PARENTS ARE NEGLECTFUL

Kindly Admonition to Boys and Girls of Greenville.

In the Memorial Baptist church Sunday night, Rev. J. E. Ayscue gave a short sermon that so fitted present day conditions that every parent, and every boy and girl, in Greenville should have heard it. The sermon was an appeal to parents to be more careful with their children, and was spoken in utmost kindness and without censure or fault finding.

First the sermon applied to boys and the great danger in parents allowing them to roam the streets at will after nightfall. The boy who spends his nights until bed time on the streets is open to the attacks of vice and readily falls a victim to swearing, smoking, drinking and other evils.

The portion of the sermon that applied to girls was indeed most timely. They were urged to be modest, refined, gentle, retiring. The disposition to spend their time wandering up and down the street robs them of these characteristics that every woman should possess. He referred with regret and warning to the habit of so many girls spending much time on the street, their boisterousness in greeting each other and those opposite of sex, the use of very unbecoming language, and making the street, instead of the home, the place of social intercourse. The streets are public thoroughfares, and are not the place for women of modesty to be indulging in frivolities and sociables.

Some good results ought to follow that sermon.

Electric Theatre to Reopen.

We are informed that the moving picture show at Five Points is to resume operations to-morrow night. There seems to have been quite a lot of difficulties in the way of this enterprise in Greenville, but now, so we understand, there is a prospect for its future permanency. The show starts up under practically the same management, but owned by a different firm. The reason of its recent interval of inactivity was because of some trouble connected with the former owners, but it is expected and hoped that the present owners will run the show in a business like manner and that this innocent means of amusement will prove of benefit to the community.

IN MEMORIAM.

Farmville, N. C. June 11, 1908
To another has come the Master's summons: "I have need of thee, come up higher."

On June the ninth the earthly career of Mrs. Ada Fields Thorne closed, and her sweet spirit winged its way back to the God who gave it.

From the dust of the weary highway,
From the smart of sorrow's rod,
Into the Royal Presence
She has gone, the guest of God.

She was so well and happy only a few weeks ago, it seems hard, so hard to realize she will be with us on earth no more.

How long we live, not years, but actions tell;
They live twice who live the first life well.

Her first life was lived well, and to the righteous the separation will not be long, but soon they may dwell together in the eternal city of God.

She was married to Mr. John T. Thorne about five years ago. Their union seemed to be a perfect one, for a happier home or more congenial, loving spirits are seldom found.

The home now is so sad and desolate to the husband who survives her. Soon after her marriage she united with the M. E. church of Farmville, of which she lived an earnest, active, consecrated member until her death. She was organist and leader in church work and every movement for the uplifting of humanity.

Hers was a large and noble soul, conscientious in every duty.

A true and devoted friend through life it has been my sweet privilege to know her, and never have I found her false to a trust.

For several years she has taught music and how fortunate are the pupils who have been under her sweet gentle influence.

A large concourse of sorrowing friends and relatives followed her remains to the church and to their final resting place in the family burial ground.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful.

How sweetly must the parting summons come

To her, who finds at night her task well done,
And calmly waits to hear, at set of sun,
The Master say; "It is enough, come home."

Like children, weary when the day is done,
Softly in loving arms are lulled to rest,
So tenderly upon the Master's breast
His well beloved sleep, and wake at home.

Bingham School.

We have the Bingham school catalogue, showing pupils from Massachusetts southward to Mexico, 2,500 miles, and from California eastward, 18,000 miles, to the Philippines.

Col. Bingham has introduced spoken French, German, and Spanish, taught by a Master of Arts of Harvard, with five years of study abroad.

The destruction of 1,200 pupils in school fires since 1891, all in high building, 180 in Collinwood, Ohio, March 4th, emphasizes this school's single story building, with 80 doors and 100 windows as ground floor fire escapes.

The school is full, and refuses pupils every year. See advertisement.

Mr. Alfred James Dead.

Mr. Alfred James, one of the county's oldest citizens, died Thursday, June 11, at his home in Carolina township. In January he had a severe case of pneumonia, and had been confined to his bed ever since. Sometimes he could sit up for an hour but was never able to walk any more. He bore his suffering with all patience, at first he was very anxious to get well and hoped to be able to walk by his 84th birthday, March 12th, but toward the last he was willing to die and said he was going to rest. We feel sure that he has gone there, still it was hard for the family to give him up.

He was a good neighbor, all ways doing something for his community, never had a dispute or lawsuit with anybody. Was a true Christian, having belonged to the Primitive Baptist church at Flat Swamp for 29 years, and no man could be truer to his church.

He had been twice married, his last wife having preceded him into eternity by five years. One of his sons with his family has lived with him since her death. He was a native of Pitt county and served in the 17th N. C. regiment as a Confederate soldier, fighting in the battle of Seven Fines and with Lee in the battle of the Wilderness.

Eight children, fifty-six grand children, and thirty-five great-grand children, besides a host of friends, are left to mourn their loss, but their loss is his eternal gain.

The funeral services were conducted by Elders Roberson and Lawrence and the body was laid to rest in the family burying ground. M.

Notice to Sunbeams.

The Sunbeam Society of the Baptist Sunday school will meet at the church Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, to arrange for children's day exercises. Every member is urged to be present, especially those who will take part in the exercises.

Mrs. Marina Daniel, widow of the late Mr. Beverly Daniel, died about 9 o'clock Saturday night, at her home in South Greenville. The remains were taken Sunday for interment in the family burial ground near Pactolus.

People Tell Each Other About Good Things.

Fourteen years ago few people in the world knew of such a preparation as a powder for the feet. Today after the genuine merit of Allen's Foot-Ease has been told year after year by one gratified person to another, there are millions who would as soon go without a dentifrice as without Allen's Foot-Ease. It is a cleanly, wholesome, healing, anti-epitic powder to be shaken into the shoes, which has given rest and comfort to tired and aching feet in all parts of the world. It cures while you walk. Over 30,000 testimonials of cures of smarting, swollen, perspiring feet. It prevents friction and wear of the stockings and will save your stocking bill ten times its cost each year. Imitations pay the dealer a larger profit, otherwise you would never be offered a substitute when you ask for Allen's Foot-Ease, the original powder for the feet. Imitations are not advertised because they are not permanent. For every genuine article there are many imitations. The imitator has no reputation to sustain—the advertiser has. It stands to reason that the advertised article is the best, otherwise the public would not buy it and the advertising could not be continued. When you ask for an article advertised in this paper, see that you get it. Refuse imitations.

N. & I. College.

We desire to call attention to the advertisement of the State Normal and Industrial College which appears in this issue. Every year sees a steady growth in this great institution devoted to the higher education of the women of North Carolina. The McIver memorial building provision for which was made by the last general assembly, is now in course of erection and will be ready for occupancy at the opening of the fall term.

The college last year had a total enrollment of 930 students. Ninety-two counties were represented. Nine-tenths of all the graduates of this institution have taught in the schools of North Carolina.

The college dormitories are furnished by the State and board is provided at actual cost. Two hundred appointments to the dormitories, apportioned among the several counties according to population, will be awarded to applicants about the middle of July. Students who may wish to secure one of these appointments should make application before July 15th.

Now for some more claims for their respective managers.

They have all spoken but Mecklenburg, and she will talk tomorrow.

We hope no scrap will result from the joint debate in Charlotte tonight.

They are yet not far enough out of the woods to say who will get the nomination for governor.

The silliest talk is on the part of those who say they will not vote for so-and-so if he is nominated.

Those expecting to be colonels on the governor's staff should wait until after the election to have their measure taken for a uniform.

The several county candidates for the same offices are not imitating the candidates for governor in employing managers to conduct their campaign.

C. F. King returning and surrounding himself to the Boston authorities, is more evidence that a fugitive finds dodging a hard thing to do successfully.

If Charlotte could charge a good admission for the joint debate it would raise enough revenue to meet all the expense connected with the convention. The thing will draw like a prize fight.

It might be expected that after such a timely sermon as was delivered by Rev. J. E. Ayscue in Memorial Baptist church, Sunday night, fewer of our fair inhabitants would select the street as a place of rendezvous. Time will tell.

With the teachers, the bankers, the dentists, the doctors, the lawyers, the politicians, the secret orders, the firemen, the old soldiers and the religious workers all holding conventions, and the baseball aggregations filling in for good measure, there are not many stay-at-homes.

The seating of practically all the Taft delegates by the contest committee in session at Chicago in advance of the convention, is said to give him enough delegates to secure his nomination on the first ballot. At this rate it does not look like the convention will be long enough for Chicago to get a rake off of the delegates.

Charlotte gets the biggest end of the fun as usual. Mecklenburg waited to be the last county to hold primaries and Mr. Kith and Mr. Craig have been making a warm canvass there the last few days. And somehow Charlotte got up a joint debate between them for tonight. However, we doubt if any good will come out of it beyond the amusement of the audience.

A WEST POINT INCIDENT.

How Jefferson Davis Was Caught at Benny Havens'.

Jefferson Davis enjoys the distinction of being in the first lot of cadets court martial for drinking at Benny Havens'. In the summer of 1825 the corps was in camp. The tents had no floors, and one Sunday a deluge of rain drowned out the quarters of Davis and others. He, with four companions, Theophilus Mead, Samuel J. Hays, James Allison and James F. Swift, set out in search of a comfortable shelter. They reached Benny's before they found it. While they were indulging in comforting drinks Captain Hitchcock, who was passing, heard sounds of rejoicing and stepped in. He testified that some of the cadets had "a certain wildness of countenance which is produced oftentimes by the use of ardent spirits." They were so ready to explain the situation to him that he confessed to "some difficulty in resisting" their advances, and one of them was "familiar with myself beyond the rules of propriety and discipline." Of Davis he said, "He exhibited extreme embarrassment, which might have proceeded from being found in the circumstances I stated, but a part of it I attributed to the use of spirituous liquors."

Davis now first appears as a strict constructionist. He maintained that there were two reasons why the cadets should be acquitted, first, because the regulations forbidding visits to Benny's, though known to the corps, had not been officially promulgated, and, second, because cider and porter were not "spirituous liquors," that this was the opinion of the corps as well as of the greatest chemists. Davis had Major Worth to testify that "his deportment as a gentleman has been unexceptionable." Each cadet made a formal written defense also. That of Davis dwells upon the first of the two reasons named above. It ends with the following sentiment: "It is better a hundred guilty should escape than one righteous person be condemned."—Professor Walter L. Fleming in Metropolitan Magazine.

Her Life's Entertainment.

The woman with the purple geraniums on her hat was talking to her companion on the car.

"I went to the doctor this afternoon," she said, "and yet there isn't a thing wrong with me, and I knew it. But honestly—say, you'll never repeat this, will you?—my doctor always has my office full of people ahead of me when I get there, and he never closes the transom between his consultation room and the waiting room. I just entertained myself by sitting there and listening to the silly complaints people have. You never heard anything so amusing as the different things people tell the doctor. Most of the patients get all excited about their ailments and talk so loud that you can hear everything they say out in the next room. You bet when I go in I don't talk so loud, because I know how foolish it sounds."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

She Figured It Out.

A woman stood so long on the curbstone of a crowded corner in the retail shopping district that a policeman, noting the fact, asked if he could direct her or be of assistance in any way.

"No," she replied. "My two children jumped away from me into the crowd about fifteen minutes ago, calling out that they would be back soon. What attracted them I don't know. But they'll be back all right, and if they didn't find me where they left me they'd be in trouble at once, don't you see?"

Sure enough, the youngsters appeared soon after.

"Upon my word, that's the most sensible mother I've seen since I left home," said the cop. "Nine women out of ten would have rushed around in every direction looking for the kids, and neither would have found the other."—New York Globe.

A WARSHIP TEST.

The Unexpected Beat to General Quarters at Midnight.

The ship is lying at anchor in a distant port. It is night, and nothing is heard but the tramp of the sentry on the forecabin and the ripple of water at the gangway.

Only the officer of the deck, the quartermaster and the guard are awake. The entire crew are below decks and dreaming in their hammocks.

The cabin door opens and the captain steps forth softly, fully dressed and wearing his sword and revolver. He speaks in a low tone to the officer of the deck, who sends an orderly forward with a message. In a moment the orderly returns, bringing with him the drummer, who stands silently at the mast, drumsticks in hand, watching the commander.

"Eight bells"—midnight—is struck. At a silent signal from the commanding officer the drummer poises his sticks an instant, then sounds the long roll, or "alarm," which is at once followed by the quick beat to "general quarters."

Instantly the scene changes to one of apparently the utmost confusion. Four hundred men leap from their hammocks. Passing a few turns of the lashings around them, they throw them into their "nettings," then spring to their stations at the batteries and cast loose the guns.

A moment more and a bright flash and roar from the forecabin pivot gun bursts upon the stillness and gloom of the night, followed quickly by the broadside battery.

Each gun is fired once, a blank charge, but enough to show that the gun is in good order and ready for service.

As suddenly the pandemonium subsides. Confusion gives place to silence and order and not a sound is heard, but the battle lanterns flashing along the crowded deck reveal the well-disciplined crew standing at their quarters, every man equipped with cutlass and pistol, silent and alert. Sponges, rammers, supply boxes and battle axes litter the deck; everything is provided and ready as for action, while the captain, accompanied by the executive officer (the first lieutenant), with an orderly bearing a lantern, makes a thorough inspection fore and aft and below, including the powder division, magazines and shell rooms, to see that nothing is lacking which would be required in real action.

At the touch of the drum the ship has been changed from deathlike stillness to readiness for battle, every officer and man at his station, armed, silent, expectant—and all in less than three minutes!—Chicago News.

Peculiar Qualifications.

How Many Bricks Have You Sent Away?

That sounds like a funny question, addressed to every citizen of this town and community, but it's really a serious one. Listen: There is now just completed a magnificent building of red brick exterior and concrete interior right in the business heart of one of the biggest of American cities. It occupies a whole block and calls itself in a large lettered sign "The Largest Monolithic Building In the World." It has many floors, with about a hundred acres of floor space. The entrances are of solid marble. The floors are beautifully tiled. Altogether it is a credit to the big city in which it stands. Oh, it's a Jim Dandy!

Now, how many bricks have you sent to the city to go into this big building? Honest, how many?

Of the hundreds of thousands of bricks put into the walls of this building the city where it stands has contributed not a single red brick. Country people, the people of small towns and cities far away from the big metropolis, have sent in the bricks for the construction of this splendid edifice.

You may have sent in a few hods of bricks yourself without knowing it.

Listen: This magnificent structure, which ornaments a city you probably never will see yourself, is built of bricks bought with the dollars of people living in towns just like ours—towns that would like to have some new brick buildings themselves now and then. Every dollar contributed to the city building fund means a nice, hefty hod of bricks for this big, beautiful skyscraper, "largest in the world" of its kind. This building was put up, through the kind donations of their unknown country cousins, by a firm that ran a small store in that city a few years ago.

But this firm conceived the cute idea of having thousands of strangers contribute bricks to build its fine, large, new store.

And the building is a Mail Order Store. See?

A ROMANCE OF STEEL

The Rise of a Great Industry and Enormous Fortunes.

KELLY AND THE AIR BLAST.

The Flash of Genius Which Provided the World With a New Metal—Robert Mushet's Device—Captain Bill Jones and Andrew Carnegie.

As late as the middle of the last century cheap steel was unknown. It was then sold at 25 cents a pound. The railroads were using iron rails which wore out in less than two years, and the total output of iron and steel in a year was less than is now made in four days.

Then came to William Kelly, a Pittsburg Irish-American, that flash of genius which provided the world with a new metal, something as strong as steel and as cheap as iron.

Kelly was an iron maker and needed charcoal. In time all the wood near his furnaces was burned, and the nearest available source of supply was seven miles distant. To cart his charcoal seven miles meant bankruptcy unless he could invent a way to save fuel. One day he was sitting in front of the "finery fire" when he suddenly sprang to his feet, with a shout, and rushed to the furnace. At one edge he saw a white hot spot in the yellow mass of molten metal. The iron at this spot was incandescent. It was almost gaseous. Yet there was no charcoal—nothing but the steady blast of air. Like a flash the idea leaped into his excited brain—there was no need of charcoal; air alone for fuel.

But people said he was crazy when Kelly asserted that pig iron could be changed into malleable iron by the air blast, for every iron maker believed in those days that cold air would chill hot iron. "Some crank will be trying to burn ice next," said one manufacturer, and Kelly, through lack of means, could not turn his idea into the success he deserved.

Then, seven years later, came Bessemer, who made the new process a commercial success by the invention of his celebrated "converter" and received $10,000,000, worldwide fame and a knighthood as his reward. Kelly received $500,000 and comparative oblivion, although his idea was the nucleus of the Bessemer process by which iron is purified from carbon by the direct introduction of oxygen, for when Bessemer applied for and obtained a United States patent for his "pneumatic process" Kelly claimed priority for his invention, and his claim was allowed by the patent office.

Another pioneer of the steel trade, Robert F. Mushet, a Scotsman, who hit upon a device for removing a difficulty that baffled Kelly and Bessemer, fared even worse than Kelly, for he lost his patent by failing to pay the necessary fees and in his later years was dependent upon a pension of $1,500 which he received annually from Bessemer.

The difficulty which Mushet removed was this: "The air blast clears the molten metal of carbon and of all impurities, including sulphur and phosphorus. But a certain quantity of carbon is necessary to harden the metal into the required quality of steel. Instead of endeavoring to stop the process at exactly the right moment, Mushet asked, 'Why not first burn-out all the carbon and then pour back the exact quantity that you need?' This was a simple device, but no one had thought of it before."

The man who took the invention of Kelly and Bessemer into his hands, developed it into one of the wonders of the world and made the Carnegie millions was Captain William R. Jones—Bill Jones, as he was known—who seemed to live with the sole desire of toppling over the idea that England owned the steel trade. He could have been a millionaire many times over, but he cared little for money. When he was offered a partnership he replied:

"No, Mr. Carnegie, I don't know anything about business, and I don't want to be bothered with it. I've got trouble enough here in these works. I'll tell you what you can do—these were his exact words—"you can give me a thundering big salary."

"After this, captain," replied Carnegie, "you shall have the salary of the president of the United States—$25,000."

The famous scrap heap policy was originated by Jones. He did not believe in waiting until his machinery was worn out. The moment that an improvement was invented old machinery was dragged to the scrap heap and the latest devices put in its place. He made the shareholders gasp on several occasions by asking permission to smash up $500,000 worth of machinery that was as good as new, but outgrown. Jones died, as he had lived, in the midst of an industrial battle at the head of his men. He was killed in an accident in the company's works. "Carnegie, looking upon poor Jones as he lay in the hospital, sobbed like a child."—"The Romance of Steel," by Herbert N. Casson.

The Wind. The senator pushed into the crowd that surrounded the automobile. "What is the trouble here?" he inquired.

"Punctured tire," replied a man with a dinner pail. "Make a speech into it, will you, senator?"—New York Press.

Inquisitive people are the funnels of conversation. They do not take in anything for their own use, but merely to pass it to another.—Steele.

A Subtle Fie.

An old negro was brought before a justice in Dover. It seemed that Uncle Mose had fallen foul of a bulldog while in the act of entering the henhouse of the dog's owner.

"Look here, Uncle Mose," the justice said, "didn't I give you ten days last month for this same thing? Wasn't it the same henhouse you were trying to get in? What have you to say for yourself?"

Uncle Mose scratched his head. "Marse Willyum, yo' sent me ter de pen fer tryin' ter steal some chickens, didn't ye?"

"Yes; that was the charge."

"An' don't the law say yo' can't be charged twice with the same 'fense?"

"That no man shall be twice placed in jeopardy for the identical act, yes."

"Den, sah, yo' das hab ter let me go, sah. Ah war after de same chickens, sah!"

Not His Kind.

Two members of a well established firm that does business in the wholesale district indulged in the following dialogue the other afternoon:

Junior Partner—Why didn't you give that man a chance? We need another clerk here, and I rather like his looks.

Senior Partner—I liked his looks, too, but he's no good.

Junior Partner—How do you know that?

Senior Partner—When a man who is looking for a job comes to me and says, "I suppose you don't want to hire any one today, do you?" that's enough. If he had anything in him, he'd come right out and say what he meant. If he supposed we didn't want to hire any one why did he waste our time and his by coming in to bother us?

Seek the Truth.

There is a path that leads to truth so surely that any one who will follow it must needs reach the goal whether his capacity be great or small. And there is one guiding rule by which a man will find this path and keep himself from straying when he has found it. This golden rule is, Give unqualified assent to no propositions but those the truth of which is so clear and distinct that they cannot be doubted.—Descartes.

A Wonderful Fellow.

There are many kinds of celebrity. When Haydon, the painter, visited Stratford he held forth about Shakespeare to some rustics he met in a wayside inn. They told him that Stratford then contained "another wonderful fellow, one John Cooper."

"Why, what has he done?"

"Why zur, I'll tell 'ee. He's lived ninety years in this here town, man and boy, and never had the toothache!"

A PECULIAR SPIDER.
He Catches Birds as Big as Larks in His Mammoth Web.
Far up in the mountains of Ceylon there is a spider that spins a web like bright yellowish silk, the central net of which is five feet in diameter, while the supporting lines, or guys, as they are called, measure sometimes ten or twelve feet, and, riding quickly in the early morning, you may dash right into it, the stout threads twining round your face like a lace veil, while, as the creature that has woven it takes up his position in the middle, he generally catches you right in the nose, and, though he seldom bites or stings, the contact of his large body and long legs is anything but pleasant. If you forget yourself and try to catch him, bite he will, and, though not venomous, his jaws are as powerful as a bird's beak, and you are not likely to forget the encounter.
The bodies of these spiders are very handsomely decorated, being bright gold or scarlet underneath, while the upper part is covered with the most delicate slate colored fur. So strong are the webs that birds the size of larks are frequently caught therein, and even the small but powerful scaly lizard falls a victim. A writer says that he has often sat and watched the yellow monster—measuring, when waiting for his prey, with his legs stretched out, fully six inches—striding across the middle of the net and noted the rapid manner in which he winds his stout threads round the unfortunate captive.
He usually throws the coils about the head until the wretched victim is first blinded and then choked. In many unfrequented dark nooks of the jungle you come across most perfect skeletons of small birds caught in these terrible snares.

Violet Ink the Cheapest.
"Look here, you, a literary man can't afford the extravagance of violet ink."
The literary man tore thoughtfully a pendent piece of leather from the sole of his shoe.
"I know," he admitted, "that violet ink costs thrice as much as black, but black corrodes a pen in a week, whereas violet is noncorrosive, and with its use it is possible to make one pen last six or seven months. The late Russell Sarg, who used violet ink exclusively in his office, revealed this great truth to me during my brief clerical career in his office."—Exchange.

Didn't Want to Be Singular.
It was in the drawing room after dinner that they discussed an absent maiden friend's bad points with the usual grim and scathing glee. Having thoroughly dissected her personal appearance, they next paid attention to her mental shortcomings.
"She is a very singular girl," spoke the one.
"Yes, indeed," responded her companion. "But, then, that is not her fault, for I never saw a girl so anxious to be plural."—Argonaut.

Where Pat Made a Mistake.
"Oh," sobbed Mrs. Casey, "some man told me husband, Pat, that he'd have his pants pressed be lettin' th' steam roller run over them, an' Pat troid th' scheme!"
"Well, ply do ye cry?" asked the friend, Mrs. Garrity.
"Oh," wailed the wife, "Pat forgot t' take th' pants off first!"—Judge.

Usually the way.
"A man likes to heat; hissef talk so well," said Uncle Eben, "dat mos' conversation looks jes' like two people impatiently waitin' deir turns to say sum-pleen."—Washington Star.
