If politicians want to advertise their business why in the dickens don't they inclose a check as evidence of good faith, for the amount of advertising they desire and send along copy properly signed, for advertising? Talk about business. If there is any business in a newspaper man giving away his space any more than a merchant giving away his goods we are unable to see where it comes in.—Snow Hill Standard-Laonic.

A LONDON FOG.

The Dense Blackness That Lasted For Two Weeks in 1813.

According to an old paper called the Mirror of the Months there is an amusing account of London fogs, which the author speaks of as "far famed." He says that November is the great month for such delicacies and adds that it is like "breathing water and the fishes too. It is also meat and drink, something between egg flip and omelette soufflé," but much more "digestible than either," and it wraps you, he continues, all around like a cloak, a patent water-proof, one which no rain ever penetrated. These were no doubt fogs of the ordinary winter type. But there have been great fogs, fogs that were remembered and talked about for years after. Such a one was that which took place on the 27th of December, 1813. This was in the days of the regent, afterward George IV.

The accounts of this celebrated fog are meager, but those that exist are sufficiently authentic and fully bear out the assertion that it was the most alarming that ever hung over London. For two weeks the whole city was in total darkness, a darkness that is described as being felt. The mails were delayed, coaches on the highroads were overturned, people were lost for days, business was at a standstill. There was not a breath of wind to carry away the smoke, which increased in density every hour. The oldest citizen had never heard tell of anything to compare with it. Added to the confusion caused by the total darkness, murders, robberies and street brawls were incessant. Few dared to walk the streets for fear of being assaulted, and the terrible silence that settled down over all was only broken by the curses of the hackney coachmen as they collided in the narrow roads or the shrieks of some wretched victim who was being murdered for his purse. The cold was intense, so much so that many of those who had lost their way in the fog were frozen to death. After this terrible state of affairs had lasted close upon a fortnight the fog lifted, and they came such a fall of snow as had never been known within the memory of man.—London Globe.

Invitations to Burglars.

Here is a bit of testimony volunteered by a retired burglar that ought to be seriously considered by women who have the habit of decking themselves out in all their jewelry every time they go into the street.

"Almost every really successful haul I ever made in the jewelry line," said he, "was the result of plans carefully laid after shadowing some woman that looked like a walking jeweler's showcase. It was not worth while wasting my talent on a house that didn't contain anything worth taking chances on. I never went into anything blindly. In order to make no mistake as to the value of the plunder I just watched the beringed, the bediamonded ladies in the streets and shops and followed them till I found out where they lived. Then when the opportunity came I sailed in. If it hadn't been for the kindness of the ladies in advertising the loot I wouldn't have been nearly so successful as I was."—New York Times.

Why He Was There.

The occasion was the annual reunion of the survivors of the 4th regiment, volunteer infantry, and it took place in a thriving city in one of the western states. Among the veterans in attendance was a soldierly, erect old man with the fire of youth still in his eye, who had journeyed across half a dozen or more states in order to meet once again his comrades of the long ago. It came his turn to address them. He rose and began:

"I have traveled 1,700 miles." Here the memories of the old days overcame him, and his voice broke. Recovering himself with an effort, he tried again:

"My dear old friends and comrades, I have traveled 1,700 miles." Once more his emotions mastered him. Dashing the tears from his eyes, he made a third attempt:

"I have traveled 1,700 miles," he blubbered, "to do the crying for this whole regiment!"

Fruit and Sugar For Horses.

Grain is not the only food on which the horse thrives. In Egypt the khedive's best mares are fed largely on currants, and these fruit fed animals are noted for their endurance and speed. Figs during the fig harvest form the food of the horses in Smyrna. They turn to it from oats or hay. The green tops of the sugar cane are fed to the horses of the West Indies, and for long weeks in many parts of Canada windfall apples form the horse's only food. In Tasmania peaches and in Arabia dates take the place of the usual hay and oats, corn and bran.

Merely a Question of Spelling.

He was the engineer of an ocean liner and prided himself on his knowledge of electricity. On one of his brief stays at home he accompanied his wife to a party. The subject of electricity coming up, he indignantly combated the idea that it was possible for two people to produce an electrical current through the body of a third by simple physical contact. His wife and a friend said they would prove it and, leading him to a window, told him to pull up his sleeves and place both hands flat on the glass. They then, on the other side, took a firm grip on his wrists. At the end of a few moments his wife said:

"Don't you feel a pain, Willy?"

"No," he replied, and returned a like negative to a second and a third inquiry.

At his third response most of the company began to laugh, and it suddenly flashed into his mind that the pronunciation of pain and pane was the same.—New York Tribune.

When I Was a Boy.

A boy who had been spending his summer in the mountains was unexpectedly joined by his father and took the opportunity to ask for a new tennis racket.

"What," cried his father, "a new tennis racket! Why, I just bought you one a month ago. No, sir, you can't have it. Why, when I was a boy I didn't have tennis rackets and all those things, let alone having new ones every month. This can't go on. Look here! What are you going to do about it yourself? Some day your sons will want a new tennis racket every five minutes. What are you going to do about it?"

"Aw," said the boy, calmly winking at his father. "I'll put up the same old gag. I'll tell 'em about when I was a boy."—Judge.

What Is the First Law of Nature?

"Self preservation is the first law of nature," answers Johnny Jones.

Correct, Johnny. Go right up to the head of the class.

This law applies to a community as well as to an individual. Under the severe operation of this law a town that does not take care of itself, that does not look after its own interests first, that does not look out for Number One, soon falls into a bad way.

That's just as sure as shootin'. It's the law.

We must obey the law or take the consequences. If we in this town and community do not work together for our own good, the mutual good of all of us, in all lines of business, we have only ourselves to blame if the place slides down the inclined plane instead of climbing the golden ladder of prosperity and progress.

For instance, if we do our retail trading with big city stores that have no interest in us except to get our money and keep it, local trade must suffer and shrink, town property values and farm land values must decrease—and there you are!

Johnny Jones, who knows the law, is a wise lad, but how about his papa and mamma?

Do they obey the first law as applied to the old home place? If they don't, Johnny may have to apply the law to himself when he grows up. He may have to go to the city to make a living.

Let's all think it over.

A NOISY CONVENTION.

The In Which Comanches and Panthers Were Outcried.

The noisiest, the jolliest, the most exciting and perhaps least logical campaign was that of 1890. William Henry Harrison, hero of an Indian victory at Tippecanoe, a plain old man who had lived, his opponents sneeringly said, in a log cabin decorated with coonskins and had drunk hard cider, was selected by Thurlow Weed as a better candidate than Henry Clay. The issues between Van Buren, the Democratic candidate, and Harrison were not clearly drawn, but the adventurous circumstances of Harrison's early life were skillfully utilized for theatrical effects. Processions miles long with log cabins, elder barrels and coonskin caps on poles stretched from state to state. Glee clubs were a feature of the campaign, and the Indian fighter was fairly sung into office.

In the convention of 1890 began the modern custom of cheering and counter cheering. The Seward contingent gave a parade the day of the convention. While they were marching Lincoln supporters filled the Wigwam. With the naming of the candidates began the cheering. Murat Halstead said that when Seward was nominated and seconded "the shouting was absolutely frantic, shrill and wild. Comanches or panthers never struck a higher note or gave screams with more infernal intensity. Looking from the stage over the vast amphitheater, nothing was to be seen below but thousands of hats—a black, mighty swarm of hats flying with the velocity of horns over a mass of human heads, most of the mouths of which were open."

But when Lincoln's nomination was seconded the west was heard from. "I thought the Seward yell could not be surpassed," said Halstead, "but the Lincoln boys were clearly ahead and, feeling their victory as there was a lull in the storm, took deep breaths all around and gave a scream that was positively awful and accompanied it with stamping that made every plank and pillar in the building quiver."

On the third ballot Lincoln was nominated. The shouting was so deafening that the cannon which was discharged on the roof of the building could not be heard inside. — Chicago Record-Herald.

PERILOUS SLEEPWALKING.

The Tragedy on Which Bellini Wrote His Celebrated Opera.

Somnambulists can maintain their footing in the most perilous places so long as they remain in a state of somnambulism, but if suddenly awakened they instantly lose their self possession and balance.

On one occasion a young woman living in Dresden was seen at midnight walking on the edge of the roof of her house. Her family were immediately told of her plight, but were afraid to go near her. The neighbors gathered about the house and placed mattresses and blankets along the street in hopes that they might save her in case she fell.

She danced for over an hour on the slanting roof, apparently retaining her balance without difficulty, and every now and then she would advance to the edge and bow to the silent crowd standing many feet below her.

At last she climbed down on to the wide gutter which ran in front of the window through which she had come, with the evident intention of re-entering the house. The crowd watching her so intently drew a sigh of relief. But, unfortunately, her terrified relatives, thinking to assist her, had placed two lighted candles in the room near the window, and as she approached the light fell directly in her eyes.

Instantly the shock awakened her, and she swayed back and forth in her perilous position; then, with a frightful scream, she fell headlong to the ground. She was fatally hurt and died in a few hours. It was on this tragedy that Bellini wrote his celebrated opera "La Sonnambula."—Washington Post.

The Tragic Loco Weed.

The abominable Mexican plant known as the loco weed has the peculiar property of making irrational both men and beasts who partake of it. Horses and cattle out on the prairies after grazing upon it go crazy, and a "locoed" pony will perform all kinds of queer antics. It is said that if a man comes under its spell he never regains his senses, the insanity produced by it being incurable. It is said that the loss of mind of the ill fated Carlotta was no doubt due to the fact that some enemy drugged her with a preparation of loco, although history has it that she went insane by reason of her husband's execution.—Baltimore American.

A Gentle Husband.

Woman (to her husband, busily engaged writing)—My dear, correctly speaking, what is a dentist? Husband (crossly)—Derived from dent, French for teeth, a man who pulls teeth. (Husband settles down to writing again.) Wife—My dear, you said this morning that linguist was derived from the Latin lingua, a tongue. Husband (crossly)—Yes. Wife—Well, dear, is a linguist a man who pulls out tongues? Husband—No, madam, but I wish he did.—London Answers.

The Best Man.

"Why is it," asked the dear girl, "that the bridegroom's attendant is called the best man?" "I suppose it's because he is the best off," growled the fussy old bachelor.—Kansas City Newsbook.

Considerate Censorship.

"Does your father know I love you?" "No. Papa isn't very well, and we've kept it from him."—Harper's Weekly.

What Shall we have for dessert.

Old Dances In Old Times.

In Edward Scott's "Dancing In All Ages" are some curious details about the dances of old England.

"Joan Standeron" was a "jolly dance" in Mr. Scott's definition, for before it was ended each lady had kissed all the gentlemen twice, and each man had been equally enterprising. Mary Stuart danced the "Volta," though "not so high and so disposedly" as Elizabeth. In King Charles's time people danced "Trenchmore," the "Cushion Dance," "Omnium Gatherum" and "Hoite cum Toite."

"All In a Garden Green," "Gathering of Peasods," "Lumps of Pudding," "Under and Over," "The Bath," "The Slaughter House" and "Have at Thy Coat, Old Woman," are dances not quite so old.

Lot's of proof that D.ah's Kidney Pills do this.

A. A. Tyson, 124 Lexington street, Rocky Mount, N. C., says: "I feel it my duty to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I used them and found them to be a valuable kidney remedy. For years my kidneys were in a disordered condition and their action was so frequent that I was obliged to rise several times during the night, thus being unable to obtain my proper rest. I also had dull pains across my loins and was bothered by a constant dull backache. Having heard about Doan's Kidney Pills I decided to try them and procured a supply. AYDEN ITEMS.

Newsy Notes From a Hustling Town, Briefly Told.

Ayden, N. C., June 12, 1908. Mayor J. F. Barwick attended the convention yesterday.

Amos Tyson has accepted a position in the barber shop with J. N. Alexander.

There seem to be right many lady visitors in Ayden whose names could we secure we would gladly appreciate. Friends help us to make the Ayden department in The Reflector attractive by sending us the news. It will be of great benefit to us all and I assure you no one will appreciate your kindness more highly than ourselves and to see the old town grow under your assistance and influence will certainly be pleasing.

In the opera house here on June 17th, there will be presented a play "Forbidding the Banns," for the benefit of the Ayden band. It is going to be good and everybody should come out to help the band.

Several attended the convention from here Thursday.

The stork visited the home of W. E. Hooks Wednesday evening and left a charming and musical young miss. There are four at Ed's house now, three girls and a young man, a quartette he says that can't be beat.

Miss Meta Mewborne came up from Kinston Thursday to visit Miss Helen Quinerly.

Charlie Nobles and wife, of Petersburg, are here on a visit to the parents of Mr. Nobles.

The Knights of Pythias had an ice cream supper Wednesday evening at which was present many young ladies.

W. E. Lyon is quite sick at Hotel Carolina with appendicitis. Mrs. Bettie Braxton, an aged lady, who has been very sick for a long time was taken to the hospital at Kinston Wednesday for treatment.

Miss Cora Litchfield is visiting at the home of Elias Turnage.

J. A. Griffin is shipping many of the Nelson tobacco trucks from here to South Carolina.

Our town fathers are having decided improvements made on Lee street. They are having a very deep ditch dug in which to place tiling after which if they will take Third street, then fill up the lockup we believe our town will be well and thoroughly drained. Our aldermen are a fine business set of gentlemen and seem to sincerely appreciate the position they occupy.

It is good news to learn that the Pythians are going to build a Pythian orphanage within the next two years, either at Greensboro, Asheville or Charlotte.

About $20,000 has been raised, a committee appointed to secure site and make all arrangements necessary.

We saw a picture Tuesday, made by our photographer, B. F. Manning, of the farm of Mr. Dick Wingate just two miles from Ayden. The first picture showed a section of 12 acres in tobacco all evenly topped about

Greenville Cotton Market, reported by J. R. & J. G. Moye

Middling 9 3/8

5 feet high, the team and laborers at work. It was beautiful. Mr. Wingate is one of our largest farmer and his entire crop so far this year is said to be the finest in the county. He is a stirring man and the grass has got to jump if it grows under his feet. Besides he is a clever all round good fellow.

Trip to Charlotte.

The fare from Greenville to Charlotte and return to the State convention is $10.30, and the outlook this far ahead is that the convention will be worth the price. You can leave Greenville at 7.10 a. m., and reach Charlotte that afternoon. There will doubtless be many besides delegates to go from this section of the State.

Boys' Brigade.

The boys of classes 3 and 7 of the Memorial Baptist Sunday school have formed a brigade. Thursday night in the Star warehouse they had their first meeting and drill, being instructed by Mr. Z. T. Broughton, Jr. They made a good beginning.

Moonlight Sail Tonight.

On account of the rain Thursday night the moonlight sail by the ladies of the Episcopal church was postponed until tonight. The boat will leave the wharf at nine o'clock. You are invited to join the party.

Being overstocked with laces and embroideries, we will begin Wednesday June 10, and sell our entire line at 10 per cent. on New York cost, and run for 2 weeks. J. F. Davenport Co. 6 10 2wkd

Getting Out of a Corner.

"What a beautiful lounge!"
"Yes. That's a birthday present from my husband. He always gives me a present that costs him as many dollars as I am years old."
"That's nice of him. It reconciles one to growing old. By the way, I have a lounge at home like that, but not nearly as fine, and we paid $38 for it."
"Is that all? This—this didn't cost nearly as much as that."—Chicago Tribune.

A Rebound.

Two smart Alecks from the city thought they would pass a joke upon Father Haines, the country parish priest. "Have you heard the good news, which, if true, will put you out of business?" "What is it?" asked the aged priest. "Why, the devil is dead." The old man replied, lifting his hands and placing them on the heads of the young men: "Oh, poor fatherless children! What will become of you?"—Kansas City News Book.
