GROUND BROKEN FOR THE SCHOOL

EX-GOV. JARVIS THROWS FIRST DIRT FOR FOUNDATION.

Four Buildings Will be Completed Within a Year and the School Will Open in September, 1909.

At 10.30 o'clock this morning, in the presence of a number of people who had gathered to witness it, dirt was broken for the foundation of the buildings for the Eastern Carolina Teachers' Training School. Ex-Gov. T. J. Jarvis, chairman of the board of trustees, the man who has started and pushed to completion so many things for the good of his people, had the honor of throwing the first dirt. For this purpose he used a new shovel which is going to be painted a silver color and mounted to be kept in the buildings when completed as a memento of the breaking of ground for the work to begin.

The first dirt was thrown at the north-east corner of the boys' dormitory, which is to be the farthest east of any building on the grounds. As Gov. Jarvis began throwing the dirt he said "We have met here to begin the foundation for a great institution of learning that will be a power in Eastern North Carolina. I ask for you and those to come after you your hearty support of this institution. We never can begin to calculate the value it will be to North Carolina, especially to this eastern section, and more especially to Pitt county and Greenville. When those standing here live to be as old as I am, you will look back with pride to the day when Pitt county and Greenville gave $50,000 each for the erection of this great institution. One year from now you will see here a group of beautiful buildings, and in September, 1909, this great school will open. Then you will see four or five hundred beautiful girls in these beautiful buildings. Watch and see this prediction verified."

The sun was hurling hot shafts down upon the heads of those who had assembled, and just here Mrs. Jarvis interrupted "Dear, you have worked enough now. It is too warm to do more."

"This is a work of love and not of labor," replied the "Grand Old Man" to the admonition of his good wife. He had been throwing dirt all the while he was talking, not seeming to realize how oppressively warm the weather was, nor to heed the drops of perspiration falling from his face.

The ladies and gentlemen present then formed a semi-circle about Gov. Jarvis as he stood with shovel in hand, and Photographer R. T. Evans took a picture of the group.

The contractors for the construction of the buildings, The Building & Lumber Co., of Greenville, are ready to go right ahead with the work, much of the material being already on the ground. There are to be four buildings that will present a combined frontage view of more than 700 feet, and the arrangement of these and of the grounds is to be most attractive. The administration building will be 178.4 x 126.8 three stories high with tall tower. The girls' dormitory will be 158 x 154.6 two stories, the boys' dormitory 158 x 42 two stories, and the refectory 50 x 100, basement and one story. The buildings will be modern in every particular.

A VISIT TO SCOTLAND NECK.

Rochdale, N. C., July 1, 1908

EDITOR REFLECTOR:

As I think what I am going to say will be of some interest at least to some of your readers I will write a little item or two.

I went to Scotland Neck last Friday and took with me my two little grand daughters, Martha Belle and Jessie Smith, daughters of the late Jesse L. Smith. We all enjoyed our trip very much.

We remained in the beautiful town of Scotland Neck until Monday and on hearing of the nomination late Saturday evening of Kitchin for governor a large crowd gathered together and built bonfires and whooped and hollered and got up a lot of instruments such as cow bells, tin pans and almost anything that would make a noise, and a band of music, and got up some wagons and paraded the town and kept people awake until late in the night.

But I'll now take up the subject that I wanted to talk about. On Sunday we went to the Baptist Sunday school. The assistant superintendent took me through all the rooms. In one was the Philathea class that was composed of sixty young ladies, which was a beautiful sight. Then in the room where the Baraca class was, it being composed of forty or fifty young men, and another room where the Bible class was composed of about thirty older men and ladies. And the best of all he took me in to see the infant class it being composed of a hundred or more little girls and boys. Miss Annie Biggs, teacher, met me at the door and welcomed me with a pleasant hand shake and it seemed almost like I had met one big angel and a hundred little ones. I sat and listened at them recite and Miss Annie failed to ask them one question that they could not answer. It seemed to be a perfect lesson and in the main building of the church there was several classes composed of different numbers. The whole school numbers more than three hundred. T. E. Little.

The Old Board Met the Situation.

The attention of The Reflector has been called to an error in a statement made a few days ago, that the old board of aldermen would pass the matter of widening the paving on Dickinson avenue up to the succeeding board. This was printed on a statement made by the former mayor that the board soon to retire would take no further action so close to the end of the term. But the old board did act at a special meeting held the night following and passed an order that the paving be widened between the two depots. We gladly make the correction.

The Town That Invites Trade Gets It.

It is not merely the wish for trade that gets it. Neither is it enough to simply extend the invitation to buyers. There are several things that can be included under the head of invited and it is all important that both merchant and community fully understand the way of inviting trade, so that the invitation may have character and weight.

Two of the ways are advertising and sending after trade. The merchant advertises in the best medium the newspaper, and the newspaper, goes to the possible buyer, and often makes the buyer, through its offerings. It is the way, this newspaper advertising, of being constantly before people. It is the daily hint, because each day the merchant's name, what he has to sell and its cost is seen and read. There is nothing like the daily paper. It is ever on hand. It is on the table in the home, or on the chair, or on the floor. Its big ads force one to read, and read again. There is only one way to dodge, to get away from the newspaper ad and that is to be blind. The person unable to read is attracted by the big ad letters, and the question is asked, what does it all mean?—Washington Messenger.

Trade Report.

Richmond, Va., July 2, 1908. Bradstreet's Saturday will say for Richmond and vicinity:

Wholesale dry goods dealers are receiving few orders for fall shipments. Some filling in orders for shoes are noted. Produce is not active, and prices have a downward tendency. Coffee roasters and tea dealers are receiving few orders, and in manufacturers of grocer's specialties are busy.

The demand for manufactured lumber shows an increase, reduction in price has been an incentive to this. Increased inquiries are received by manufacturers of, and dealers in, machinery and supplies, indicating that a resumption of operations is anticipated. Weather conditions have been favorable to crop growing and favorable reports regarding all crops throughout the district are received. Retail trade is fair, collections continue backward.

ROCHDALE SPROUTS.

Rochdale, N. C., July 2, 1908. Tobacco curing and laying by corn are the order of the day now.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. McLawhon, Jasper Joyner and Tom Wiloughby went to Ayden Friday to attend the Sunday school convention.

Miss Lottie Wilkinson returned to her home at Farmville after having spent about a week visiting at C. D. Smith's.

Mrs. C. D. Smith and Misses Nannie and Carrie Belle, her daughters, went to Farmville yesterday evening.

R. A. Smith was visiting in our town yesterday and returned to his home at Farmville in the evening.

T. E. Little and little Martha Belle and Jessie Smith went to Scotland Neck last Friday and returned Monday.

Mills Smith went to Farmville yesterday evening and returned. Crops are looking very well in our section.

The farmers are sowing lots of peas in our neighborhood to try to raise a plenty of hay, which I think is a very good plan.

F. M. Smith has a very sick child.

C. E. McLawhon went to Greenville today on business.

Victor and Vanquished.

With the victor there must need be the vanquished.

Along with every flower of success there goes the thorn of disappointment.

The convention just closed has decided the fortunes of many men.

With hope accelerated by anticipation to the keenest tension candidates for the various offices came here Wednesday to hear their fate pronounced by a jury of their peers. Today some bask in the smiles of fortune, and are happy, while some are striving to season the pang of defeat with the thought that they "fought a good fight," and lost honestly and honorably.

The withdrawal speeches of several of the candidates—old men who had seen service in the war of the sixties and whose request for honors at the hands of their fellow-citizens was the last they will ever make—was pathetic in the extreme. We refer here more particularly to the magnanimous conduct of Col. Ashley Horne in withdrawing from the gubernatorial fight and the speech of Gen. Roberts in voting to make the election of Mr. J. Bryan Grimes unanimous. It is a pity all of the candidates could not have been elected. It is hard that to the majority falls a double portion of disappointment—but such is life in politics, as well in every other avenue of human activity. —Charlotte News.

GRADED SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

Held Annual Meeting Today—Adopts Resolutions.

The board of trustees of Greenville graded schools were in annual meeting today.

A resolution was adopted upon the death of the late Dr. W. H. Bagwell, who was a member of the board.

The officers elected for the year were:

President, F. C. Harding; vice president, D. C. Moore; executive committee, F. C. Harding, D. C. Moore, J. L. Little, G. E. Harris, Dr. E. A. Moye.

The fall term of the school will begin September 29th.

THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1908.

Charlotte is a dry town now, and the recent State convention helped to make it so.

We are in favor of not waiting fifty years to give Charlotte another convention.

The day of the old soldier seems to be over so far as his getting office on that account is concerned.

That is the right kind of news sent out from Asheville that the West is going to rally to the ticket.

The lawyers are holding their State convention at Morehead and clients are taking things easy for the time being.

And the New York court has decided that McClellan was duly elected mayor. So Hearst gets only pangs for his trouble in the recount.

No, sir, Greenville is anything else but a dry town, even if a lot of bad odors can be heard (?) floating around.

The Norfolk & Southern railway has been placed in the hands of receivers, the company having failed to meet the interest on bonds.

If what the papers are predicting in advance of the convention is true, Bryan and Gray will be the ticket nominated by the Democrats at Denver.

The North Carolina delegates enroute to the national convention at Denver will stop at Lincoln to pay a call on Mr. Bryan. He telegraphed his thanks for the endorsement the North Carolina State convention gave him.

Ground has been broken for the beginning of work on the training school buildings, and in less than a year from now the east side of Greenville is going to show the prettiest spot in Eastern Carolina.

It does look a little bad after all the nice things Charlotte did for the convention, Mecklenburg's candidate for commissioner of agriculture, Mr. O. C. Moore, should have been beaten. He lost the nomination by a very small margin. If the full delegations had remained to the finish of the convention there would have been a few different names on the ticket.

Mr. Harry W. Whedbee, who was on Wednesday elected mayor of Greenville, is not a novice in that position. He has held the office before, and filled it most acceptably. The Reflector predicts that he will make a fine record the coming year. Popular approval of his election was well shown in the ovation given him when the committee escorted him in to take the oath of office.

Mathematics at Oxford.

There is an interesting story which shows the disposition of Oxford toward mathematics. A venerable don who had bought half a dozen books at 3s. 6d. each requested the bookseller to give him a piece of paper for the purpose of arriving at the amount. He then wrote down 3s. 6d. six times, one under the other, and was slowly adding them up when the shopman ventured to point out the shorter method of multiplying one 3s. 6d. by 6. "Dear me!" exclaimed the don. "Really, that is most ingenious, most ingenious."—London Globe.

Anticipating Him.

Night after night the exceedingly quiet and backward youth had called on a neighboring farmer's daughter, sitting perfectly mute beside her while she did all the entertaining. This night, however, the youth, wishing for a glass of water, suddenly surprised her by blurting out, "Say, Sal, will you?"

"Don't exert yourself, Reuben," she interrupted, "I understand. Yes, have you brought the ring?"—Bohemian Magazine.

The Toast of an Irishman.

Michael Meyers Shoemaker wrote "Wanderings in Ireland." An old Irishman read a fragment of it that related to the reader's neighborhood. He asked the name of the author. "Mr. Shoemaker, is it?" he commented. "A nice gentleman, I'll go bail. 'Tis a fine country he chose to travel in too. May the heavens be his bed for choosing it, and may every hair in his honor's head be a mold candle to light his soul to glory!"

Logical Conclusion.

First Burglar—Hark! I hear some one talking. Second Burglar—What's he saying? First Burglar—That he never will bet on another horse as long as he lives. Second Burglar—Let's get out of this. No money here. He's lost every cent.—London Tit-Bits.

At Last.

"Ah, ha," exclaimed the great explorer joyfully, "at last I have found the missing link!"

And, crawling from under his bed, he proceeded to put the small gold affair in his clean cuff.—New York Journal.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. THE SUN A PUZZLE.

We See Only the Outer Shells of the Great Blazing Orb.

The great ball of fire which we call the sun is not really the sun. No one has ever seen the sun. A series of concentric shells envelops a nucleus of which we know absolutely nothing except that it must be almost infinitely hotter than the fiercest furnace and that it must amount to more than nine tenths of the solar mass.

That nucleus is the real sun, forever hidden from us. The outermost of the enveloping shells is about 5,000 miles thick and is called the chromosphere. It is a gaseous fluid, tinted with the scarlet glare of hydrogen, and so furiously active that it spurts up great tongues of glowing gas (prominences) to the height of thousands of miles.

Time was when this agitated sea of crimson fire could be seen to advantage only during an eclipse. Now special instruments are used which enable astronomers to study it in the full glare of the sun.

Beyond the chromosphere, far beyond the prominences even, lies the nebulous pallid corona visible only during the vanishing moments of a total eclipse, aggregating not more than seven days in a century.

No one has ever satisfactorily explained how the highly attenuated matter composing both the prominences and the corona is supported without falling back into the sun under the pull of solar gravitation. Now that Arrhenius has cosmically applied the effects of light pressure a solution is presented.

How difficult it is to account for such delicate streamers as the prominences on the sun is better comprehended when we fully understand how relentlessly powerful is the grip of solar gravitation.

If the sun were a habitable globe and you could transport yourself to its surface, you would find yourself pulled down so forcibly by gravitation that you would weigh two tons, assuming that you are an ordinary human being.

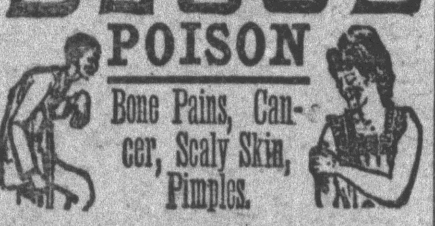

Your clothing alone would weigh more than a hundred pounds. Baseball could be played in a solar drawing room, for there would be some difficulty in throwing a ball more than thirty feet.

Tennis would be degraded to a form of outdoor pingpong.

From these considerations it is plain that gravitation on the sun would tend to prevent the formation of any lambent streamers and to pull down to its surface masses of any size.—Harper's Magazine

A Fable of the Future.

In 1920 A. D. the Stingiest Man in Stringtown carted his Household Goods to the Depot and bought a ticket for Millionville, the Metropolis.

"Why are you moving to Millionville?" inquired a Citizen.

"To save postage," replied the Stingiest Man. Whereat the Citizen marveled mightily.

Now, be it known that the Stingiest Man in Stringtown was wise in his Day and Generation, for along back in 1907 A. D. or thereabout it became the Settled Habit of the Stringtown people to purchase Large Sheets of Little Stickers bearing portraits of G. Washington, B. Franklin, W. McKinley and other Late Illustrious Ones, which Specimens of Art they straightway stuck on envelopes and sent to a Large and Luring Mail Order Concern in Millionville. Wherefore it came about that the Seven Stores in Stringtown Shut up Shop, one after the other, until along in 1919 A. D. the Stingiest Man found it incumbent upon him to begin purchasing these Small Specimens of Art to present to the Maw of the Monster in Millionville, and the Aforesaid was Simply too Stingy to stand for the Same.

MYSTERY OF DREAMS A TALE OF PORTO RICO

Whence Come the Warning Visitors We See in Sleep?

Curious Story of the Haunted Sentry Box.

TWO VERY PUZZLING CASES.

LIGHT ON THE OLD LEGEND.

One Where Mother and Son Both Got Tidings of Disaster at the Same Time and One Where a Child Saw Her Father Saved in a Shipwreck.

One of the Many Mysterious Disappearances From Fort San Cristobal Accounted For by the Revelation of the Lost One Himself.

Out of 149 dreams of a very striking kind investigated by one of the leading psychic research societies no fewer than seventy-nine related to a death, and perhaps the rarest of all these dreams is the case where two persons dreamed the same thing on the same night, and the episode came true. This striking instance is reported by the Rev. R. B. Ellington:

"A woman parishioner of mine," he says, "whose husband was a fisherman, at that time on the sea, dreamed one night in terribly vivid fashion that his little craft had been cut in two by the towering steel bows of a great liner. Her eldest son was with the husband, and as she woke she screamed out, 'Oh, save my boy, my boy.' This was remarkable enough, considering the sequel, but almost at the very moment the poor woman was in her distress, yet still asleep, another son was pounding at her door, half asleep and half awake, and crying, 'Oh, mother, where is father?' The terrified woman now rose and let the boy in. He was crying. He told her he had distinctly heard his father's heavy tread coming up the stairs and his ponderous kick with sea boots against the door, as had been his manner when returning abruptly from a long cruise. Next morning the alarmed mother and wife told all the neighbors, and before the day was out the dreadful news came that every detail of her dream was true. The little trawling lugger had been run into by a coasting liner, nearly cut in two and sunk with all hands, including her husband and son."

Premonitory dreams occupy a large part of the psychological records, and the following case is a very puzzling one: A Mrs. Spruit lived at Balmain, one of the suburbs of Sydney, Australia. Her husband was a sea captain in command of the Atacama, a wooden ship of 1,300 tons, which had arrived in Sydney in a leaking state and was picked up cheap by a firm known as Cowlishaw Bros. for $3,500. Twice as much was spent in repairs, and then the Atacama was sent up the coast with a cargo of coal. She delivered this and next set out for San Diego.

But when 500 miles out from Sydney she sprang a leak, and Captain Spruit decided to put back. In spite of the pumps the water gained, and soon there was a depth of eleven feet in the hold. Spruit now resolved to abandon the ship and launch the three boats. The captain himself, with one seaman, the steward, boatswain and an apprentice, was in the twenty-four foot lifeboat, while the rest of the crew, twelve in all, were in the other two boats. Heavy seas were running, and the boats were nearly swamped. As Spruit could not swim, he was nearly drowned. Some of his men were lost. Their situation was indeed fearful in boats half filled with water and exposed to a fierce gale 400 miles from land. Again and again was Spruit washed out, but at last his boat was picked up when its occupants were in the last stages of exhaustion from fatigue, exposure and lack of food. A reporter of the Sydney Morning Herald called to interview the captain and found him barefooted, with terribly swollen legs, covered with severe cuts and bruises.

Now consider Mrs. Spruit's report to the Psychological Research society, which is most remarkable.

"Last Thursday week," she writes, "at 3 o'clock in the morning my thirteen-year-old daughter Lily came into my bedroom and woke me by a tap on my forehead. 'Oh, mamma,' she cried in a breathless whisper, 'I'm so frightened!' I tried to soothe her, but she only covered her face with her hands and whispered tremblingly: 'Oh, look! My papa's ship is all wrecked! Papa's come home all in rags, with his feet and legs cut, and I see two or three of his men drowned out of the boat.'"

"I told Lily sternly it was all nonsense.

"'It isn't!' she said passionately. 'I've seen it in my dream, and I know it's all true!'"

"But I coaxed her off to bed. The girl kept worrying about it until the next Sunday. A week after her dream my husband returned, and Lily found me crying when she came in from school.

"'Oh, mamma,' she cried sharply, 'is the Atacama wrecked?'"

"I told her evasively her papa had come home.

"She was not to be denied, however, and asked, with strange persistence, 'Are papa's legs cut?'"

"I said they were.

"And the very first thing she said to her father was: 'Why, you didn't have those clothes on when I saw you! The ones you had on were all torn in the shipwreck.'"

Lily Spruit herself furnished a report to the Psychological Research society. She said she woke in terrible fright, having seen every microscopic detail of the shipwreck and its sequel. She saw her father get into the big boat and keep close to his ship for some time. She watched his boat capsize and the boy Allen drown. What woke her, she said, was the howling of the wind about the wreck, and the last she saw was the other men pulling her father back into the waterlogged boat.—William T. Fitz-Gerald in New York Tribune.

Writing in the Journal of the Military Service Institution, Captain Arthur P. S. Hyde of the coast artillery tells this curious story of "the haunted sentry box" of Fort San Cristobal, the ancient Spanish built fortress which guards the entrance to San Juan, Porto Rico:

"A number of picturesque sentry boxes built of masonry and appearing like minarets are placed at points of vantage in and around the fort. One of these on the sea front, and reached only through a long and dark tunnel from the interior of the fort, is popularly known as La Garita del Diablo, or the devil's sentry box, usually, although incorrectly, translated the haunted sentry box. This name was given to it by the Spanish soldiers for the reason that a number of sentries stationed there disappeared in a most mysterious manner and were never again heard from.

"An American officer was once on duty that took him into the remote interior of the island, and while spending one night in a small settlement he engaged in conversation with a number of the inhabitants of the place. One old man, on learning that the officer was stationed at Fort San Cristobal, became especially interested and in the course of the conversation told the following story:

"I used to be a soldier in the Spanish army and was stationed at Fort San Cristobal. A number of soldiers while on sentry duty had mysteriously disappeared from the sentry box down by the sea, and we had all become convinced that it was haunted by the devil, who, we thought, used to come and steal the soldiers away.

"One stormy night it fell to my lot to go on duty in the devil's sentry box, as we called it, at midnight, and it was with some doubts and misgivings that I went with the corporal of the guard and relieved the former sentry. When they left me I listened to the sound of their footfalls reverberating from the walls and ceiling of the dark and narrow passage, ever growing fainter and fainter as they receded, until finally the noise of the storm and the sea completely drowned it, and I was left alone with the mad elements.

"It was a mad night and one well calculated to add to the feeling of awe that the devil's sentry box always instilled into the man on duty there at night.

"Presently my attention was attracted by some lights in a small tavern on the shore below the fort, where many of us were wont to go when off duty for a glass of rum. Then I began to think that I might be able to climb down over the rocks to the shore, get a glass of rum at the tavern and return to my post.

"The more I thought of it the more determined I was to go, so finally, leaving my rifle and belt in the sentry box, I climbed over the wall and down on to the rocks and so made my way with great labor and difficulty and no little danger to the little house, where the occupants were making merry with dancing and drinking. I soon fell to and enjoyed myself with them.

"When one is dancing with a fair senorita he sometimes forgets the passage of time, as I did on that fatal night, and not until long after 1 o'clock did I begin to think of returning to my post. Then, realizing that the corporal had made his inspection and had found me gone from my post and with my rifle and belt left behind, I saw only a court martial and the garrote staring me in the face, for in these days for a sentinel in the Spanish army to quit his post meant sure death, even in peace.

"To go back was out of the question. There was only one thing left for me to do, and that was to desert. My heart sank within me. If I should be captured, the same fate would be meted out to me; but, I reasoned, if I were to go back the fate would be a certainty, whereas if I deserted at least I had a chance of keeping out of sight of the authorities. I deserted and before morning was out of the city and on the way to the mountains.

"I have lived in this little hamlet for years and have never been back to the capital since that day, nor have I ever told my story to a single soul until tonight, but now that the Spaniards are gone I no longer fear for my life."

"Thus we have the story of the devil's sentry box from one of the very men who so mysteriously disappeared from it, and it would seem to be probable that the other disappearances could be accounted for in a similar manner were the truth known. Quien sabe?"

Captain Hyde mentions an interesting fact that, although for centuries Porto Rico was considered the legitimate prey of freebooters and was attacked at various times by regularly organized expeditions of the English and the Dutch during times of war, with more or less success, Fort El Morro has never been captured by an enemy, and its only surrender was to the Americans, together with the surrender of the whole island.

PASTIMES OF MADMEN.

Cunning and Ingenuity Displayed by the Insane.

Some of the inventions of the insane are of scientific value. A patient at Villejuif invented a "panification machine" by combining a bottle, a plank and small metallic tubes, to which he had fitted faucets. Having set up his machine, he produced loaves of bread the size of a man's head. The bread was good—so good that it was decided to make the machine known. One day when it was in action the doctor suggested taking a photograph of it. The inventor watched him as if petrified for a moment; then he fell upon the machine, wrenched it apart and trampled it underfoot. The invention, an exceedingly useful one, was lost, because no one had seen him make it, and no one dares speak of it to him. To allude to it is to bring on a furious attack.

Most lunatics, no matter how contented they may be, generally cherish a furtive longing to escape. They collect wax from the polished floors, take the impressions of locks and make keys from empty sardine boxes, spoon handles or anything to be found. Dr. Marie's museum includes a collection of knives of strange and unheard-of shapes. Some of them have blades made from pieces of glass or slate and set in handles of corset steels. Objects harmless in themselves become dangerous weapons through the ingenuity of madmen.

Insane sculptors are as common as insane painters. The insane sculptor hews out coarse statuettes, fantastic animals, ferocious little horned and grinning devils. An ex-mechanic carves all his soap bones. That his old trade is still in his memory is shown by the little screws that he makes out of the smaller pieces of bone. He works all day at his senseless and ridiculous task. Another lunatic, who believes he is the incarnation of the soul of Beelzebub, passes his time carving toy men out of wood. Each pair of his creations are joined together, now at the necks, now at the shoulders.—Helen E. Meyer in Harper's Weekly.

NATIONAL CONVENTIONS.

They Succeeded the System of Nomination by Caucus.

Conventions have not always nominated our presidents and vice presidents. For more than thirty years presidential candidates were named by a caucus made up of members of the house and the senate. This system died when in 1824 the caucus insisted upon by Martin Van Buren and other friends of William H. Crawford of Georgia defeated Crawford, which threw the election into the house on account of the scattering electoral vote caused by the entrance of Clay, Calhoun, Jackson and John Quincy Adams in the race. This fracas elected Adams. The campaign of 1828 in consequence was somewhat demoralized, and in 1831 the Republicans followed the example the anti-Masonic party had set the year before and met in convention in Baltimore to nominate Henry Clay. The Democrats held their first national convention in the same city the following year, nominating Martin Van Buren for vice president. The dominating figure of the party, Andrew Jackson, needed no indorsement of his candidacy for the presidency.

The Democrats in 1835 and 1840 nominated Van Buren for the presidency in Baltimore, and the Whigs nominated Clay in the same place in 1844, when the Democrats named Polk.

In 1835 Romulus M. Saunders introduced the two-thirds rule to the Democratic convention, and it was adopted. The customs installed at these earlier conventions which succeeded the tyranny of the caucus chamber have been continued and added to from time to time, and the conventions today are merely the descendants of those that nominated Clay and Van Buren.—Charles Wadsworth Camp in Metropolitan Magazine.

Horizon.

A man calls it the horizon where the earth and the sky seem to meet, but a woman's notion of the horizon is the families she can see moving in from behind her front window curtains. If, further, they hang out their washing in a spirit of candor, they are, of course, all the more so. The horizon is caused by a number of things, chief among them the gregarious instinct. Only for this next door would mean as little as tariff revision or pure food or international arbitration. It takes a star or something of that sort to rise above the horizon, but a very ordinary woman may feel above it.—Life.

The Cult of the Hotel.

"Hotel" is a French word, but a thoroughly British institution. If its great hotels were suppressed London would no longer be London—that is to say, the London of society, the theater, literature, politics, art and fashion. The hotel is one of the essential factors of London life.—Milan Corriere Della Serra.

RECKLESS AARON BURR.

The Dramatic Story of His Marriage in Old Age.

The story of Aaron Burr's marriage in his old age to the widow of Stephen Jumel, who was well known in the early history of New York city, is a dramatic one.

Conceive, if you will, the picture of Burr, gifted adventurer that he was, broken in health, branded in the popular mind as the murderer of Alexander Hamilton and returning from a long exile to find himself an outcast in the city where he had once been the political monarch of all he surveyed and a distinguished figure in society and at the bar. Conceive, if you can, this lamentable old man, smirking through his wrinkles, bowing and prancing rather stiffly because of his rheumatic joints and with his mouth full of pretty platitudes, paying court to the widow of Stephen Jumel, herself in the prime of years and health. Remove from the picture its surface incongruities, and you have a bit of pure pathos unequalled in the annals of foolish great men.

But something of his old time power to charm the gentler sex must have stood by him in his years of mental and physical misery, for in his suit for the widow Jumel's hand and fortune he won gloriously, dramatically. Rebuffed repeatedly, Burr finally declared in passionate rage that on a given day he would arrive at the Jumel mansion accompanied by a clergyman, who should marry them on the spot. He would give his prospective bride no quarter, no chance of escape from the inevitable.

She was amused at the threat and dismissed the old man with more than her usual coldness of demeanor. Burr stuck to his avowal and one July day rolled up in a carriage, and with him was a minister, the same who fifty years before performed the marriage ceremony for Burr and the mother of his daughter, the beautiful Theodosia. There was something of a scene in the old house on this day. There were tears of anger on the part of Burr. Relatives remonstrated; Burr remained immovable. All feared a scandal. The minister, book in hand, stood unobtrusively in the background. There were more tears, more declarations of undying love, and the widow Jumel became Mrs. Aaron Burr.

They were married in the great drawing room of the Jumel mansion. Burr squandered with reckless hand the wealth acquired by Stephen Jumel and left for the enjoyment of his marital partner. There were many bitter quarrels between the ill-mated pair, and they were soon divorced. Burr died in 1836, but madam lived until 1865, dying a recluse and a miser, the money received from the Jumel estate hoarded in an unused chamber.

Stones and Glass Houses.

The origin of the saying, "Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones," is as follows: At the time of the union of England and Scotland London was inundated with Scotchmen, and the London roughs used to go about at night breaking their windows. Buckingham being considered the chief instigator of the mischief, a party of Scotchmen smashed the windows of the duke's mansion, known as the Glass House. The court favorite appealed to the king, who replied, "Steenie, Steenie, those who live in glass houses should be careful how they fling stones!"—New York Ameri. can.

A Comparison.

Mrs. Giles (anxiously asking after doctor's health)—Well, sir, I be glad you says you be well, but there—you be one of these "bad doers," as I calls 'em (gle 'em the best o' vittels, and it don't do 'em no good)—there be pigs like that!—London Punch.
