GREENVILLE'S NOTABLE GUESTS.

Chamber of Commerce and Carolina Club to Entertain the Visitors.

There was a called meeting of the Chamber of Commerce in the mayor's office Monday night, presided over by P. M. Wooten, the new president and H. A. White acting as secretary.

Ex-Gov. T. J. Jarvis was asked to state the object of the meeting. He said that as the Board of Trustees of East Carolina Teachers Training School and the State Board of Education were to meet here on the 31st inst. to inspect the buildings, he thought it proper to take recognition of their coming and make preparation for their entertainment.

After some discussion the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, the Chamber of Commerce has heard with pleasure that the trustees of the East Carolina Teachers Training School have invited the State Board of Education to meet with them at Greenville December 31st, to inspect the buildings and to consider other matters of interest to the school, therefore be it resolved:

1. That this chamber heartily joins with the Board of Trustees in the invitation extended to the State Board of Education and earnestly requests each member to accept the invitation and to honor our growing city with their presence on that occasion.

2. That the president of this body is authorized and directed to communicate this action to the several members of the State Board of Education, and to request that they, with such friends as may accompany them, will be the guests of this body while in Greenville.

Whereas, the county of Pitt made a liberal donation to the erection of the building of the East Carolina Teachers Training School, therefore be it resolved:

That the president of this chamber is hereby authorized and directed to invite the county superintendent of education, the retiring and present members of County Commissioners, and the old and new county officers, and the retiring and present members of the legislature from the county of Pitt, to be present on December, 31st on the occasion of the visit of the State Board of Education to the East Carolina Teachers Training School and be the guests of this chamber on said occasion.

Resolved 1—That the president of this chamber be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to appoint a committee of seven from this body to act with a like committee from the Carolina Club to compose a committee on entertainment of the State Board of Education and others at the meeting of the trustees of the East Carolina Teachers Training School in Greenville on the 31st inst.

2.—That said joint committee have full power and authority to provide for the entertainment of the State Board of Education, the Board of Trustees and other guests in such manner and at such places as they may deem proper.

After calling the directors of the Chamber of Commerce in consultation with him, President Wooten announced the following committee on the part of the chamber: F. G. James, chairman, H. B. Smith, C. O'H. Laughinghouse, H. W. Whedbee, H. A. White, D. L. James and

TRINITY COLLEGE GLEE CLUB

In Opera House Tonight, December 22nd.

THE CENTRAL MERCHANTILE CO. (OF GREENVILLE, N. C.)

A Company Organized to do a Large Retail Time and Cash Business.

Already the year 1909 is promising good things for Greenville. It has been apparent that one of the needs of this town was a very large merchantile establishment that will draw business from a large territory and make Greenville a center of trade. During the last week or two there has been a movement on foot looking to the organization of a stock company for conducting such a business.

This movement met with such gratifying success that a meeting of those interested was held Monday night to effect a temporary organization and take the necessary steps to obtain a charter and other preliminaries.

We are told that the organization will be capitalized at $100,000, and enough of this has already been paid in to secure the charter and begin business. The style of the corporation will be The Central Merchantile Co. (of Greenville, N. C.) and it will do a general time and cash merchantile business.

CHRISTMAS GERMAN.

To be led by Miss Nell Skinner and Walter Wilson, Jr.

Assisted by Mr. Thompson of the Chamberlin of Old Point, Va.

The dance to be held here on the 25th inst will be the largest and most fashionable ever gotten up in Greenville. The German will be led by Miss Nell Skinner and Mr. Walter Wilson Jr., assisted by Mr. Thompson, of The Chamberlin, Old Point Va. The German figures will be very different from the ones that have been led here, and all spectators and chaperones are requested to be at the hall for the grand march and illumination which will take place at 9:30 sharp.

Prof. Levin and his famous orchestra will delight the chaperones and spectators with the sweetest selections from all the best and up to date operas before the dance opens.

D. J. Whichard.

After the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, Carolina Club held a meeting in the club parlors, and appointed the following committee on the part of the club: E. A. Moye, Jr., J. L. Fleming, F. M. Wooten, R. Williams, R. O. Jeffress, W. L. Hall and E. G. Flanagan.

These committees request the co-operation of all people of the community in helping to make the 31st a day that will in every way be creditable to Greenville.

TUESDAY, DEC. 22, 1908.

Let us all determine to make the 31st a great day for Greenville.

If you do not expect too much in the way of Christmas presents you are less liable to disappointment.

The Durham Sun gives some good advice when it says "In giving Christmas presents do not give yourself away."

All the time it looks more and more like Greater Greenville. This town is "going some" and you can watch us grow.

The general public appears to be much busier about making the new presidential cabinet than is Mr. Taft himself.

A ton of coal or a cord of wood, or even a smaller quantity of either, would be a timely Christmas present for some people.

It looks like an epidemic of suicide is sweeping the country. If people would just stop and think about it, most of them will die soon enough.

If endorsements and requests for his appointment count for anything, Col. Harry Skinner should get the judgeship of the Eastern North Carolina district.

age in Massachusetts is about ten times as great and that of New York about seven times as great as that of North Carolina." This statement seems not to have attracted the attention it deserved, but this is not surprising. The object of the meeting was to start a movement to Republicanize the South and such statements as that did so much credit to the dominant party in the South that the managers of the speaking didn't emphasize it. They emphasized only those misstatements calculated to help Taft carry the South into the Teddy-Booker party.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Newspaper Inaccuracies.
 The publication of a daily newspaper means the production each 24 hours of printed matter that is equivalent to a book. Sometimes people complain of the inaccuracies. The marvel is that the news stated in the papers is approximately correct, or that names spelled are one-half spelled right. It transpires also that those who complain most about inaccuracies, are the ones from whom the reporters find it most difficult to get a definite statement. If the public would co-operate a little more with news gatherers, it would conduce immensely to the betterment of the news service and to its accuracy.—Charlotte Chronicle.

High Corn and Low Cotton.
 Paying for high price corn and meat with 8 cent cotton is about the biggest kind of foolishness ever practised by sane men. The farmers of the South would have been a hundred per cent. better off if there had been no such thing as cotton raised in the South. Millions of men have almost starved their families in a foolish attempt to raise something the family cannot use. It is one of the strangest things in the world that this is true. It is a reflection upon the sense and business capacity of Southern people.—Our Home.

The Christmas edition of The Greenville Reflector, is up to the standard in every particular, and is a credit to the community it represents as well as the paper itself. The issue is clearly a reflector.—New Bern Sun.

Figures to Remember.
 Those poorly informed folks, in and out of North Carolina, who represent the people as shiftless, then politics stagnant and their interest in public schools, as small need to commit to memory the following brief statement by Hon. J. Y. Joyner in his speech at the North Carolina Society:
 "Based upon the total school fund and the total valuation of taxable property as officially reported in the respective States, North Carolina is rising annually for school purposes eighty-two cents for every hundred dollars of taxable property. Massachusetts forty-one cents, and New York sixty-one cents. In other words, North Carolina, in proportion to her wealth, is bearing twice as heavy a burden as Massachusetts for the education of her children, and one and one-third as heavy a burden as New York. But the assessed taxable property for each child of school

Talent—It Pays.

Last month a merchant a thousand miles from Chicago wanted to place over his store an electric light sign he had heard about in Chicago. Made a special trip there for specifications and terms. Too high!

Mr. Merchant returned home and incidentally told the local electrician about his troubles. Mr. Home Electrician replied that he could reproduce the Chicago sign, with improvements, at a price that suited. And he did so.

JUST THINK THIS OVER, WILL YOU?

THE HAND OF FATE.

A Badly Written Figure 5 the Cause of a Man's Death.

"Something happened in front of my house very recently that set me to thinking," said a New York man of business the other day.

"I rent and occupy a home on Eighth street. The front yard is inclosed by an iron fence with an iron gate which had been broken and not yet repaired.

"Going home to lunch one day I was surprised to find a workman engaged in repairing the gate. As I had not notified the owner, I was somewhat surprised at his unwonted zeal in making unsolicited repairs. I asked the workman who sent him to do the work, and he replied:

"Mr. Brown, who owns the house."

"But," said I, "he doesn't own it. It is owned by Mr. Smith, and I rent it of him."

"Oh, no," said he, "Mr. Brown owns the house. He owns a lot of houses, and I do all his iron work. Here is a postal he sent me telling me to go and repair a broken iron gate at — Eighth street. There can't be any mistake."

"I examined the card carefully. The number of the house was the same as mine, and at first glance the street appeared to be Eighth street, but upon closer scrutiny I saw that it was Fifth street.

"I explained the matter to the workman, but as he had half completed the job I told him to go ahead and finish it and I would pay him. He did so and went away.

"In the course of his work he had been obliged to take up some of the bricks in the walk, and when he re-laid them there was half a brick left over and not needed. This he had tossed into the street.

"That evening two boys came racing down the street on bicycles. They were moving at a rapid rate. Simultaneously the clergyman of a nearby church started to cross the street.

"When he was halfway across and in front of my house he saw the boys bearing down upon him like a whirlwind. He did what any person of good judgment and strong nerve would do. He stopped and waited for them to pass.

"As they approached they divided, one going a little to the right and the other a little to the left. Just as they were directly opposite him the bicycle of one of the boys struck the piece of brick the workman had tossed into the street, and the boy was thrown upon the clergyman with such force as to knock the latter down. His skull was fractured, and he was dead before he could be removed to his home.

"As I have said, the affair set me to thinking. Here was a man brought to an untimely death because some other man whom he had never seen and of whom he had never heard in writing the figure '5' made it look like the figure '8.' And I wondered if there might not be somewhere in the world some unknown one who held my fate in his hands and who even then with a stroke of his pen might not be signing my death warrant.

"It made me feel creepy for several days."—New York Sun.

They Still Name the Cook.

A queer custom, which prevails at no other court than that of Great Britain, is the announcement at the beginning of each course at a dinner of the name of the cook who has prepared the dishes served. The origin of this custom dates back to the reign of King George II., who made a great favorite of one of his cooks promoting him to the rank of chief over the heads of all his seniors. This, of course, created great jealousy, and every effort was made to oust him from royal favor by rendering him responsible for the failures which were laid upon the king's table. Greatly incensed thereby and fearing to lose his post, he complained to the king in person, who immediately gave orders that henceforth whenever a dish was placed before him the name of the cook responsible for its success or failure should be announced in an audible tone.

Accuracy.

The literal quality of the Chinese mind is well illustrated by a story in the Travel Magazine. An American visiting in Hongkong desired to buy some souvenir spoons and with that purpose in mind entered a jeweler's store.

The selection made, he wrote upon a piece of paper the inscription, "Hongkong, 1906," to have the same engraved on the bowl. As he started to leave the store the Chinaman called him back and asked for a deposit.

The gentleman gave him 75 cents, making a note of the fact on the paper on which he had written the inscription.

When he called for the spoon the next day it was inscribed in the bowl, "Hongkong, 1906, paid 75 cents."

OLD SCHOOL DOCTORS

Ignorance of Physicians of the Eighteenth Century.

TORTURE FOR THE PATIENTS.

Every Ailment Beyond Diagnosis Was Classed as a Fever, and Pills, Plasters, Burning and Bleeding Were the Regulation Remedies.

The proverb "The remedy is worse than the disease" must have been coined in the eighteenth century, when physicians treated their patients with a violence that bordered on assault and battery. It was held that sickness was some kind of a demon that must be overcome by pills, plasters, bleeding and burning, and if the patient incidentally got the full effects of the torture and died, so much the worse for him. Air and water were considered the most dangerous things for a sick person to have, and his misguided demand for them was interpreted as a sign that he should have still less. The windows were shut and the curtains of the four poster tightly drawn around the recumbent unfortunate gasping for breath. If he burned with fever the blankets were piled on him. A desire for water meant that he could have none, while a lack of appetite proved that he ought to be stuffed with food. A bath was positively unthinkable.

The deadly results of breathing "night air" were accentuated by medical writers, says S. G. Tallentyre in the Cornhill Magazine. All air was bad, but the night quality often proved fatal to "young ladies of beauty, fortune and great merit" and to "young gentlemen of parts and breeding." One bold medico recommended that a bed-chamber should be ventilated—in the daytime. Another dared to suggest that consumptives might benefit from sleeping in a pure atmosphere. The rule for ablutions was "hands often, feet seldom, head never," but a physician far in advance of his age surmised that invalids might bathe their feet in warm water once a week and under extraordinary circumstances take a warm bath once a month.

Overeating and drinking caused many of the diseases of the upper classes. Montesquieu said that dinner killed one half of the Parisians and supper the other half. Everywhere it was the custom to pile the table with roast beef, mutton, capons, boars' heads, pasties, creams, stuffings and mince-meats. A fearful repast of twelve indigestible courses was brought on all together, so that the diners knew what was expected of them. A large breakfast of small beer and meats preceded the gigantic midday meal, when people enjoyed a gargantuan gorge for three hours and spent two more in Falstaffian potations. After this the gentlemen joined the women for a dish of tea in the drawing room, and it was not long before the whole party of human anacondas returned to the dining room for a supper on the cold remnants of the dinner. Amid this orgy of gluttony Walpole and Voltaire were distinguished for an abstinence that prolonged their lives.

Heavy drinking was universal and rarely reprimanded by medical men, as by Dr. Tronchin. One Dr. Cheyne advised women not to take a whole bottle a day. Another authority wrote a popular treatise in which the best means of attaining longevity was stated to be a bottle of wine at dinner and three glasses after. Those who followed such advice were in danger of being dubbed temperance cranks. A story is told of the celebrated and convivial Dr. Garth, who was tipping bumpers at the Kit-Kat club when reminded that his patients needed attention. "Tis no matter," said Garth, already half seas over, "if I see them or not. Nine have such bad constitutions that all the doctors in the world can't save them, and the other six have such good that all the doctors in the world can't kill them."

A physician named Brown became the pet of fashionable women by always prescribing pleasant remedies, "a glass of wine in the forenoon from time to time," "several glasses of port or punch after dinner till some enlivening effect is perceived from them." Together with inordinate quantities of liquor and food, Dr. Brown recommended to his male patients the company of "delightful young women." One of the natural consequences of such an agreeable regimen was the gout, for which eighteenth century high livers took seas of liquid medicines, mountains of pills and bins of powders.

Any disease beyond diagnosis was put down as "a fever." Whether typhus or typhoid, scarlet or gastric, non-contagious or violently infectious, anything which caused a rise in temperature was sufficiently described by the term fever. Smallpox, scurvy, spotted and jail fever were maladies distinctive of the age. Disinfection and first aid to natures were never dreamed of, while the patient was dosed with horrible drafts and nauseating compounds and bled on every possible occasion.

Louis XIV. was bled nine times for scarlet fever. Bleeding killed the Duchess of Tremouille and her husband. When a mob attacked the Duke of Bedford's house in 1793 the doctors remedied the outrage by bleeding the duchess next morning. A young man who fell against a marble table and cut his head open was treated by having a few pints of extra blood drawn from his veins by an expert surgeon. Blistering was esteemed next to bleeding. A fashionable remedy for consumption was a mash of raw snails, shells and all, taken from a spoon.

HIS ALIBI.

It Cleared the Accused, but Furnished an Odd Sequel.

A highly respectable gentleman arrived at York one evening with luggage and dined well, went to bed early, rose in good time and had a substantial breakfast. After this meal he casually asked the landlord if there was anything of special interest in York. "The assizes are on, but I do not know if there is anything particularly interesting in the list," was the response.

"Thanks," drawled the stranger. "I'll look in if I happen to pass the court and see."

He did look in and heard a follower of Dick Turpin in the dock, charged with highway robbery, pleading his innocence vehemently to a stolid judge and jury, who, with firm faces, did not look as if they placed much credence in the prisoner's profession of innocence. Suddenly the prisoner caught sight of the stranger, who had strolled in from the hotel out of curiosity.

"Here, thank God, is some one who can prove my innocence!" cried the prisoner, pointing to the stranger, who was agast at becoming the center of interest so unexpectedly. He seemed astonished and shook his head.

"Oh, yes," cried the accused; "just think! You were at Dover—a long way from here. You came out of the Ship hotel, and I took your luggage in a wheelbarrow to the Calais packet at the pier. That was the day I am supposed to have committed the crime up here."

The stranger seemed bewildered. The judge, struck with the tragic earnestness of the prisoner, questioned the stranger, but the latter could not assist him much.

"Have you any notebooks," asked the judge—"any memorandum of your movements on that day?"

"I am a merchant," replied the stranger, "connected with an old established firm of bankers in London. I travel a lot and of course enter everything in my books. Here are my keys if the court cares to send to my hotel and bring here the books out of my case. I can easily settle the point."

The books were fetched. The gentleman had been in Dover that day and had left by the Calais packet. This was sufficient for the judge and jury. The prisoner was acquitted.

Comic sequel: Both the "banker from London" and the highwayman were placed in the same dock shortly afterward charged with daring burglaries in the neighborhood.—Harry Furniss in London Standard.

The Usher Woke Up.

At a certain county court the judge is in his private capacity a kind hearted man. The usher of the court is aged—very aged—but as he had been a faithful servant for many years he was retained in that capacity. One morning he fell asleep in court and began to snore. The noise he made naturally disturbed court proceedings, but the judge displayed great tact in dealing with the matter.

"Usher Jones," he called out loudly, "some one is snoring."

The usher woke up. He jumped to his feet and glared ferociously round. "Silence!" he roared. "There must be no snoring in court!"—Exchange.

Without Imagination.

There is a certain New York business man of a rather waggish disposition who contends that his wife has no imagination.

At dinner one night he chanced to mention a tragic circumstance he had read in the evening paper on his way home. A passenger on a transatlantic steamer had fallen overboard in mid-ocean and had never been seen again. "Was he drowned?" asked the wife. "Of course not," answered the irrefragable hubby, "but he sprained his ankle, I believe."—Lippincott's.

Heartless Gamblers.

The rage for gambling at White's and Almack's clubs in London in other days led to most outrageous betting, as to which Walpole tells what he calls a good tale: A man dropped down in a fit before the door and was carried inside. The club instantly made bets as to whether he would die or not, and when a doctor was called in to attend him his ministrations were interfered with by the members because, they said, these would affect the fairness of the bets.

Sold Her Starving Baby.

"It was not because I did not love him that I gave him up, it was because I loved him too much."

In this way Mrs. Mary Levin gave her reason for selling her six month old baby to Abraham Kein, of 1719 South Sixth street, for $10. Protest against her action was made to the police today; but they declared they could do nothing.

"I did not want to sell him for money; I did not want to sell him at all; but my husband deserted me before he was born, and I have been unable to provide for him as my mother's heart prompts. He was hungry and cold with me, and he has shared a life of hardship since the day he was born. So I sold him that he might be happy."—New York American.

Pitiful Sale.

Kits of sailors lost at sea are sold regularly at auction at the Albert docks in London. The sale provides many a pitiful sight. Most of the lots are contained in the regular sailor's sea chest, all marked with the name of the ship from which they come. It is not unusual for those who have lost friends or relatives at sea to attend these auctions, and there are times when the first news of such a loss comes through the recognition of familiar objects.
