WASHING MACHINE AGAIN.

It for Recovery of Notes Decided Against Payment.

There are people in Pitt county whom the mere mention of washing machine rights gives a bad taste in the mouth. A fellow named Crooker came through this section a few years ago selling washing machine rights and got a few people bit at, and got bit by, his slick scheme. The thing turned out to be one of the rankiest frauds imaginable, but in the meantime not a few people had given their notes for the purchase of a right. It became too warm hereabouts for the said crooker and he slipped away to other pastures. Efforts were made to capture him and bring him back, and once he was actually arrested in the western part of the State, but he put up cash bond and forfeited it rather than face the music in Pitt county.

The next step on the part of those who had been fooled into the deals for washing machine rights was to resist payment of the notes that had been given. At almost every civil term of court recently there has been some suit trying to recover on these notes. An interesting case of this nature was disposed of Wednesday, the case being W. W. Rodman against Calvin McLawhorn. The plaintiff Rodman made claim that he had purchased the note as an innocent party, but the evidence showed that the note was obtained by fraud, that the plaintiff came in possession of the note before it was due and with the knowledge that the washing machine right business was fraudulent. Upon this the jury answered all the issues in the case in favor of the defendant.

Consternation Among Wilmington Liquor Dealers.

Wilmington, Nov. 11.—Some consternation has been caused in the ranks of Wilmington liquor dealers, many of whom have arranged to move to Norfolk and Portsmouth after the 1st of January, when state prohibition goes into effect, by press reports that both those cities and Suffolk, Va., are now launching a movement to hold a local option election for the purpose on the part of the anti saloon leagues, of ridding the tidewater cities of Virginia of the saloon evil. One of the dealers who announced several weeks ago that he would open a mail order house in Portsmouth after the first of the year, said yesterday that he would reach Virginia in time to be called upon for another campaign subscription to meet the efforts of the anti-saloon folks.

Not Infectious.

I used to be very much afraid that my children while playing with others would be exposed to some contagious disease, and they were constantly on the lookout for trouble of this kind.

One day little Louise (age four) came rushing in from the street where she had been playing with a crowd of children. In a very excited manner she burst out, "Well, mother, two of the Meyers children have something, but sister says she don't think we'll catch it, though."

"Well, what is it, darling?" I asked.

"It's the pigeon toes," she replied.—The December Delineator.

OTHER KILLINGS MAY COME.

Ardent Partisans of Both Parties Will Clash Sooner or Later.

Columbia, Tenn., Nov. 11.—Tennessee is fermenting like a pot of yeast over the Carmack killing. Not even the fact that the funeral is held today at the earliest moment which convention makes possible, has served to allay the bitter feeling between the rival political clans. No one will say that other shootings will follow the death of Senator Carmack. But when the governor of the state is so bitterly assailed through the public prints that only the tearful entreaties of his friends kept him from sending a challenge to the vituperative editor, other lesser men may not restrain their anger. No one can question that the situation is a dangerous one.

Because of Carmack's prominence and the fact that the church element of the state is largely enrolled among the dead senator's friends the impression seems to have gone out that the Coopers are friendless in their cells. The contrary is the case, for every man that walks through the streets of Nashville and Memphis today, exulting in his loyalty to the dead senator and open to proclaim vengeance against his slayers, there is another man who declares himself a friend to the Coopers and to Governor Patterson, and to the faction that of late years has opposed Carmack, politically.

It is too much to hope that the ardent partisans will not clash sooner or later, especially in a state where many men carry a gun as habitually as they do a collar button.

YOUNG WATTERSON KILLED.

Falls Nineteen Stories From His Office Window.

New York, Nov. 11.—Harvey Waterson, a lawyer and younger son of Col. Henry Waterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, plunged to his death from the nineteenth floor of his office building at 37 Wall street, late today. His body shot downward for one hundred and ten feet, and landed on the roof of a ten-story building adjoining. Almost every bone was broken and the head crushed and death was practically instantaneous.

While there were no eye witnesses to the tragedy, evidently it was entirely accidental. Mr. Waterson's hat and overcoat were on his closed desk. Presumably he had attempted to lower the window, and either stumbling over the radiator, which was in front of the low sill, or losing his footing in some manner unknown, pitched forward and down to death on the roof below.

Mr. Waterson was thirty years old and married. He was junior member of the law firm of Wing, Russell and Waterson.

Bids For Building.

Sealed bids will be received until 12 o'clock, noon, November 22nd, by the Town of Greenville for the erection of a brick building for executive offices and Fire Department, in accordance with the plans and specifications now in the office of E. B. Higgs, chairman building committee.

The committee reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

11:50 A. M.—Address, Hon. Jno. H. Small.

12:30 P. M.—Adjourn.

It will be seen that Hon. Jno. H. Small will speak to the teachers Saturday. This fact together with an interesting program ought to insure the presence of every teacher in the county. We also cordially invite everybody to be present and hear Mr. Small.

The Woman Who Lets a Man Own His Soul is Blessed.

The woman who understands the art of letting a man alone is a wise woman, says Anne Ritzenhouse in The Designer for December. She treats him as a rational being, with equal rights to work out his own life as she has. If she thinks he is wrong, she persuades him into another way with more subtle art than many kings use in coercing a prime minister.

If he wishes to walk alone in the afternoon or evening, hammering out some scheme in his own mind, or refreshing himself by solitude, apart from things that make him think, she is acquiescent. And, mind you, she does not acquiesce moodily, with a question, spoken or unspoken, as to what she has done that he does not care for her company. She cheerfully nods her perfect understanding of his wishes and desires. She, too, often wants to be alone, although she may love this man more than all the other things in the world combined, and he has always let her be when the mood was upon her.

To sum it all up in a phrase that Americans understand; she treats him as though she were another man. There are moments for love, emotion and sentiment, but she understands that there are thousands of other moments when two humans, who must be together most of the time, must treat each other as if they were of the same sex.

This is the lesson a young wife must learn. It is an art to let a man alone, for it is achieved only through perception, intuition, and careful, hourly study. There is no royal road to it. Some women are born with more or less of a temperamental leaning toward this attitude, but even these women must practice with patience and analysis.

And the women who do this have their reward. They will catch the best husbands and keep them throughout decades. Men mourn their absence from hearth and home more than they mourn for any beauty, brilliance or cookery. They are the women who understand!

ODD FELLOWS WILL BUILD.

Lot Has Been Secured for This Purpose.

A few weeks ago The Reflector stated that Covenant Lodge I. O. O. F. had a plan on foot for the erection of a handsome Odd Fellows building here, and that the lodge had appointed a committee to look into the matter. We are glad now to be able to state that the movement is taking on definite shape and the success of the enterprise seems assured. The lodge, for the consideration of $3,500, has purchased from the heirs of the late Mr. Alfred Forbes the triangle lot on Five Points in front of Hotel Bertha, and the deed thereto has been executed.

This is a beautiful lot for a building and we feel sure that the Odd Fellows will erect one that will be a credit to the town. The lodge should have the co-operation of all our citizens in this enterprise.

A Tribute to Governor Jarvis.

Dr. S. J. Porter, in an article in The Baptist World, after lamenting the injury done in mission fields by the Godless living of the majority of the foreign residents, mentions some who shine like stars in the gloomy night of heathenism:

During my pastorate in Kansas City a lady, who had been absent in the Philippine Islands for a number of years, wrote from Manila, asking for a letter of dismission that she might join a little Baptist church that had just been organized. The spiritual needs were so great that she said she wanted to do all she could, though it might be little, to let the people know of the true religion. How greatly would the cause of missions be helped forward if all the church members in foreign countries were to follow the example of this good woman.

"I also recall with pleasure the heroic Christian conduct of ex-Governor Jarvis, of North Carolina, who, while United States minister to Brazil in the days of the monarchy, at the risk of giving grave offense to the Emperor and his family, with whom he was a favorite, declined to attend a noted royal reception on Sunday, giving as his reason that his religious convictions would not allow him to attend such functions on that day. Instead of giving offense, he only strengthened his place in the esteem and confidence of the Emperor. Nor was Mr. Jarvis ashamed to identify himself with his Christian brethren in that land. He united with the little struggling Methodist mission and by his presence, contributions and counsel, greatly strengthened the cause of evangelical religion in the capital city, where even today he is remembered as the Christian statesman. What a great service our high government officials could render in foreign lands if, under all circumstances, they would stand for the best religious thinking and living in their homeland."

Teachers Meet Saturday.

The teachers have an interesting program for their meeting here Saturday, and there should be a large attendance. The address of Congressman John H. Small will be interesting and beneficial not alone to the teachers but to the people generally as well. All are invited to be present at this meeting.

THURSDAY, NOV. 12, 1908.

It seems that Lee county has elected a legislator with nowhere to seat him.

The advance agent of prosperity has not yet announced the date for seats to go on sale.

Georgia gets the plum. Mr. Taft has decided to spend the winter at Augusta. But it makes Atlanta feel bad.

We have Republican authority for the statement that the sentiment for tariff revision is not strong. Certainly it is not with the Republicans.

Virginia also is putting in for a cabinet place, Congressman Slemp being suggested as the man. Southern Republicans must think they are the whole push.

The press of the country especially will sympathize with Col. Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, in the tragic death of his son which occurred in New York.

They have started an agitation of a cabinet position for J. Elwood Cox, the Republican candidate for governor of North Carolina in the recent election. The chief claim advanced for him is that he made the largest gain in votes of any Republican candidate in the South.

Keep your eye on Greenville if you want to see the growing. This town is coming, no doubt about that, and the next year is going to show remarkable progress. The man who wants a home here should not be losing time in securing a lot, for it stands to reason that the coming of large buildings and enterprises will make real estate more in demand and consequently higher.

The conviction and sentence of Charles W. Morse, former head of the ice trust, who squandered other people's money in speculation, clearly shows that the financiers, whom the people have to trust with their savings or never invest their money, must keep in straighter paths than in time past or serve a term behind the bars. Stealing is stealing, no matter who does it, and the time has come when the "big" rogue must realize the fact.

The killing of Senator Carmack, editor of the Tennessean, by the Coopers, at Memphis, Tenn., Tuesday was the most deplorable tragedy since the murder of Editor Gonzales, of the Columbia State. Senator Carmack was one of the most brilliant editors in the South and a strong, courageous politician, and he will be greatly missed by the State in which his efforts were put forth to keep a clean government. It is a great

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other disease put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and there fore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggist, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

pity that an editor in the South cannot express himself through the columns of his paper about a public man, since a man places himself in a position to be criticised when he goes into public life, for fear he will be shot down as some worthless cur.

It is a rather singular situation that has arisen out of the creation of the new county of Lee and the election by it of a member of the lower house of the legislature without a provision for seating him. The constitution limits the membership of the House to one hundred and twenty and prescribes that each county shall have at least one member. Lee's representative would raise the number to one hundred and twenty-one members or what the North Carolina distillers that were would have called an "overplush" of one.—Charlotte Observer.

Never a Flirt.

The Southern girl of the ante-bellum period—the rose of the old regime—was a heart's delight. She was never a flirt. There is a difference between flirt and coquette—the kind of difference there is between a humming bird, making a dainty pretence of kissing a jasmine—and a cat playing with a mouse. Coquetry with the Southern girl of that bygone day was the unconscious challenge of a feminine woman accustomed to homage. It never verged upon coarseness or cruelty—never lost her the man's esteem, which remained to her after the hot whirl of the senses had subsided under the cool surprise of her look. No, the Southern girl was no flirt. She was sentimental. It was her sweetest charm—the drop of dew in the heart of the rose, keeping it fresh forever. Her sentiment was not sickly. The girl who cherished a dead flower her lover had given her, would bind up his wounds on a bloody battlefield or ride through a storm of bullets to warn him of danger—or cook his dinner and iron his shirt when he was her husband and had lost his patrimony and beaten his sword into a plowshare. They were capable of dying with broken hearts—those girls—but dying with unlowered colors.—Mary E. Bryan, in Uncle Remus's—The Home Magazine for November.

There ain't no credit for keeping in the right road, when there's barbed wire fences on both sides.

The man who wants the earth invariably gets it—when he dies.

Mr. H. A. White,
Greenville, N. C.

Dear Sir: During the summer you prevailed on me to buy a disability policy in the Maryland Casualty Company. Within a very short time after purchasing same, I found that it was necessary for me to have a slight surgical operation performed on account of which it was necessary for me to remain away from my business for a period of about two weeks.

The check presented me to-day in full settlement of lost time, also covering cost of operation is very much appreciated, and I can highly recommend the Maryland and yourself for the prompt service rendered.

Very truly yours,

The Wonderful Aphid.

The aphid is in one way the most startling of all forms of insect life, for, although the females can and do lay eggs, its usual method of increase is by a sort of budding process, the young growing on the bodies of the parent exactly as brussels sprouts grow out of the stalks of the plant. The old produce young at the rate of twenty-five a day, and as the young are at once mature each can produce its twenty-five on the following day. It positively frightens one to work this multiplication out to a conclusion, for it means this: Supposing that the aphid could increase and multiply without interference, the twenty-fifth generation would be a number too long to quote here. Put down a 1 and follow it with 28 naughts and you will be within a few millions of it.

"These chefs!" said one New York multimillionaire to another. "Mine, you know, draws a thousand a month. He used to be at the Cafe Royal in Paris. But his independence! One night I gave, just to show off, a dinner of 200 covers. The afternoon of the dinner I found him motoring in the park in a taxicab with two French dancing girls. Of course I hailed him and told him to task. 'Oh,' said he, 'a dinner of that sort I always leave to my assistants. With such masses of food it is impossible to introduce delicate, subtle or original cooking. Now, little girls, shall we drive on?'—Arzonaut.

Christmas Is Almost Here

Mr. Merchant—

We beg to call your attention to the fact that you should be looking after a space for an ad in this paper. The Christmas holidays are almost upon us and you are receiving attractive holiday goods every day. Have you realized that if you do not advertise in some way you will have the goods on hand after the holidays are over? Of course, but you had not thought of advertising—just yet! Well, we think now is the time, because the wisest and biggest buyers will soon begin to buy gifts for their friends.

Get up a nice, newsy ad. and send it in now. There are several different ways of advertising, but this is the best and we are sure you will get good returns.

Yours to serve,

The Reflector.

Growing Girls

Growing girls need care, advice and medicine, especially on reaching the age of puberty. A mother's tender care and words of caution will often accomplish wonders. As for medicine, a gentle, safe and reliable strengthening tonic is Wine of Cardui.

It will prevent and relieve pain, regulate the functions, clear the complexion and strengthen the constitution.

It is a valuable medicine for growing girls. It has tided thousands over a critical period, and saved them from years of suffering. It can never do harm and is sure to do good.

A relief or cure for all female disorders in girls and women.

At every druggist's in $1.00 bottles. Try it.

WINE OF CARDUI

Influence of Mountains.

The influence of the mountain is pure and holy, giving strength and simplicity, encouraging the older virtues, discouraging the newer vices. In the hill men of Wales we see this clearly enough. Go where you will among the wilder and more mountainous parts of Wales and you will find that rare independence and self reliance which are not marred by a curiously defiant discourtesy. You find there those that are truly "nature's gentlemen."—London Standard.

A Good Reason.

One day Mary was found standing on a chair in front of the mirror, gazing at her pretty image.
"Why are you looking in the glass, darling?" asked her mother.
"Cause I like the look of me," was the frank reply.—Chicago News.

Ungallant.

"Officer, I appeal for protection. A man is following me and attempting to make love to me."
"Begorry. O've been lookin' for an escaped lunatic. Where is he?"—Kansas City Times.

Settled It Themselves.

In western China European travelers recently found a simple method of settling disputes. One of them writes: "While we called the midday halt at Tachade, we asked the villagers concerning some new graves which we noticed in a field close by. They answered, 'Our head man and two others were killed three months ago in a feud with a village higher up the hills.' 'Is it settled now?' 'Yes.' 'Did you report the matter to Laowo?' 'No. What would have been the use? We just settled the matter ourselves.' 'How?' 'Oh, we killed eight of the other party.'"

The Apple of Discord.

At the marriage of Thetis and Peleus, where all the gods and goddesses met together, Discord threw on the table a "golden apple" for "the most beautiful." Juno, Minerva and Venus put in their separate claims and, not being able to settle the point, referred the matter to Paris, who gave judgment to Venus. This brought on him the vengeance of Juno and Minerva, to whose skill is attributed the fall of Troy.

Who's the Town Booster? Why, Here He Is!

The citizen who praises his own town.

The citizen who encourages local enterprises.

The citizen who helps along home improvements.

The citizen who patronizes the home merchants.

The citizen who gets his job printing done in his own town.

That man's THE TOWN BOOSTER.

QUICK WIT SAVED HIM.

The Way a Criminal Fooled a Paris Police Chief.

In the "Memories" of M. Claude, chief of police during the reign of Napoleon III, there is much that is fascinating to lovers of detective stories. One of M. Claude's experiences was that in which he was outwitted by a clever criminal who saw in the police chief's resemblance to Beranger when the poet was at the height of his popularity a means of escape from capture. The criminal had returned to Paris and was living as a student in the Latin quarter, then in the height of its bohemian splendor.

Claude thought to make an easy capture of his man by attending a certain famous ballroom at the hour when dancing was at its height. He tells the story:

"I had no difficulty in discovering him seated among a swarm of pretty girls and bewitching danseuses.

"Convinced there were but two ways of getting the better of a cunning enemy—surprise and audacity—I walked straight up to where my rascal was seated. I walked slowly, with steady steps, my eyes on the eyes of my man. He was a dark skinned, handsome fellow, with a face as brazen as it was cynical. I saw by an imperceptible sign that he recognized me. He turned pale—he was mine!

"I was almost near enough to capture him when I saw him bend to the ear of one of his companions. Instantly all the girls surrounded me and stood in a feverish, excited, ardent phalanx before me. They formed an impenetrable barrier, behind which my rascal escaped, while the women pressed eagerly upon me, crying out:

"Beranger! It is Beranger!"

"The magic name presented upon the youthful spirits there the effect of an electric spark. All the dancers of the establishment stopped dancing and surrounded me with acclamations. The students and young girls rushed up to me, some bearing bouquets, others glass in hand. I was literally covered with flowers, while the whole place rang with shouts, a hundred times repeated, of 'Vive Beranger! Vive Beranger!'

"I was aghast, and yet I understood the trick. On the point of being colored by me, the man I had marked down had recourse to this shrewd game, which must have succeeded even better than he expected. I certainly had some points of resemblance to the illustrious song maker or the whole world of students and grisettes in the Latin Quarter would not have fallen so readily into his trap. I was as bald as the poet at that time, and at all times I have had a certain good natured, sympathetic benevolence in my appearance such as the portraits of Beranger show to this day.

"Well, if the youth of Paris counter-signed the intentional error of my clever scamp I owed it to my resemblance to the poet. Though I was tricked, I was well tricked. It was not for me to own to these giddy-pates that I was not Beranger, but Claude, the policeman, the agent of all the prosecutors, judges and lawyers who under the restoration had done so much harm to their idol. I escaped from the ovation, which was becoming delirious under an avalanche of flowers."

Both Agreed.

"Young man, I was told today that you were the worst boy in the neighborhood."

"Gee! If I was a man and any one talked that way about my little boy some one would get licked."

"Some one is going to get licked now. Take off your coat."—Houston Post.

CURIOSITIES OF DIET.

How Nature Adapts Food to Man and Man to Food.

GREAT VALUE OF CEREALS.

Why People Can Eat Bread at Every Meal Without Getting Tired of It. The Fruits of the Burning Tropics and the Fats of the Frozen Arctic.

Modern science has shown that nature provides food for mankind with marvelous care and foresight. The human system requires a certain amount of proteid daily to replace worn-out muscle and tissue. Fish and meat supply this in large quantities. In hot climates, however, these spoil so quickly that their use is limited. Nature, as if to compensate for this, has given to certain tropical fruits a much larger quantity of proteid than northern fruits contain. Thus government analysis shows that figs have five units or calories to the ounce, dates two and five-tenths and bananas one and five-tenths. Apples have five-tenths, peaches nine-tenths and pears seven-tenths. Probably the figs and dates tested had lost part of their moisture, and some allowance should be made for this.

The Arab can, therefore, maintain his vigor on a diet chiefly plucked from trees. Henry M. Stanley and his white companions subsisted almost entirely on banana flour for two years in the African jungle. Their freedom from disease was in part attributed to the wholesomeness of this diet. The dried banana contains 20 per cent of proteid, about double that of ordinary wheat flour.

At the opening of the mango season in Jamaica many of the natives practically live on this fruit for two or three weeks. They fairly revel in it. An Englishman who was familiar with the science of diet could not understand how they could not only maintain their health on this fare, but actually grow sleek and fat. He knew that an effort to live on the fruits of his native country would result in weakness, sickness and eventual death. Chemical analysis showed, however, that the mango contained enough proteid to supply the bodily needs.

If nature has been thus kind in adapting food to man's uses, she has been equally so in adapting man to his food. You may have wondered why people can eat bread at every meal without tiring of it. The difficulty of eating one quail a day for thirty days is well known. Even such delicacies as asparagus and strawberries cause an aversion when served too frequently. Nature sends men a never failing appetite for cereals because they are altogether the most valuable of foods. They contain a considerable amount of proteid, their salts are of importance to the organism, they are readily digested when properly cooked, and they furnish a great deal of nourishment in small bulk.

Thus wheat flour, cornmeal, oatmeal (dry) and rice (dry) have more than 100 units to the ounce. Baked potatoes have 32.7 units, cabbage has 9.2, spinach 7, asparagus 6.5, apples 13.4, strawberries 11.4, spring chicken 19.5 and tenderloin of beef broiled 5.9. If a man tried to get even half of his nutrition from the coarse vegetables, which have a considerable indigestible residue, he would have to eat pounds of them daily, and his stomach would be sadly overburdened. Nature gives us the desire for a varied diet, and science shows that this is altogether the best for us.

In the arctic regions there is little vegetation. Man must live almost wholly on animal foods. Fish and meat would not suffice, because they contain only proteids. These would replace worn-out muscle and tissue, but could not be burned in the body to generate heat and energy. Fats, however, consist of carbon and hydrogen, which are the chief components of the foods of vegetable origin and supply the fuel needed by the body. The polar animals have fat in abundance, but residents of the temperate and torrid zones can eat it only in limited quantities. To them the mere thought of chewing chunks of grease is nauseating.

The children of the frozen north, however, are endowed not only with the ability to eat and to digest large quantities of fat, but with a keen appetite for it. One who is sensitive to such impressions must turn away when he sees the natives of southern Alaska, the Thlinkits, swallowing seal oil flavored by salmon berries with the gusto of a boy over ice cream. The Eskimos, farther north, will eat blubber, slightly cooked in the flames, to an indefinite number of pounds.—New York Tribune.

Her Object Attained.

"Forgive me, my dear," said the gossip humbly, "but I thoughtlessly mentioned to Mrs. Brown the things that you told me in strict confidence."

"There is nothing to forgive," replied the wise woman pleasantly. "It was for that very purpose that I told them to you in strict confidence."—Chicago Post.

Getting Even.

"You are half an hour late this morning," said a schoolmaster to a scholar.

"Yes, sir," replied the boy, who had been "kept in" the day before. "It was late yesterday when I got home!"—London Tit-Bits.

We give altogether too little importance to what we say to others and too much to what they say to us.—Ellot.

NEW YORK'S BOWERY.

Why the Upper Part of It Was Named Fourth Avenue.

In the early forties of the last century there lived in Brooklyn a Mr. and Mrs. Smith. Mr. Smith was a rising civil engineer, and most of his work was in New York. It was necessary that he be nearer his place of business than Brooklyn, for in those days ferries were slow and infrequent, no bridges spanned the river, and horse cars were the speediest means of transit. Being a man of moderate means, Mr. Smith went house hunting through the streets of New York, seeking a modest but respectable abode. Near the upper end of the Bowery he found a small house. Elated with his success, he rushed home with the news to his wife. But when he mentioned the name of the street in which this house stood his wife's face fell.

"How could you think of it?" she asked. Smith was in despair. Even as far back as 1840 the Bowery had acquired an unenviable reputation. Mr. Smith tried to explain that the upper part of the Bowery was still untarnished; that many very respectable people lived in that part of town; that it would be many long years before crime and sin would spread that far north.

It was all wasted energy. The fact that she would be living on the Bowery was sufficient for Mrs. Smith.

As a civil engineer it was Mr. Smith's custom to overcome obstacles. The following day he hired a conveyance, and he and Mrs. Smith went house hunting together. Mrs. Smith knew her Brooklyn thoroughly, but had only a slight acquaintance with New York. After driving through many streets without finding a suitable house the husband quietly turned into the Bowery at Union square and slowly walked the horse in the direction of the house he had found the previous day.

Suddenly Mrs. Smith exclaimed, "Why, there's a pretty place to let, dear!"

"Where?" listlessly questioned her husband, purposely looking in the opposite direction. Had Mrs. Smith not been so intent upon the house in question she might have noticed the merry twinkle in her husband's eyes and suspected something.

"Right over there," she replied, pointing to the house with the "To Let" sign.

An examination of the premises convinced Mrs. Smith that she must have the place, and when she learned that her neighbors were old friends of hers she had her husband close the bargain at once.

All this time no mention was made of the street. How Smith managed to move into the house and keep Mrs. Smith in the dark as to the name of the street is a mystery. But there came a day, and there was a storm. The tear fall was something heretofore unknown in the Smith household.

Once again Mr. Smith's habit of overcoming obstacles stood him in good stead. His wife would not live on the Bowery. Her home was ideal, her neighbors were good people, but they lived on the Bowery. So Smith and one of his neighbors went before the board of aldermen. The neighbor had influence. The street signs from Union square down to Fourth street were changed. Instead of "Bowery" the words "Fourth avenue" were substituted.

And Mrs. Smith was happy ever after.—New York World.

CAMELS HARBOR HATRED.

Will Wait Until an Opportunity Arrives For Revenge.

The Arab who has angered a camel will throw his clothes upon the ground, and the infuriated beast after stamping on them and tearing them asunder with its teeth goes on its way, and the driver is thereafter quite safe, as it seems to be an axiom with the camel that no man shall be put in peril of life twice for one offense.

The camel is stupid save when angry and then seems to become almost preternatural in carrying out its vengeful designs. Palgrave relates the following story of a camel's revenge, which serves to illustrate this point: "A lad of fourteen had conducted a large camel laden with wood from one village to another at a half hour's distance. As the animal loitered or turned out of the way its conductor struck it repeatedly and harder than it seemed to have thought he had a right to do; but, not finding the occasion favorable for taking immediate quits, it 'bode its time.' That time was not long in coming.

"A few days later the same lad had to reconduct the beast, but unladen, to his own village. When they were about halfway on the road and at some distance from any habitation the camel suddenly stopped, looked deliberately round in every direction to assure itself that no one was in sight and, finding the road clear of passers-by, made a step forward, seized the unlucky boy's head in its monstrous mouth and, lifting him up in the air, flung him down again on the earth with the upper part of his skull completely torn off.

"Having thus satisfied its revenge, the brute quietly resumed its pace toward the village, as though nothing were the matter, till some men who had observed the whole, though unfortunately at too great a distance to be able to afford timely help, came up and killed it."—London Telegraph.

Adding to His Sufferings.

The Doctor—I expected to go out of town next Saturday, as usual, to spend Sunday with my family in the country, but professional duties forbid. The fates are against me. The Professor—The fates are to blame, are they? Well, it's natural for a week ender to come to a lame conclusion.—Chicago Tribune.
