TUCKER, WHITE AND MOORE NOMINATED

By the Second Primary Held on Saturday. New Man for Register of Deeds, Others Renominated

The second Democratic primary to select nominees for the offices of sheriff, treasurer and register of deeds was held Saturday. As the result of the first primary two weeks previous had been very close, there was even more interest in the second contest. The candidates and their friends did much work around the polling places and there was a large vote. There were surprises in the result of the vote at some precincts, but of course surprises may be expected in an election.

Below we give the tabulated returns from the several precincts. These figures are not official and there may be some slight changes when the executive committee meets Tuesday to canvass the returns, but there will be no change of consequence.

The figures show that L. W. Tucker, present sheriff, is renominated over S. I. Dudley by a majority of 167. S. T. White, the present treasurer, is renominated over W. B. Wilson by a majority of 199. W. M. Moore was nominated for register of deeds over R. Williams, the present incumbent, by a majority of 423.

Quite a number delegates and ministers are expected. All are cordially invited to attend these services. Our people will throw their doors open to the large numbers that are expected.

On Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stocks, their daughter Miss Lula and Robert McGlohon were united in matrimony. Quite a number of relatives and friends attended the marriage. Rev. E. T. Philips, of Ayden, officiated. Immediately after the ceremony quite a number accompanied the bride and groom to the home of the grooms brother Mr. Henry McGlohon, where a sumptuous repast was served. They have our best wishes for a happy and prosperous journey together through life.

Mrs. W. L. House came in from a visit of several days at Hanrahan.

STATE NEWS

Items of Happenings Over the State Gathered from Our Exchanges

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 12—With her throat cut in three places and her windpipe severed completely Miss Cynthia Norman, living four miles from Charlotte on the Statesville road, was discovered this morning about 9 o'clock lying semi-prostrate on the ground 30 yards from the back door of the farm house which is her home. She was carried into the house and medical aid quickly summoned, while neighbors rendered all the assistance possible to the woman, whose hold on life is declared to be so slim that she may die at any moment.

MONDAY, SEPT. 14, 1908

It is all over now but the election.

The winners spent a happy Sunday.

There was plenty of hard work done, and it counted.

To the credit of the defeated candidates it can be said that they take their defeat gracefully.

Raleigh is more concerned over mad dogs just now than politics. Either trouble is bad enough.

Some of the candidates who got left have already declared that they are in the running for two years hence.

The ticket is named. Now show as much interest on the third of November and elect them by a large majority.

The Charlotte Observer takes sides with the flying machine all right, but you cannot induce it to have faith in the blood hound.

Tom Watson, the Populist nominee for president, is doing some claiming. He says he is the only Democratic candidate in the field.

According to the Messenger, the citizens of Washington are seeing snakes, the real article and plenty of them. Ten were killed in one yard, and it was a preacher's yard, too.

It can be truthfully said that no mistakes have been made in the nominations, for they are all good men. The same can be said of the candidates who were defeated, they are all likewise good men and it would have been no mistake to have nominated either of them.

Chicago is not going to miss getting her share of it out of the presidential campaign. The Chicago Association of Commerce will have its annual banquet on the evening of October 7th. Mr. Taft, Republican candidate and Mr. Bryan, Democratic candidate, have both been invited as guests of honor and both have accepted. Both of them will make speeches but not of a political nature, as the banquet will be a non-political one.

A Newspaper Has an Inestimable Value to a Town.

After the Tribune cut out its daily edition, the folks of Concord began to appreciate what they had been enjoying, but which they did so little toward supporting. A newspaper has an inestimable value to any town, and the more it is patronized the greater its worth to the community. There is no better index to a town's business than the newspaper and the advertisements it carries from home concerns. And there is no bigger return given for money invested than that given by newspapers for the dollars invested in its space.—Albermarle Enterprise.

REMARKABLE COMBAT.

A Battle to the Death Between a Donkey and a Wolf.

A combat of most unusual character occurred near Paso del Norte, Mexico. The participants were a burro, or little Mexican donkey, and a wolf of a very large species, known as the lobo. During the night his burros had broken out of the stable and wandered several miles out into the country. His owner, going to seek him, was an eyewitness to his fight with the wolf and thus described it:

"My burro was quietly grazing in a little grassy dell lying between two walls of jutting, ragged rock when the wolf came trotting along with his head close to the ground, as if trying to trail something—this being characteristic of that species. He did not see Dandy—as I call my burro—until he was nearly on him, and it was not till then that, raising his head, the latter saw the wolf. The moment they set eyes on each other I could see that a fight would surely follow. The wolf, with his jaws snapping and growling ferociously, made at Dandy, who wheeled sharply around and let fly with his heels, tumbling his enemy over and over and nearly pounding the life from him. This performance was repeated again and again until the wolf seemed to realize that the job on hand was decidedly more than he had bargained for. The last contact of Dandy's heels had sent him with a crash against the hard rocks that walled in the dell and stunned him for a minute or two. So, on recovering, he changed his tactics. Running up to Dandy, he waited until those terrible heels were elevated in the air, when, jumping around with surprising agility, he dodged the kick and made for his antagonist's throat. The latter, however, was on the lookout, and the lobo found that the burro's other end was also armed for battle. Before he could fasten on any part of that lively animal he was caught at the back of his ears by a set of powerful teeth, and in a second his neck was broken. Notwithstanding the fact that the wolf was killed instantly, Dandy held on to him and occupied himself for several minutes with beating his vanquished foe's body up and down on the ground. Then, feeling satisfied that life was extinct, he dropped the carcass, and upon calling him he followed me home as though nothing had happened to disturb his equanimity. After the boys heard the story they unanimously agreed that he was indeed a 'dandy.'"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Nelson and the Spaniards.

There is an amusing anecdote about that gruff sea dog Nelson. Two Spanish captains came on board with a request to be allowed to see "the greatest seaman in the world." Nelson grumbled, but gave in and went on deck, forgetting that "at that moment his legs were bound up at the knees and ankles with pieces of brown paper soaked in vinegar and tied on with red tape." This had been done to allay the irritation arising from mosquito bites. Quite forgetting his attire and the extraordinary appearance which it presented, Lord Nelson went on deck and conducted the interview with the Spanish captains with such perfect courtesy that his singular appearance was quite obliterated by the charm of his manner, and the Spaniards left the ship with their high opinion of him thoroughly confirmed.

Paid For His Opinion.

On a tour in Canada Rudyard Kipling had a little disagreement with the landlord of the hotel at which he was staying, says London Tit-Bits. Just before leaving the hotel the famous author asked to see the proprietor, and upon that worthy appearing he was greeted thus: "I want to tell you that of all the hotels under the shining sun I have never seen one that for unmitigated, all round, unendurable discomfort could equal yours." When Kipling got his bill one item in it read, "To impudence, $3."

VOODOO DOCTORS.

Belief of Negroes In Their Ability to Work "Spells."

A well educated and clever negro in Philadelphia related, with obvious sincerity, an experience of his own with a famous voodoo "doctor" of that city who had grown rich from his wizardry.

"Once a person had a writ out against me," this negro said. "The constable had it. The magistrate was set against me. I went and got a charm from the 'doctor.' I met my enemy, but I was not seen. I met the constable, and he walked by and never noticed me. The magistrate did what he had never done before—forgot all about it. The voodoo stopped it all."

This same negro related another incident of his experience:

"Once I was nearly killed by a voodoo black cat, which used to come into the house. I threw a stick and hit it. It was a witch. It tormented me. I was ridden in dreams like a horse. I suffered terribly. I was dying. I went to the voodoo 'doctor.' I paid him $5 for a spell. That night I awoke. The window was open; the moon was shining. I saw the little black witch hovering up and down there. She was smaller than in her own body. She wore a very big, old fashioned bonnet. Her face was like that of the cat. But she did not come any closer to me. Then she faded away. That ended it."

The belief is prevalent among the negroes that witches have power to assume the forms of various animals. In South Carolina a means employed to guard against such visitations is to scatter rice or similar small grains thickly over the floor in the form of a cross. Before the witch can approach her victim she must devour every grain. This task is too tedious for her patience, and she takes herself off.

OUR ERRATIC SENSES

Some of the Curious Facts Recorded by Physiologists.

THE PHENOMENA OF SOUND.

Squeals of Mice and the Lowest Notes of an Organ are Inaudible to Some Persons—Peculiarities of the Delicate Sense of Smell.

If you shade the eyes, you weaken your sense of hearing. Try it with a watch and the result will surprise you. If you sip a glass of cold water, you will increase for a short time your power of vision. If you fill the mouth with water, you will greatly strengthen your sense of smell.

Many similar curious facts about the senses are told by physiologists.

There is a multitude of sounds made in the world every day, for instance, which we cannot hear, however close they may be. Every sound must last a certain time in order to be heard by the ear. If it is an extremely feeble sound it must last quite two seconds or we cannot hear it. But, no matter how long it lasts, we cannot hear it if it is a very low or a very high note. Extremely small animals emit such high notes that we never hear them. Some people cannot even hear the squeal of mice. The lowest notes of an organ are mere rumbling noises to most people, and some cannot hear them at all.

It is by means of the external ear we judge the direction from which sound comes. Stand facing a clock, place your hands in front of your ears, with the palms turned back, close your eyes; you will then think the clock is behind you.

Why can some animals smell more keenly than others? It is a question of the space within the nose capable of smelling. In man this space is very small—less than one-fourth of a square inch. In dogs and most mammals it is very much larger. The porpoise has no sense of smell. Then comes man, and also the monkeys, whales and all kinds of fowl and birds, with very feeble smelling power. When people talk of vultures scenting dead bodies they make a mistake. Lions, tigers, wolves, etc., can scent them at long distances, but vultures depend on their sense of sight.

The sense of smell is exceedingly delicate. If one ounce of musk were divided into 15,000,000,000 parts one of these infinitesimal parts would be perceptible by the average person's nose. On the other hand, many people have no power to smell some substances, such as mignonette, vanilla, violets and prussic acid.

Taste is curious in the fact that different parts of the tongue appreciate different flavors. At the tip we perceive sweet tastes best, at the sides acid tastes and at the back bitter tastes. Substances must be dissolved in order to be tasted, and a dry morsel in a dry mouth has no flavor. This is why smokers cannot taste well. Their mouth glands, which manufacture saliva, are paralyzed by the tobacco. Very hot or very cold things are scarcely tasted at all. If you want to get the best flavor from your food it must be at some temperature between 50 and 95 degrees.

Every one knows how easily the sense of sight is deceived by optical puzzles. But a curious deception is practiced on us all throughout our lives, and no one ever perceives it. There is a blind spot in the eye where the optic nerve enters. In everything we look at, therefore, there is a little gap where we see nothing. But no one is aware of it, because it has been the case since we first opened our eyes.

In estimating distance we judge by the experience we gain in walking. The eye itself cannot judge distances. A near hill and a distant mountain will each form an image of the same size on the eye. We know the mountain is farther away than the hill because there are more intervening objects. But we can often make an estimate of distance, in a curious way, by the muscles of the eyeball. In order to focus a near object we must bulge the lens and to focus a distant object we must flatten the lens. The amount of muscular labor used in doing this gives us an idea of the distance of the object.

A man seems much thinner in dark than in light clothing. All black things, in fact, appear smaller than white things of the same size. An image remains on the eye for some time after looking at an object. If the thing is very bright the image remains a long time, and sometimes if you look directly at the sun you will carry the image of it around with you for days.

Color blind people have a defective musical sense. They confuse different notes, and, curiously, the confusion of green blind people differs from the confusion of red blind people. Colors strengthen the sense of taste. Red apples and tomatoes and strawberries and green pickles taste better than the selfsame vegetables and fruit when they are paler.

For feeling we have a variety of nerves. Some spots on the skin feel pain, some warmth, some cold and some simple touch. The tip of the finger has a much better sense of touch than the forearm or the cheek. But the cheek and the forearm are far better judges of heat. In the white of the eye we can feel neither touch, heat nor cold—only pain alone—but the red lining of the eyelids can feel scarcely anything but cold. The mouth, as every one knows, can enjoy tea or coffee at a temperature that would give great pain to the hands or feet.

A KING'S CARRIAGE.

Old Fashioned and Elaborate Vehicle Used in England.

England's state carriage is one of the most costly and splendid in the world. It was built in 1761 at a cost of $36,000 on the occasion of the marriage of George III. and has ever since carried the English kings and queens on all high state occasions. Sir William Chambers designed the vehicle, which weighs four tons.

Despite its many years' service its great wheels, gear and body are said to be as sound as when built, and it looks as if it would go on forever. Steel springs were unknown when the coach was built, and its ponderous yet dainty, luxurious body is suspended on leather braces, not unlike those of the old Concord stagecoaches of America. Its balance is so perfect that a touch of the finger is enough to set the body swinging on the big creaking straps which brace the carved and gilded tritons supporting the driver's seat and lammer cloth. The length of the vehicle is twenty-four feet, and it is twelve feet high.

The elaborate carvings cost more than the carriage proper, the coach builder's bill having been less than $9,000, while that of the carver was more than $10,000. Something of the character of the ornamentation may be guessed from the fact that the artist Cipriani received $1,500 for painting the panels and that the late maker's charge was about $4,000, the crimson satin interior of the carriage being most elaborately upholstered.

The preparation of the royal equipage for state occasions is a real sight. Six pairs of milk white horses from the royal stud are always used, and all wear false tails. The coachman, in powder and curls, mounts his seat with the aid of a ladder, but does not really drive, postillions on the horses and state grooms who walk beside them being in command of the team.—Philadelphia Press.

YOUNG COCOANUTS.

The Trick of Opening Them as Practiced by the Tahitians.

"Husking a cocoanut is one of the simplest looking operations in the world, but I have not seen the white man who could do it effectively," writes Beatrice Grimshaw in her book, "In the Strange South Seas." Every native of Tahiti is apparently born with the trick.

A stick is sharply pointed at both ends, and one end is firmly set in the ground. The nut is then taken in the hands and struck with a hitting and tearing movement combined on the point of the stick, so as to split the thick, intensely tough covering of dense coir fiber that protects the nut.

The nut comes forth white as ivory, about the same shape and size as the brown old nuts that go by ship to England and America, but much younger and more tender, for only the smallest of the old nuts, which are not wanted in the islands for copra making, are generally exported.

A large knife is used to crack the top of the nut all around, like an egg-shell, and the drink is ready, a draft of pure water, slightly sweet and just a little aerated, if the nut has been plucked at the right stage.

There is no pleasanter or more refreshing draft in the world, and it has not the least likeness to the "milk" contained in the cocoanuts of commerce. No native would drink from old nuts for fear of illness, as they are considered both unpleasant and unwholesome. Only the milk of half grown nuts is used for drinking, and even these will sometimes hold a couple of plints of liquid.

The water of the young cocoanut is food and drink in one, having much nourishing matter held in solution. On many a long day of hot and weary travel I had cause to bless the refreshing and restoring powers of heaven's best gift to man in the tropics, the never failing cocoanut.

Settled the Ownership.

"There was a quaint old judge who used to live in the Pine Tree State," said a lawyer, "One of his decisions gained him the title of the 'Maine Solomon.' Two women came before this magistrate with a fine, fat pullet, each declaring that it belonged to herself. The magistrate from his high seat frowned heavily at the first woman. 'Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Jones?' he asked her. 'No, indeed, it don't, sir,' she replied. Then he turned to the other woman. 'Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Smith?' 'It certainly does not,' the second woman replied.

"The pullet," the magistrate then decreed, "does not belong to Mrs. Jones, nor does it belong to Mrs. Smith. The pullet is mine. Janitor, take it round to the house and give it to my cook."

A Great Change.

First Gentleman (entering the apartment of second gentleman)—About a year ago you challenged me to fight a duel. Second Gentleman (sternly)—I did, sir. First Gentleman—And I told you that I had just got married and I did not care to risk my life at any hazard. Second Gentleman (haughtily)—I remember, sir. First Gentleman (bitterly)—Well, my feelings have changed. Any time you want to fight let me know.—Human Life.

Beneficial Exercise.

"Are you taking any exercise for your health?" asked the wolf of the fox.

"Oh, yes," responded the latter. "and I am improving rapidly! I am taking part in an amateur country club fox hunt"—Baltimore American.

It is called strong drink because it can throw any man who tackles it.—Dallas News.
