SPECIAL EDITION TO APPEAR SOON

GREENVILLE'S SPLENDID TRADE ADVANTAGES

To be Made the Feature of The Reflector's Trade Edition Now Being Prepared for Publication

For the purpose of bringing home to the people of Pitt county the splendid trade advantages that can be found among Greenville's retail establishments, and in order to show the progress that is being hourly achieved in importance and popularity as a retail centers The Reflector will issue in the near future a Trade Edition which will, when ready for publication, be sent out broadcast to the heads of families living throughout this entire section.

The Trade Edition is prepared for publication by Messrs. Whelan and Garey, two experienced writers and specialists, whose work along this line has received the endorsement and support of the leading business men and citizens in North Carolina towns where similar publications have been successfully made.

The Reflector's Trade Edition will be in no sense historical. It will be a review of present men and methods purely from a trade standpoint, laying bare the conditions that prevail to make Greenville a thriving trade center. It is contemplated to publish the Trade Edition about the first of December, so that it will be the herald of Christmas preparations in our stores and of the money making inducement which will be found in all lines. To secure "data" necessary for the descriptive articles which will make up the Trade Edition Messrs. Whelan and Garey will interview all of our business men and procure information at first hand and on the spot.

Here, as elsewhere, the Trade Edition will receive the co-operation of the human fraternity, for after all it will be a record of the men who "do things," and will appeal with favor to the progressive and public spirited. So, see to it that your business is represented in this review of Greenville's trade advantages in order that it will fairly, fully and forcibly reflect the splendid buying opportunities that can be found here, especially at a time when everybody is thinking of and making provisions for spending money during the Christmas holiday period.

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION.

People of State Called Upon to Give Thanks for Year's Blessing.

Governor Glenn has issued his annual Thanksgiving proclamation. It reads as follows:

Another year has come and gone, bringing its sorrows and its joys, its reverses and its prosperity; but, if a true account is taken, we will find our mercies largely exceed our ills; and, therefore, we have much for which to be thankful.

It is a beautiful custom for the president of the United States and the governors of the various States once a year to issue a Thanksgiving proclamation, asking the people "to forget not all their benefits," but to praise the Lord, "who crowneth us with loving kindness and tender mercies," and "satisfieth our mouths with good things."

This Thanksgiving day, set apart from all other, is no meaningless observance; neither should it be regarded simply as a day of pleasure or rest from ordinary labor, but as a day above all days, on which we can and should express gratitude to our Master for undeserved blessings, both to us individually and as a State and nation.

We have, indeed, much for which to be thankful. During the year no entangling relations with foreign powers have threatened the country with danger or marred our peace and happiness.

As a State, no pestilence, famine, earthquake or other dire evil, save rains and flood in certain sections, have visited our people; but, with this one named exception, our crops have been abundant, bringing fair prices, and, in spite of a panic, producing distress in other States, our State to a great extent has been entirely free from want, employment paying profitable wages, our homes peaceful, and our lives happy and blessed.

Not a single instance of mob violence has occurred during the entire year, but all have acquiesced in and obeyed the law, thus upholding the dignity and majesty of the State.

Tremendous progress has been made along all lines of industry and thrift. The State is out of debt and so prosperous and aggressive in business activity that its name and fame have extended even unto "Earth's remotest bounds."

Educationally we have made greater advancement than ever before, and are spending in the education of our youth as large a per cent., according to the value of our property, as any State in the Union, thus giving every boy and girl a chance for a liberal and sufficient education.

Morally virtue is overcoming vice; wrong giving way to right; soberness taking the place of intemperance, and the youth of our State being taught higher ideals and given nobler aspirations, thus enhancing the value of true manhood and advancing the cause of a high civilization.

For these and many other blessings and benefits, in order to give all an opportunity to express their heart's gratitude to a Triune God, I, R. B. Glenn, Governor of the State of North Carolina, do unite with the President of the United States in proclaiming Thursday, the 26th day of November, 1908, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer.

On this day I hereby order all public offices to be closed and all business therein to cease, and most earnestly ask all business concerns, private and corporate, as far as practicable, to join with me in my efforts to make this day truly one of rejoicing and thanksgiving by closing their establishments and giving a general holiday to employees.

I also request that all good people assemble in their usual places of worship at 11 o'clock to return thanks to God for all His goodness and consecrate themselves afresh to lives of truth and usefulness, as well as renew their vows of fidelity and love to their State, country and God.

On this day let us not forget the widow, the orphan and all other helpless and needy persons, but give to them of our substance as God has prospered us.

And let us do nothing, as good citizens, to mar the joy, peace and sanctity of this Thanksgiving Day.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be annexed.

Done in our City of Raleigh this the eleventh day of November, 1908, and in the one hundredth and thirty-third year of our American Independence.

R. B. Glenn,

By the Governor:

A. H. Arrington,
Private Secretary.

NEGRO STOLE TOBACCO.

Caught While Trying to Sell It at the Parham Warehouse.

Sometime Thursday night about 60 pounds of tobacco was stolen from the Gum warehouse. Capt. Hutchings, manager of the Gum, missed the tobacco this morning and telephoned the fact to the other warehouses to put them on the lookout for any suspicious person offering tobacco for sale. Parham's warehouse reported that a negro had carried some tobacco there which they believed was stolen, and when Capt. Hutchings went over to investigate found that it was the tobacco stolen from the Gum.

To catch the thief was the next step, but there was not long to wait. The negro came up to see about the tobacco when he was held under guard until Policeman Clark was phoned for and went up to take him in charge. The man gave his name as John Clark and said he was from New Bern.

FRIDAY, NOV. 13, 1908.

Governor Glenn's Thanksgiving proclamation affords some good reading.

Atlanta is in the public eye again, her mayor being a defendant in the recorder's court on the charge of drunkenness on the street. Atlanta is a dry town, too.

The merchants will say they want trade to come to Greenville. Yet they overlook the fact that the best way to bring it here is by judicious advertising in The Reflector.

The Training School buildings being pushed to completion, a municipal building for the near future, the Odd Fellows building and a public building not so far away, looks good for Greenville.

A municipal convention will be held in Charlotte next week, beginning the 17th. The officials of all cities and towns in North and South Carolina, as well as all citizens who are interested in good municipal government, are invited to attend.

As we do not expect to attend the presidential inauguration, we do not feel over-concerned about the event taking place on a later date than March 4th. But that time of the year is usually marked by such weather as makes the throngs of people who attend run considerable risk.

Every merchant, every tobacco man, every professional man, every business man and every laboring man who is interested in seeing Greenville go forward, is urged to be at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce in the mayor's office Monday night. Show your interest by your presence.

Fully half, if not more than half, of the States will have Democratic governors after the coming inauguration. If every State that elected a Democratic governor had gone Democratic on the national ticket, it would have been Bryan instead of Taft to occupy the White House. The thing to do is to keep hammering away until the Democrats in all the States are brought around to vote the whole ticket, State and national, and not split up so bad.

The announcement of the postmaster general that postal receipts run nearly $17,000,000 behind expenses for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1908, shows that Uncle Sam is losing money somewhere. The remedy he suggests is the establishment of a parcels post, but our opinion is that while this would help the mail order houses and bring more postage from them, it would be such a detriment to town and country merchants that the falling off in post-

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other disease put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and there fore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. age from them would offset the gain to the department by the parcels post.

Owing to ill health Mr. E. E. Hilliard has retired as editor of the Scotland Neck Commonwealth, and is succeeded by Mr. V. O. Moore, who was formerly connected with the Raleigh News and Observer. We sincerely regret the failure of Mr. Hilliard's health and his retirement from journalism. He was one of the best editors in the State, a man thoroughly conscientious in all that he did and wrote. In Mr. Moore he is succeeded by a young man of ability whose aim will be to keep the Commonwealth up to the high standard it has attained.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction J. Y. Joyner is appealing to the commissioners of quite a number of counties who failed last June to levy the special poll tax in excess of $2, in special school tax districts because they were under the impression that the decision of the supreme court in Southern Railway vs. Mecklenburg county held such tax unconstitutional, to issue some sort of equitable supplemental tax list to the sheriff so that these special taxes can still be saved to the schools this year since the supreme court now holds the additional tax to be valid. The difficulty seems to be in getting the tax lists amended since they have been formerly placed in the hands of the collectors with some part of the taxes already paid, having been due since September 1st. Sup. Joyner declares that he does not believe that the commissioners who failed to levy this tax, under his suggestion that "it be done in June subject to the ruling of the supreme court at the fall term," would wish, now that the tax is justified, to take advantage of a technicality and knock the special tax districts out of this money so much needed for the present terms of the schools.

Forty-one persons were killed last season as a result of base ball. This is cited to show that football is not alone in casualties. But where one man plays football, a hundred play base ball, so that the ratio is quite in favor of the great game. The youngest person killed in base ball was a boy of eight, the oldest a man with eight children. But all were not players. One man was viewing the game from

SCALPING.

Indian Tradition That Tells the Origin of the Custom.

According to the Indian tradition, scalping arose in this wise: Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of years ago, when all the Indians in the world were of one tribe and under one chief, there arose a dispute in the tribe as to who should succeed the old chief, who had just died without issue. There were two principal aspirants to the honor, each having a considerable following. The dispute finally ended with strife and war, and for the first time in the history was "brothers' blood shed by brothers."

The chief of one of the factions had a beautiful daughter, and one of the bravest warriors was a suitor for her hand. Her father consented to the match on one condition—that the young brave should journey to the camp of the enemy, many miles away through the deep snow, kill the chief, his rival, and return with some unmistakable token of his death. In spite of the snow and the distance, the young man immediately set out on his journey and, after lying in ambush for several days, finally entered the camp, boldly attacked the chief in his tent, slew him and cut off his head.

Next morning the murder was discovered, and the tribe set off in hot pursuit. Little by little they gained upon the fleeing warrior, who in his anxiety to elude his pursuers cast away all his impediments, to his very clothing, retaining only his stone knife and the trophy which was to win him his bride.

His pursuers gained rapidly until finally so near did they come he could hear them by his trail. His grewsome burden grew heavier and heavier, and as a last resort he whipped out his knife, stripped the scalp from the head of the dead man and, thus lightened of his load, reached his own camp in safety, presented to his chief the token of his progress and was wed, amid great rejoicing, to the damsel of his choice.

From thenceforth he was permitted to wear an eagle's feather in his cap, and to this day the eagle's feather remains the sign of the successful warrior, the number he displays depending upon the number of scalps he has taken. —Chicago Record-Herald.

HE USED TACT.

A Successful Man's Story of the Way He Won Wealth.

"The late Ira D. Sankey," said a Brooklyn clergyman, "attributed a part of his success to tact—to the faculty of pleasing people. He used to tell a story in illustration of tact's great power.

"Mr. Sankey, according to the tale, met on the street one day a man he hadn't seen for two years.

"Why," said the man, "how well you're looking, Sankey?"

"You, too, are looking well," said Mr. Sankey. "And two years ago you were quite out at the elbow, while now you are clothed in purple and fine linen. Come home to dinner with me, won't you?"

"Gladly," said the other, and they went to dine.

"During dinner Mr. Sankey's guest talked agreeably of his 120 horsepower racer, his wife's limousine and his daughter's husband, the earl. It developed, in fact, that he was a multi-millionaire.

"And yet two years ago," Mr. Sankey said, "you were as poor as a church mouse. Tell me, how did you manage it?"

"By means of tact," replied the guest. "I suddenly took to being tactful, and the results were marvelous. I never neglected on meeting an acquaintance to say, 'How well you are looking!' The acquaintance would be tremendously pleased. He would invite me home to dinner, he would introduce me to all his influential friends and he would give me valuable tips and pointers. Naturally I soon became rich, very rich, rich enough to retire."

"Then the guest looked at his watch and rose.

"But I really must be going," he said. "Thank you, my dear Sankey, for an excellent dinner. Goodby. How well you're looking!"

Have you realized that if you do not advertise in some way you will have the goods on hand after the holidays are over? Of course, but you had not thought of advertising just yet! Well, we think now is the time, because the wisest and biggest buyers will soon begin to buy gifts for their friends.

Get up a nice, newsy ad, and send it in now. There are several different ways of advertising, but this is the best and we are sure you will get good returns.

You Stand by Your Home Town—

When you buy from a town merchant.

When you patronize a town tailor.

When you employ a town dentist.

When you encourage a town enterprise.

When you speak the town's praises.

When you subscribe for the town's newspaper.

Some citizens fail in some of these duties. A few fail in all of them.

HOW ABOUT YOU?

Why He Drowned.

Describing the stringent police regulations of Berlin, a citizen of that city by way of illustration told the following story:

"Schmidt and Krauss met one morning in the park.

"Have you heard," says Schmidt, "the sad news about Muller?"

"No," says Krauss. "What is it?"

"Well, poor Muller went boating on the river yesterday. The boat capsized, and he was drowned. The water was ten feet deep."

"But couldn't he swim?"

"Swim? Don't you know that all persons are strictly forbidden by the police to swim in the river?"—Philadelphia Record.

The millennium will be a time when people carry out their good intentions.

—Puck.

Home of the Navel Orange.

"Bahia, Brazil, the home of the navel orange, from which place the late William G. Saunders imported the first navel orange tree to the United States, raises large quantities of this luscious fruit, but does not export a single orange," said a man formerly in the diplomatic service in Brazil. "Nearly every family has an orange and a banana tree in the back yard, and some have a number of trees. These are merely for home consumption.

"Mr. Saunders, when he began the reproduction and distribution of the navel orange tree, the original of which, I believe, is still in the grounds of the department of agriculture, thought he could reproduce the same quality of orange, but I do not think he succeeded, although the American navel orange is a fine fruit. It would be impossible to produce in Bahia any great quantity of oranges for export because there are no facilities for keeping the fruit after it is picked."—Washington Post.

A Straight Tip.

They were a simple looking couple, so thought the minister as he joined them irrevocably in the holy bonds of matrimony. But his suspicions were aroused when, after the ceremony, he observed the bridegroom searching through his pockets and looking a trifle humiliated and confused.

"I am afraid, parson," said the young man at length, "that I ain't got any money like to pay you with."

Then, after a moment of deep thought, he looked up cheerfully: "But I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll tell you how you can fix yer gas meter so it won't register!"—London Mail.

Settled the Trap.

A certain Glasgow lawyer was fond of setting traps for workmen who might happen to be working in or about his house by leaving money or some valuable article about. A workman, well aware of this fact, found a half crown lying on the floor of one of the rooms. He smiled as he said to himself, "I know what that's for." And, taking a brace and a bit from his bag, he drilled a hole in the coin, and, putting a large screw nail through it, he fastened it securely to the floor. The lawyer has not set any traps since.

BATTLE OF THE NILE.

Where "the Boy Stood on the Burning Deck."

CASABIANCA AND HIS FATE.

The Facts About the Little Hero of Mrs. Hemans' Famous Poem, His Father and the Tragedy of the Doomed French Flagship, the Orient.

That was a lucky child who in the latter part of the last century escaped the ordeal of standing up before a circle of relatives and friends—outwardly enthusiastic and admiring, inwardly often greatly bored—to repeat those well known if somewhat inaccurate lines that tell us how "the boy stood on the burning deck." Whether, nine times out of ten, the infant reciter or, for that matter, any of the members of the applauding family circle could have given the date and place of the occurrence may be doubtful. The forty lines of Mrs. Hemans gave them all the history that they craved, and when the parrot-like performance closed with "faithful heart" a sentimental maiden aunt would sigh, a liberal uncle bestow largesse to the extent of half a crown, and that was all.

It was in 1798 that young Casabianca, the ten-year-old son of the commodore of the French flagship Orient, stood amid the awful devastation of the battle of the Nile. Bonaparte had himself sailed in the ill fated Orient from Toulon in the previous May, taking with him a good stock of burghundy and also that famous "camp library" of cabinet editions, including forty volumes of English novels, in which the Bible and the Koran were classed under the head of "politics." More important still for those who love the picturesque details of history and great men, he was accompanied by his then private secretary, Louis Antoine Fauvelet de Bourrienne, from whose always entertaining if not invariably accurate pen we have a capital account of the voyage to Egypt.

Much of the time was passed by Napoleon lying in his berth while Bourrienne read to him and in promoting discussions on various questions among the scientific and other distinguished men who accompanied the expedition. The flagship carried a population of more than 2,000 souls, and the cry of "Man overboard!" was not infrequent. On these occasions Bonaparte displayed a side of his character to which full justice is not always done. Bourrienne describes his agitation till a rescue was effected as extreme. On one occasion a false alarm was raised during the darkness of night, and the supposed "man" proved to be the quarter of a bullock which had dropped from the rigging, but Napoleon rewarded the rescuers even more liberally than usual, pointing out that their exertion had been for what they believed a human life.

The fleet arrived off the coast of Africa on July 1, and here Bourrienne and his "Memoirs" leave the squadron to accompany the army and his chief on land. Bruens, the French admiral, had during the voyage expressed forebodings as to the result of an encounter with the British fleet. Nelson, who sailed from Syracuse on July 25, was confident, but well knew the price he might be called upon to pay. When Captain Berry said, "If we succeed, what will the world say?" Nelson replied: "There is no if in the case. That we shall succeed is certain. Who may live to tell the story is a very different question." For himself he made that famous anticipation, "A peerage or Westminster abbey."

The battle began at 6:30 o'clock, half an hour before nightfall. Nelson, on board the Vanguard, flew his colors in six places lest they should be shot away. In a few minutes after the ship had gone into action the crews of the first six guns were swept away by the terrible fire of the French fleet, and twice again during the fight were fresh crews called for. The shot which struck Nelson on the head tore from his forehead a piece of skin which, falling over his one useful eye, rendered him for the time being totally blind. Carried to the cockpit, he insisted on taking his proper turn among the wounded for the surgeon's attention. Soon after 9 o'clock at night, while he was still below, a cry arose that the Orient was on fire. Unaided and unnoticed in the confusion, Nelson made his way up, and presently from the quarterdeck his voice was heard shouting orders that the boats should be lowered to go to the assistance of the Orient's crew.

The doomed French flagship had but just been painted, and quantities of oil and inflammable material littered her deck. Bruens, the admiral, was dead, but Louis Casabianca and his little son were still on deck. At 10 o'clock the ship blew up. "There came a burst of thunder sound," and, although the commodore was not at the time lying "unconscious of his son," as the poetess has it, for both were seen clinging to a floating mast after the explosion, neither father nor son was among the seventy members of the crew who were saved by the English boats.

From the mainmast and ironwork of the Orient Captain Hallowell of the Swiftsure had a coffin made, which "memento mori" he presented to the admiral that he might at the close of his career of glory be buried in one of his own trophies. Nelson received this offering in the spirit of the giver and even kept it set up on end in his cabin till the remonstrance of his favorite servant brought about its banishment.—London Globe.

PERSIAN CATS.

How They Are Classified—Points of a Fine Animal.

Long haired Persian cats may be classified as blacks, blues, whites, silvers, oranges, cream or fawn, tortoise shell, tortoise shell and white brown tabbies, any other color.

The silvers are subdivided into minor classes as follows: Chinchillas, shaded silvers, silver tabbies, masked silvers, smokes.

The coat of the long haired Persian cat should be long and thick, its texture fine and soft. There should be tufts of hair projecting from the inside of the ears; also around the jaws.

There should be a frill of long hair around the throat, extending back to the shoulders and down the chest to where the front legs join the body. There should be tufts of hair growing upward from between the toes.

The head should be massive, but round, with great width of skull between the ears, says Country Life In America. The ears should be small and set low. From the forehead to the nose the line should be slightly concave, the nose itself being short.

The back should be broad and level, but not too short; the legs short, paws round, brush or tail of medium length, wide and carried low. The eyes should be large, round, luminous and set level. The expression of the face, taken as a whole, should be gentle and sweet. The general appearance of the animal should be cobby and its movements easy and graceful.

In disposition Persian cats are naturally inclined to be loving and gentle, but as they are very high strung it is an easy matter to spoil their dispositions entirely by rough or unkind treatment.

Legend of St. Winifred's Well.

The following legend is supposed to have given its name to St. Winifred's well, once the most celebrated holy well in Great Britain: Winifred, a noble British maiden of the seventh century, was beloved by a certain Prince Cradocus. She repulsed his suit, and he in revenge cut off her head. The prince was immediately struck dead, and the earth, opening, swallowed him. Winifred's head rolled down the hill, and from the spot where it rested a spring gushed forth. St. Bueno picked up the head and reunited it to the body, so that Winifred lived for many years a life of great sanctity, and the spring to which her name was given became famous for its curative powers. The well was located in Holywell, County Flint, England, and was regarded with great veneration during the middle ages, being visited by thousands that believed implicitly in the healing virtues of the water. It is now in a state of neglect. A courthouse was constructed over the famous well by the Countess of Richmond, mother of Henry VII.

The Sunflower's Birthplace.

Scattered as is the sunflower, "tawny and bronze and gold," all over the Kansas prairies, yet few people know that it originally came from Peru. Incidentally here are the birthplaces of other popular plants: Celery came from Germany, chestnut from Italy, onion from Egypt, tobacco from Virginia, nettle from Europe, citron from Greece, oats from north Africa, poppy from the east, rye from Siberia, parsley from Sardinia, pear and apple from Europe, spinach from Arabia, mulberry tree from Persia, walnuts from Persia, peaches from Persia, cucumber from East Indies, quince from Crete, radish from China and Japan, peas from Egypt, horseradish from southern Europe, horse chestnut from Tibet.—Kansas City Journal.

He Guessed Right.

A crowd of small boys was gathered about the entrance of a circus tent in one of the small cities in New Hampshire one day, trying to get a glimpse of the interior. A man standing near watched them for a few moments; then, walking up to the ticket taker, he said: "Let all these boys in and count them as they pass."

The man did as requested, and when the last one had gone he turned and said, "Twenty-eight."

"Good!" said the man. "I guessed just right," and walked off.—Harper's.

Needn't No Hens For That.

At a country fete a conjurer was performing the old trick of producing eggs from a hat when he remarked to a little boy:

"Your mother can't get eggs without hens, can she?"

"Of course she can," replied the lad.

"Why, how is that?" asked the conjurer.

"Why, she keeps ducks!" replied the boy amid roars of laughter.—London Tit-Bits.

GUARDING PAPER MONEY.

Checks Against Thefts While in the Process of Printing.

The paper money of the government is brought in iron bound chests; locked and sealed, from the bureau of engraving and printing to the cash room of the treasury and there delivered upon receipt to the chief of the division of issue in sheets of four bills each. They are complete, with signature and numbers, except for the seal, which is printed upon them with power presses in a small apartment under the cash room.

These presses are worked by two people, usually a man pressman and a woman feeder or assistant. When the seal has been imprinted upon the bills they are counted automatically, bound in packages of equal numbers by bands of paper, marked, signed by the persons who have handled them and passed into the adjoining room, where the sheets are cut and the bills are recounted and inspected, so that the imperfect ones may be thrown out. They are then bound into packages of equal amounts and taken to the drying vault, where they lie upon the shelves for several weeks until the ink has become perfectly dry.

Every safeguard that ingenuity can contrive is placed around these transactions, and the chief of division can tell which of his hundred or more subordinates have touched the different bills in the vaults. He knows who received them, who printed the seal, who wrapped and who cut them, for every package is numbered and its history is recorded in an enormous book.

The combination of checks is so complete that the chief of division would know within twenty minutes if a single bill was missing, but he has never had occasion to test this knowledge except twice within fifteen years. Only two attempts have ever been made to steal the money of the government while it is in this stage of its history.

On one occasion many years ago a pressman passing a pile of notes upon the table of his neighbor slipped the top sheet under his blouse without being observed and carried it with him into the lavatory, where he was successful in concealing it. The theft was discovered within five minutes, and it was clearly apparent that he alone could be guilty, although the evidence was purely circumstantial. No one saw him take the money. Therefore he was not arrested and was never publicly charged with the crime. But he was dismissed from the service, and he knew the reason why. The bills were never recovered. He probably destroyed them, as they did not appear in circulation.

On another occasion eight or ten years ago a colored messenger whose business it was to haul the money about on a cart slipped a loose sheet into his pocket unobserved while passing between the printing and the counting rooms. This theft was also unseen, but the responsibility was fastened upon him. The pile of notes was complete when it left the printer, for it was counted and registered automatically in the press. When it reached the counting room one sheet was missing, and the package had not been out of the possession of the colored messenger in the meantime. Therefore he alone was responsible, and as he could not offer any satisfactory explanation he, too, was dismissed from the service, but was not prosecuted because there was no direct proof of his guilt.

A. A. Tyson, 134 Lexington St., Rocky Mount, N. C., says: "I feel it my duty to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I used them and found them to be a valuable kidney remedy. For years my kidneys were in a disorderly condition and their action was so frequent that I was obliged to rise several times during the night, thus being unable to obtain my proper rest. I also had dull pains across my loins and was bothered by a constant dull backache. Having heard about Doan's Kidney Pills I decided to try them and procured a supply. I had taken them but a short time when I could notice their beneficial effects and thus encouraged I continued their use until cured."

Trade Report.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 12, 1908. Bradstreet's Saturday will say for Richmond and vicinity:

In trade circles generally an optimistic feeling is noticeable and more inquiries are being received. Manufacturers of building and dimension lumber and hardware report increased orders and prices show an advance. Machinist and mill supply dealers report a more active demand. Tobacco is being marketed in larger quantities throughout the district and prices compare favorably with those of any recent year. Cooler weather has been favorable for the handling of fruits and produce and dealers in this line anticipate an active demand from now until the holiday season. Retail trade has been retarded by warm weather but shows some improvement as the season advances. Collections show some improvement, but continue slow, especially in the territory where cotton is the staple crop as planters appear to be holding their product in anticipation of higher prices. Inactivity of between season prevails in the wholesale dry goods market, however, some filling in orders are noted. Dealers in confectioneries, fancy groceries and holiday goods report trade as active though below a comparative period of last year. Building shows less activity as the winter season approaches. Railroad reports show fewer idle cars.

British Ex-Officer in Wilmington.

Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 12.—Lieutenant General Francis Iredell, who with his wife and daughter, Miss Violet Iredell, is on a visit to relatives in this city and is a guest at the home of Capt. T. D. Meares, on Market street, is being shown many distinguished courtesies here. General Iredell is of the British Army, retired and has been for several months traveling in this country, being now on his return from the Pacific coast where he visited a son, who owns a large ranch in the West. The mayor, Bishop Strange and others have called to pay their official respects to the distinguished visitor and many personal friends and relatives have taken the pleasant occasion of meeting members of the party. Yesterday General Iredell, with Wilmington friends, called informally at the British vice-consulate and were extended the courtesy of trip over the big compresses of Messrs. Alexander Sprunt & Son where many British ships are docked for cotton cargoes. All the steamers dressed ship in honor their distinguished countryman and General Iredell was most pleasantly received on board several of them. He returns via New York to London in a few days.

(General Iredell is the gentleman referred to in The Reflector one day last week as passing through Greenville enroute to Raleigh in search of relatives in this State.)
