GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA, TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JANUARY 5, 1909.

NUMBER 5404

MODEL TOWN OF EAST CAROLINA.

GREENVILLE AND THE NEW TEACHER'S TRAINING SCHOOL.

Josephus Daniels in Raleigh News and Observer Points to Greenville as a Model in Conducting Public Utilities.

Greenville, N. C., Dec. 31.—If a person well acquainted with Greenville should have gone west fifteen years ago and could return today he would not know he was in the same town, except for a few landmarks, and they are so rapidly disappearing that in a few years the Greenville of the eighties would not be recognized at all. It has gone forward steadily and its progress is ten fold more marked than you would suppose unless you were here for yourself to see the improvements and come in touch with the progressive and united spirit that are essential for the right sort of development. The people have learned to pull together here. By that I do not mean they think alike or that there are not sharp rivalries and keen competition and some times the sort of friction necessary to make things move, but they have learned to agree to disagree upon many things, but to pull together for the town.

The era of change from the village of 1,200 in the country town to the large and hustling and growing town with a population of 5,000 has not been attended by any booming, wild-cat speculation, or frenzied financiering by individuals or the public. These people have made haste slowly and been certain of the solid ground before they have stepped forward. Usually a town that gets out of the slow village life is in a hurry for showing city improvements and is tempted to rush headlong into debt. The fact that Greenville's debt up to last year was only $100,000, and that it owns its water, lights, sewerage and has its main business streets paved with vitrified brick speaks volumes for local government and the conservative habits of its people. There were plenty of applications from private companies, to furnish water and lights, but the business men argued that if a private company could make money furnishing water and lights, the whole people ought to enjoy these modern necessities at the lowest possible cost without any profit to middlemen. That correct principle prevails in every community where its town officials were too wise to give away franchises for a song. Here the management of these public utilities is admirable. A board composed of solid business men has control of water and lights. It is owned by the city, but the city pays the Water and Light Board for water and lights just as private consumers pay and the management knows to a cent the cost of operation and the receipts.

The problem of city government is troubling every city in America and most of the larger towns in North Carolina. Here it is solved. The best men in town accept position on the town board and give the same careful and prudent management to city affairs they give to their private affairs. Therefore they have a low tax rate and good home government. How do they do it? By close economy, putting only successful and public spirited men in charge of affairs, not multiplying offices and like methods that eat up the money of tax-payers. O, for a Greenville spirit of proper economy in government in all our towns and cities!

Greenville has been getting large sums from the profits of the dispensary, which closes today. It sold out all the intoxicants—lock, stock and barrel—by noon today and hadn't a "short" left—if anybody had wanted that quantity. But Greenville will not be troubled by this loss. It did what some of us tried unsuccessfully to get Raleigh to do—it did not put the money in the regular city receipts, but used it as a separate fund for street improvements. Therefore there is no dislocation of city finances, no necessity to increase tax rate, and no danger that it will starve the minds of its children by shortening the school term, for Greenville people have come to learn—though it took time for some of them to grasp it—that it pays in dollars and cents to invest in immortal mind. It may not do some other things it would like to do, but Greenville people will not permit its children to lack educational facilities because of the loss of revenue derived by selling that which demoralized and injured the town and county.

There is not now standing but two business houses on the chief business street in Greenville that were there fifteen years ago. Scores of modern and elegant houses and hundreds of neat and modern cottages show that the population has grown rapidly and that they have been well housed. Its tobacco section has the largest warehouses, prize houses and the like, giving evidence of the big tobacco business that has accelerated Greenville's growth. The manufacturing plants, yet few in number, are prosperous. The completion of a large veneering plant gives it the best concern of that kind in Eastern North Carolina. In every line of business there has been progress and marked growth and there is every reason to believe that Greenville is but upon the threshold of a prosperous career that will make the growth of the recent past seem small by comparison. The people here have faith in themselves, faith in their town, they have made money and know how to keep it turning over, and they have the sort of faith and hustle that win in any race.

No town has better transportation facilities. The Atlantic Coast Line and the Norfolk and Southern Railroads gives fine mail and passenger and freight service, and the boats on the river for heavy freight insures the advantage which competition always gives to a town. Before there was any railroad here Greenville enjoyed a large trade and its water transportation enabled it to sell cheaply. It has not lost the river and possible water transportation and if freight rates go up it can protect itself by shipping by water, a chance for self-preservation not enjoyed by inland towns. A few years ago it was easier to go to New York from Raleigh than to come here from the State's capital. A Greenville citizen would have to snatch an early breakfast in order to get to Raleigh for an early supper. Now he can eat supper at home and get to Raleigh at ten o'clock. Two daily trains on the Norfolk and Southern make the connection so close that the Raleigh and Greenville folks, long separated, now feel as if they are near neighbors. More people from this place attended the State Fair last October from this county than ever before. We are now close neighbors and one of these days Raleigh should enjoy the advantage which cheap water transportation to Greenville should give.

But the chief step forward that Greenville and Pitt county have made is in public education. Under the leadership of County Superintendent Ragsdale Pitt has made more progress in building public schools than any county in North Carolina. And here again they showed wisdom in handling the dispensary profits. Instead of putting that money, which they were wise enough to know was temporary, into the regular school fund to add to the length of the term, it was kept separate and apart and used to build school houses until nearly every district has a modern school house and most of them have attractive school houses that would do credit to any community ten times as rich. Greenville delayed in establishing a graded school, but when it decided to do so it built a brick building that is admirably equipped and under Superintendent Smith is doing fine work. Every town in the county—and no county in the East has so many prosperous little towns—has a good school, and some of the rural school houses are just as good as those in the town.

Greenville and Pitt county won the victory when the East Carolina Teachers' Training School was located here long before the contest began. They laid the foundation for success when they voted local tax in town and county district and aroused the people in every section of the county to the importance of educating their children. But for that pioneer preparatory work the people would not have voted the $100,000 of bonds that gave a fund sufficient to erect the necessary buildings with which to start the school when it will open its doors next September for students. The people voted the gift of $100,000 almost by acclamation and they will find that they never invested money that will pay a better dividend. It was my pleasure today to visit the site of this new State School and to go through the buildings. The trustees had $115,000. They bought a site of forty seven acres, within a short distance of the court house, that is admirable for the purpose. It is on a bluff, or high hill overlooking the town, with level ground beyond the hill whereon has been erected four of the best school buildings in the whole South. There are two dormitories—one for boys and one for girls—and they are models in architectural beauty and in convenience. The refectory (dining room and kitchen, cold storage and bakery) is a gem in beauty and perfect in arrangement. The administration building, for class rooms and library and auditorium that will seat 800 people, will be an imposing structure. These four buildings will cost less than $100,000—the trustees having constructed them cheaper than any like buildings could be constructed at any other time. They gave out the contract when all building material was cheap, labor plentiful, and business dull. The result was they have secured buildings for $109,000 that three years ago could not have been built for less than $150,000. They were fortunate in contractors and architects, for the work is being so well done as to win universal commendation. Mr. C. C. Hook, of Charlotte, and Mr. H. W. Simpson, of New Bern, are the architects, and the Greenville Building Company the contractor. A local company obtained the contract and it has demonstrated that a North Carolina company can construct large college buildings as well as companies from the big cities that charge for their reputation. The report of the trustees to the Legislature will show that the State owns land and buildings that could not be replaced for $175,000 which has cost the State only $15,000—the amount appropriated by the last Legislature. The land was sold at a bargain and Greenville and Pitt county put up $100,000 which has been spent to better advantage than any private citizen could have expended it. The whole State owes a debt to the practical trustees who have shown the proper spirit and the best judgment in every step that has been taken.

The chief need today in our public school policy is capable teachers specially educated for the work. This need is felt here in Pitt and in all Eastern North Carolina. This lack was the prime motive that caused all the representatives in Eastern North Carolina to unite to secure the establishment of a Teachers' Training school in the eastern part of the State. The training of teachers will be the work of the school here and it is confidently believed when the doors open next September, the enrollment will be equal to the accommodations—two hundred and fifty. The trustees, among the first men in Eastern North Carolina, headed by ex-Governor Jarvis, will ask the Legislature to furnish and equip the buildings and give an annual appropriation of $25,000. The report will be transmitted to the general assembly by Governor Glenn and there is no doubt that it will properly equip and care for this youngest institution of the State, the only one located east of Raleigh. With the parent State Normal and Industrial college at Greensboro for women, the Pedagogy department at the University of North Carolina for men, the Cullowee High school in transmontane North Carolina for men and women, the Appalachian school for men and women in northwestern North Carolina, and the Eastern North Carolina Teachers' Training school, this good State will provide the best facilities for preparing teachers for the public schools. They will also stimulate desire for education in every part of the State and give us a new generation where illiteracy will be a thing of the past in the good Commonwealth.

Every man, woman and child in Pitt county takes a pride in the new institution. Almost every one had a hand in securing the location and all will help to pay the $100,000 town and county bond issue from the proceeds of which the buildings have been erected. They all take the keenest interest in the work and the people of this and other eastern counties who are poor see in the establishment of this institution a better chance to give their children an education that will prepare them for teaching and for the duties of life.

There is a notion in Piedmont North Carolina, which has made more rapid progress in manufacturing, that it is doing greater things than those sections having fewer spindles and making less noise. The truth is that Eastern North Carolina has been second to no part of the State in solid growth and leads all sections in the returns per acre from the farm. The past two years in all the counties east of Pitt the floods and heavy rains have done serious damage. In Pitt the low price of cotton causes all the farmers who can do so to hold their cotton for living prices. To sell now means to swap dollars. The farmers who make large crops are generally holding the cotton. From one big life insurance company $50,000 was borrowed this week to enable farmers to hold cotton. This has made money tighter than usual in this as in other cotton counties, but Greenville looks to the future with present prosperity and confidence in greater enlargement and prosperity in the new year. Its business men are second to none in the State; its banks solid as the rock of Gibraltar; its enterprises founded upon firm foundations and well managed; its bar able and resourceful, full of public spirit and leading for everything to help county and town; its public officials "fit, honest, capable," measuring up to the Jeffersonian standard; its daily newspaper; D. J. Whichard's Reflector, true to everything for material and education upbuilding; and the rank and file of its people building upon faith in industry, honesty and intelligence. It is in such a happy environment North Carolina has located its baby educational institution which is destined to bear a conspicuous part in the real uplift of Eastern North Carolina and win a place among the most influential institutions in the State.

Card of Thanks.
I desire to express my sincere appreciation and thanks to the people of Farmville and vicinity for their kind assistance in helping me save my store building at Farmville on the night of the 4th instant, as without the timely aid of my many friends I am quite sure the building would have been totally destroyed.

Notice to our Customers.
Beginning January 1st, 1909, we will charge for all crates and bottles short. Crates at $1.50 each and bottle 5c each. Beg to state that we have been trying to put this rule in force ever since we began business, but as our customers have not been required to keep up with the bottles heretofore, we have been very lenient with them and have not made any charges as yet, therefore we trust they will appreciate our position and will pull with us in taking care of these bottles and will require their customers to bring the bottles back to them, or pay 5c for each bottle short.

Trusting this will be satisfactory to all our customers and wishing them all a prosperous New Year, we are,
Very truly yours,

TUESDAY, JAN. 5, 1909.

You can look out for grips in this changeable weather.

To keep up our reputation Greenville must do much moving forward this year.

In spending so much of his spare time in the South, Mr. Taft shows that he knows a good thing.

The winter has been very mild so far, but there is plenty of time yet for it to do something.

As this year is to be practically free of political agitation, there will be more time to push industrial enterprises.

Next Tuesday, 12th Governor-elect W. W. Kitchin will be inaugurated, and Raleigh is making extensive preparation for the event.

Next week is court, and The Reflector will be disappointed unless it receives calls from quite a number of subscribers to get subscription receipts.

The presidential electors of North Carolina will meet in Raleigh on the 11th inst. to cast their votes for president. Of course they will all be cast for Bryan.

Soon we should be knowing who the president will appoint judge of the Eastern District of North Carolina to succeed the late Judge Purnell. It should be Col. Harry Skinner.

The commander-in-chief of the Chinese army has been dismissed from service because he had an attack of rheumatism in the leg. It is fortunate that the powers-that-be did not order him beheaded.

It is time folks were getting back to confidence, taking their money out of hiding places and putting it in the banks. You make times harder and money tighter by being afraid to let yours work.

It is to be hoped our farmers will plan to raise their own supplies this year. Having to pay all they get out of cotton and tobacco for hay, corn and meat does not look like wise farming. These things can and should be raised at home.

The saloon men always grab at the last straw. They are going to contest the recent election in Roanoke, Va., in which that city voted "dry" by 86 majority. But what is the use? They have got to go, and had as well make up their minds to that effect.

The chamber of commerce of Atlanta is to give a big banquet in honor of President-elect Taft who is sojourning in that State. The announcement is made that $100 Reward $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Ten Business Commandments.

1. Thou shalt not wait for something to turn up, but shalt pull off thy coat and go to work that thou mayest prosper in thy affairs and make the word "failure" spell success.

2. Thou shalt not be content to go about thy business looking like a bum, for thou shouldst know that the personal appearance is better than a letter of recommendation.

3. Thou shalt not try to make excuses nor shalt thou say to those who chide thee, "I didn't think."

4. Thou shalt not wait to be told what thou shalt do, nor in what manner thou shalt do it, for thus may thy days be long in the job which fortune hath given thee.

5. Thou shalt not fail to maintain thine own integrity, nor shalt thou be guilty of anything that will lessen thy good respect for thyself.

6. Thou shalt not covet the other fellows job, nor his salary, nor the position which he hath gained by his own labor.

7. Thou shalt not fail to live within thy income, nor shalt thou contract any debts when thou canst not see thy way clear to pay them.

8. Thou shalt not fail to blow thine own horn, for he who is afraid to blow his own horn at the proper occasion findeth nobody ready to blow it for him.

9. Thou shalt not hesitate to say "No" when thou meanest "No," nor shalt thou fail, to remember that there are occasions when it is unsafe to bind thyself by hasty judgment.

10. Thou shalt give every man a Square Deal. This is the last and great commandment, and there is no other like unto it. Upon this commandment dependeth all the law and the profits of the business world.—Exchange.

Thought Microbes In a Drop of Ink.

When applied to the newspaper page they make people think twice.

First, people think there's a man who keeps up with the procession.

Second, they think he must keep good goods on hand.

Again, if the home paper has enough drops of advertising ink on its surface to make a proper showing the outsider thinks this must be a pretty lively town.

Thus a drop of NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING INK is a good thing for the town.

A Correction.

Six-year-old Marjorie and four-year-old Josephine were making their first transcontinental trip—from New York to San Francisco—and, of course, encountered new marvels at almost every mile of the trip. But the crescendo of their ecstatic outpourings was reached when they saw their first Indian families—braves, squaws and papooses.

"Oh-h-h!" sighed Josephine, gazing wide eyed at the moccasined, gaudily blanketed squaws. "Ain't those squashes just splendid, though!"

Marjorie's equally deep admiration was momentarily quenched in her feeling of responsibility as elder sister monitor, and she eyes Josephine severely as she admonished:

"They ain't squashes, Josephine; they're squabs!"—New York Times.

Disadvantages of a Clock.

"There used to be a big clock above that door," said the woman shopper. "What has become of it?"

"We took it down," the clerk replied, "because it scared away customers too long before closing time. When that clock was in plain view women who maybe had an appointment or wished to catch a train kept an eye on it, and when they found it was getting late they left the store with their shopping only half done. With the clock out of the way, they are not reminded so constantly of the passing time, and so they stay till they have bought what they want, no matter how long it takes."—New York Press.

Fooling the Dogs.

In a certain part of Scotland, according to Dean Ramsey, the shepherds used to take their collies with them to church. The dogs behaved well during the sermon, but began to be restless during the last psalm and saluted the final blessing with joyful barks. In one church the congregation resolved to stop this unseemly detail, so when a strange minister was about to pronounce the blessing all remained seated instead of rising, as he expected. He hesitated and paused till an old shepherd cried: "Say awa', sir! We're a' sittin' to cheat the dows!"

Considerate.

The young Baltimore couple, recently united in matrimony, were going over their wedding presents just after their return from their honeymoon.

"How about that check for $300 we were told your Uncle Tom had promised?" asked the husband. "I haven't seen anything of it, Marie?"

"Well," ventured the young wife, "perhaps Uncle Tom learned that your father had already given us a check for that amount and didn't wish us to have duplicate presents."—Harper's Weekly.

WHERE RICH MEN ARE FEW.

They Are as Scarce as Black Swans in Bulgaria.

Bulgaria is the nearest approach to a peasant commonwealth which the world has known in modern times. There is not a Bulgarian Slav who is not the owner of a plot of land upon which he lives and out of which he gets his own livelihood by his own labor.

Large landowners are almost unknown. The few men of wealth in the country are mostly of foreign birth or descent, and even they would not be counted as wealthy according to the standard of other European countries.

The small landowners, who form the vast majority of the population, are peasant born and peasant bred. They are extremely thrifty. They are content with very plain food. They wear the same sheepskin garments from year to year, only turning their coats inside out with the changes of the season.

Whole families, even of well to do peasants, sleep in the same room upon mats stretched out on the floor. They live under conditions of dirt and discomfort which no British or German or French laborer would tolerate for a week. Yet, notwithstanding their disregard of the simplest sanitary arrangements, they grow up singularly strong and healthy.

Moreover, they are free from the irritation caused among other laborers, overworked if not underpaid, by the spectacle of neighbors living in affluence and ease without any necessity to curtail their expenditure. Rich men are black swans in Bulgaria. I was told by a foreign banker in Sofia who had traded for many years in the country that he doubted greatly whether there were fifty men in all the rural districts who had net incomes of $5,000 a year.

She Got a New Pair.

Sarcasiticus and his wife were going to the theater.

"Will you please go in and get my goats off the dressing table?" said Mrs. S.

"Your goats?" queried the puzzled Sarcasiticus. "What fangle have you women got now?"

"I'll show you!" snapped the wife, and she sallied away and soon returned, putting on her gloves.

"Are those what you mean? Why, I call those kids."

"I used to," replied Mrs. Sarcasiticus, "but they are getting so old I am ashamed to any longer."

He took the hint.—Pearson's Weekly.

When a President Resigns.

The method by which a president may resign is provided for in section 151 of the revised statutes, reading as follows: "The only evidence of a refusal to accept or of a resignation of the office of president or vice president shall be an instrument in writing declaring the same and subscribed by the person refusing to accept or resigning, as the case may be, and delivered into the office of the secretary of state."—Washington Post.

Fire at Warsaw.

T. B. Pearce, of Warsaw, had the misfortune to lose his barn, stables and twenty three head of team by fire Monday night. Mr. W. C. Hines was phoned for this morning to bring his bloodhounds but as so many had been to the scene of the fire it was impossible to get on the right trail. The fire was supposed to be of an incendiary origin. Mr. Pearce's loss is estimated at about $8,000, with no insurance.

Fire at Farmville.

There was a small fire at Farmville Monday night in the store building of S. M. Pollard occupied by M. Smith & Bro. dealers in general merchandise. The building and stock was fully insured and the damage slight. The origin of the fire is unknown.

The regular meeting of the Kings Daughters which was to be held at the residence of Mrs. A. L. Blow will be postponed until Wednesday night the 6th inst. owing to the inclemency of the weather. This being the first meeting of the new year every member is earnestly requested to be present.

MOVED TO BETTER --QUARTERS--

We have moved our stables and transfer business to the old market building on Second street, where we have plenty of stable room, nice and convenient, to take care of our trade. We can shelter your buggies in rainy weather. Horses boarded at reasonable rates. We thank our old patrons for the business they have favored us with, and ask all to come to see us.

Dry Goods and Ladies Dress Goods.

I have purchased the interest of the late B. E. Patrick in the firm of B. E. Patrick & Co., and will continue to carry on a general dry goods business at the same stand.

A ladies department with a special of dress goods and trimmings has been added, Miss Nellie Barnhill being in charge of this department. The ladies are cordially invited to call and look at this line.
