JOINT MEETING CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND TOB. B. OF T.

Large Attendance and Much Interest—Several Important Matters Discussed Another Joint Meeting Fri. Night

The Tobacco Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce met in joint session in the court house, Friday night at 8 o'clock. D. J. Whichard, president of the Chamber of Commerce and R. O. Jeffress, president of the Tobacco Board of Trade, presided over the meeting. H. B. Smith was requested to act as secretary, in the absence of the regular secretary of the chamber. All of the members of the organization of tobaccoists were present except one, and the attendance of the members of the Chamber of Commerce was very gratifying, it being far better than it has been at any meeting in quite a while.

In calling the meeting to order President Whichard expressed his gratification at having the members of the Tobacco Board of Trade present. He stated that the meeting was held in the interest and welfare of the community, and all who were present should feel free to suggest any measures that were for growth and improvement. Mr. Jeffress concurred in the remarks of Mr. Whichard. He stated that at the request of the Chamber of Commerce he had called the members of the Tobacco Board of Trade to that they might join with the chamber in its efforts for measures of improvement.

Mr. Whichard stated that the committee, composed of Mr. Jeffress, Mr. Person and himself, went before the Board of County Commissioners at their last meeting and urged the acceptance of the proposal of Hon. Jno. H. Small to have an expert road builder in the employ of the Federal government to construct a mile of good road somewhere in the county, and that the commissioners suggested the old plank road. The commissioners accepted the proposal, and the mile of road will be built west of Greenville at an early date. The president also stated that a committee had also gone before the Board of Aldermen requesting the improvement of Ninth street in the same way as the road. Alderman Flanagan stated to the meeting that owing to shortage in funds just now the aldermen are unable to do much in improving the streets, but that very likely Ninth street will be improved if the Norfolk & Southern railway will agree to haul the clay.

The bridge being constructed across Tar river was discussed very freely by a number of the members of both organizations. All of them deplored the slow, unsatisfactory progress being made toward its completion. The tone of some of the speeches did not indicate the best of feeling in the matter. It was said that the town, and especially the tobacco interests, had suffered to the extent of thousands of dollars, and that the people living on the north side of the river were being put to great inconvenience and loss on account of not having access to Greenville.

After many motions had been made and as many amendments offered, each being discussed in a lively manner, a committee composed of F. M. Wooten, chairman, and H. L. Carr and J. F. Brinkley, was appointed to investigate thoroughly the cause of the delays and the poor progress being made. The committee was empowered to visit any and all persons who are in any way connected with the construction of the bridge, furnishing materials, &c., and publish their report; they were also asked to announce in the local paper the date of the probable completion of the bridge, so that the people on the north side of the river may know what to depend upon as to being able to reach Greenville. A motion was also offered and adopted that the two bodies should meet again next Friday night to receive the report of the committee and take further action if it be necessary.

Dr. Laughinghouse was called upon to offer to the assembly the suggestions which he made last Monday night in reference to the Chamber of Commerce, its importance to the town, &c. The doctor did not mince words in his arraignment of the merchants here. He said that he saw in the assembly lawyers, doctors, farmers, tobaccoists, teachers, and a very small number of merchants. In fact, in his opinion, but for the regular attendance of one or two, the merchants could prove an alibi, so far as the meetings of the chamber were concerned.

He said that the chief object of the organization is to secure immigrants, to bring about growth and enlargement, and that in these things no one profits any more than the merchants; that in his opinion it is high time for them to work up and change their ways of doing. At the conclusion of his speech, Dr. Laughinghouse was heartily cheered.

Dr. James said that he endorsed most heartily what Dr. Laughinghouse had said; that there should be the fullest interest and co-operation by the merchants. The organization has accomplished much for the town, and with the injection of alertness and progressiveness on the part of the business men, many good things can be brought to us. A disinterested on-looker was heard to say, "some merchant has lost a great opportunity; if this town is what I think it is, if some merchant were here now to make a live speech, however short, he would make a goodly number of dollars in increased trade. Opportunities of this kind don't go begging in my town."

After some discussion a motion was adopted putting the secretary of the chamber on a salary basis; all necessary postage and stationary be furnished.

Ex-Gov. T. J. Jarvis made a very timely address urging more co-operation in Greenville's advance.

The meeting was a success, and the members who were present were very much gratified over the results. If the business men would take time to attend all the meetings they would only profit by doing so. Greenville is large enough for its citizens to see that the time has come to look at the town as an institution, not as a cross roads place where one can live and work for self all the time. A good, broad, public-spirited citizenship must come into existence here if the town is ever to be anything. It is utterly incomprehensible why, in the face of this fact, all men who have made their abiding place here will not take time to develop the institution, and make it progressive and alert, and create inducements and attractions so that growth may be sustained and increased and the individual profited thereby.

What the Chamber of Commerce and the Tobacco Board of Trade have accomplished in the short period of their existence has done more to advertise the town and lift it out of a common railroad station than any other influences that have worked in our midst in the history of the place. Men and brethren, the meeting Friday night was a live one; let the good work go on, work together, think together and strive for Greenville's betterment; the town's growth is the best way by far to benefit the individual, especially at this time. In a few short years Greenville will come to be what it ought to be and never can be without we first help ourselves, viz., the biggest and best tobacco market in the State, the centre of enormous agriculture interest, the home of population of strong, influential citizens, and the educational capital of the east in the best educational county in North Carolina.

JOHNNY J. JONES EXPO. SHOWS

Will Exhibit in Greenville one Solid Week Beginning Sept. 21st.

The Johnny J. Jones exposition which will arrive here Monday, Sept. 21st, under the auspices of the Hope Fire Company, will pitch their tents on the William, lot, corner Cotanch and Fifth streets. They have twelve big shows and each one gives a good, clear performance. The feature attraction of this company is Johnny J. Jones' big trained wild animal show which carries a score of priceless wild beasts. Capt. Auley Wilson the greatest known trainer of wild animals in the world and his two royal Bengal tigers. This act alone is well worth the price of admission.

Dare Devil Cyclone in his dip of death at 4 and 10:30 p. m. is worth coming miles to see. Free balloon ascension daily.

Don't forget the date and that the carnival will last six days and nights.

Tobacco Meeting at Kinston and Wilson

There was a meeting of Lenoir county farmers in Kinston Friday, in the interest of the Farmers Consolidated Tobacco Co. which is now doing business on the Kinston market. About a hundred farmers were present and they showed much interest as the business of the company was explained to them in speeches by Capt. J. R. Hutchings, Representative S. M. Jones and President O. L. Joyner. The company is doing a gratifying business at Kinston.

A similar meeting was held today in Wilson, where the company is also doing a good business this season. As the farmers learn more of the Farmers Consolidated Tobacco Co., and how it makes money for them, the company grows stronger. It is doing a good work.

Last Excursion This Season.

Next Tuesday you will have an opportunity of going to Norfolk at excursion rates by either the Atlantic Coast Line or Norfolk & Southern railroads. The fare from Greenville will be $2 for the round trip and the tickets will be good for return on any regular train up to and including Friday, 18th. These will be the last excursions of the season.

N. & S. AND A. C. L. IN COLLISION

Several Tarborians on Plymouth's Shoofly When Wreck Was Narrowly Averted.

A serious wreck was narrowly averted Wednesday evening of the 9th at the junction of the Atlantic Coast Line and Norfolk & Southern railroad at Plymouth, when a passenger train on the latter plowed into the Plymouth shoofly due here at 6 p. m. The colored coach of the shoofly was badly wrecked, but only one person injured, a colored woman, and she was able to walk to her home.

The engineers on each engine saw the trains would collide and the engineers on the N. & S. jammed on the air brakes, attempting to stop, while the A. C. L. train tried to pass the danger point.

There were several Tarborians on the shoofly, among whom were Mrs. T. B. Jacobs and C. W. Klingman. Nearly all the passengers made an effort to leave the coaches. Capt. Wooten was in charge of the wrecked train.

The wrecking crew from Rocky Mount hurried to the scene and the shoofly arrived in Tarboro three hours late. It was a narrow escape for the passengers on this train, many of whom were badly scared.—Tarboro Southerner.

Fifty-Nine Years in Office.

Why, certainly, Mr. John Laws was renominated by the Democratic county convention held on Saturday, August 29th, for register of deeds of Orange county, and that, too, by acclamation and without a dissenting vote. The Democrats of Orange have about made up their minds that this office belongs to Mr. Laws by right of possession, and they are going to continue to elect him as long as he lives. Mr. Laws recorded his first papers as public register for Orange county in August, 1849, 59 years ago last month. The Orange County Observer will pay a handsome reward for the names of any married couple who are now living in this county or elsewhere, who were married in Orange county, and whose marriage license was not issued by Mr. John Laws.—Hillsboro Observer.

What Life Insurance Does.

Lifts mortgages. Educates orphans. Preserves the family. Cultivates saving habits. Lightens the load of care. Keeps the wolf from the door. Gives repose to the rich man. SATURDAY, SEPT. 12, 1908

Wright keeps doing better and better with his flying machine.

Mr. Kern, Democratic candidate for vice-president, is to make a tour of the South. He will speak in Winston-Salem on the seventh of October.

The president says it was all a joke, that nobody took a shot at him while out driving. He ought to stop his reporters from joking over such a serious matter.

Mr. Bryan took a whack at Speaker Cannon while making some speeches in the latter's Illinois district Thursday. "Uncle Joe" is deservedly catching it on all sides.

The Republicans may brag of putting out good men for office, but it is the same old party and past experiences are enough to make the people afraid to give them the reins any more.

It must be painful to candidate Taft that he is bringing such little enthusiasm to the ranks of the Republicans. The whole set of them are realizing their slim chances of success.

The joint meeting of the Chamber of Commerce and Tobacco Board of Trade in the court house, was well worth while. The business men of the community thus coming together will result in much good, and we hope there will be many such meetings.

It looks like they may put in enough licks on old man Cannon to defeat him, and if they do there will be more "cussing" to the square yard in his section of Illinois than was ever heard in a like territory. The phonograph record makers might do a good business catching a few of his "cussing" stunts.

The Black Man's Portion.

The Piedmont Advocate, a paper published at Salisbury by and for colored people, said in its last issue: "The recent State convention of Republicans in Charlotte, was quite an ideal affair from the standpoint of the follower of the lily-white propaganda. Not a negro was there except one to assist in the decorations and one to carry water to super-heated delegates of the white variety. Nothing to suggest that there are 30,000 black voters in the Old North State." At one stage of the proceedings of the convention a black fringe of on-lookers was observed on the back row of the centre section of the balcony. It was rather a pathetic spectacle. The Star of Zion, colored, of this city, said that the colored spectators had at first sat toward the front of the balcony but a policeman approached them and in kindly manner told them to move back. They asked why? and were told that "the people up there say so"—the officer indicating the platform.

The black does really appear to be out of it. Once the sinew of the Republican party of North Carolina, that party is now ashamed of him and afraid of political association with him, and the Democratic party doesn't need and doesn't want him. Sampson was never more completely shorn of his strength.—Charlotte Observer.

A DESPERATE CHANCE.

Effect of the Excitement of Battle on a Wounded Man.

Amos Chapman was fifteen years in the government employ as a scout on the plains. During his life of constant peril and exposure, writes Mr. Randall Parrish in "The Great Plains," one of his most heroic deeds was performed while he was bearing dispatches for General Miles from his camp on McClellan creek to Camp Supply, Indian Territory. The dispatch party consisted of six men. Early in the morning, after a hard night's ride, they were suddenly attacked near the Washita river by a band of over a hundred Kiowa and Comanche warriors. Captain Dodge thus describes what followed:

The first intimation of the presence of Indians was a volley which wounded every man of the party. In an instant the Indians appeared on all sides.

Dismounting and abandoning their horses, the brave band of whites moved together for a hundred yards to a buffalo wallow, a shallow natural depression in the prairie.

Chapman and Dixon, being but slightly wounded, worked hard and fast to deepen this depression, and as soon as it was sufficiently deep to afford some cover it was occupied and the work continued from within.

Smith had fallen from his horse at the first fire and was supposed to be dead. Chapman said, "Now, boys, keep those infernal redskins off me, and I will run down and pick up Smith and bring him back before they can get at me."

Laying down his rifle, he sprang out of the buffalo wallow, ran with all speed to Smith, seized and attempted to shoulder him.

"I lay down," said Chapman, "and got his chest across my back and his arms around my neck and then got up with him. It was as much as I could do to stagger under him, for he couldn't help himself a bit. By the time I had got twenty or thirty yards about fifteen Indians came for me at full speed on their ponies."

The boys in the buffalo wallow opened on the Indians, and Amos ran for it.

"When I was within about twenty yards of the wallow," he continued, "a little old scoundrel whom I had fed fifty times rode almost on to me and fired. I fell, with Smith on top of me, but as I didn't feel pain I thought I had stepped in a hole.

"The Indians couldn't stay around there a minute. The boys kept it red hot. So I jumped up, picked up Smith and got safe into the wallow.

"Amos," said Dixon, "you are badly hurt."

"No, I am not," said I.

"Why, look at your leg!" And, sure enough, the leg was shot off just above the ankle joint, and I had been walking on the bone and dragging the foot behind me, and in the excitement I never knew it, nor have I ever had any pain in my leg to this day."

Saves Time.

An old millionaire refused point blank to lend £50 to a bosom friend. "Well, I did not expect that of you," said the would be borrower, rising and preparing to leave indignantly. "I will never forgive you for this refusal." "Of course you won't, my dear fellow," replied the old-screw, with the utmost calmness, "but if I'd lent you the £50 you wouldn't have paid me, and we should have quarreled about that, so it's as well to get the row over at once. Good morning."—Illustrated Bits.

CONSTIPATED?

When Diamonds Burn.
 The jeweler at closing time was putting his diamonds in a huge safe.

"But why do you bother to do that when two watchmen walk the shop all night long?"
 "On account of fire," the jeweler replied. "Diamonds are nothing but coal—carbon—they burn beautifully. Their hardness makes us think them indestructible, but as a matter of fact a fire of diamonds would be the briskest, prettiest thing in the world. Put a handful of diamonds on a plate and set a light to them. They will burn with a hard, gemlike flame till nothing is left. There will be no smoke, no soot, and at the end the plate will be as clean as though just washed—not the slightest particle even of ash will remain."—New York Press.

The Cat's Pins.

Martha had tormented Dinah, her kind old cat, for more than a half hour without an interval of peace, when she gave Dinah's tail such an unmerciful pull that the poor old cat decided that forbearance had ceased to be a virtue, so she resorted to her claws for the first time in her life when with the child. Dinah gave Martha's little fat hand such a scratch that the blood fairly trickled, and she, with tears and blood streaming, went to Dinah with all the wrath in her voice she could command and said, "Give me those pins out of your hand this minute, miss!"—Delineator.

His Definition of Whisky.

The eminent British surgeon, Sir Victor Horsley, not only enjoys the reputation of being one of the leading pathologists, but he is also known for his wit. Entering his club, the Athenaeum, one day, a friend said to him: "Hello, Horsley! Can you tell me what whisky is yet?" "The most popular poison in the world, my dear sir," was the prompt retort.

TRIALS FOR ANIMALS

Curious Custom That Prevailed In the Middle Ages.

PROSECUTED FOR HOMICIDE.

A Bull That Killed a Man Found Guilty, Sentenced to Death and Executed—Fate of a Cook That Was Charged With Having Laid an Egg.

Among the many curious customs of the past is recorded a singular feature of the jurisprudence of the middle ages, when animals were indicted for injuries inflicted upon human beings. The custom was not abolished in France until the middle of the eighteenth century, and the French court records show that at least ninety-two trials took place between 1120 and 1741.

There is some Biblical precedent for these proceedings, for in the twenty-first chapter of Exodus one finds, "If an ox gore a man or a woman that they die, then the ox shall be stoned and his flesh shall not be eaten."

An early instance of the custom was in 1314, when a bull escaped from a farmyard in a village in France in the duchy of Valois and gored a man to death. The Count of Valois, being informed of the case, directed that the bull be captured and formally prosecuted for homicide. This was done, and evidence was given by persons who had seen the man attacked and killed. The bull was thereupon sentenced to suffer death, which was inflicted by strangulation, after which the carcass was suspended from a tree by the hind legs.

In 1386 a sow was executed in the square of Falaise for having caused the death of a child, and three years later a horse was condemned to death at Dijon for having killed a man. In 1457 a sow and her six young ones were tried at Lavegny on the charge of having killed and partially eaten a child. The sow was convicted and condemned to death, but the little ones were acquitted on the ground of their extreme youth and inexperience, the bad example of their mother and the absence of direct evidence of their having partaken of the atrocious feast.

One of the most grotesque of these trials took place in Basel when a farmyard cock was tried on the absurd charge of having laid an egg. It was contended in support of the prosecution that eggs laid by cocks were of inestimable worth for use in certain magical preparations, that a sorcerer would rather possess a cock's egg than the elixir of life and that Satan employed witches to hatch such eggs, from which proceeded winged serpents most dangerous to mankind.

The prisoner's advocate admitted the facts of the case, but contended that no evil intention had been proved and that no evil result had taken place. Besides, the laying of an egg was an involuntary act and as such was not punishable by law; also there was no record of the devil having made a compact with an animal. The public prosecutor stated in reply that the evil one sometimes entered into animals, as in the case of the swine which drowned themselves in the sea of Galilee.

So the poor creature was convicted not as a cock, but as a sorcerer or perhaps the devil in the form of a cock, whereupon the bird and the egg that was attributed to it were solemnly burned at the stake.

Even stranger than this were the proceedings instituted in 1445 and 1487 against certain beetles which had made havoc in the vineyards of St. Julian. Advocates were named on behalf of the vine growers and the beetles respectively, but by a singular coincidence the insects disappeared when cited to answer for the mischief they had done, and the proceedings were in consequence abandoned.

That was in 1445. In 1487, however, they reappeared, and a complaint was thereupon addressed to the vicar general of the bishop of Maurienne, who named a judge and also an advocate to represent the beetles. A compromise was finally agreed upon, wherein the vine growers consented to cede the beetles certain fields to their exclusive use. Some time after the beetles, through their attorney, protested that there was a right of way through these fields which would be to their detriment. Consequently the case had to begin again, but how it ended is not known, owing to the mutilation of the records.—F. C. Evans in New York Post.

English Money Lenders.

An English clergyman, being pestered with offers from usurers to advance him sums of money, had the curiosity to answer one by asking on what terms he would loan him £250. By return of post there arrived a letter asking particulars of his rent, life insurance and other intimate matters. To this he made no reply. Then followed a note asking him to call in London on a certain day, to which he sent an answer that he did not intend to call and that the money lender need not trouble himself further in the matter. But the affair was not at an end. Two days later a registered letter arrived, inclosing £250 in notes and a form to be filled up, promising to pay £300 in three months. The clergyman then put the money, the form and the correspondence in the hands of his solicitor, who after three weeks' delay returned the notes to the usurer and got a guinea out of them for his costs.—London Globe.

A WRECK ON THE ROAD

PLIGHT OF THE ENGINEER.

The Chances He Has to Take and His Fate Should He Become Crippled in a Smashup—There Are Some Things Worse Than Physical Pain.

"I just dropped in to tell you that the coroner's jury has exonerated you from all blame for the wreck. They are going to hold the block tower man."

The old engineer turned his pain drawn face toward me. A white capped nurse gently brushed back the wild hairs from his forehead.

"Thank you, miss," he said, "and you, too, sir, for the good news. I knew they couldn't blame it on me, because it was white at Mentor. Poor Denny, he'd tell you so, too, if he was alive. 'All white!' he shouted when we came round the curve, and I gave him the answer, 'All white!' and pulled her wide open. Then we struck the empties on the siding, and—well, you know the rest." He wiped a trembling hand across his eyes as if trying to blot out some horrible vision.

His eyes began to sparkle, and a bit of color flashed into his pale cheeks. "I suppose you fellows think I opened her up and went into those boxes just for fun." A smile flitted over his lips, and then he grew serious. "Say, did it ever come to your mind that an engineer might be as anxious about his own life as he is about the lives of those who are riding behind him? My wife and little one—don't you suppose my life counts for something with them?"

"Did you ever stop to think what a collision like that at Mentor means to the engineer? Just try to figure yourself in his place. He rides in four square feet of cab room, surrounded by a mass of levers, rods and the like. Ahead of him is about three miles of boiler pipe, carrying 200 pounds of steam pressure and enough hot water to cook the meat off his bones in a jiffy. Clattering at his back is 6,000 gallons of water and 26,000 pounds of coal. Under him is 200,000 pounds of engine, and behind there is 600,000 pounds of train. Altogether he is running along ahead of 800,000 pounds of steel, hardwood and brass held to an eighty pound rail by three-quarters of an inch of wheel flange.

"Why, when one of those big Russian battleships fired a broadside at the Japanese the whole thing amounted only to 24,000 pounds, so the papers say. And that 24,000 pounds traveling eight miles a minute would strike a Japanese ship eight miles away with an impact only one-tenth of the force we hit the empties at Mentor."

"Of course I was the engineer and they depended on me. There is always a lot of fine talk about engineers having the lives of several hundred passengers in their hands. That's all very true, but you don't want to overlook the fact that the engineer's life is right there along with the others. We all take chances, the train crew as well as the passengers, only our chances are slimmer. I had one chance in 500 of being killed, or one in twenty-five of getting right where I am now, but a passenger on the train had one chance in about 3,000,000 of being killed and one in 130,000 of being hurt."

"I see that a lot of people were killed and a whole lot more hurt. I don't want to be a grumbler, but it appears to me that you fellows have kinder overlooked the fact that both of my legs are gone. Of course that might not mean much to you, but if you realized, as I do, that for the rest of my life it is going to be my job to hobble out into the middle of some country road and wave a white flag as every train goes by—if you could realize what that means to an engineer—to hear the mocking toot of the whistle as she comes up to the crossing and to see the sympathetic salute of the engineer and fireman as they go flying by—I tell you, my boy, there are some things worse than physical pain."

His eyes filled with tears. The nurse gently wiped them away and softly stroked back the hair.

"I wouldn't talk any more now," she said.

"All right, miss," he replied, putting out his hand to me. "I always obey orders."—B. R. Winslow in New York Tribune.

Not Very Flattering.

When the artist had finished his scenic sketch of the stretch of woods skirting the suburban road, he looked up and beheld a serious faced Irishman whom he had previously noticed digging in a trench by the roadside gazing queerly at his canvas.

"Well," said the artist familiarly, "do you suppose you could make a picture like that?"

The Irishman mopped his forehead a moment and, with a deep sigh, answered, "Sure; a mon c'n do annything if he's driv to it!"—Argonaut.
