MR. H. B. HARRISS PROMOTED.

High Compliment From Company he Represents.

Mr. E. R. Ferguson, the new general agent for North Carolina with headquarters at Charlotte of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, was in Greenville Friday to see the local agent, Mr. H. B. Harriss. While here the general manager highly complimented Mr. Harriss, saying he made the cleanest and best record in his reports of any agent in the State. In consequence of his good record and loyalty to the company, Mr. Harriss, who heretofore had charge of only Pitt county, has been made superintendent of a district embracing this and several neighboring counties.

Miss Agnes Smith went to the Marlboro section Saturday to visit the Misses Flanagan.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Smith went to Snow Hill Saturday and returned Sunday evening.

Misses Mertie and Thelma Flanagan came Sunday to spend some time visiting relatives and friends in our section.

Cotton and corn crops are very fine.

Hugh Lassiter, of Snow Hill, spent Tuesday night with Ivy Smith and went to Greenville Wednesday morning.

Ned Laughinghouse came up Sunday to visit at B. P. Cobb's and returned to Greenville Monday.

A son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ola Forbes are visiting at B. P. Cobb's, their uncle, this week.

Mrs. Tom Robinson is very sick yet.

Misses Trilley and Gertie Smith, of Smithtown, went to Greenville yesterday to spend some time visiting relatives and friends.

Our Arthur is getting to be right much of a place. Some days we have eight trains. We have one store, three or four residences, one steam mill to saw and gin cotton, and a dry kiln connected with the mill. There is an opening there for a good business if some money men would make a start, and I think the railroad company ought to build a shelter over the little platform they have there, if nothing more, for that would be some protection for those who have to wait for trains. There was a lady waiting for the east bound train in the rain and sleet and her hat was tagged with ice. We hope they will have some accommodation, so that we can be out of the sun and rain when we are waiting for trains. There are a good many people that go and come to and from our little Arthur.

HARD EFFORT TO GET SLAYER.

Confession Can't be Sweated Out of Smith and Gunderman.

Troy, N. Y., July 17.—Disheartened and desperate over the absolute loss of tangible evidence which would warrant an arrest, District Attorney O'Brien and his staff will at once call every person whose name has been mentioned in the Teal pond mystery before Coroner Sprobe, who will probably begin the inquest into Hazel Drew's death Saturday. Efforts to establish guilt at a coroner's hearing are rarely successful, but this is the only resort left to the Rensselaer county officials.

Every bit of plausible evidence has been woven about Taylor, the girl's uncle. The developments of the last few hours place him perilously close to the county jail, according to O'Brien's detectives.

Where Hazel Drew spent Monday afternoon and night, where her favorite leather bag is, the identity of the girl's admirers here and in New York and Boston, if such there are, remain mysteries which have not been fathomed.

Dr. H. O. Fairweather's autopsy findings clearly establish the girl's death as a murder.

Persistent "sweating" of Smith and Gunderman have failed to disturb their statements, and after an active search for persons whom the girl might have visited in Albany on Monday night the detectives are forced to admit they know not where to turn. Every clue has been exhausted; every person who knew the girl interviewed; and, after the closest scrutiny of her life, the authorities don't hesitate to declare Hazel Drew was above reproach. He is better now, however, and will be able to travel tomorrow. Dr. Stamey and his family have many warm friends in Greensboro and they will all be sorry to see them leave.—Greensboro Record.

AN IMPORTANT INDUSTRY.

Mr. George N. Ives Approves the Course of Pitt's Representative.

New Bern, N. C., July 16, 1908.

EDITOR REFLECTOR:

I understand that Capt. J. J. Laughinghouse will again be a candidate for the legislature from your county. I sincerely hope that he will be nominated and elected to represent your county. His progressiveness, his knowledge and experience, makes him one of the most valuable members of our state legislature. The great interest which he has taken in the fish question, and trying to preserve to the state this valuable article of food, makes it very important for our eastern section that he should again be a member of the legislature. He did some very good work in the last session and it is now very important that that work should be completed.

Our two years experience since the last legislature has taught us much, and has shown us what is still necessary to be done. The destruction of our food fishes is one of the most important problems which confronts our people today and it is a matter that affects our whole people. When the writer first commenced the fish business, in 1874, the waters of our state were teeming with fish and it was the cheapest article of food for our eastern counties. They were so plentiful and cheap that we were able to furnish the people of our central and western counties at very reasonable prices. In those days, Beaufort, Morehead City and New Bern were the only fish shipping points in the state and about the only shipping points on the Atlantic Coast south of Norfolk.

Fish were so plentiful then that a few local fishermen were able to supply the demand. Were the same number of fishermen and nets fished in those days, in all the waters of the state, as is done at the present time, the N. & S. R. Co. would not have been able to have hauled the fish (in any single train) which could have been caught each day. Excessive fishing with small nets has nearly destroyed the food fishes of all kinds and it will be but a few more years (unless something is done to stop this destruction) before the business will be entirely destroyed.

Capt. Laughinghouse has made a special study of this question, and we believe understands the needs of the people, and we also believe he will do nothing to injure the business of the fishermen or fish dealer. The trouble is, and always has been, that the fishermen do not seem to know that they are destroying their own interests, and they are so narrow and illiberal that it is necessary for some legislative action to control this whole matter.

Hoping that your county will return Capt. Laughinghouse to the legislature, I am,
Yours truly,
Geo. N. Ives.

The railroads are taking another whack at the people in a general advance in freight rates of from four to ten cents per hundred.

More check flashers have been getting in their work in Greensboro. The "Gate City" passes as an easy mark with the profession of flashers.

A Wisconsin woman fasted fifty-six days to cure appendicitis. Reports say she came out successfully and lost only sixty pounds in weight.

Taft may have an eye to business in doing some base ball playing. After getting beat for president in the November election he will be a great drawing card on a ball team next season and can command a big salary.

The Prohibitionists in their national convention at Columbus, nominated Eugene W. Chafin, of Chicago, for president, and Aaron S. Watkins, of Ada, O., for vice-president.

It strikes us as funny that in the national prohibition convention as the clerk was calling the roll of States, Carrie Nation answered when North Carolina was called. This State makes no claim whatever on the distinguished lady.

Wonder if the South Carolina boy who fell into a well 75 feet deep, out of which he climbed unaided and without injury, was not born in North Carolina. As it is so close to the line the Charlotte Observer might investigate and see if the boy did not get his start on this side.

We cannot speak for the money side of it here in the summer, but it can be said to any who contemplate doing any building in the near future that lumber is about as cheap now as they will be likely to find it. Better look after getting a lot in Greenville and go to building on it.

In this time when the railroads treat shippers about as they please, and raise freight rates whenever it suits them to do so, Greenville is standing in her own light by not getting active to establish a line of water transportation to Norfolk. This town could be practically independent of the railroads, so far as freights are concerned, if it would embrace the opportunity the river offers.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. WONDERFUL MIRAGES.

False Peak of Tenerife and Illusions in the Dardanelles.

The peak of Tenerife is known among deep sea sailors as the "false peak." Owing to some peculiarity of the atmosphere it is always seen by mirage in exactly the opposite direction from which it lies, and only the fact that all captains know that the mirage appears long before the true peak is visible through the most powerful glass prevents many a ship from sailing many miles out of her course. It is hard for a greenhorn to believe that the majestic purple mountain towering astern on the port beam apparently only a short distance off is in reality miles away in exactly the opposite direction and the seemingly solid earth at which he is gazing is only a reflection on the clear mirror of the air. Many weird tales are told of shipwrecked men who have steered for the false peak in the expectation of finding land and have perished of hunger and thirst while pursuing the phantom mountain.

Sometimes the passengers and crew of a vessel on the lookout for the false peak see a much rarer and more beautiful mirage, that of a ship in the sky. It usually appears about 10 o'clock in the morning, about ten degrees above the horizon and under full sail, every delicate spar and tapering mast clearly visible against the blue ether and even the play of light and shadow in the belying canvas plainly discernible to the naked eye. It generally remains in sight half an hour or more before gracefully fading away. The oldest mariner can never remember having seen the mirage of a steamer in that latitude, but always that of a full rigged ship, and this peculiar fact has given birth to many romantic legends about the ship in the sky, all connecting it in some way with the false peak.

The vicinity of the Dardanelles is the real home of mirages, and it is seldom that any vessel sails along the Syrian coast without seeing one or more. Oddly enough, the mirages of the Dardanelles are always the reflections of objects that can be seen with the naked eye and are invariably distorted in grotesque and fantastic caricatures of the things reflected. It is certainly startling to see a steamer bearing down with her masts where her water line and should be and the water line where the tops of the masts and funnel ought to show, while her decks are in the right place, thus adding to her uncanny appearance, but this is a frequent sight near the Dardanelles. There is one peculiar feature of the mirages which hover near the false peak—the real objects of which they are reflections are so far away that very often they are never sighted until long after the reflection has vanished, and sometimes not at all.—New York Press.

The Lion's Attack.

As to a lion's method of attack Frederick Courtenay Selous says in his book: "As a rule, I think, a lion seizes a sleeping man by the head, and in that case, unless it is a very old and weakly animal, death must usually be instantaneous, as its great fang teeth will be driven into the brain through the thickest negro skull." Similarly, when a lion attacks an animal it tries to get at the head or the throat—at the vitals of the animal. Says Mr. Selous: "My experience is that when a single lion tries to kill an ox or a buffalo it invariably seizes it near the muzzle with one paw and usually succeeds in either breaking its victim's neck or causing it to break it itself by its own weight in falling. When several lions attack an ox or a buffalo they will often bite and tear it all over and take a long time to kill it."

A TENDERFOOT'S REVENGE.

Bully of New Mexico Town Had the Tables Turned on Him.

The average tenderfoot is not a coward. He simply lacks ranch experience. An illustration of this fact occurred down in New Mexico several years ago. One day a pale looking, thin and sickly young man alighted from the train and put up at the little adobe hotel at Bernal Springs. The tenderfoot walked up to the bar and called for a bottle of soda pop. "Tain't allowed to drink that sort of stuff out here," said a toughy. "What you want is a stiff drink o' red liquor. Mr. Barkeeper, set out the pison for this young feller." "You have the best of me," replied the tenderfoot, "and I'll have to drink the stuff, but I hope the time may come when I can make you drink my choice of liquid."

The tenderfoot raised the glass and gulped down the whisky. Sandy had had his way about it, and he made no effort to comprehend the vague remark of the stranger. The tenderfoot left for a ranch down the Pecos the next day after the incident in the saloon, and he was forgotten until one afternoon more than a year afterward a strong, healthy looking young man rode up to the hotel on a broncho, dropped the bridle reins upon the ground and dismounted. He had the appearance of a typical young man of the range. His face was bronzed and his eyes clear and penetrating. "I owe a fellow a debt which I believe I will pay right now," the stranger said. No sooner had he made the remark than he walked off in the direction of Sandy, who had his gun in his right hand and was firing it into the air every few steps. The stranger approached Sandy, pulled his gun and unceremoniously dragged the bully up to the saloon and led him in that fashion up to the bar. "Get me a pan of water and set it upon the floor," he said to the barkeeper.

The order was complied with, Sandy standing there meekly, wondering what was going to happen to him. "Now, get down on the floor and drink water out of that pan like a dog," the former tenderfoot ordered. Sandy at first refused, but when the stranger began twirling his gun around on his forefinger and said the order must be obeyed he cowed fellow unlimbered and lay down upon the floor and began drinking water out of the pan.—Denver Field and Farm.

What Is the First Law of Nature?

"Self preservation is the first law of nature," answers Johnny Jones.

Correct, Johnny. Go right up to the head of the class.

This law applies to a community as well as to an individual. Under the severe operation of this law a town that does not take care of itself, that does not look after its own interests first, that does not look out for Number One, soon falls into a bad way.

That's just as sure as shootin'. It's the law.

We must obey the law or take the consequences. If we in this town and community do not work together for our own good, the mutual good of all of us, in all lines of business, we have only ourselves to blame if the place slides down the inclined plane instead of climbing the golden ladder of prosperity and progress.

For instance, if we do our retail trading with big city stores that have no interest in us except to get our money and keep it, local trade must suffer and shrink, town property values and farm land values must decrease—and there you are!

Johnny Jones, who knows the law, is a wise lad, but how about his papa and mamma?

Do they obey the first law as applied to the old home place? If they don't, Johnny may have to apply the law to himself when he grows up. He may have to go to the city to make a living.

Let's all think it over.

STORY OF THE FLOOD

One of the Strange Legends of the Yuma Indians.

CAUSE OF THE GREAT STORM.

The Tipping Up of the Earth Caused the Deluge Which Engulfed the World—The Mysterious Ark and the Escape of the Chosen Few.

To this day the great deluge recorded in the Bible is a mystery to the North American Indian. He will not be led to believe that the flood was brought about by the sins of man. He is equally unwilling to believe that it was the work of an angry God, as he could not see how the Almighty should be so unjust as to punish the Indians of America for the naughty things of a race of people across the ocean. Another reason which makes it still more difficult for the Indian to believe that the flood was a punishment to the world is the fact that with him there is no sin. In his language there is no such word, nor does he expect to be punished for any of his acts.

But though there is no equivalent to the word sin in the Indian language (nor in the Indian mind until the Christians came), the Indians have their philosophy in regard to what is commonly so termed. Some of their teachers (most of whom claimed to have been taught the philosophy of life and its laws directly by disembodied spirits or by ethereal beings from other planets) taught that as man lives here so is his life hereafter. If he is quarrelsome or warlike here, so he will be in the more spiritual life. If he is serene and contented here, so he will be there, etc.

The deluge, as described by the few who were miraculously saved, was the more grandly terrible in that it came on suddenly. From the highlands occupied by the Indians they saw the waves of the sea sweep in upon the land and recede, only to advance with immensely increased volume and stupendously huge breakers. Then there came a terrific storm that seemed to blow from all and in all directions. The storm caused huge waterspouts which appeared over the wild ocean as far as the eye could see. The terrified people fled to the mountains, but these were all soon to be submerged, with the exception of one. This mountain which alone remained uncovered by the flood is called Avee-hellah (Mountain of the Moon), yet today it is not a very high mountain.

For a while before the mountains became submerged there was a great calm, and a dense fog covered the earth. Then suddenly a mighty boat appeared to the awed view of the Indians. It approached and stopped at the several mountains still uncovered by the waters, and at each point where it touched, as if guided by invisible intelligence, the Indians, as if obeying an unspoken but potent command, entered the boat.

The boat rested first at a place called Avee-qua-lul (mountain peak), now Pilot Knob, on the border of Mexico. There was a mesa on the top of this mountain, though at this day it does not exist, and on this mesa the Indians first celebrated their delivery. This they did by playing sacred games, chanting sacred songs, etc. On rocks at the foot of this peak there are hieroglyphics in an unknown language, which some of the Indians believe were made by those who survived the flood.

Petrified driftwood is still to be seen two-thirds the distance up the sides of Avee-hellah, which drift, the Indians say, was deposited by the waves of the great flood.

The Indians, having rested for a time on the mountain peak, again entered the boat and were carried eastward, eventually to a small valley. Here they again rested, and then, leaving the boat, they wandered from one place to another, after a time returning to the valley. To their surprise, the boat was gone. It could not have floated away, for the land was dry whereon they had left it, the flood having subsided after a great calm of its waters. The boat could not have crumbled to pieces, for there had not been time for its decay. They could only conclude that the mysterious boat, having fulfilled its mission of preserving a few of their race, had disappeared as mysteriously as it had appeared.

The spot where the mysterious boat, or ark, had rested was marked by the Indians placing there a huge log. They called the place Quai-jo-para (boat's resting place). This spot is held sacred by the Indians, who will seldom point it out to strangers. Not many hundred years ago, it is said, some Indian warriors were passing the spot, and one of them to show his skepticism shot an arrow into the side of the great log. Immediately a stream of blood gushed from the spot pierced, and the skeptic fell dead. The story of the event was carried to all the near tribes, and since then Indians passing the place fear to even look furtively at the log.

A reason given by the Indians as the probable cause of the flood was that there was a tribe of Indians who, like Columbus, believed that the earth was not flat, but round, and to prove whether this theory were true thousands from the different tribes banded together and started out on a journey to find the edge of the earth if it was flat. The flood occurred soon after the Indians started on this journey, so that they really believed that those adventurers had reached the edge of the earth and their weight had tipped the earth to such an extent as to cause the water to rush in on the land.—Los Angeles Times.

LUDWIG THE LUNATIC

Patti Once Threw Him into a Frenzy of Madness.

A FREAK OF THE CRAZY KING.

He Frightened and Enraged the Great Diva by His Strange Whims, and When She Finally Sang For Him in Munich It Drove Him Wild.

When Patti was in the first heyday of her fame Ludwig II, the mad king of Bavaria, set his heart on having her sing for him at his private auditorium in Munich. He wrote letter after letter, begging, imploring, offering extravagant sums of money, but Patti resolutely refused to go. She had heard too many stories of Ludwig's freaks and was desperately afraid of him, but at last the king offered her a sum so enormous that it seemed ridiculous to refuse it. Then the singer plucked up courage and started for Munich. When she and her maid alighted at the station not even a carriage was there to meet them, and they had to inquire the name of the best hotel and call a cab. That was the first shock to the diva's nerves and temper. After luncheon she started out to see the town and incidentally to examine the posters announcing Europe's greatest singer. Not a mention of her name could she find. She rushed back to the hotel and told her maid to pack the trunks.

Just at that moment a resplendent officer delivered a letter from the king. The letter stated curtly that his majesty would wait for her at 7 o'clock precisely in the royal palace, where his singer in ordinary, Mme. Fischer, would give her further directions. Mme. Fischer would also sing with Mme. Patti the duets which his majesty wished to hear. A programme was enclosed. Patti wept with rage.

"I have never been treated so brutally," she said. "I shall leave at once. Tell the king so. I will not sing—never, never, never!" The officer pleaded with the irate prima donna. His majesty had been wild with excitement ever since he knew she would come and had not slept for three nights, so great was his joy at the prospect of hearing her.

"Besides," added the officer, "you know your king is—is—is!"

"Crazy," snapped Patti. "Yes, that's very comforting, isn't it? I don't know why I ever came." Just then she caught sight of this postscript:

"The king commands Mme. Patti to appear in pure white, without any color whatever, and not by any means to wear a satin gown, but soft wool. Silk is painful to his majesty."

"His majesty will have to be pained. I have no white woolen gown except my peignoir. I shall wear red velvet."

"Red!" groaned the officer. "Oh, no, no! Red sends his majesty into fits. If you appear in red, he will scream and have convulsions. Oh, do be patient, madame! I will bring Mme. Fischer to you. She understands the king's nerves. She will explain."

He fled from the room, and shortly after Mme. Fischer appeared upon the scene. She soothed Patti into good humor and also attacked the white wool peignoir and transformed it into a most becoming Greek robe.

Before 7 the royal carriage arrived at the hotel and Patti went to the palace. She was led through dimly lighted rooms and corridors into Ludwig's private theater, which was in utter darkness save for the moonlight that entered through the windows. Patti stood upon the dark stage, while an orchestra, somewhere out of sight, began a soft prelude. Through the gloom she could just make out a white face in the royal box opposite the stage. Not another auditor was in the great hall.

Patti felt the cold shivers creeping over her. She shook with nervousness and fear, and when she should have begun her aria not a sound could she make. She opened her mouth, but her throat was paralyzed, from nervous terror. There was a pause. The king sprang up and leaned forward out of the box, his white face gleaming in the moonlight. The violins repeated the prelude. Patti gathered herself together and made one heroic effort. Her voice rang out into the great empty place, and the king sank back into the dark box.

Patti, though badly scared, made the effort of her life and finished the aria from "La Traviata" triumphantly and stood flushed with victory. Dead silence. Not a sound came from the gloom before her. She went off the stage in a temper. Mme. Fischer was behind the scenes, and Patti waited with her for the signal to sing the next number. A messenger appeared at the door. His majesty had had enough music and had gone to his apartments. For a moment Patti stood stunned. Then she laughed. The rudeness was so colossal that it was funny. Mme. Fischer took the diva to supper and then home.

The next morning Mme. Fischer called at the hotel once more, accompanied by the court chamberlain, who bore the promised check, an autograph letter of thanks from the king and some jewels of great value. King Ludwig, Mme. Fischer said, was in one of his maddest moods, wild with regret, cursing himself and cursing Patti. He had walked the floor all night, groaning that he was a traitor, for Patti's voice had so ravished his senses that for one moment he had gone over to Italian music and had been false to Wagner, the one musician who alone had satisfied his majesty's soul.

"That was better than having bored him," added Patti, shrugging her shoulders.
