ANOTHER EVENING OF MUSIC.

Delightful Song Service in Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

Greenville enjoyed another rare musical feast Sunday night. The hour for evening service in the Jarvis Memorial Methodist church was devoted to a musical program under the direction of Miss Olive Gaston, organist of this church and music teacher in Greenville's graded school. An audience that overflowed the main auditorium of the church was present, and every moment of the song service was interesting and enjoyable.

The elaborate program as published Saturday was well carried out, with the addition of a solo by Mr. Oliver, a traveling salesman of Baltimore, who spent Sunday here and was persuaded to add this number to the program. It was a treat to hear him, for his voice is superb. And the solos of our singers were none the less enjoyable, the selections by Miss Gaston, Miss Helen Forbes and Mrs. W. L. Hall being marvels of beauty and rendered with much sweetness.

The choir sang several anthems that were excellent, the full-chorus and occasional solo strains being in good effect and harmony. The pipe organ accompaniments were by Miss Gaston and Miss Lillian Carr, and these made no small part in the excellence of the program.

In the midst of the song service a brief statement on the orphanage work was made by the pastor, Rev. M. T. Plyler, that was followed by a liberal offering for the Methodist orphanage to supplement the collection taken at Thanksgiving.

This song service was an inspiration. It shows what our home talent can do with determination and training. We are glad that this spirit of musical development has been awakened in all the churches of the town, and that our people appreciate such singing is manifest in the large congregations and splendid interest whenever such services are held. Besides the development in the art of music, it means for Greenville larger attendance upon our churches and a corresponding increase in spiritual life.

Auction Sale of Town Lots

No town in Eastern Carolina is making the progress of Greenville, and why shouldn't she? Backing her is a magnificent farm country, she is connected with all parts of the world with two of the very best railroad systems, and progress is written on the countenance of every citizen. Her homes are beautiful, and her schools and public buildings have no superiors anywhere. A fine time to buy a lot of land while you can get it at a cheap price.

The Southern Land and Auction Co., of Raleigh, will sell some of the prettiest lots in town at public auction, at your own price, on Thursday, 17th, and the terms will be so easy that the man of much money will have no advantage over the man of smaller means. Let no man say that Greenville land is a drag on the market, and let all the "knockers" put aside their little "hammers" and set to it that the sale is well attended and the land brings its full value.

Those "Just Tear It" envelopes are snappy and just the thing for you. Send in your order.

At the Universalist Chapel.

The Universalist church here has secured an excellent preacher in Rev. W. O. Bodell. He preached good sermons in Delphia Moye Chapel, both morning and evening Sunday, and will preach there each first Sunday morning and night.

Rev. Thos. Chapman, of Clinton, State Superintendent of the Universalist church, will preach in the chapel tonight at 7:15. The public is invited.

Look at that handsome lot of holiday Parker fountain pens at Reflector Book Store and have one put aside to give to your friend. You could not select a more suitable present.

CHANGE OF CO. COMMISSIONERS.

Old Board Retires and New Board Takes Charge.

The old board of county commissioners composed of R. W. King, N. T. Cox, J. Z. Brooks, D. J. Holland and M. T. Spier, completed their official duties at noon today and turned over the affairs of the county to their successors. Two of these, Mr. N. T. Cox and Mr. D. J. Holland, were re-elected and are members of the new board. The retiring board have truly been faithful officials, carefully guarding every interest of the county, and they are entitled to the gratitude of all our people. Under their wise management the county has made fine progress and material improvement, and several enterprises have been inaugurated that stand as monuments to them. Gentlemen, you have done well, and the people of your county wish you every success.

The incoming board is composed of excellent men. They are N. T. Cox, D. J. Holland, J. P. Quinerly, J. J. May and A. V. Lang. They are all true men who have made a success of their own business and the affairs of the county are safe in such capable hands. The new board organized by selecting Mr. J. P. Quinerly as chairman.

Just Read This.

If the parties who have been making inquiry about the investment in lots of the Glenwood Park Corporation, will call at the drug store of Dr. Bryan they can see a plat of the property and photographs of the work of constructing the piers of the great Virginian Railway at Sewell's Point, Norfolk.

An advertisement of Glenwood Park lots appeared in Saturday's paper and since then many people have expressed a desire to purchase some lots for investment. Mr. Zirkle, who is secretary of the company, will be in the city for a day or so yet and will be pleased to have every body see the map and photographs while he is here.

The investment in these lots is considered the very best, and it can be made by simply saving a few dollars each month, as the payments are only $5 on each lot per month.

Chance for Somebody.

The retirement from mercantile business of County Treasurer, Sam White, which takes place with the close of the year, will make a splendid opening for a large merchant who would like to locate in Greenville. Mr. White occupies a desirable location and his store has been a popular one, which will be to the advantage of whoever succeeds him.

Greenville needs some more large mercantile establishments, and this is a good opening for one.

Will Move Treasurer's Office.

County Treasurer Sam White, who today began his third term in this office which he has so acceptably filled, will discontinue his mercantile business with the close of this year. On and after Jan. 1st his office as county treasurer will be in the Reflector building, just in rear of the Western Union Telegraph office. This will be a good location for his office, owing to its convenience both to the court house and to the office of the county superintendent of education.

Outgoing and Incoming Register Deeds.

Mr. Richard Williams, who at noon today retired from the office of register of deeds of Pitt county, has filled that position for six years. He has made a most faithful and efficient officer, filling the position with honor to himself and credit to his county. He has kept his office well and done valuable work for the county. Good luck to him in whatever he may engage.

Mr. W. M. Moore, who qualified as register of deeds today, is in every way a worthy successor to Mr. Williams. He comes to the office with good business experience that will stand him well in conducting the important affairs of the county that come under his charge.

Best Clerk in the State.

One of Pitt county's officers who did not have to be voted for in the recent election was the Superior court clerk, this officer being chosen only once in four years. This office has been filled most acceptably for several years by Mr. J. C. Moore, in fact there is not a better clerk in the State than he makes. He holds high rank in the esteem of his fellow countymen, and they are glad to keep him in the office he so faithfully fills.

Pitt's "Kid" Sheriff.

In Mr. L. W. Tucker Pitt county has the youngest, best looking and one of the most popular sheriffs in the State. At the last election he was chosen for a third term and today qualified for two years more. He is exceedingly popular and makes a most efficient officer. His father before him was sheriff, and it seems to run in the family to make good officers.

Look out for a dose of Roosevelt in his message to congress.

The esteemed Congressional Record has resumed business at the old stand.

The president has put Crum on the Charleston folks as collector of customs again.

The way Mr. Bryan is said to be buying land in Texas does not indicate that he is short on the wherewith.

Charlotte folks are noted for getting together on most things, but they seem to be much split up over the question of a new city charter.

At a caucus of Democratic congressmen in Washington City, Saturday night, Representative Champ Clark, of Missouri, was unanimously chosen as minority leader.

Prohibition is gaining ground over in Virginia also. The city of Lynchburg voted "dry" on Saturday. We would like to see Norfolk and Richmond fall into line.

Every farmer who comes to Greenville should go out to the "old plank road" to see that piece of experimental road the county commissioners are having built. It will be a revelation.

Why there is considerable storm cotton in this crop is a puzzle to many farmers, since the fall has been so good for housing and there was so little rain. This cotton is now selling from one to two cents off the price of middling cotton according to quality. The New York classification committee has made a difference of one cent a pound between middling and low middling cotton, therefore farmers should be more careful in keeping this crop, in picking and not let it stay in the patch and then grumble because the differences are so great, for like everything else not properly cared for, it brings low prices.

Cotton has again declined in values, in view of a larger crop than at first expected. Miss Giles who estimated the crop of last year at 12,094,000 bales estimates the current crop at 12,875,000. The Newburger Cotton Co., who estimated last year's crop at 12,400,000, estimates this crop at 13,900,000, showing nearly one million bales more. The average guesses of this crop is about 13 1-3 million. However, with a 13 million bale crop there is no reason for the market to sell under 9 cents for the best cotton, but for the fact that the Southern planters are selling too freely. The next winners' report will be read today and the government estimate will be issued December 9th at one o'clock.

THE ICE TONGS CASE.

Peremptory Way in Which It Was Finally Settled by the Court.

Judge Enoch Foster of Maine settled a peculiar case in a peculiar manner a number of years ago. Two men had been in the ice business for several years, but had quarreled and dissolved partnership. The property of the company was equally divided, and each man went into business alone.

The following summer, when both men were peddling ice from house to house and store to store, their teams met on the principal street. While the owner of one team was delivering a piece of ice the owner of the other went to the wagon of the first and took from it a pair of ice tongs. Discovering his loss when he returned to his wagon, the first possessor of the tongs charged the other fellow with stealing them. Each threatened to lick the other, but didn't. The loser took out a writ of replevin and secured possession of the tongs.

The other fellow sued to recover, and thus the case was placed on the docket of the supreme court. The case was first tried before Judge Foster, and the jury disagreed. The second trial was before Judge Walton, and the plaintiff won. The defendant's attorney was full of fight, and, although Judge Walton urged that the case be dropped, he insisted on a motion for a new trial, which was denied. The defendant then appealed to the law court and secured a new trial, and, although the rescript which came down intimated that the best thing the parties in the case could do was to settle the matter between themselves, the case was again on the trial docket.

At the next term of court, however, something came up so that the case was continued. It was again continued and continued to be continued until it finally came up for trial before Judge Foster the second time. The counsel was making his opening when he was interrupted by the court:

"What action is this—that old ice tongs case again?"
 "Yes, your honor," was the reply.
 "Where are the tongs?"
 "Here, your honor," said the attorney, handing the tongs toward the court. The court took the tongs, looked them over and then said to the sheriff:
 "Mr. Sheriff, I want you to take these tongs and two reliable witnesses with you. Go out upon the railroad bridge and throw them—the tongs—as far down the river as possible. Then report to me."

The sheriff, accompanied by two reliable citizens, did as he had been bidden. When the officer and witnesses returned to the court each took the stand in turn and testified that the order of the court had been obeyed. Judge Foster then said:

"If any of the parties interested in the case feel that he or they have not received perfect satisfaction, such may apply to the clerk for an order on the county treasurer for a sum sufficient to purchase each a pair of tongs as good as those just destroyed by order of the court."
 The celebrated case of the tongs ended right there. The parties had spent between them about $900 in litigation. The tongs were worth about 75 cents.

HEIGHT OF WAVES.

When the Billows of the Ocean Run "Mountain High."

That ocean waves run "mountain high" no one ever believed unless he was very credulous indeed. The phrase is a highly exaggerated figure of speech. But the observations of keepers of lighthouses in exposed situations have proved that waves run high enough in great storms to make very respectable hills. Some years ago the steamer that carried supplies to the lighthouse on Tillamook rock, on the coast of Oregon, was able to make a landing and establish commercial communication with the light keepers after a series of storms only by strenuous endeavors covering a period of six weeks.

The waves of the Pacific had torn away the wharfs and other constructions on the rock, even carrying off timbers which were riveted to the rock. As yet, however, the lantern had remained untouched.

But the storm increased, the waves rose in height and soon dashed against the lantern, which was 150 feet above the level of the sea. Finally the water washed over the top of the lighthouse, going in through the ventilators overhead.

The keepers were compelled to work desperately all night long to keep the lamp lighted. They were continually in fear that the lights in the glasses looking seaward would be broken in by the force of the waves and that they themselves should be washed out into the sea to certain death. But the iron latticework outside the windows saved the panes from destruction.

The light keepers, who were old sailors, affirmed that no experience on shipboard could be as horrible as this long struggle with the storm at the summit of the lighthouse. They would have been glad to take refuge even in a frail ship.

The Tillamook light had on previous occasions been washed over completely by waves. The same thing happened to the Eddystone light, off the coast of England, and to the light at Fleaux-de-Brechet, off the coast of France, both of which are about 150 feet in height.

It seems well established, therefore, that waves may mount to a height 150 feet above the general level.—New York World.

Threescore and Ten.

The old tradition was that threescore and ten was the average span of life, and we are becoming convinced that it is true. Nine old people out of ten probably die within three years of seventy—that is, old people who meet with no bad accidents and who inherit no fatal disease from their parents. Look at the death list in any paper. A man who passes sixty is pretty apt to die within three years of seventy. Old traditions are entitled to a great deal of respect. After all the talk about health rules, the fact remains that the average life is wound up to run about seventy years. If he does not take care of himself nature will remind him of his duty in a way that must be heeded.—Acheson Globe.

Will Not Down.

"After all, my friends," said the campaign spellbinder, "vital principles never change. Questions of expediency may arise to cloud the real and living issues from time to time, but the issues themselves are the same from generation to generation. Political parties, in the main, agree as to aims. It is a difference of opinion as to methods that divide them. For example, what one thing do we all, without regard to political affiliations, regard as one of the essentials of our civilization?"

"A good five cent cigar!" shouted an enthusiastic hearer on the outskirts of the crowd.—Chicago Tribune.

Speaking For the Chickens.

A southerner, hearing a great commotion in his chicken house one dark night, took his revolver and went to investigate.

"Who's there?" he sternly demanded, opening the door.

No answer.

"Who's there? Answer or I'll shoot!"

A trembling voice from the farthest corner:

"Deed, sah, dey ain't nobody yah 'ceptin' us chickens."—Everybody's Magazine.

The Word "Salary."

The way languages are built up is very interesting, and the derivation of the word "salary" is curious as well. In ancient times Roman soldiers received a daily portion of salt as part of their pay. "Sal" is the Latin for salt, and when the salt was in course of time commuted for money the amount was called salarium or salt money, hence our word "salary" and hence, doubtless, the expression "not worth his salt"—that is, not worth his "salt money" or salary.

BLAZED TREES.

The Way They Marked Forest Roads and Boundary Lines.

Very few persons have any adequate notion of the meaning of the phrase "blazed trail," as so often used in fiction having to do with the great west.

In earlier days, when large portions of the country were covered with forests and there were few roads, travel was often only possible by way of paths "blazed" through the woods. To blaze, in the woodsman's sense, is to strike chips from the sides of trees, so that the line of marks shall indicate the direction of the trail.

In blazing for a path small trees were marked, but in blazing for the bounds of a lot or town or for a farm line larger trees were usually selected, the blaze being made about breast high. When, however, as was often the case, the blazing was done in winter on deep snow by men traveling on snowshoes the mark was necessarily higher up. When such a line is traveled in the summer, especially after some years, the marks are sometimes found high up on the trunks and are likely to escape the eye of the inexperienced. As many of them will also be partially overgrown, the task of the surveyor who goes over one of these old lines is not always easy.

If the boundary line passes to the left of a tree selected for blazing the cut is made upon the right side. If the line goes to the right the tree is blazed upon the left side.

In running a boundary at a corner, where two lines come together, either a "monument" is erected—a stake supported by four bowlders—or a tree is blazed on all four sides to indicate as nearly as possible the turning point of the line.

The permanency of the record made by blazing trees is quite remarkable. It is a matter of fact that in many cases of disputed lines or boundaries of lots in forest lands the courts have held the record of the blazes as sufficient and reliable where carefully drawn plans and formally attested title deeds have been set aside. The wound of a blazed tree heals over, but never so completely that the scar may not be readily recognized by the experienced woodsman; hence it follows that so long as the blazed tree escapes fire and the ax of the lumberman so long it remains a faithful record of the line as surveyed. It will not lie, nor will argument or cross examination refute its testimony.

Blazed trees also fix dates almost as accurately as they preserve boundaries. The outer shell which has grown over the scar is cut away, and the rings in the bark testify to the number of years that have elapsed since the blaze was made.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

How Birds Meet Emergencies.

Dr. Francis H. Herrick says a sparrow will pluck a horsehair from the mouth of a nesting, while another bird, like an oriole, will stand by and see its mate hang until dead without attempting to release it.

A robin will tug at a string which has caught on a limb, but is never seen fully to meet the situation by releasing the string. It will make several turns of a cord about a limb and leave the other end free without any relation to the nest, so that its effort is useless. It ties no knots.

The gull, according to abundant and competent testimony, will carry shellfish to a considerable height, drop them on the rocks or hard ground and repeat the experiment until it gets the soft meat.—Chicago Tribune.

When Will the Earth Be Full?

The fertile lands of the globe amount, it is estimated, to 28,000,000 square miles, the steppes to 14,000,000 and the deserts to 1,000,000. Fixing 207 persons to the square mile for fertile lands, ten for steppes and one for deserts, as the greatest population that the earth could properly nourish, the calculation is that when the number of inhabitants reaches about 6,000,000,000 the earth will be peopled to its full capacity. At present it contains somewhat more than one-quarter of that number. If the rate of increase shown by the latest census statistics should be uniformly maintained the globe would be fully peopled about the year 2072.

Husband (crossly)—Yes.

Wife—Well, dear, is a linguist a man who pulls out tongues?

Husband—No, madam, but I wish he did.—London Answers.

TIME TO ACT

Don't Wait for the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness Profit by Greenville People's Experience.

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches and dizzy spells are common early symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect this ill. The attacks may pass off for a time but return with greater intensity. If there are symptoms of dropsy—puffy swellings below the eyes, bloating of limbs and ankles, or any part of the body, don't delay a minute. Begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and keep up the treatment until the kidneys are well, when your old time health and vigor will return. Cures in Greenville prove the effectiveness of this great kidney remedy.

Mrs. J. F. Stokes, Cor. Twelfth and Evans Sts., Greenville, N. C., says: "For some time I suffered severely from kidney complaint. The kidneys were very irregular in action and at times caused me great annoyance. I had bearing down pains through my abdomen and sharp shooting twinges through my loins causing me untold misery. There was a tender spot across my kidney regions and at times my limbs pained intensely. I finally read of Doan's Kidney pills and was so much impressed that I procured them at Wooten's drug store. They soon relieved the pains in my sides and limbs, restored the secretions to a regular and normal condition and at present I am feeling a great deal better in every way. I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for the great improvement in my condition."

FIRES AND INSURANCE

What Being Burned Out May Mean to a Business.

DAMAGE ONE CANNOT COVER.

Enormous Losses Caused by the Suspension of Operations and the Drifting Away of Trade That Are Not Appreciated by the General Public.

"I suppose you heard that Blank & Co. were burned out from the roof to the basement last night?" remarks the man in the car.

"No!" exclaims the friend who hasn't seen the morning paper. "I suppose they carried insurance?"

"Oh, yes—a hundred thousand of it!" returns the first speaker, at which his friend settles back with the comment that everything is all right then.

This is the layman's conclusion almost invariably. Some big concern burns out, but with insurance to an amount seeming to cover the loss the average man is disposed to feel that it is all right. He doesn't stop to think of the enormous risks of a business which cannot be covered by insurance and which for weeks, months or years after a fire are crippling and perhaps ruinous to the fire victim.

Take, for example, a highly organized factory plant in prosperous times which has been turning out a vast specialized product from the hands of thousands of expert workmen. This plant, fitted with costly machinery, is covered by insurance upon its visible, material assets. Fire sweeps it and lays everything in hopeless ruin. If every piece of machinery, every building and all material adjuncts of the plant have been covered to full value in such a plant, will the reader dare make a rough guess as to what the limitations of loss may be?

Only the other day I stepped into a bookbindery, unostentatious in its street signs and occupying a fifth floor in an obscure street. In the elevator shaft was that peculiar odor which marks the track of fire and firemen days and weeks after such an accident.

"Most of the fire was next door," explained the proprietor, "but I guess the smoke and the water were about as bad for us. Sometimes it is almost better to have the fire yourself than be next door to it."

Which seemed to be especially true of book material. Where smoke and soot had fallen to blot and ruin the stock, water from the engines in the street had flooded it until ruin alone was descriptive. Everything had been closed down, workers in the plant were idle, and the proprietor was awaiting the adjustment of the insurance which he had been carrying. But in the extent of this insurance itself was a knotty situation.

Ordinarily the house had carried policies which would have left it the minimum of risk on its machinery, stock and materials. Ordinarily a still further blanket policy was carried for the purpose of covering the normal amount of book material on hand owned by others and contracted for rebinding. But only a few days before the fire the house had received a consignment of $5,000 worth of law-books to be bound. These volumes, aside from intrinsic value, represented so much of other value as to make the risk abnormal for almost any season. And these books were ruined.

Before receiving them the binder had asked the owners to take out a policy for themselves protecting them against such fire loss. The firm had not done so, and when the fire damage came the disposition of the owners was to hold the binder for them under one of the binder's blanket policies.

On this one disputed point, taking it into court, will some one make a guess as to what this one feature of the fire may cost the binder, who to all purposes was "insured," if it should be settled in the supreme court after five or seven years, for example?

But in the case of the big manufactory, with its imported special machinery, its season of rush work and its enormous and fluctuating stock of material—if on the morning after the fire the assuring companies settle in full for the visible losses, how much has the company been damaged?

Of first consideration, perhaps, is the enormous payroll of the concern. If most of the mechanical work of the plant has been done by pieceworkers, still the necessary force of directing employees on salary is a problem. The determination of the owners is to start up anew. Tried and proved employees must be retained while the work of rehabilitation goes on. They must be paid even if they are to do no more than wait. Settlement of some kind must be made with contractors who have been supplying raw materials from the hands of other thousands of workers. No matter what the clauses in contracts providing immunity in case of fires, strikes and acts of Providence, every line of business affecting the welfare of the manufactory has been affected.

The plant is a total loss. Before it can be rebuilt the ruins of the old factory must be cleared away.

In the meantime all those customers of the manufactory who have been pressing for the filling of contract orders find themselves shut out of any chance for receiving them. They turn at once to other competing establishments for the work. Not only does the burned out firm lose all chance of profits from this work, but it is running a long chance of losing some of its oldest and best customers in years' standing.—Chicago Tr. June.

An Oversight.

The poet Landor was at the same time the most violent and brutal and most delicate and sensitive of men. He admired flowers. The gardens of his beautiful villa at Florence were full of flowers, and the poet walked among them daily, never plucking them, only bending over them reverently to admire their loveliness and their perfume. His cook one day served him a wretched dinner, and in his rage the poet threw the man out of the window into a bed of splendid roses. As the cook writhed with a broken leg below, Landor from his window exclaimed in a horror stricken voice, "Good gracious, I forgot the roses!"

Missed the Accessories.

"I hear you are receiving attentions from an actor."
"Yes, and I think he would propose if I could rig up a spot light in the parlor and sort of arrange the pianola for a little slow music."—Kansas City Journal.
