THE MAIL ORDER BUSINESS

What Do You Think About It?—Other Things Discussed.

Speaking of things in general, hasn't Greenville got dogs enough to have a little sensation, I wonder if any body in town can give an accurate idea as to the number of dogs in this old town. Of course the writer has an idea, but it is taken off hand from a bird's eye view of main street. I should say from what I have seen that there is in the neighborhood of "forty-seven" hundred. But of course if anyone else has seen a less number he is entitled to his opinion. But according to my calculation as based upon the aforesaid figures half the population of this burg consists of dog meat. And, while I think of it, can't somebody rig up an ordinance that will keep the aforesaid part of the population off the sidewalks like they do the bicycles? I'll wager a peck of peas to a pint of peppermint that if the dogs in this town could vote there never would be a chance to change the town administration.

Along with its dogs the old town has many things it doesn't particularly suffer for, and is sadly in need of several things she hasn't got. We are a peculiar race of folks anyhow. For the last coon's age or two our inhabitants have sat around the store doors and street corners whittling white pine, chewing the rag about a slow town. Of course every town has got this selfsame class of folks, and it is absolutely necessary that while in their deep seances of thought and logic the hands be engaged in whittling a stick of white pine.

The other day I heard a groceryman grumbling and wondering what in the thunder was the matter with trade, and that very fellow had just come from the postoffice, where he had just been to mail an order to Don Money-maker for some stuff that his women folks wanted, and which he could readily have purchased from one of his customers in the dry goods line. The dry goods merchant wasn't getting the support that he should have had and consequently he was squeezing on his grocery bill. There are lady clerks in town ordering stuff from such firms, Don Money-maker, Cashional Cloak Co., and Caesar Rowbuck & Co. and that are continually complaining of low wages and cussing out the town in peppery style and in feminine cuss words. There are men in town engaged in banking, manufacturing, tobacco business, and sundry pursuits, that order goods elsewhere (booze excepted in this discussion) or who allow their wives and daughters to do so, and then hang on to the old town for bread and meat, and never miss an opportunity to abuse it to the king's taste.

These folks will all tell you different reasons for their acts, how that the home merchant doesn't keep the stuff, etc., but they can't expect them to have it under these circumstances; and then if they haven't got it they can get it just as cheap and just as good as these mail-bag cronies. It might be well to remark that in higher society circles of the burg, it is very fashionable indeed to remark that "this shenanagin or this lace hangaround came from Neew York", eyes to the ceiling and hands to the side.

We folks, Mr. Editor, are too small to be so large. The men in this town who have got money

ROBBER CAUGHT.

The Assailant of Mr. Guss Mills Now in Jail.

John B. Hardy, the robber of Mr. Gus Mills, was caught at Grifton Wednesday afternoon and brought here and placed in jail. Mr. W. C. Hines, who captured him, told us this morning that his dogs tracked him from the scene of the crime to the home of his father, Alfred Hardy, about a mile away. Old man Hardy met him at the door of the house and refused to let him search for the criminal. He had a shot gun and stated that he had just started out to help catch the robber as he had heard the dogs coming and knew that they were after him. Mr. Hines then took his dogs back to the scene of the crime and put them the scent again. They went right back to the same place. Then Mr. Hines came to Greenville, got a warrant and went down to Grifton on the 11 o'clock train. He having received information that Hardy had been seen going that way and was expected to try to board the train there and get away. The police at Grifton had been notified and they had Hardy under arrest when the train arrived.

Hardy's shoes fitted the tracks around the scene of the crime. Alford Hardy was arrested, but was released on bail.

Another Greenville Boy Rises.

Leon E. Pender left this morning for New York, where he takes a position as assistant professor of physics in Columbia University. This is a compliment to another one of our Greenville boys and speaks well for his first teacher; Prof. Ragsdale and for Trinity College, where he was trained for this responsible position in the great institution of learning.

are too dog-gone close to breathe free and won't invest their funds in town building projects; and those who haven't got the money are so spendthrift they never will have any, and here we are.

Another thing that hurts us is pure timidity regarding public affairs. If some official commits an error the people stand around on the corners and whisper sweet and low as if the elements were about to take up the cause of the aforesaid maligned (?) official. And if the matter reaches the council chamber of the aldermen they refuse to publish the matter and in dire fear proceed to smear it on the minutes.

Do It Now.

Editor Reflector:

When the city fathers let the contract for putting down side walks on Evans street and Dickinson avenue, did they give the contractor the privilege of blocking traffic on these streets by dumping his crushed stone in them? It strikes me that this kind of thing should not be allowed. Not only does it block traffic, but does it not injure the pavement that has so recently been put down?

Heavy wagons running over the crushed stone which is scattered all over the streets will chip off edges of the brick and cause them to wear out in a short time.

Have the trouble remedied, City Fathers, and take care of the pavement as well as traffic. X

NEGROES IN SCHOOL STRIKE.

Practically All Blacks in the City Demand Mixing of Races.

Alton, Ill., Sept. 13.—Practically all the entire negro school population of Alton is on a strike to enforce the State supreme court's recent decision in favor of mixed schools. Seventy-five negro pupils were refused admission to white schools yesterday, when the terms began, and many more today the superintendent formally accepting their applications to comply with the court's decision, but immediately transferring the colored children to the Douglass and Lovejoy negro schools, claiming the white schools lack room for the applicants.

Today only 26 of the 400 negro pupils attended the negro schools. Negro mothers swarmed at white schools today, insisting on their children's admittance, but police squads maintained order and will remain on guard until the trouble ends.

Timber Lands as Permanent Investments.

During the past twenty years timber lands have constantly increased in value and owners have derived a profit from their holdings due this appreciation. This is a speculative, although legitimate profit. Timberlands are capable of yielding an additional profit independent of the increase in the value of the stumpage, which is due to the annual growth of the timber. This profit, which comes from growth, is greater on cut-over lands and from young timber than from old growth. Although it accumulates on all land which has any timber growing on it, it can be greatly increased by definite methods of management, by protection and systematic cutting. It is evident then that the value of timberlands as permanent investments depend primarily upon the amount of the annual growth of timber taking place on the land, just as the value of farming land depends upon the amount of the crop which is yearly produced. The farmer can determine without difficulty the amount of his yearly crop and his profit or loss from it. It is difficult for the owner of timberland to ascertain the amount of annual growth on his land and its consequent earning value. It is still more difficult for the owner of timberland to ascertain the method by which he can increase the yield from his land. It is in fact a complicated problem involving the determination of the yield, the grade and the value of the timber which grows each year, as well as the rate of growth of the trees of different sizes. Many owners have considered the earning from annual growth too small to be considered. They expect to secure profits only from the increase in the value of the stumpage or the speculative profit. By failing to apply business methods to the management of their timbered land they only realize partial profits. Heretofore we have been dependent upon the old growth for timber. Every year as the amount of the old growth becomes smaller we are more dependent upon the second growth and must eventually be entirely dependent upon it and upon the annual growth of timber which comes from it to supply the United States with lumber.

STATE NEWS

Items of Happenings Over the State Gathered from Our Exchanges

Statesville, N. C., Sept. 16.—Mr. Noah Sloan, a young farmer, is in a dangerous condition at his home six miles north of Statesville, as a result of an injury received yesterday afternoon. Mr. Sloan was in the act of unhitching a team of mules from a mowing machine when one of the animals kicked and struck him a blow on the head, knocking a hole in the skull and exposing the brain. No one was with him when the accident occurred, but he was found a few minutes later in an unconscious condition.

Fayetteville, N. C., Sept. 16.—Near Parkton yesterday, Luther McRainey, the five-year-old son of Mr. J. D. McRainey, a prominent farmer, was killed by falling into his father's cotton gin. The little boy, who had been playing in the gin house, was ground to pieces by the machinery.

A Strong Movement for County Education.

The officials of the various schools of Tift county, Ga., have organized themselves into a powerful association for the betterment of educational conditions in that county, and they enlist the interest and support of all classes of citizens. The following "creed" has been widely circulated in the county and its stirring words will no doubt greatly help the cause for which it is designed:

Our Creed.

"I believe in boys and girls, the men and woman of great tomorrow; that whatsoever the boy soweth the man shall reap. I believe in the curse of ignorance, in the efficacy of schools, in the dignity of teaching, and in the joy of serving another. I believe in wisdom as revealed in human lives, as well as in the pages of a printed book; in lessons taught not so much by precept as by example; in ability to work with the hand as well as to think with the head; in everything that makes life large and lovely.

I believe in beauty in the school-room, in the home, in daily life, and out of doors. I believe in laughter, in love, in all ideals and distant hopes that lure us on. I believe that every hour of every day we receive a just reward for all we do. I believe in the present and its opportunities, in the future and its promises, and in the divine joy of living. Amen."—Edwin O. Grover.

Candidate's Shoe Shines and Shaves.

The law requires candidates to file an account of their expenses before each primary election, and most of them have complied with this act, their account being now on file with the Secretary of State for the second state primary. Mr. E. D. Smith, the successful candidate for Senator, makes a return of $399.30 expended before the primary, and $45.30 after the filing of the preliminary statement. Commissioner Caughman makes a return of $206, and Cansler of Tirzah, of $18.35. Cansler's statement includes two shaves at the reduced rate of 25 cents for the two, two shoe shaves for five cents and five cents for a dose of salts, with 50 cents for Sunday dinner.—Rock Hill Record.

A BLESSING TO ANY COMMUNITY.

The Tobacco Warehouseman is an Important Factor in Tobacco Trade.

Wilson, N. C., Sept. 16.—It is an established fact that warehousemen do more work for less pay than any other class of business men. With but a very few exceptions, show us the warehouse in North Carolina, South Carolina or Virginia that has ever brought any great prosperity to its managers. Our warehousemen work harder than any other class of men in the tobacco trade. They travel over the whole country or employ men to do it for them, from year in to year out. On the breaks they beg like beavers for one more bid. They stay up night and day to make the farmers comfortable who happen to be in town. Their expenses are enormous and many a day in the year their expense accounts run far ahead of the income.

We believe in giving every man man his due, and think that right here in our State the warehousemen do more work for less pay than any other class outside of the newspaper profession.

Farmers Educational Meeting.

Washington, N. C. Sept. 16, 1908.

Editor Reflector:

I am gratified to announce that a Farmers' Educational meeting will be held in Greenville on Friday, September 25th. There will be a morning and afternoon session. The meeting will open at 10:30 o'clock, and it is important that those who expect to attend should be on hand promptly.

Some of the leading experts in agriculture will address the meeting, and will discuss topics of vital interest to every farmer in Pitt county interested in the soil. Those engaged in other vocations will also find the meeting extremely interesting.

There will be no politics about the meeting directly or indirectly. The only purpose is to bring benefit to the people.

Respectfully,

THURSDAY, SEPT. 17, 1908.

The large increase in the Democratic majority in Arkansas and the shrinkage in the Republican majorities in the states of Vermont and Maine, indicate that a great change is taking place in favor of Democracy and point to the election of Bryan.

Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, of New York, the present Lieutenant Governor, was nominated by acclamation as the Democratic candidate for governor by the State convention on yesterday. The convention was one of the most harmonious ever held. There were no frictional fights or contests, every element of the party being united for victory. Although the Republicans carried New York in the last election, Chanler as Democrat was elected to his present position. The action of the Democratic convention offers a striking contrast to that of the Republicans held the day before, which, at the dictation of President Roosevelt, renominated Governor Hughes over the protest and threats of the delegates. Great dissatisfaction exists among the Republicans, many of whom openly predict the defeat of Hughes and a sure Democratic victory. Let the ball keep rolling.

The Maine news is better and better. The Democrats elected 7 out of 16 high sheriffs. Two years ago the Democrats elected 7 out of 31 Senators. This year they elected 10.—News and Observer.

Democratic Doctrine.

Have you ever thought of it that Democracy carries with it the principles for which it stands. At the mention of Bryan's name you instantly think of these things:

- Manhood.
- Tariff Reform.
- Americanism.
- The Constitution.
- Peace and plenty.
- Privileges to none.
- Justice and equity.
- Opposition to trusts.
- Liberty and freedom.
- Honesty and decency.
- The Monroe Doctrine.
- Progress and prosperity.
- Equality before the law.
- Less taxes and more money.
- Perpetuation of the republic.
- The money of the Constitution.
- The Declaration of Independence.
- Government of the people, for the people and by the people.—Orange, Va. Observer.

A POUND OF FEATHERS

It is in Reality Heavier Than a Pound of Lead.

The favorite question with the school committeemen of olden time was, we are told, "Which is the heavier, a pound of feathers or a pound of lead?" The first rash answer almost always used to be, "A pound of lead." Then, of course, from the older pupils would come the reply, "Both alike."

If this question was asked today the old time querist might receive a decided surprise, for the pound of feathers could easily be proved to be the heavier. A simple experiment is all the evidence needed.

With any accurate scales weigh out a pound of lead, using ordinary shot for convenience. Pour the shot into one of the pans of a balance. For the feathers a light muslin bag will be needed, and care must be taken that feathers and bag together do not weigh more than a pound. When the bag of feathers is put into the other pan of the balance the beam will, after a few oscillations, come to rest exactly level.

So far the verdict "both alike" seems to be proved. But place the balance on the receiver of an air pump, with lead and feathers undisturbed. Cover the whole with the glass bell jar and exhaust the air. Slowly the feathers sink, and the lead kicks the beam. The pound of feathers is heavier than the pound of lead.

The truth is that what we call a pound was not such in fact, for the atmosphere buoys up everything within it in proportion to the bulk of the object, and the feathers, being of greater bulk than the lead, are supported by the air to a considerably greater extent than the lead. Removed from this supporting medium, their true weight is made evident.

Charles Reade propounded a similar question in one of his novels. A Jewish trader is made to ask, "Which is the heavier, a pound of feathers or a pound of gold?" After awhile he explains to the satisfaction of his audience of miners that the feathers are the heavier.

Gold, he explains, is weighed by troy weight, while feathers are weighed by avoirdupois, and as the twelve ounces in a pound troy contain only 5,760 grains, while the avoirdupois pound contain nearly 7,000 grains, the pound of feathers is, of course, 1,240 grains heavier than the pound of gold.—New York Tribune.

Vegetable Stones.

"These are vegetable stones," said a geologist. "Stones, that is, that grow in vegetables."

"Here is a tabasheer. It is found in the joints of certain kinds of bamboo. It is always round and brown, like this. Here is the cocoon stone. You find it in the endosperm of the Javanese cocoonut. Round or pear shaped, it has always this milk white luster, like a pearl. The smaller stone, with its pearly luster a little tarnished, is found in the pomegranate. It is pure carbonate of lime. These stones are formed from silicious and calcareous juices circulating in the plant organism. They are the result of a diseased condition. Man himself, you know, occasionally puts forth stony growths, and they must be removed or the human stone grower dies in excruciating pain."—New York Press.

Queer Auction Custom.

"Candle auction" is an ancient custom which still survives in Somersetshire, England. A valuable piece of meadow land in the village of Tatworth was sold recently by auction while the candle burned. The ceremony consists of the burning of an inch of candle, the last bidder before the candle's final flicker becoming the tenant for the ensuing year. Previous to the auction freeholders assembled for a supper of bread and cheese, beer and pickles, the funds for this being provided from the "colting" of the new tenant. Fines are also imposed for speaking, nose blowing, laughing out loud and moving, other than bidding, while the candle is burning.

Dear Sir—

During the summer you prevailed on me to buy a disability policy in the Maryland Casualty Company. Within a very short time after purchasing same, I found that it was necessary for me to have a slight surgical operation performed on account of which it was necessary for me to remain away from my business for a period of about two weeks.

The check presented me to-day in full settlement of lost time, also covering cost of operation is very much appreciated, and I can highly recommend the Maryland and yourself for the prompt service rendered.

Very truly yours,

SOME HISTORIC GIANTS.

Og, Gog and Magog Were the Biggest Men on Record.

It is a matter of perplexity to most small boys whether they shall become giants or clowns. There are plenty of clowns today, but there will probably never again be such formidable giants as Og, Gog and Magog. Og, we are told in Deuteronomy, was the last real giant. He was that king of Bashan whom the Israelites slew, and his bedstead was nine cubits long, or about thirteen feet. This bedstead theory may be based upon the huge sarcophagi which the Phoenician kings had made in imitation of the Egyptian custom.

Gog and Magog are mentioned several times in the Bible with more or less indefiniteness. In the Koran they represent a barbarous people inhabiting Central Asia, and they were probably born out of the terror inspired by the Scythian hordes that overthrew the Assyrian empire. Wooden statues of Gog and Magog fourteen feet high have occupied pedestals in the London guild hall for centuries and were formerly carried through the streets in the lord mayor's shows. They welcomed Henry V. on London bridge in 1415. According to Caxton, Gog and Magog were the survivors of a race of giants found in Britain by Brute, son of Antenor of Troy, and brought by him as prisoners to London, where they were chained to the gates of a palace on the site of the guild hall and kept as porters.

All primitive races seem to possess legends of giants, as did the Greeks, Romans and Arabs, but nine feet seems to be almost the highest authentic stature recorded. Topinard's Finlander exceeded this by four inches. Winkelmaier, an Austrian giant, who died in 1887, was eight feet seven inches in height. Charles Byrne, the Irish giant, attained the stature of eight feet four inches.

The tallest race in the world is the Scotch of Galloway, who average five feet eleven inches in height. Next come the inhabitants of the rest of Scotland and then the Livonians, Irish, Norse, English, Polynesians, Sikhs, Fulahs of the Sudan, Kafirs, Cheyennes and Patagonians.

It is, however, possible to become a giant with a little perseverance. There is in the brain a mysterious organ known as the pituitary body, injury to which, some think, produces the disease known as acromegaly, in which the head, hands and feet become enormously enlarged. But this form of gigantism is not commended.—Harper's Weekly.

How Bock Beer Got Its Name.

Maximilian of Bavaria, the first elector, consulted an English physician regarding his consort's sickness, who prescribed for her some "Buckingham double (strong) beer." After importing some several times at great expense Maximilian decided to send his court brewer to Buckingham to become familiar with the production and manipulation of said unexcelled brew. Upon the brewer's return to Munich the Buckingham beer (then abbreviated in name to Buck, later Bock, beer) was henceforth brewed there and was for the first time served at the electoral family's table on Maximilian's day, Oct. 12, 1623. At first only used as a medicinal potion, it soon became generally introduced as a food and was ordered to be brewed hereafter two weeks before the two weeks after Corpus Christi day.

HUMBLED THE PRINCESS.

Fall of a Dusky Beauty From the South Sea Islands.

One night John Sharp Williams, while a student at Heidelberg, Germany, was in attendance upon a swell function at which the guest of honor was a dark skinned princess alleged to hail from one of the south sea islands. This princess was magnificently bedecked and bejeweled, and her warm olive complexion, set off by a mass of black, kinky hair, full red lips, snow white teeth and black, sparkling eyes, made her the center of the function. The masculine-like Germans swarmed about her like bees around a honeysuckle vine, and even Dutch femininity could not discount the charm of her manner or the beauty of her person.

John Sharp was introduced, of course, and immediately upon obtaining a near view of the princess (?) his southern instincts rose to the surface and his southern blood began to boil. Watching his opportunity, he managed to get to the beauty's elbow. Then, reducing his voice to a low, but perfectly audible key, he sent into her startled ears this alarming query:

"Look here, nigger, where did you come from?"

Panic stricken and with all her self possession scattered, the alleged princess turned upon her interrogator as she heard the familiar intonation of the southerner and looked into his unrelenting face. Then she stammered:

"Fum South Carolina, boss, but for de Lawd's sake don't tell it."

Whether John Sharp respected the piteful plea of a southern nigger in a faraway land and permitted her to continue her bold imposition upon the credulous Germans the story does not tell. But the fact remains that the "princess" realized that she was in the presence of one who, from intimate knowledge of her race, had divined her African origin, and she could only throw herself on his mercy.—Blotki Herald.

THE BASTILLE.

Men and Methods In the Famous Old French Prison.

The Bastille as a prison was apparently better kept and cleaner than either Bicetre or the Chatelet, and imprisonment within its walls did not, it would seem, dishonor the prisoner or his family. A great many prisoners were charged as mad, and under this elastic term the violent maniac, the ambitious madman, the young spendthrift, the megalomaniac, the searcher for the philosopher's stone or the secret of perpetual motion—all these tiresome persons might be and were included.

How, then, did these prisoners live? In the underground cells or dungeons, as in the cells in the towers, the prisoners were on bread and water, as a rule. In the other rooms in the main building three meals were served a day, with drinkable wine—"vin potable." In certain cases, according to the quality and distinction of the prisoner, he might supplement the meager furniture of his prison and get a provision of books. Very favored persons were allowed their own servant if he would consent voluntarily to undergo confinement. Voltaire began to write the "Henriade" as prisoner in the Bastille; Abbe Morellet of the Encyclopedia speaks of the great fortress as the cradle of his fame, but we must remember that it was perhaps not advisable to say much about the Bastille when you were still living within its walls and that, as M. Moulin has reminded us, "the old Spartans offered sacrifices to fear." Prisoners, moreover, had to sign on their release an elaborate declaration by which they swore never to divulge, directly or indirectly, anything they might have learned as prisoners concerning the Bastille.—Mrs. Frederic Harrison in Nineteenth Century.

A Feat For Blondin.

"Speaking of the straight and narrow path," said a congressman, "reminds me of a story about a man I knew in Chicago who stayed very late at a dinner at the club. When he came out he started to walk in the middle of the street.

"Hey, John," said a friend who met him as he was making the best of his way along the car tracks, "why don't you walk on the sidewalks?"

"Walk on the sidewalks?" snorted John. "Do you think I'm Blondin?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Get Tired Quick.

A farmer hired a hand from town. The first morning the new hand went to work he accompanied the farmer into the hay field. They put on a load and hauled it to the barn. By the time it was unloaded it was 9 o'clock. "Well," said the new hand from town, "what will we do now?" "What will we do now?" roared the farmer. "Why, we'll go after another load of hay!" "In that case," said the new hand from town, "I will resign."

Pat and the Levee.

An Irishman, having returned from Italy, where he had been with his master, was asked in the kitchen, "Now, then, Pat, what is the lava I hear the master talking about?"

"Only a drop of the crater," was Pat's reply.

LAST OF THE PASCAGOULAS.

An Indian Legend From the Shores of the Gulf of Mexico.

An Indian legend of the Pascagoulas is told by the fishermen and oystermen down on the shores of the gulf of Mexico.

A point reaches out into the gulf near the mouth of the Pascagoula river. The pine trees on it come almost to the water's edge, and between lies a strip of white sand; across a marsh, a border of light green swaying and rustling grasses and beyond a gray cypress swamp the hanging moss of the trees swaying in the wind. To the south the blue waters of the gulf stretch away, with little waves lapping on the chalk white clam shells of the shore.

There in the evening during the short twilight one hears soft music, as if it were the notes of a violin, insistent, changing, sweet. It is the song of the Pascagoulas.

Long years before the Pascagoula Indians had lived upon this point. The white men, the Spaniards, came in numbers, and with them the hostile warriors of other tribes, to make war and to drive the Pascagoulas out of the country. Coming from the inland, the enemy took away all chance of flight and hedged them in on the point. The Pascagoulas fought for days and nights in the dark pine woods against outnumbering foes. Then they saw that all was useless, that they could not overcome, and starvation stared them in the face.

The Pascagoulas called a council of the tribe and talked long together. To give themselves up meant lives of slavery or death, and to fight to the last man was to leave the women and children to the mercy of the white men and their allies.

The next morning the Pascagoulas put on all their paint and trappings and burned their wigwams. The men, women and children slowly, deliberately, unflinchingly backed step by step into the water behind them, singing. Not one faltered. They died with their faces toward their enemies, brave and free, and now in the evening when the wind blows over the marshes the pines and grasses sing the song of the Pascagoulas.—New York Post.

THE LAND OF WORSHIP.

The East Believes Too Utterly to Care if Others Disbelieve.

Prayer pervades the east. Far off across the sands when one is traveling in the desert one sees thin minarets rising toward the sky. A desert city is there. It signals its presence by this mute appeal to Allah. And where there are no minarets in the great wastes of the dunes, in the eternal silence, the lifelessness that is not broken even by any lonely, wandering bird, the camels are stopped at the appointed hours, the poor and often ragged robes are laid down and the heavy pilgrims prostrate themselves in prayer. And the rich man spreads his carpet and prays, and the half naked nomad spreads nothing, but he prays too.

The east is full of lust and full of money getting and full of bartering and full of violence, but it is full of worship—of worship that disdains concealment, that reckes not of ridicule or comment, that believes too utterly to care if others disbelieve. There are in the east many men who do not pray. They do not laugh at the man who does, like the unpraying Christian. There is nothing ludicrous in prayer. In Egypt your Nubian sailor prays in the stern of your dahabiyeh, and your Egyptian boatman prays by the rudder of your boat, and your black donkey boy prays behind a red rock in the sand, and your camel man prays when you are resting in the noonday watching the faroff, quivering mirage, lost in some wayward dream.

And must you not pray, too, when you enter certain temples where one strange god, were worshipped in whom no man now believes?—Robert Hichens in Century.

Scared by Frogs.

It is said to be owed to the frogs of western Australia that that part of the empire is English and not French. About 1860 a party of prospective French colonists landed on the west coast of Australia, but on the first morning they were alarmed by the loud croaking of the frogs, which they took for demons, and retired with all speed to their ships. Western Australia might have preferred the frog to the swan as her emblem, just as Rome might have preferred, instead of the eagle, the goose that saved the capital.

Millions in Railway Improvements.

This is not the day of greedy expansion into new territory by the great railroad systems of the United States—it is not the era of warfare among railroad presidents for right of way in undeveloped country and neither is it the period of acquiring branch lines which connect with the main systems: It is the period of physical development of railroad systems, in the fullest sense of the terms.

What does the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars by the various railroads mean? Ask the railroad kings who are authorizing the expenditures, or, better still, go to the points where the money is being spent and the answer is obvious—for physical development.

The Pennsylvania Railroad occupies the foremost position from standpoint of magnitude of improvements now under the way. In the past six years it has planned for the expenditure of $125,000,000 for improvements adjacent to New York City besides other costly work upon more remote sections of the road.

It may be justly stated that the cardinal principle of the day of railroading is to increase the efficiency of transportation. To do this vast sums of money must be spent on terminals, cut-offs, reducing grades, eliminating grade crossings, increasing the number of tracks and the purchase of rolling stock. Millions and hundreds of millions must be expended by the great railroads for carrying on this work.

The railroad captians of industry, in the face of constant adverse legislation, are to day confronted with this very serious problem:

Where is the money coming from?—George Calvert in American Industries for September.—
