STATE NEWS

Happenings of Interest to Our Readers Taken From Our Exchanges

Dallas, N. C., Nov. 21.—A shocking homicide occurred here early last evening when Arthur Jarrett, aged about 17 and a son of C. H. Jarrett, a merchant plunged a knife into the heart of Chriss Grigg, same age, a young cotton mill operative.

Sailsbury, N. C., Nov. 21.—By the explosion of a lamp in the home of A. B. Saleeby, a well known Syrian merchant here, early this morning, his dwelling was burned and the family had a narrow escape from cremation. Nearly all the furniture in the house was also burned. The loss is placed at $3,000 with $2,000 insurance.

Farmville, N. C., Nov. 21.—William Wainwright was arrested here yesterday afternoon on the charge of attempting to pass counterfeit money. The evidence is that he sent a counterfeit one dollar bill by a negro to several merchants here for change. He will be tried before the mayor this morning. He lives in this county.

High Point, Nov. 21.—The 3-year old girl of Junius Beaver, employed at the silk mill here, was burned to death last evening in a fire which destroyed the house. A 4-year-old boy escaped from a sick bed. The unfortunate man lost his home and all his furniture in addition to his child.

New Bern, N. C., Nov. 21.—Joe Ross, an eight-year-old boy, met with a distressing accident yesterday. The boy was with some other boys performing some tasks and Lucy Meredith was chopping with an axe when Ross placed his hands on the chopping block and the axe descending hit him on the left hand, cutting off three fingers and badly lacerating the remaining finger and thumb.

Goldsboro, Nov. 21.—Mr. I. F. Lane, section master of the Southern Railway in this city, and his wife have the deepest sympathy of all the people here in the sudden and distressing bereavement that befell them this morning in the accidental killing of their 12 year-old son, Bennie, who with a little playmate, was engaged in making a swing under the cotton platform, near the railroad yard, almost opposite their home, when a heavy piece of timber fell from its position, striking him on the head, from which he died in a few moments.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

As the president and governor have issued their proclamations to give thanks on the 26th of November, in consequence thereof, to do it properly, go to J. M. Reuss and buy supplies for a Thanksgiving dinner. Just received raisins, currants, citrons, shelled almonds, new English walnuts, Brazil nuts, California prunes and peaches, domestic and imported sardines, lobsters and shrimps, salmon and kippered herring, Doxey's clam juice, apples, oranges, grape fruit, malaga grapes, bananas, celery, cranberries and cranberry sauce and jelly. All things nice for a Thanksgiving dinner. Come and see Jimmie Reuss. 17 dtf

STRUCK THE WRONG MAN.

Negro Strikes White Man a Serious Blow.

Saturday night there was some trouble at Stokes between a white man named Bullock and a negro named Mal Brown. After some words between them Bullock turned away and went in a store. The negro Brown got an axe and waited outside the store for Bullock to come out.

While Brown was waiting another white man named Dave Whitehurst came out of the store, and the negro mistaking him for Bullock slipped up behind Whitehurst and struck him a murderous blow on the head with the axe. Brown was caught during the night and brought here and placed in jail. Mr. Whitehurst is reported in a critical condition with only slight chances of his recovery.

Taxes For Negro Schools.

In his recent report Hon. J. Y. Joyner, State superintendent of education, gives the following information in regard to the taxes for negro schools, which is of interest:

"In justice to the negro and for the information of some of our people who have been misled into thinking that a large part of the taxes that the white people pay is being spent for the education of the negro, it may be well at the outset to give a brief statement of the facts in regard to the apportionment of the school fund. . . .

The constitution directs that in the distribution of the fund no discrimination shall be made in favor of either race. This report shows that in 1905 the negroes of the city and rural districts received for teachers' salaries and building school-houses $304,395.82 for 226,976 children of school age. The whites received for the same purposes for 469,646 children of school age $1,277,422.22. The negroes therefore constitute about one-third of the population and receive an apportionment for the same purposes as the whites of less than one-fifth of the school money. This report shows that the negroes paid for rural schools in taxes on their property and polls about $106,142.03, or nearly one half of all that they receive for school purpose. Add to this their just share of liquor licenses and fines, forfeitures and penalties, most of which they really pay, and their share of the larre school tax paid by corporations, to which they are entitled under the constitution by every dictate of reason and it will be apparent that if any part of the taxes actually paid by individual white men ever reaches the negroes for school purposes, the amount is so small that the man who would begrudge it or complain about it ought to be ashamed of himself. In the face of these facts, any unprejudiced man must see that we are in no danger of giving the negroes more than they are entitled to by every dictate of justice, wisdom, humanity and Christianity."

FOR WIVES AND WIDOWS.

Daughters of Confederacy Proposed to Erect a Home for These.

The North Carolina Daughters of the Confederacy have in view an enterprise which is to provide a home for the wives and widows of the heroes who once were the grey, who may have need of this.

An officer of the State organization has written to Dr. B. F. Dixon, the State auditor, in relation to this enterprise, which was given a start at the recent meeting of the Daughters of the Confederacy in Goldsboro.

The purpose of the Daughters of the Confederacy is to raise such a sum as to make it possible to erect on the grounds of the Confederate Soldiers Home, Raleigh, a building that will be home for the aged wives and widows of Confederate soldiers.

Dr. Dixon is greatly pleased with the purpose to do this and hopes that it may be carried forward to success. He says that he heartily endorses the plan, and that he thinks a good work will be done, that many of the noble women who suffered and kept the home during the war are now in needy circumstances, and that they should be cared for. The entire State would endorse so noble a work as that which is proposed to be undertaken by the Daughters of the Confederacy. Raleigh News and Observer.

Trousers Without Pockets.

A valuable suggestion to the south is afforded by the style of nether integuments affected by Governor Patterson, of Tennessee. As a southern man, he understands the danger of the hip pocket. It is almost impossible for a southern man to go around with an empty one. He feels perhaps that he could not resist the temptation to fill his pockets full of "shooting irons," or possibly he is seeking to set a fashion in his section of the country. He has his trousers built without pockets either hip or side.

Trousers themselves represent the advance of democracy. Covering the entire leg, they render it impossible to distinguish a "silk stocking" on sight. They came in with the guillotine and other leveling devices of the French Revolution. Without pockets they are capable of symbolizing a further advance of humanity, progress from the plane of private vengeance to that legal protection and punishment by the state.

If the southern states, which are wearying of duels and assassinations and vendettas, would enact laws imposing heavy penalties upon the addition of pockets to trousers and would appoint inspectors of tailorshops to see that the law was obeyed, much would be done to discourage the carrying of arms. —Philadelphia Record.

A Tremendous Task.

"So you are going study law?"
"Yes."
"Going to make a specialty of criminal law?"
"No."
"Corporation law?"
"No. Both are too easy. What I want is to be accurately and reliably informed as to what months in the year and days in the week it is permitted to shoot certain game in the various sections of the country." —Washington Star.

SPECIAL MEETING

Of the Board of Aldermen to Accept Granolithic Sidewalks.

The Board of Aldermen of the town of Greenville, N. C., will meet in special session tonight (November 23, 1908) at 7:30 o'clock for the purpose of acting upon the report of the committee of said board having in charge the construction of the granolithic sidewalk on both sides of Evans street and Dickinson avenue; and to take final action in respect thereto.

All property owners who are interested, or who have any complaint to make in respect to the sidewalk work abutting upon their property (for which they will have to pay) are urged to be present at this meeting, and the board will be glad to hear any complaint they may have to make. Do not stay away from this meeting and afterwards complain of the work. If you have any kick to make come and make it tonight before we finally settle the matter.

This November 23, 1908.
H. W. Whedbee, Mayor.

Raleigh Times Diamond Ring Contest.

The Raleigh Evening Times is conducting a voting contest for the prettiest woman in the State, the prize, a $250 diamond ring, to be awarded Dec. 24th to the lady who has the highest number of votes. Towns all over the State are taking part in the contest and the number of ladies being voted for is large. Saturday's issue of The Times said there were on that date fourteen ladies whose vote had run above 1,000. Two of these are in Greenville, of whom that paper says:

"Greenville is in the race with two girls, Miss Helen Forbes and Miss Lillian Carr, and they are going to make things hum in old Greenville before December 24th, as they are supported by every person there and they are going to do some fine work there."

N. M. Watson Transferred to Tenn.

Bishop Wilson very recently transferred Rev. N. M. Watson to the Holston Conference and assigned him to Wytheville Circuit, which, we understand, is one of the best appointments in the conference, and needs our strongest men. We regret to lose Brother Watson. He is a rounded Christian gentleman, one of our best preachers, and a man whose work in the North Carolina conference has ever been stamped with the highest success. Like a faithful, obedient soldier, he will go to his responsible post, but he will be greatly missed in North Carolina. Great success and happiness to him and his in the new field. —Raleigh Christian Advocate.

Twenty Killed in Brooklyn.

New York, Nov.—An explosion of gas in a deep trench in Gold street, Brooklyn, in which a number of men were employed today cost probably twenty lives and caused a panic.

The victims included Frederick W. Scheffmeyer, city inspector of sewers, and Foreman Samuel W. Trout.

The explosion tore the street to pieces for rods on either side and the men working in Gold street in the excavation for a 36-inch sewer pipe were buried by debris and were believed to have been smothered or burned to death in the fire following the explosion.

MONDAY, NOV. 23, 1908.

According to witnesses, Mrs. Guinness has been found alive again. They had better let her stay dead.

Which will be the bigger man in the management of the government Mr. Taft or Mr. Cannon—remains to be seen after the 4th of March.

The matter of who is to be the candidate in 1912 might well be deferred until 1912 comes, and let the country have some rest in the meantime.

There is much interest in both this State and Virginia in the football games to be played in Richmond and Norfolk on Thanksgiving day.

It crops out that it was the Greensboro Industrial News itself, and not its creditors, that made the application to have the paper declared bankrupt.

A negro was hanged in Charlotte Friday for the crime of murder. After the execution the man's father took charge of the body and placed it on exhibition at 5 cents a peep. It caught the curious negroes and the old man gathered a pile of nickels.

The treasurer of the Republican national campaign committee has given out his report showing about $1,700,000 expended to secure the election of Taft. The largest contributor was Charles Taft, a brother of the president-elect, who gave $100,000. Nothing is said about how much of the contributions the treasurer failed to report.

Beaufort, N. C., is still progressing. Some time ago the N. & S. railway built a bridge across Core sound to her from Morehead, enabling the citizens to do away with the old method of crossing in sail boats and naphtha launches, and this seemed to put new life in the old historical town by the sea. She is now to have a steel highway bridge over 200 feet long across Core creek, which will give her large farm trade territory to draw from almost closed to her now.

King Solomon and the Masons.

According to an exchange, an Illinois boy was asked to write an essay on Masonry, and here is what he wrote:

King Solomon was a man who lived so many years in the country that he was the whole push. He was an awful wise man, and one day two women came to him, each holding to the leg of a baby and nearly pulling it in two, and both claiming it. And King Solomon wasn't feeling right good, and he said: Why couldn't the brat have been twins and stop this bother? And then he called for his machete and was going to Weyerlize the poor innocent little baby and give each woman a piece of it

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other disease put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and there fore requires constitutional treatment. Heli's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggist, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

when the real mother of the baby said: Stop, Solomon, stay thy hand. Let the old hag have it. 'If I can't have a whole baby, I won't have any.' Then Solomon told her to take the baby and go home and wash its face for he knew it was hers. He told the other woman to go chase herself. King Solomon built Solomon's temple and was the father of Masons. He had 700 wives and 300 lady friends, and that's why there are so many Masons in the world. My papa says King Solomon was a warm number, and I think he was hot stuff myself. That is all I know about King Solomon.

Need for a Moral Awakening.

A moral awakening rather than a desire for more statutes on our law books would remedy more of the present day evils than legislation can possibly accomplish.

It is time for people to stop all this talk about bad men in politics, for the people themselves are to blame.

The men who are continuously condemning the evils of the whiskey traffic, corrupt political practices, gambling and other acknowledged evils, are the ones who believe that a statute is all that is necessary for reforms.

There are statutes providing penalties for the perpetrators of these evils, but these evils do not lessen.

A law without public sentiment behind it and a truly moral influence in front of it is a nullity. What the crying need of the Southland is, is more constructive in interest in public affairs.

Little politicians will continue to dominate just so long as the people license them.

Bucket shops, gambling dens and blind tigers will and do exist in every community where christian people allow them.

Dead beats and fraudulent bankrupts will continue to live on the effects of the honest and iustrious just so long as the public winks at their rascality and thievery.—Merchants' Journal.

Lee Overman.

The legislature will have some eighteen more Republicans in it than the last one had—and while this will be too few to accomplish anything—this much is certain. There will be enough Republicans there to suggest that there must be no more wild-cat business. There will be no more attempts to destroy railway property; there will be no more legislation that will cause the railways to reduce expenses and throw men out of employment by the many hundreds. There will be nothing against local self government—and unless we miss our guess there will be a few propositions for the Democrats to vote on that will make a record. But there would have been more Republicans elected had it not been for personal following of United State Senator Lee S. Overman. The people of this State know he is safe and conservative; know he deserves another election and the Republicans did not make a fight to overcome the majority. Had Overman been a man of populist tendencies the next United States Senator would have been a Republican.

Overman is to be congratulated and his many friends will be glad to know that there cannot be made any successful attempt to unseat him.

What Man Do You Strangle?

Some statistician figures that $250,000,000 every year is being diverted from the local merchants of this country to the mail order concerns in the great cities.

How much of that MONUMENTAL MOUND OF MONEY goes out of this community?

Every dollar so spent helps to SWELL THE HEAP in the city that has no use for us except to get our GOOD MONEY.

Every dollar mailed away helps to STRANGLE ENTERPRISE AND SCUTTLE PROSPERITY right here at home.

When you strangle your neighbor you strangle yourself.

FREDERICK AND VOLTAIRE.

Stormy Relations of the Miserly King and the Lavish Author.

The world knows plenty about the elements of strength in the characters of great men, but less about their weaknesses. Here is a story that shows the other side of the natures of Frederick the Great and Voltaire:

Frederick the Great had a leaning toward literature. He wrote poems, plays and booklets that, in his opinion, possessed rare merit. So it seemed fitting to him that great literary men should fraternize, and he sent an invitation to Voltaire to be his guest. Accompanying the invitation was a sum of money to defray the great Frenchman's traveling expenses to the Prussian capital.

Let it be explained at this point that Frederick was extremely penurious and that Voltaire was not only extravagant, but had many of the characteristics of what we would now call a crafter. It should also be understood that Frederick despised grafting, and Voltaire abhorred miserliness.

Voltaire accepted the invitation and then had an afterthought. Why not take a favorite niece with him? So he wrote to the king that if he would send an extra thousand louis he would bring the girl.

"Sir," replied the king, "I did not ask the young lady to do me, the honor of visiting me, and I shall send nothing to pay her expenses."

"The old miser!" said Voltaire to a friend. "He has tubs of money in his treasury, yet will not grant me this wish."

However, Voltaire went to Berlin, but each found that he hated the other too much to make their friendship permanent.

The king once gave Voltaire a package of poems to revise.

"See," said Voltaire to a German nobleman, "what a quantity of dirty linen Frederick has sent me to wash!"

The king thought his guest was too free with the chocolate and sugar and gave orders that he be put on a restricted daily allowance.

Voltaire retaliated by gathering all the wax candles he could find in the halls and storing them in his trunk.

Soon the royal palace became too hot for him, and he began to pack up. Then Frederick missed his package of poems. At once he scented a plot. Voltaire intended to take the verses back home with him and palm them off as his own. Lord Macaulay has said that the poems were so bad that he was convinced Voltaire would not for half of Frederick's kingdom have consented to father them. But the king thought differently, being the author of the poems.

So the Prussian monarch had Voltaire thrown into jail at Frankfurt and kept him locked up for twelve days. Sixteen hundred dollars that was found in his pocket was taken away from him. The king in the days of their friendship had given Voltaire a life pension of $3,200 a year, and the money that was confiscated was a semiannual installment.

Thus ended their friendship.—Scrap Book.

Spanish Nicknames.

One of the peculiar ways in which Spanish differs from English is in the names the language gives to all people with a certain infirmity or peculiarity. A blind man is referred to as el ciego, a man with but one eye is a tuerto, a pug nosed man is chato, one who is cross eyed is a bisojo, a cojo is a lame man, and a manco has but one arm. If he is humpbacked, he is a jorobado; if baldheaded, a calvo, and if his hair is very short he is a pelon. The feminine titles for the same classes are the same, with the exception that they end in "a" where the masculine terminate with "o." These short names are used most commonly. In fact, they are applied as nicknames in many cases, and especially among the lower classes persons are addressed or referred to only by these names.

A Wedding Present.

A widower in Scotland proposed to and was accepted by a widow whose husband had died but a month or two previously.

To celebrate the occasion he asked the widow's daughter what she would like for a present. She wanted nothing, she said, but being pressed to name something she replied:

"Well, if you want to spend siller you might put up a headstone to my father."—London Telegraph.

The Ruling Passion.

"John! John!" called the excited little wife.

"W-what is it, Lucy?" muttered the big baseball player as he drowsily turned over in bed.

"Why, there is a man downstairs."

"W-what is he doing?"

"He's in the dining room after the plate."

"Trying to reach the plate? Put him out, Kelly; put him out at third!"—Kansas City Independent.

Reproved.

"I suppose," said the sad eyed youth at the musical, "you know the difference between bel canto and coloratura?"

"Young man," answered Mr. Cumrox severely, "I never bet on race horses."—Washington Star.

Practical.

"Darling, I mean to prove my love for you not by words, but by deeds." "Oh, George, did you bring the deeds with you?"—Baltimore American.

Never bear more than one kind of trouble at a time. Some people bear three kinds—all they have had, all they have now and all they expect to have.

A CYCLONE OF FLAME

Fires in Bamboo Forests Are the Fiercest Known.

SWEEP ON A MILE A MINUTE.

Like the Roar, the Roll and the Rattle of a Great Battle is the Noise of the Exploding Stalks That Sometimes Shoot High into the Air.

When the forests are afire, when the smoke makes dusk at noon and reddens the harvest moon a thousand miles away, there is the measure of a conflagration. When the prairies burn, as they used to before farms had crept in upon the endless miles of grass, there was a fire which ran like mad and left behind it a blackened trail of death. If one could combine the speed of the prairie fire with the tumult of the blazing forest, that would be a fire indeed.

Such a combination is effected when the bamboo groves catch fire. The bamboo is but a grass, a grass with the height of a tree, swaying stems reaching 100, even 150, feet in air.

In Cambodia, where the bamboo groves along the rivers cover the space of forests, it is no unusual thing for fires to break out and sweep all before them for many miles. If the summer has been dry the bamboo turns' sear and inflammable as any grass.

All that is needed is a spark; then ruin runs red. It is not necessary to rely upon the carelessness of the woodsman to start the blaze. The bamboo can kindle itself.

Let two swaying stalks of dry bamboo be set in motion by the breeze, let one rub across the other long enough, and the friction will set the spark, and the long dry leaves will feed the flame. It is known that many fires of the bamboo forests thus originate. Perhaps it was from observing such a sight that primitive man learned the Promethean secret. That theory has been advanced.

As soon as a flame in the bamboos has crept to the level of the tossing tips it spreads like wildfire. The wind carries a sheet of flame along the grove at tremendous speed. Some observers say that such fires have been seen to move forward at the rate of more than a mile a minute. Seen from below, it looks as if she sky had burst into an instant flash of flame.

From such a burst of fire there could be no escape. Fortunately it passes high overhead at the tops of the bamboos. It serves as a warning to the traveler who may be making his way along some one of the water courses by which the forest is intersected. The bamboo itself is almost an obstacle to travel of any sort. It is well nigh impossible to force a way through it except by the slow and toilsome labor of hewing out a path.

The fire in the great trunks moves more slowly, and if warning be taken it may be possible to sink one's boat and throw up wet herbage and clay against the bank of the stream to provide shelter until the furnace blast has blown by. Such a fire in the bamboo has not only the speed of the prairie fire on its sweep overhead, but it has the same volume of fuel as is found in any forest fire. It combines the two types.

Bamboo forest fires have another quality which is all their own. They bang and rattle with thunderous crashes, as of artillery fire, without cessation.

The stalks of these tree bamboos are frequently more than a foot in diameter. Near the ground the joints are close together; in the younger growth the nodes may be several feet apart. But, long or short as they may be, each joint of the sun dried bamboo is a tightly sealed chamber filled with air. The partitions between the cavities are singularly tough; the outside rind of the stalks is almost pure flint.

When the blast of the flame sweeps onward the air in the stalks upon which it is driven is suddenly heated to a very high temperature. The residuum of moisture which may be in the stems is immediately transformed into steam and at once subjected to superheating, thus becoming a violent explosive. As the hot breath of the flame becomes better these joints burst with loud cannon discharges.

Sometimes the force of the explosion near the roots is so great as to shoot the stalk like a javelin high into the air, where it flashes into torchlike flame and is carried by the wind to spread wider disaster. The bursting of the smaller joints is like the roll and rattle of rifles and machine guns. The effect is that of a battle hotly contested.—Washington Post.

An Aquatic Outfielder.

One day a ship was lying at anchor at Boca Grande when the crew observed a dolphin chasing a flying fish, both coming directly toward the ship. On nearing the vessel the flier arose in the air and passed over the bow just abaft the foremast. As it did so the dolphin went under the ship and, coming up on the other side, sprang from the water and caught the flying fish on "the fly" just as it was curving gracefully down in its descent to the water.—Punta Gorda Herald.

Missing Opportunities.

"I have no patience with a man who makes the same mistake twice," said Armes, rather severely, in speaking of an unfortunate friend.

"Neither have I," agreed his wife, "when there are so many other mistakes to make."—Youth's Companion.

He that studieth revenge keepeth his own wounds green.—Bacon.

SPANISH HOSPITALITY.

The Entertaining Keeps the Guests Busy Till Late at Night.

In the houses we knew in Andalusia the men obliterated themselves all day, the ladies went to mass in the morning and spent the rest of the time sitting in flower decked balconies, fanning softly and talking to canaries and cockatoos.

After weeks of travel the prospect of rest in such an environment was not unattractive, and I contemplated adapting myself to the ways of the household and the balcony with much pleasure. With some good novels bought in Madrid, fate could not harm me for a few days at any rate. But while dressing in my cushioned and scented boudoir it was borne in upon me that the atmosphere of this palacio was not so serenely dull as the houses of Andalusia. The smart freshness of the house was too obvious, and certainly the dona did not look like a woman who found canaries intellectually satisfying.

Waiting for us in the drawing room with the don and dona was a young man introduced simply as "Mariano," the nephew of somebody. Nor do I know to this day what was Mariano's other name. That was a trivial detail, but his ancestors were very serious. He represented one of the old Moorish families who for reasons of love or money had remained in Spain after the fall of Granada, and his solemn eyes and blue black hair and beard made him a rare example of the persistence of race type. Paquita, a pretty young girl, was a semidetached member of the family, the dona's goddaughter, living on another floor of the palacio, who had come in "to see us eat breakfast."

On the don's arm I went the length of the house to the dining room, where the table was prettily laid with a few flowers, picturesque wine bottles and primly arranged fruit baskets. It was appalling to find ourselves placed at the head and foot of it, but they proved to be literally seats of honor, with no duties attached. Everything was served by two little maids as pretty as their names, Serafina and Lijandra, in peasant costume, and the dona wore throughout the meal a look of restful unconcern.

We were hardly seated before visitors began to arrive. Each smoked cigars with every one present, including a superannuated housekeeper on a divan in a far corner, then joined us at the table, taking cigarettes and sherry. Nothing else was offered them, while we enjoyed course after course. At first we rose when introduced, but they always protested vehemently, and, seeing that the family remained seated, we did likewise and found it the only reasonable plan, as during the meal we had half a dozen callers, and each one shook hands all around twice. We were still at the table when the tartana was announced at 4 o'clock.

The fine arts exhibition was the center of social interest, and we were plunged without warning into the midst of it, spending the afternoon in a chaos of introductions, music, pictures and light refreshments.

Dinner at 8, except for a few more sweets and visitors, was like the previous meal. At 10 we hurried to the theater, and I was limply thankful to leave at midnight, though the play was not over and a gay party protested against our going so early.

Arrived at the palacio, the don clapped his little gloved hands, and a voice from the distant darkness called, "Voy corriendo" ("I come running"), though the steps were slow and shuffling. In my impatience it seemed as if the don might have carried his own latchkey until the vigilante produced it from a bunch containing the keys of all the houses in the block, each weighing about half a pound.

He also provided a long wax taper to light us upstairs, and after firmly refusing anything more to eat or drink we made our elaborate good night speeches, shook hands with every one in sight and retired.

The day seemed to be over, but we had yet to reckon with the sereno, falsely so called, who walked up and down, tapping the street with his staff, proclaiming the hour, the state of the weather or anything he thought might entertain the people he was keeping awake. — Ellen Maury Slayden in Century.

Small Fire.

About 10.30 o'clock Sunday morning a small fire occurred at No. 408 Front street. The building which was owned by Charles Patrick and occupied by Charles Williams, both colored, had caught on the inside under the tin roof, and supposed to have started from a stove in the kitchen. The hose reel from the station near the court house was hurried to the scene and the fire was put out in short order. Only a little damage was done to the building.

THE STORAGE WAREHOUSE.

It Sheds Some Side Lights Upon Life and Morals.

For a few dazzling side lights upon life and morals apply to the storage warehouse. You can find almost anything there from baby alligators to blocks of ice cream and from Teddy bears to sauerkraut. So you won't be amazed at what the institution has most recently divulged. Here you have the story:

Mrs. Q. repaired to the storage warehouse to extract her soup spoons, though it may have been aunts or uncles or popcorn or guinea pigs. At any rate, her property declined to come out. It had been tucked in by Mr. Q. Only Mr. Q. might tempt it forth. Mrs. Q. protested. She wanted her catnip or theology or safety razor, or whatever it was, and made representations with great emphasis. She moved upon the management. She stormed and wept. After long wrangling the warehouse decided it would yield up the college ice—or was it the piano?—If Mrs. Q. would swear she was still married to Mr. Q. and would send him a written statement (he was in Quebec, and I lost track of him owing to bewilderment produced by merely thinking of a storage warehouse) and make him return the statement, countersigned, to the management. This, then, is how Mrs. G. regained possession of her golf links or prayer book or sugar tongs. Well, say it was sugar tongs, though golf links would be likelier.

Pressed for an explanation, the warehouse remarked: "Have to be careful, you know—divorces, separations, affidavits, you know. Minute such things start up there's a race to the storage place. Game is for each to snatch out everything first. Becomes embarrassing!"—Boston Transcript.

The Prompter.

"I suppose that inspiration prompts many of your jokes."
"A few," admitted the press humorist. "Desperation, however, prompts the most."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A. A. Tyson, 134 Lexington St., Rocky Mount, N. C., says: "I feel it my duty to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I used them and found them to be a valuable kidney remedy. For years my kidneys were in a disordered condition and their action was so frequent that I was obliged to rise several times during the night, thus being unable to obtain my proper rest. I also had dull pains across my loins and was bothered by a constant dull backache. Having heard about Doan's Kidney Pills I decided to try them and procured a supply. I had taken them but a short time when I could notice their beneficial effects and thus encouraged I continued their use until cured."
