MAJ. H. A. LONDON.

Chatham County Looks to Convention to Name Him for Corporation Com.

To the Editor of The Observer:
The Democracy of Chatham county will present to the State convention at Charlotte on the 24th the name of Maj. H. A. London for the office of corporation commissioner, and I desire, through the columns of your paper, to give a few reasons why the nomination of Major London should be made.

Although a beardless boy at Appomattox, as soon as he was of age in 1868 he began to make speeches for the Democratic party and has ever since continued to advance the cause of Democracy with tongue, pen and purse not only in this county but wherever he was called in different sections of the State. But it is not of his party service (which is admitted by all) that I wish to speak, but of his peculiar fitness for the office to which he laudably aspires. Besides being of judicial temperament, as well as training, having successfully practiced law for many years, Major London possesses excellent business qualifications, being of large business experience, and would equitably consider all matters coming before the commission doing the fair thing by both the people and the corporations having business before that body. As a leading State paper recently expressed it: "He could not be carried off his feet and made to do an unfair thing by clamor; neither could he be wheedled into granting improper concessions to corporations."

Chatham county has not had a State officer in three-quarters of a century and confidently looks to the Democracy of the State to nominate for corporation commissioner one who is in every way qualified in fitness, party service and location.

STATE NEWS.

Ex-Sheriff W. T. Knight, of Edgecombe, died Sunday in his 55th year. He was sheriff of the county from 1900 to 1906.

A building near Lexington in which seven boys gathered Sunday to get out of a storm, was struck by lightning. One of the boys was instantly killed and four others severely shocked.

A 16 year-old son of Dr. I. M. Mercer, of Rocky Mount, was drowned Saturday while swimming in the river with some companions.

Some Good Hustling.

D. J. Whichard, Jr., showed a good eye for business Monday afternoon. Catching the idea that the people would be interested in a full report of the joint discussion between Kitchin and Craig in Charlotte, he made a canvas to see how many copies of the Charlotte Observer he could engage for delivery this evening. He got the names thick and fast, and by seven o'clock when his order was wired in he had engaged nearly one hundred copies of The Observer. The papers are looked for on the 6 o'clock mail this evening and will be delivered as soon as they can be obtained from the post-office. Any who have engaged papers and fail to catch him promptly on the street while he is distributing can get their copy at the Western Union Telegraph office.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

To Mrs. John T. Thorne by the Methodist Church of Farmville N. C.,

Whereas, God in His all wise Providence has seen fit to call from earth to Heaven our beloved friend and co worker, Mrs. John T. Thorne; therefore be it Resolved 1. That the removal of such a life from our church and Sunday school leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be deeply realized by us all.

2. That in her life we find a model worthy of our emulation, a character that will leave its impress upon the community, upon the church at whose altars she worshipped, and upon her loved ones so sorely bereaved.

3. That with deepest and tenderest sympathies, we, the members of Farmville Methodist Sunday school, present a copy of these resolutions to the stricken life mate and family, and at the same time point them to her noble, Christian life as an example worthy to be imitated.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Sunday school, a copy be sent to the Raleigh News and Observer, to the Raleigh Christian Advocate, and to the Greenville Reflector for publication.

AYDEN ITEMS.

Newsy Notes From a Hustling Town, Briefly Told.

Ayden, N. C., June 16, 1908.

"Into each life some rain must fall, some days are dark and dreary." The police of Farmville was in town Monday. Ben Peyton, colored, returned home with him. Ben had been tried in Farmville previously, and left obligations unfilled.

We saw a bath tublast week manufactured by Smith Co. & Dixon, which was as nice as those purchased of Sars, Roebuck & Co., of Chicago. Our home industries are simply wonderful.

Larry W. Smith went on a visit to Kinston Friday and returned Monday.

W. S. May, of Winterville, was smiling at our Ayden girls Sunday. Mr. May is one of Pitt county's most successful young farmers and a great honey producer.

The young ladies of the town are appreciative to the extent they will give an entertainment in the opera house for the benefit of the Ayden band. "Oh, there are no girls on earth like these fair girls of ours."

Miss Annie Joyner, of Franklin, Ky., formerly of Ayden, now of Greenville, spent Sunday in our town.

Rev. M. P. Ormond arrived Tuesday night from Vanderbilt's university, Tennessee, where he has been taking a post graduate course.

The inter-denominational Sunday schools of the tenth district comprising the counties of Lenoir, Greene and Pitt, will hold their convention in the Christian church at this place on the 26th of June. Every one who is interested in this great work is invited to come, and be sure to bring a well filled basket, as dinner will be served on the ground. P. S. Parbecue, ham and chicken are not exempt.

Misses Laura Cox and Lena Dawson left Saturday for Chicago where they will attend a summer school. While enroute they will visit Asheville for 8 or 10 days for recreation.

Richard Wingate, one of our best farmers, filled a barn with tobacco yesterday, 15th, and is curing it today. This is the earliest known in the county.

At the meeting of the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias at Raleigh last week our townsman, J. R. Turnage, was appointed District Deputy Grand Chancellor for this the second district of the domain of North Carolina. This is indeed a high and worthy compliment paid Mr. Turnage and one which he not only enjoys, but is appreciated by the members of his lodge and the community. This organization is one of the most powerful and far reaching in its benefits and results of any order we know. In North Carolina in the year 1873 it had but 16 lodges with perhaps a membership of 250 to 400.

Today it has 157 lodges with quite a membership of 15,000. At the last session the grand lodge appointed a committee to effect arrangements at once for the erection of a Pythian orphanage in which can be placed the little ones, of our brethren, who may be left to the tender mercies of a heartless world. The committee has already in cash $20,000 and if more be required whatever amount found to be necessary can readily be obtained and within the next three years at least we will have an orphanage of which all Pythians may Bagwell for Corporation Commissioner.

Editor of The Times: I beg that you allow a little of your valuable space in order that I may add my approval to that of many other citizens of the candidacy of L. C. Bagwell, Esq., for the office of corporation commissioner. Mr. Bagwell was born and raised in Wake county, and has lived many years in Raleigh. He is thoroughly identified with the people in this section, both in the towns and in the country. For the past several years Mr. Bagwell has been a traveling salesman and is well, and favorably known throughout the length and breadth of the state.

The present corporation commission is composed of a lawyer, a merchant and farmer. A successor is to be elected to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of the farmer. I believe that there is no class of citizens in the state which knows better than the drummer the needs and necessities of railroading its duty to the public and the just and fair treatment due the road. The drummer spends most of his time on the road. He travels on all sorts and conditions of roads in all sorts and conditions of cars, at all seasons and hours of the day and night. He knows the traveling public, individually and collectively, and knows what they demand. He knows the merchants all over the state and he knows their wants and demands. And he knows personally every railroad conductor in the state and through them the variegated troubles of the road.

I know of no class of citizens more capable of protecting both the passenger and the shipper, and at the same time dealing fairly with the railroads than the drummer. And I know of no more representative member of that class than our Wake county candidate, L. C. Bagwell, Esq.

Yours very truly,
PERRIN BUSBEE.

—Raleigh Times.

feel proud. Pythianism is a noble organization. It is composed of only the best element of manhood, men of character and integrity, and this particular is one of its strongest characteristics, not alone so but its social, moral, elevating and charitable features are most admirable indeed. To be honored by such an order is a compliment so worthily bestowed upon our brother pleases his friends and the brotherhood here are proud and the lodge here will be known and recognized throughout the State. Again, we doff our cap in token of this honor done.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL BRIEFS.

The Visitors Here and People Who Travel.

Miss Annie Joyner went to Kinston Monday evening.

F. C. Harding returned this morning from New Bern.

J. A. and W. M. Lang left this morning for Panacea Springs.

A. C. Monk, of Farmville, took the train here this morning for Panacea Springs.

J. R. Gaskill, of Tarboro, spent last night here and returned home this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Flanagan and little daughter left this morning for Wrightsville.

Robert Greene and W. B. Greene went to LaGrange today to see their mother who is very sick.

Little Miss Elizabeth Page, of Aberdeen, daughter of Henry A. Page, is visiting Mrs. L. H. Pender.

Dr. C. O. H. Laughinghouse is attending the meeting of the State Medical society in Winston Salem.

Miss Mary James returned Monday evening from a visit of several weeks to New York and Philadelphia.

C. S. Carr, cashier of the Greenville Banking & Trust Co., and F. J. Forbes, cashier of the National Bank, left Monday evening for Morehead City to attend the Bankers' State convention. R. J. Cobb, president of the Greenville Banking & Trust Co., and J. L. Little, cashier of the Bank of Greenville, left this afternoon for the same destination.

COX'S MILL ITEMS.

Cox's Mill, N. C., June 15.

Roscoe Cox and Madison McGowan went to Ayden Saturday.

H. A. Moore and Oscar Evans went to church Sunday at Rose Hill.

C. W. Weatherington, of Craven county, was here a while Sunday.

Miss Kate Chapman, of Winterville, spent last week with Misses Cora and Sadie Carroll. Many of our people went to church at R. d Banks Sunday.

Miss Bessie Moore is spending sometime with Miss Mattie Wilson, near Pactolus.

There were surely some pretty girls on our streets Saturday evening. Our town is noted for pretty girls.

Tobacco crop is looking fine in this section. Curing will soon begin.

Prohibition is getting quiet now around here. All I can hear is "good bye, booze."

What We Miss.

The crowd of people who gather around the ferry late on pleasant afternoons, is an indication of the pleasure the people of the town would derive from a pavilion and bath houses on the river front. Much is missed by failing to take advantage of the opportunities around us.

Important Church Meeting.

An important business meeting that concerns a matter of much interest to the members, will be held in the Baptist church Wednesday night. The members are urged to attend.

TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1908.

We had as soon see Bryan beat Taft as anybody else.

The News says "Charlotte will entertain the delegates to the Democratic convention to the queen's taste. Come and see." All right, bud.

As far as North Carolina is concerned, more interest is felt in the Mecklenburg county primary today than in the Republican national convention in Chicago.

The head building artist on the Raleigh News and Observer must have been dreaming about Bryan and an uninstructed delegation. National affairs were not even so much as hinted at by the Pitt county convention.

It is amusing that the brewers want to reform the saloons since the people are showing a determination to close them up. Saloons are things that cannot be reformed, and the course the people are taking against them is the only right one.

The dispatches say that Chicago is much disappointed over the smallness of the attendance at the Republican national convention. Perhaps with such a "cut and dried" affair confronting them many of the delegates concluded that the trip was not worth the price.

The name of Major E. J. Hale, of Fayetteville, will be presented to the coming State convention as one of the delegates-at-large to the Democratic national convention at Denver. Major Hale has a host of admirers throughout the State who would be glad to see him receive this honor.

Charlotte heard two of the candidates talk in joint debate last night, and today Mecklenburg will do her own talking in the primary. This is the last primary to be held in any county before the State convention, and when the returns are in the candidates can get an idea of how they stand outside of the uninstructed counties.

"Blind Tom" the famous negro pianist, died Sunday at his home in Hoboken, N. J. He was born a slave near Columbus, Ga., in 1850, and in childhood became such a musical prodigy that he was taken nearly all over the world to give exhibitions. Though he made much money for others, since his retirement from the public some years ago he has lived almost entirely upon charity.

We know nothing of this talk of a dark house, but we do not hold that either of the candidates is entitled to it just because he has made the race. If the party finds that it wants somebody else it should certainly have the right to nominate him. —Durham Herald.

SUN SILHOUETTES.

The Specter of the Broken Seen on Mount Washington.

Seldom seen in this country, the specter of the Broken seen in some what common occurrence in the Harz mountains, Germany, whence it takes its name. There the summit of Blocksberg, rising to a height of more than 3,300 feet, is almost continually enveloped in mist, on which the parallel rays of the sun, low down on the western horizon, throw strange and uncanny shadows of men, animals and other objects. As the screen of mist on which these shadows are projected changes its position in the varying currents of air the weird sun silhouettes seem to be endowed with motion, increasing and diminishing in size as the mist curtain recedes from and approaches the object casting the shadow, giving rise to many strange fantasies and legends.

Some years ago the writer was one of a party of five to cross Mount Washington, New Hampshire, and was so fortunate as to witness this specter in all its weird distinctness. We had left Mount Washington behind and were following the bridge path over Mount Monroe just as the sun was reaching the level of the western hills. At our left a dense, shifting bank of mist swayed backward and forward, at times almost enveloping us in its moist embrace and again swirling away so far as to disclose faint outlines of crag and summit to the eastward.

Suddenly emerging from behind a ridge, we came into the full glare of the setting sun, and one after another each member of the party saw his figure silhouetted distinctly on the semitransparent veil of mist. Trudging as we were in single file, each shadow was projected separately and framed in a brilliant circle of prismatic colors. The head, feet and finger tips of each person when the arms were extended at full length touched the inner edge of the rainbow circle. Every peculiarity of outline was faithfully duplicated, even to knapsacks and long staffs carried by the party, and as the light air moved the mist bank farther away the silhouettes grew in size from that of nearly normal to heroic stature. Always the halo of prismatic light encircled us, but became less brilliant as its size increased.

As the party came together their shadows merged into one, encircled by a single rainbow frame. The unusual phenomenon lasted many minutes, disappearing suddenly as the sun sank.—W. J. Scandlin in Boston Post.

Origin of the Maypole.

"May day ceremonies were not in origin a mere sign of rejoicing that the leaves were on the trees again and the flowers blooming once more," says J. Ernest Pythian in his "Trees in Nature, Myth and Art." "They were religious observances, believed to secure the blessings the spirit could bestow. The spirit that inhabited the tree inhabited also the Maypole taken from the tree, and the dance round the Maypole was a religious ceremony. The May queen and Jack-in-the-green were in origin human forms of the tree spirit. The belief that the Maypole insures fertility is not yet extinct in Europe, and in some parts of Germany on May day the peasants set up May trees at the doors of stable and cowbyre, a tree for each horse and cow, to insure fertility and that the cows will give plenty of milk."

An Ancient Drinking Game.

Drinking bouts have been accompanied among all peoples by curious diversions. Cottabus is the most classical, having been in vogue over most parts of the ancient world. The player lay on a couch and without moving his position attempted to throw from his goblet a few drops of wine at a mark in a high curve without spilling any of the liquor. The mark consisted generally of a little image of Hermes, placed on a bronze saucer, which sometimes floated on water, so that until it was filled by a sufficient quantity of wine to sink it the game continued. To play cottabus well was a mark of good breeding in Athens.—Harper's.

Evicting Corpses.

"It is bad enough to evict live people, but to evict corpses does seem hard." "They never evict corpses." "Don't they? You wouldn't say that if you knew Porto Rico. In the native cemeteries of Porto Rico it is a common occurrence to see a hard hearted landlord evict with a shovel a corpse whose rent has not been paid. "You see, they don't sell lots in those cemeteries. They only rent them, and they who don't come down with their annual rental promptly are apt to suffer the mortification and grief of seeing their dead turned out." —New Orleans Times-Democrat.

CRATERS OF DIAMONDS.

Barney Barnato and the Secret of the Blue Rock.

It is now generally believed that diamonds are formed in the earth by extreme heat and pressure. Barney Barnato, the South African diamond magnate, was one of the first men to fathom the secret of the source of the Kimberley diamonds and to make a fortune from his knowledge. The pioneers worked in the yellow earth which lay on the surface and found diamonds there in abundance. How they came there the men could not imagine. When they had got through this layer of yellow earth and touched the blue rock underlying it their hearts sank. They thought they had come to the end of their riches. Barnato, however, did not believe that the gems had been deposited from above. He believed that what they were working in were really the craters of extinct volcanoes, that the diamonds had been forced up from below and that whence these had come more and greater were to follow. So he bought every claim he could, and time vindicated his judgment.

He did not make his guess public property. The ordinary man when he found his layer of yellow ground run low made haste to sell out to the uninitiated. One man who had reached this stage obliged a friend by allowing him to dump upon his claim the yellow earth which had been worked and sorted. Then he found a newcomer who was looking for a claim rich in yellow deposit. The novice paid $2,000 for the site and thought that he had virgin yellow upon which to work. As a fact, he had to go down into the blue before he handled a diamond.

But the biter was bitten. The claim which was sold for $2,000 soon began to pay out of the blue rock and then could not have been rebought for $200,000. Barnato would have given $40,000 for it and taken the risk, but he did not hear anything of the transaction until the tenderfoot had bought and the man who thought himself clever had departed.—Chicago News.

A Bad Symptom.

"Has George ever hinted that he had thought of you as a possible wife?" asked the anxious mother. "No," replied the girl, a faraway look in her eyes, "and I'm afraid he never will." "Why," said the mother, "I thought—" "It doesn't matter what you thought, mamma, dear," interrupted the daughter. "Only last night he complained of feeling drowsy, and it wasn't 9 o'clock."

Advertising For Federal Building Sites.

Treasury Department, Office of the Secretary.

Washington, D. C., June 3.
Proposals will be received, to be opened at 2 o'clock p. m. July 2, 1908 for the sale or donation to the United States of a suitable site, centrally and conveniently located for the Federal building to be erected in Greenville, North Carolina. A corner lot, of (approximately) 120x130 feet, is required. Each proposal must give the price, the character of foundations obtainable, the proximity to street cars, sewer, gas, and water mains, etc., and must be accompanied by a diagram indicating the principal street, the north point, the dimensions and grades of the land, the widths and paving of adjacent streets and alleys, whether the alleys are public or private, and whether or not the city owns land occupied by sidewalks. The vendor must pay all expenses connected with furnishing evidence of title and deeds of conveyance. Improvements on property must be reserved by the vendor; but pending the commencement of the Federal building they may remain on the land upon payment of a reasonable ground rent. The grantor must, however, remove all improvements on thirty days' notice so to do. The right to reject any proposal is reserved. Each proposal must be sealed, marked "Proposal for Federal building site at Greenville, North Carolina," and mailed to the Secretary of the Treasury "(Super-vising Architect), Washington, D. C. Are You a Trust Buster?

Hey—You!
Yes, YOU'RE the man we mean.
You're always talking about the harm the trusts are doing. The country's going to the demnition bowwows, you say, because of the uncurbed trusts. Rich growing richer, poor getting poorer. Used to be that a poor man could go into business for himself in a modest way and make a good living. Now he must become a clerk or a roustabout or a hodcarrier for some corporation—some combination that has grown to be a Goliath of bigness, that has devoured the fat of the land and is still gourmandizing upon it, till there's not a scrap of bone left for the under dog.

That's your line of talk. You're still handing it out, and you're proud of it.

Well, now, let's see: Are YOU a trust buster YOURSELF?

Didn't we see you stalk up to the postoffice just now and mail a letter with the address of a city Mail Order Store on the envelope? Hey! Didn't we?

Don't you know that the Mail Order Store is a trust—one of the most dangerous in the crowd? Don't you know that it is secretly and silently slyly closing the doors of opportunity to the young men in country towns and small cities like ours? Don't you know that the Mail Order Trust is collecting the patronage of town and country people by the mail route, thereby cutting down the patronage of the smaller merchant, the local man who is trying to build up a modest, independent, antitrust business?

Hey!

Didn't that ever occur to you?

N. B. (which means note well): Why don't you trade at home instead of helping to build up a trust that hurts your home place?

MRS. VIXENHEAD.

The Story of a Berlin Shrew and Her Likeness In Stone.

This quaint equivalent of the German term neidkopf is applied by travelers to an effigy carved in stone and fixed in a niche in the second story of a house in the Heiligegeiststrasse in Berlin not far from the emperor's palace. The neidkopf represents a hideous, harpy faced woman with snakelike curls and tongue protruding in mocking derision.

One day some 200 years ago, the legend runs, Frederick William of Prussia, more familiarly known as Old Fritz, was walking about the streets of the city in the unconventional way he affected when he chanced to look through a window and observed a hunchbacked goldsmith hard at work. The king entered the little shop for a chat.

The result of his interview was an order for a gold table service for the royal household, an order that made the fortune of the hunchback. Later his majesty made other visits to the shop to see how the work was advancing, and on one of these occasions he observed a woman in the window of the opposite house countering her face in the most hideous grimaces and pointing with derisive finger at the crippled workman.

To the king's query as to what ailed the old woman the goldsmith replied: "It is envy, sire. She is the wife of a rival goldsmith, and ever since your majesty so graciously gave me this order she and her daughter have reviled me."

Frederick William, paternal in punishment as well as in reward, at once investigated as to the ownership of the house in which the shrew lived. He found that it belonged to her husband and therefore reasoned that there was little likelihood of the family moving, an idea that seemed greatly to please his majesty. His next move was to consult a sculptor, whom he commanded to make the bust of a woman with the most shrewish, Xantippe-like face he could imagine. The king then bought and renovated the house in which the hunchback had his workshop, presented it to him and caused the bust to be placed conspicuously above the workshop window. Thus whenever the envious woman across the street looked forth from her casement the first object on which her eyes fell was this intended portrait of her aviable self.

For more than a hundred years the neidkopf—spiteful vixen head, as one would say in English—stood in proud prominence, a reproach to the envious woman and her descendants. It afterward mysteriously disappeared, but in 1840 or thereabouts it was found in a forgotten collection of bric-a-brac. Frederick William IV. bought the bust for a large price and had it replaced in its original niche, where it stands today.—New York Tribune.

The Senate Band.

The press gallery of the senate does not look unlike a band stand, with its elaborately decorated front, and it is never occupied by the scribes prior to the opening of the proceedings. A young lady seated in the gallery opposite the press gallery had been looking intently at the empty seats for quite awhile. Her curiosity got the better of her, and, going to the doorkeeper, she said, "Mister, will you please tell me when the band begins to play?" The doorkeeper was amazed. "No band will play, miss," said that gentleman. "There is no band. Why do you ask?" The young lady looked disappointed and embarrassed when she said, with hesitation, "Isn't that the band stand?" pointing to the press gallery.—Washington Herald.

Bray's Mythical Vicar.

It is curious to reflect that there are scattered about the world many scores of places whose chief claim to distinction consists in their association with some famous ditty or other. Take, for example, the village of Bray, in Berkshire, always associated with the world famous "Vicar of Bray." The most curious part of the business is that, though Fuller, in his "Worthies of England," asserts that the cleric who is the hero of the song was one Simon Allyn, careful search of the parish registers has failed to substantiate the story.—London Musical Home Journal.

A Strenuous Task.

"Your honor," said the witness, "can't you order a recess?" "A recess?"

"Yes, sir. I've stood on this stand and told the whole truth two hours on a stretch, and I'm teetotally wore out! I never told the truth that long before—not in all my life!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Shattered Hopes.

He (anxiously)—I understand your father speaks very highly of me? She—Yes, but he doesn't mean a word of it. He—Are you sure of that? She—Certainly. He does it just to torment mother.—Chicago News.

An Eyewitness.

"Have you any witnesses of the accident?" asked the Brentford county court judge recently.

"Yes," was the reply, "my uncle. He is not here because he is blind."—London Telegraph.

Take Care of the Pennies, Etc.
"Make anything on that deal?" Gobsa Golde inquired.
"Only a million," Myduss gloomily replied.
"Well, every million counts."—New York Press.

Grief should be like joy—majestic, equable, sedate.—Aubrey de Vere.

The Great Unknown.

Newton at his death said to his friends, who expressed their admiration of his discoveries, "I do not know what I may appear to the world, but to myself I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the seashore and diverting myself in now and then finding a smoother pebble or a prettier shell than ordinary, while the great ocean of truth lay undiscovered before me."

The same thought passed in Laplace's mind when, dying, he said to his friends, "What we know is but little; what we do not know is immeasurable." Gassendi, the man of approved morals, religion, science and humanity, a minute before his death whispered into a friend's ear the sad confession, "I was born without knowing why, I have lived without knowing how, and now I die without knowing either why or how."

How Will Forty-five and Fifteen Do?
Here is an odd little piece of doggerel which appeared in the London Gentleman's Magazine many years ago and which gave rise to much discussion. Correspondents seem to have been pretty evenly divided between those who claimed that there were several answers and such as maintained that the problem was unsolvable:

When first the marriage knot was tied
Betwixt my wife and me
My age did hers as far exceed
As three times three does three,
But when ten years and half ten years
We man and wife had been
Her age came up as near to mine
As twice four is to sixteen.
Now, tell me, Captain David Gray, I pray,
What were our ages on the wedding day?
David Gray was a noted writer of mathematical subjects who lived at that time.

A Man's Mouth and His Purse.
There is a certain undefinable bond of sympathy between a man's mouth and his pocketbook. When he keeps his mouth open a great deal you will find his pocketbook opens, too, for all the rogues in the country to have a pick at. If he is a quiet, self contained sort of man and spends days and weeks without saying a word, you will find his pocketbook closed so tight that a wedge would not open it, and it is usually a heavy pocketbook too. The misers of the world were all noted for never saying a word and spendthrifts for saying too much.—Acheson Circle.

Salt is a Necessity.
"Salt is a most necessary article of food," says a well known scientist. "All races of mankind, either civilized or in a savage state, have the same regard for salt. In parts of central Africa the natives regard salt as a luxury and will willingly do much to obtain it. So much do they like the taste of salt that the ashes of the burnt veldt grass are used to season their meat. These ashes contain saltpeter, which imparts the coveted flavor to food. Animals, too, are fond of salt. In a wild state they will readily go to a spring the water of which has been salted. Sportsmen know this and use it as a bait."

The Cotton Plant.
So far as we know, the cotton plant originated in India, probably in Mandalay. The earliest writings of that country, dating back as far as 600 B. C., speak of the manufacture of cotton cloth. Herodotus speaks of "trees in India that bear a white fleece like wool." He had in mind the cotton plant. Cotton was cultivated by the Peruvians and Mexicans before the discovery of America, as the records clearly show.—New York American.
