THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

New Officers Elected—F. M. Wooten is President.

There was a very good attendance at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce in the mayor's office Monday night. It being the time for election of new officers, that business being left over from the regular October meeting, this was gone into first, and the meeting was devoted mainly to laying plans for future work.

The term of the three directors for one year having expired, D. L. James was re-elected, and C. T. Munford and A. B. Ellington were also elected as directors. These with the old directors then retired and selected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President—F. M. Wooten.
Vice-President—J. J. Laughinghouse.

Treasurer—J. L. Little.
The filling of the office of secretary was left open for the present.

The election of Mr. Wooten as president made another vacancy on the board of directors, and E. G. Flanagan was elected to that position.

Upon being escorted to the chair President Wooten made a brief address in which suggestions were made as to future work of the chamber.

There was some discussion as to getting all business men of the community to become members of the chamber, and on motion a membership committee was appointed to make a canvas for members and report at a meeting to be held the first Friday night in December. This committee is composed of H. A. White, E. G. Flanagan and E. A. Kline.

One motion a committee on advertising was also appointed, consisting of R. C. Flanagan, T. M. Hooker and C. S. Carr.

It is proposed to make the next meeting a very interesting one.

Attention Greenville Rifles.

Every man that is 18 years old and not over 45, that is interested in the organizing of a first class military company in Greenville, will meet the members of the Greenville Rifles at the Star warehouse Tuesday night, Nov. 17th, to elect a captain and secure a good place for the armory. By getting this company organized now and attending drills regularly you can show to the people that you mean business and the city will give you a helping hand. The Inspector General will visit all the national guards sometime about the first of the year and I have been reliably informed that there will be some vacancies in some of the regiments. If such is the case Greenville will stand the best chance of any town to be recognized. There is nothing that helps a town any more than a good military company. I regret that I cannot serve any longer as your captain. Elect a good man and you are sure of success.

The price of cotton has lately been about as near a standstill as it ever gets.

Untie your purse strings and pay some of your debts, then times will not be so hard.

President Roosevelt will find plenty of the Standard Oil in the Outlook to keep the wheels greased.

Mr. Morehead is reported as saying he is sorry he got elected to congress in the fifth district. He will get over that way of feeling about it.

It has been given out that President-elect Taft will early after his inauguration call an extra session of congress for the purpose of revising the tariff.

Two matters of great importance to this community are better roads and water transportation. We need better country roads that the people may get to and from market to good advantage, and we need water transportation on Tar river in order to secure lower freight rates. These matters are going to have the early attention of the Chamber of Commerce of Greenville, and through organized effort something will be accomplished.

Two Clumsy Gerrymanders.

It has been observed ere this that gerrymanders do not always bring forth the results expected. In North Carolina, transferring Surry county's Republican majority from the doubtful eighth congressional district to the supposedly one-sided fifth made the fifth Republican while the eighth went Republican, anyhow. For this outcome of the gerrymander the still almost unbelievable slump in the fifth was, as all observers know, primarily responsible. Just across the line in Virginia a gerrymander brought Democrats within ninety-one votes of losing the fifth, or Danville, district, without any compensation elsewhere. It is expected that the Republican candidate will enter contest before the House. In each State the gerrymander was a kicking gun—a true "roorback." The political chess-board is a queer affair and admits of bad moves without number; but among all the various opportunities for blundering not the least appeared to be that which is afforded by the gerrymander. —Charlotte Observer.

County Farm Schools.

The agricultural development of South Carolina has received much encouragement lately, and a movement is now on foot to establish an agricultural school in each county in the State. An educational enterprise of that sort would work to the welfare of South Carolina or any other State that would undertake it. The Yorkville Enquirer believes that "with a good agricultural

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other disease put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hill's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. school in each county to educate the local boys as far as they may be able to go, to assist the local farmers and to serve as a feeder for Clemson, the agricultural progress of the State will soon be stimulated beyond measure."

The idea seems to be that in a way these schools would prove feeders for the State agricultural college, in addition to advancing the education of the young farmers of the counties. South Carolina has a Commissioner of Agriculture who has practical ideas and the energy to put them into practice. —Charlotte Chronicle.

Adverse Theatrical Criticism.

There is a merry time on in Philadelphia, because the respective managers of the Orpheum and Keith's theatres have objected to the criticisms of the Evening Times of that city and have carried their resentment to the point of withdrawing their advertising from the Times's columns. It is scarcely credible that two old criticism-scarred theatrical warriors like B. F. Keith and Percy Williams should be thus easily phased. To suppose for an instant that, in a city like Philadelphia, favorable criticism of a show must be a consideration for a few inches of advertising space would be unreasonable. The theatrical manager must accept just criticism of his show, whether it be favorable or the reverse.

The particular criticisms alluded to, which have been reprinted by the Evening Times, read fair enough and bear no indication of ill-will to the houses or the performers. If the dramatic critic must take his orders from the advertising office, it is about time to start an investigation. —Newspaperdom.

Moral of the Garden.

Nothing teaches patience like a garden. You may go round and watch the opening bud from day to day, but it takes its own time, and you cannot urge it on faster than it will. If forced it is only torn to pieces. All the best results of a garden, like those of life, are slowly, but regularly progressive. —Exchange.

EFFECTIVE TIME TEST.

The Way a Clever Lawyer Won a Verdict For His Client.

An interesting example of dramatic appeal to human experience during a trial and a conclusive test of the appeal closed a case tried in a western court.

The plaintiff was suing a railway for damages to a building which had been set on fire, it was alleged, by sparks from a locomotive.

Counsel for the road based his defense on the ground that, since the fire was seen by employees on the train and the train was in the station only four minutes, the fire must therefore have been set before the engine pulled into the station. Four minutes, he contended, constituted a period not long enough for a fire to start and get under way.

On the other hand, counsel for the plaintiff argued in this wise: If a young man, sitting on a sofa with his best girl, is holding her hand the time travels like an express train. But if you dump a lot of sparks on the pine roof of a dry building in summer four minutes is ample to settle the fate of the structure despite all efforts to save it.

There were some incredulous smiles at this. The attorney took out his watch and, handing it to the foreman of the jury, requested him to announce the termination of a period of four minutes.

The jurymen leaned over and looked at the watch. Then they got tired and settled back in their seats. The foreman of the jury lowered his hand as the signal of the beginning of the four minutes and then rested it on his knee. The attorney shifted his feet a few times and sat down. The judge looked at the clock awhile and then gazed abstractedly out of the window. A deputy marshal looked in at the door to see what was the matter and patiently awaited the result of the curious scene. Nearly every man in the courtroom had a watch in his hand, carefully studying the face of it. The counsel for the plaintiff was sacrificing four minutes of his time. But he felt that they were well invested.

At last the foreman of the jury announced the termination of the test. To every person in the room the four minutes had seemed at least twice as long. The judge himself afterward said that it seemed something like fifteen. The ordeal had the effect upon the jury that the attorney had calculated. It was an object lesson, a striking exemplification of what might happen in four minutes.

Accordingly the jury found that the defendant's engine had sufficient time in which to fire the building and that the fire had ample time in which to get under way and create a blaze which the men on the train could see. A verdict for damages was brought in to the amount of some $15,000. — New York Tribune.

Patronize Home Talent—It Pays.

Last month a merchant a thousand miles from Chicago wanted to place over his store an electric light sign he had heard about in Chicago. Made a special trip there for specifications and terms. Too high!

Mr. Merchant returned home and incidentally told the local electrician about his troubles. Mr. Home Electrician replied that he could reproduce the Chicago sign, with improvements, at a price that suited. And he did so.

JUST THINK THIS OVER, WILL YOU?

THE BIBLE.

Much Popular Misinformation About the Scriptures.

The notion loosely floating about the churches is that the Bible came down from heaven, cleanly printed, nicely bound in morocco and gilt edged, with a bookmark against that text which has been erroneously made to declare that every Scripture is inspired of God. This heaven sent volume is incapable of error in the minutest detail. Every sentence, every word and letter and punctuation mark is infallibly guaranteed by the Holy Ghost! Nobody, to the knowledge of the present writer, has ever said that he holds quite that theory of inspiration. But if the popular idea of the Bible were analyzed it would warrant the inference. And this infallibility is in practice claimed for the Bible as printed in the English tongue and read in our churches! Yet all the world knows, or should know, that the revised version which we now possess is based on the authorized version, which is an improved edition of the bishops' Bible, which was a bad copy of Cranmer's Bible, which was based on Coverdale's translations of Dutch and Latin translations and Rogers' version of Tindall's Bible! And if we expect to find rigidly accurate messages from the very mind of God, conveyed in a version of a version which is a translation of a translation, we are demanding the most miraculous of all conceivable miracles.

Popular misinformation about the Bible seems to begin with the purchase of a copy in a bookstore. Yet the adventures of the Bible documents before the day of the printing press constitute one of the romances of history. The earliest Hebrew copy of the Old Testament of undisputed date goes back only to the tenth century A. D. For a period, therefore, of not less than 1,200 years and perhaps of 2,000 copy had been succeeding copy, generation following generation in the world of books even as in the human race. Twenty centuries of "editions" had gone the way of all papyrus, even as twenty centuries of human beings had gone the way of all flesh, and this parchment was heir of all those ages in the foremost files of—books. Had no copyist made one mistake in the course of twice a thousand years? As compensation for the late date of our Hebrew authorities can be set, it is true, the scrupulous fidelity with which the Hebrew amanuensis did his work, his reverence for the letter of the document on which he was engaged and the consequent comparative purity and reliability of the text.—Dr. Charles F. Aked in Appleton's.

Division of Labor.

Sam, a negro of the good old fashioned sort, was strutting through the village street as proud as any peacock.

"Hello, Sam!" said a man who had occasionally given him an odd job. "I hear you've taken a partner for life?"

"Yes, sah. Married yesterday."

"Now, Sam, I hope you believe in an equal division of labor and will not expect your partner to do all the work."

"No, sah—no, indeed, sah! I does believe we befo should do our share. Wife's gwine to d' washin', sah, and I'm gwine t' be de treasurer."

The Actor's Retort.

Not long ago a New York theatrical manager came in unexpectedly upon the rehearsal of one of his shows and didn't like the way one of the comedians was delivering his lines. The man, who had never met the manager, was slow, lackadaisical in manner and lacked spirit.

"Here, here, this won't do at all," said the manager, striding down the aisle toward the stage. "More steam there, more steam! That's what you want—more steam!"

"Gee," said the man, razing down on the manager. "You don't want an actor—you want a locomotive."

The Answer.

"When you feel any temptations comin' along," said the friend and adviser, "you mus' say, 'Get thee be-hin' me, Satan.'"

"De's what I done said," answered Mr. Erastus Pinkley, "an' den I imagines I hysus Satan answer me back: 'De's all right. We's both gwine de same way, an' it don't make no diffrance to me how which leads de pulchession.'"—Washington Star.

Santley on Singing.

It is a generally received idea that a singer's life is a merry one—little to do, storms of applause, topped up with sacks of gold and amusement without end. My experience does not confirm that idea in the least. No gold nor amusement could repay the toil, worry and disappointment of a singer's life as I know it.—From "The Art of Singing," by Sir Charles Santley.

A TYPEWRITING POINT.

Why in Some Work Periods and Commas Show Black and Deep.

"When in anything typewritten you see the periods and commas punched black and deep," said an experienced typewriter, "you may know that the work was done by a beginner or by one who had not yet done sufficient work to have acquired a perfect touch."

"The reason for the deep punching of the punctuation points is very simple. Naturally enough the beginner at typewriting plays upon all the keys with equal force, but as the types attached to the keys present unequal amounts of printing surface it follows that equal force applied to all the keys results in more or less unequal printing on the paper."

"For instance, a certain amount of force applied to the 'B' key might produce of that type a fair impression on the paper, but the same force applied to a period might drive that, a mere point, clean through the paper. In fact, it is not unusual for beginners on the typewriter to punch holes in the paper with their periods."

"But as the learner progresses in her art she comes to realize that some types must be touched more lightly than others, and gradually her periods become less black and deep, and with further practice she comes instinctively, automatically, to grade her touch on all the letters and signs until at last she is able to produce typewriting that is nothing less than artistic in effect, true and uniform and beautiful."

"It is something fine to see the good work of the intelligent, sensitive and truly competent typewriter."—New York Sun.

An Indian Trick.

In the snake bag trick of the Menomoni Indians the performer holds before him a red flannel bag about thirty inches in depth by twenty inches in width, with fluffy white feathers along the top of the opening. Then he rolls the bag up into a ball to show the audience that there is nothing in it. Then he takes the bag by the two upper corners and holds it up before him once more and begins to dance around the circle, his confederate preceding him dancing backward, chanting with the performer and making various gestures toward the bag. Presently two snake heads emerge from the top of the bag and gradually lengthen more and more until their bodies protrude perhaps as much as six inches. Then the heads slowly retreat and finally disappear, and the performer again doubles up the bag to show the spectators that there is nothing in it.—New York Sun.

Objected to Guineas.

At one time Mr. Alexander was getting £40 a week under Sir Henry Irving's management at the London Lyceum. One day Mr. Alexander plucked up courage and asked for as many guineas. The chief called him into his room. "My boy," he said gravely, "what have you done to merit this enormous salary? Are you aware that I was leading man at this very theater at a salary of £15 a week and that I played Hamlet for £20? Yet you have the audacity to demand a rise of salary, and, like a lawyer or a doctor, ask for guineas. I am determined," continued the great tragedian, "to have my own way in this matter, and I engage you for the next season at £45 a week."—London Tit-Bits.

The Buffalo Waiter.

"There is a scheme that the New York waiters can't work that reaps a harvest for the waiters in my home city," said the Buffalo man to a number of friends at a recent dinner in a New York hotel. "When you pay your bill in a Buffalo restaurant if the waiter knows that you are only a transient visitor to the city you will receive enough Canadian currency in your change to satisfy the waiter as a tip. Coin from across the border has a free circulation in Buffalo, but travelers coming east would find trouble trying to pass it in any other city, and they don't like to carry it with them. The waiters know that."—New York Sun.

One Point of Resemblance.

Back in the sixties, when Commodore Vanderbilt was the "whole thing" in the rapidly growing New York Central system, which then consisted of a continuous, one track line connecting Albany and the great lakes, the president of a small, cross country line of seventeen miles one day approached the commodore and requested him to exchange annual passes. "Why, my dear sir," remarked the commodore to the other railroad president, "my railroad system is more than 300 miles in length, while yours is only seventeen miles long!" "That may all be so," replied the other, "but my railroad is just as wide as you!"—Moody's Magazine.

A HUMAN CARPET.

Living Pathway Formed as a Compliment to a Bride.

A writer in London Tit-Bits describes an extravagant compliment which he witnessed some years ago while traveling in the Brazils.

The occasion, he tells us, was the wedding of the daughter of the commanding officer of a large military training college. The bride, with her sisters, had from childhood taken part in the entertainments and concerts in the school and was immensely popular with the students.

The wedding took place in the college, and from the door by which she was to leave to the bridal carriage, some little distance, a bright strip of carpet had been spread. This was flanked on either side by a wall of eager cadets.

The wedding took place in the college, and from the door by which she was to leave to the bridal carriage, some little distance, a bright strip of carpet had been spread. This was flanked on either side by a wall of eager cadets.

I do not know who invented the idea, but it was evidently a complete surprise to the bride, who looked quite scared as she halted in the doorway. The bridegroom, however, laughingly took her hand and, himself walking on the ground, persuaded her to advance.

Once her surprise had been overcome and she realized the compliment intended, the bride's smile was radiant as she slowly walked over the line of men with a care and tenderness which were almost a caress, her little high heeled slippers treading daintily upon the live, yielding bodies, which formed what is surely the most luxurious pathway ever traversed by a beautiful woman.

Probably this incident is unique, even in a country where politeness is carried to such a pitch that workmen and beggars in the street gravely raise their hats to each other.

That there is nothing new under the sun is, however, shown by the fact that the natives of the Hervey islands, in the Pacific, were formerly accustomed to provide in this same manner an "ara tangata," or living pathway, for the bride, extending from her home to that of her newly wedded husband.

PAYING FOR A MEAL.

It Was Worth About a Shilling to Pick Those Bones.

Colonel Ebenezer Sproat of Revolutionary fame was born and bred in Middleboro, Mass. He was always fond of a joke and was quick to seize an opportunity to indulge his propensity, as the following incident illustrates. His father, also a Colonel Sproat, kept a tavern. One day while Ebenezer was at home on a furlough three private soldiers, on their return from the seat of war, called for a cold luncheon.

Mrs. Sproat set on the table some bread and cheese with the remnants of the family dinner, which her son thought rather scanty fare for hungry men. He felt a little vexed that the defenders of the country were not more bountifully supplied. The soldiers, after satisfying their appetites, asked him how much they should pay. Ebenezer said he would ask his mother. He found her in the kitchen.

"Mother," he said, "how much is it worth to pick those bones?"

"About a shilling, I guess," she answered.

The young officer returned to the soldiers and, taking from the barroom till 8 shillings and smiling gently upon them, gave each man one and with good wishes sent them on their way. Mrs. Sproat soon after came in and asked Ebenezer what he had done with the money for the soldiers' dinner.

In apparent amazement he exclaimed: "Money! Did I not ask you what it was worth to pick those bones, and you said a shilling? I thought it little enough, for the bones were pretty bare, and I handed the men the money from the till, and they are gone."

Mrs. Sproat could not find heart to reprove her favorite son for this misinterpretation of her words, and then she, too, loved a joke, and so, after an instant's glum look, she laughed and said it was all right.

Had Seen Them All Before.

Once while James Whitcomb Riley was visiting a town where he was booked to give a reading a committee called to take him in a carriage over the city. In acknowledging the compliment he said:

"I'll go with you, gentlemen, provided you promise that you will not show me the new courthouse, the new town hall, the new bridge, the new school building and the new jail, for I've seen them all a hundred times in as many towns, and they invariably wear me out before the time arrives for the curtain to rise on the evening entertainment."

One day is worth two tomorrows. Have you something to do tomorrow? Do it today.—B. Franklin.

Two Marriages
Justice of the Peace H. Harding, who has quite a reputation as a dispenser of matrimonial happiness, was called on to perform a double ceremony in the office of the register of deeds Monday afternoon. He joined both the couples, who were colored, in his usual good style, in the presence of a few interested witnesses. When the major told the two grooms they could salute their brides, as it was a time honored custom to seal all such contracts with a kiss, there were only grins on their faces with nothing doing on their part. An old woman present, the mother of the two brides who had come along to see the performance well done, said "I kin do dat fer'm" and forthwith proceeded to osculate the whole quarett, much to the amusement of the spectators.

Fire in Plymouth.
Plymouth, N. C., Nov. 16.—This town suffered a disastrous fire about two o'clock Sunday morning, the total loss being about $20,000; about one-third of which was covered by insurance. The fire totally destroyed the stock of merchandise of H. A. Blount, valued at $8,000, insurance $4,000; the stock of merchandise of Spruill & Bros., $15,000, insurance $7,000; the large double brick building owned by W. L. Sherrod, valued at $12,000, partially insured. Hotel Brinkley was damaged possibly $1,000 no insurance. Adler Bro's stock was slightly damaged by water. Barton Ward and J. A. Willoughby sustained damage by moving stock, but for heroic work of citizens with a hand engine and buckets the whole block would have been burned.

A Soft Answer.
One Sunday evening the old colored pastor of a church in the south stepped before his flock and as was his habit began, "Well, brethren and sisters, what am de text to be dis ebering?"
"There was a pause, and then a voice in a rear pew was heard saying, "Speak on pills!"
"What's dat?" asked the pastor. "Speak on pills?" was repeated.
For a moment the old servant of the Lord seemed disconcerted. Recovering himself, he began: "Pills! Pills! Well, brethren and sisters, dere am pills an' pills. Dere am quinine pills an' headache pills an' physic pills, an' dere am de kind ob pills our brudder in de rear pew takes when he has been out all night, but de kind of pill dat I am goin' to speak about dis ebering am de gospel."—Ladies' Home Journal.
