BUILDINGS NEARING COMPLETION

GREENVILLE WELCOMES VISITORS OF INSPECTION.

The East Carolina Teachers' Training School Will be a Magnificent Institution—Two Buildings Practically Completed.

The citizens of Greenville and Pitt county "did themselves proud" Thursday in the cordial reception extended to the state board of education and other visitors to Greenville to inspect the grounds and buildings of the East Carolina Teachers' Training School there in process of completion; for not only are handsome buildings being erected, but the spacious grounds—consisting of some 47 acres—are to be converted by a landscape gardener into a scene of beauty.

The people of our sister town and county have shown their faith by their works. They have put down in cold cash one hundred thousand dollars for the cause of education not only in their county but throughout Eastern North Carolina in general. Of course they as a town and county expect to reap the chief benefits; but their commendable zeal and spirit of progressiveness, and their large outlay make them deserve all that can possibly come to them from the establishment of this school in their midst.

And the returns will not be inadequate. The school is destined to be a great institution; it has been planned and the plans have been executed with this end in view. As yet only four buildings have been begun, and of these two are partially completed except the finishings within. These are a dormitory for girls, one for boys and a handsome dining hall. The dining hall is only one story, but the other buildings are two story, the whole being covered with red tile and constructed of red brick put together in a thoroughly substantial manner according to the most modern principles of architecture. An infirmary, a refector, a president's residence, a light and heating plant, etc. will be erected later on.

It is proposed to rush work on the principal buildings and have them ready for occupancy at once. But while there is money available for the completion of the buildings, the legislature will be asked for an appropriation of $50,000 for furnishings and a further $25,000 for maintenance. If the school is to proceed to fulfill the mission set apart for it, appropriation must be forthcoming. The state has set its seal upon the institution and should see to it that necessary funds are provided. The State now has in process of construction at Greenville one of the most complete and without doubt, the most economically constructed plant within its borders. It has a great future before it; and while Kinston was Greenville's most formidable rival in quest of the school's location, we are sure that all will heartily unite in wishing the new school unbounded success from the time it opens its doors to the public.—Kinston Free Press.

For Rent—Hotel Macon, entirely remodeled, electric lights, water, baths, etc., thirty large rooms. Will rent either furnished or unfurnished. Possession given at once. Apply to Dr. L. C. Skinner. 17 dtf

THOUGHTS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

Editor Reflector:
Anniversaries are all more or less sad, and the longer we journey with Father Time, the sadder we feel at each recurring year.

Why is this, when nature in her varying moods teaches the continual renewal of all things. Though the winter of age chills our faculties and benumbs our energies and sears the bright foliage of hope, yet a still, small voice whispers this is only the frost of age, soon to pass away in the beyond where our youth shall be renewed like the eagle's.

The changes in our natural seasons are indicative of this eternal youth, for do we not as each season arrives live again the days long since counted past? Is there not a revivifying of ourselves as we pause in our rambles to note the first swollen buds, the tiny catkins and the minute green things almost too small for the eye?

Then, too, the glorious beauties of summer fill the heart and mind with the delights of those summers agone, when all the world was young with us.

Each period in the cycle of the year brings joys of its own, Christmas and New Year's never fail to awaken in the middle-aged and old a train of serious thought, and these days stand prominently forth as signals to show how swiftly and silently time carries us along.

Of all the happy years that have sped into eternity no other one has left such a bright record for the people of North Carolina as the year of grace 1908.

What a blessed change, the debauchery of the bar-room to the ranks of sobriety and respectability!

The wives and children of the besotted slaves will now come in for the comforts and necessities to which they have hitherto been strangers, and for them life must take on a new meaning and beauty.

If ever mortals have occasion to shout, surely this host who have been thus rescued from poverty and hopelessness have occasion meet.

May the coming year, by the mercy of an all-wise God bring to these gladdened hearts and the noble men through whom this change was wrought, all of joy and peace and love that temperance and virtue can bestow.

Aurora,
Bleak House, N. C.

AN EARTHQUAKE TODAY?

Predicted by Professor Perret of Columbia University.

New York, Jan. 6—The Messina dispatch, in which the prediction was made by Prof. Frank A. Perret of Columbia University, that further heavy earth shocks might be expected on January 7 and 8, excited the liveliest interest among Perret's associates at the University. The professor is regarded there as a master of physical phenomena and Prof. James F. Kent, of the geological department, referred to the prediction made last August by Perret when he named the date of the seismic wave which has devastated Calabria and Sicily.

"His accuracy then," said Professor Kent, "makes it reasonable to assume that he is accurate as to the time of the next upheaval. At no time, however, has he attempted to designate the area affected, so that if he is correct as to date the disturbance may be thousands of miles from Sicily."

When Perret was in this country last November he made the positive assertion that earthquakes and volcanic eruptions could be foretold accurately by a study of the planetary system. He said that at certain times the sun and moon were so situated as to exert a powerful attractive force upon our planet, drawing it out of its normal shape, so to speak, and exerting this stupendous power in the equatorial regions where the internal forces seek an outlet."

Trade Report.

Richmond, Va. Jan. 7, 1909.

Bradstreet's Saturday will say for Richmond and vicinity:

Trade generally shows the quietness of after holiday and inventory season. Jobbers of shoes and dry goods have their travelers out and orders are reported fair in volume. Machinery and supplies show more activity than was exhibited in the fall months, signifying renewed activity in manufacturing lines. The loose leaf tobacco market has reopened with favorable prospects of continued active demand, especially for the better grades. Produce is quiet. Winter wheat has been stimulated by the recent covering of snow. More seasonable weather has stimulated trade in substantial lines. Locally the holiday trade in most lines measured well up to the average of recent years. Collections continue backward.

Pitt Members have Good Seats.

While in Raleigh at the opening of the legislature Wednesday, we noticed that Pitt's members are fortunate in the location of seats. In the house Representatives Cotten and Cox have seats in the front row on the right of the speaker, and in the senate Senator Blow has one of the nearest seats to the president.

Pitt also came in for early recognition on committees, Representative Cotten being one of the committee on the part of the house to wait on the governor to inform him that the General Assembly was organized and ready for business.

Charleston, S. C., is happy. President-elect Taft is going there to play a game of golf.

You do not have to go far to note a difference since the prohibition law went into effect.

Those who think this legislature will have nothing to do may change their minds before long.

You cannot go anywhere within reasonable distance now without hearing good things said about Greenville.

The more we see of other towns, the more we think of Greenville. This town does not suffer in comparison with any of them.

The principal street in Greenville is far better paved than the principal street in Raleigh. In fact you don't find paving anywhere that will surpass what Greenville has.

The first "blind tiger" defendant convicted before the recorder of Winston-Salem got a sentence of two years on the roads. That is the way to go at the thing to break it up.

One of the very first matters that came after the organization of the legislature of North Carolina, was the offering of a resolution of sympathy for Italy and asking for an appropriation of $5,000 to aid the earthquake sufferers.

The recommendation of Superintendent Mann, of the State prison, that all convicts sentenced to prison be sent to the penitentiary and hired back to the counties for $1 per day where they are wanted to work roads, is not going to meet with much approval. Under the present system any county that will make proper provision for it can have a convict camp, and prisoners can be sent to this and put to work upon the public roads of the county.

With her chain gang Pitt county, for instance, has done much good work on the roads in the last few years, and this could not have been done if the county had been required to pay the State $1 per day each for the use of these convicts. Superintendent Mann may mean well, but we think it would be exceedingly unwise to adopt his recommendation.

SUPREME COURT KNOCKS JUDGE PEEBLES.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

disturbing a Sunday school, who had plead guilty. The court holds that the appeal of the State was improper, there being nothing to appeal from because Judge Peebles' disposition of the case was illegal. The defendants having plead guilty, says the court, the judge had no right to order a verdict of not guilty and discharge the defendants. He could only set the verdict (their plea of guilty being the same as a verdict) aside and order a new trial. Judge Peebles having illegally disposed of the case, it stands as if no action had been taken and can again be called for trial or a new bill can be sent.

Judge Walker, who wrote the opinion of the court, says in regard to Peebles' decision that a Sunday school is not religious worship: "We hold that a person who wilfully disturbs a Sunday school is indictable at common law, and our statutes are ample to cover such a case."

The Supreme Court, therefore, not only knocks Judge Peebles for his disposition of the case, but holds his honor's construction of the law improper. It was very clear that Judge Peebles' ruling was not good common sense and is very gratifying to find that it is not law. He is rated as a good lawyer, but the Supreme Court not only holds his interpretation of the law (about which lawyers may differ) incorrect, but shows further that he did not make a legal disposition of the case under his ruling.—Statesville Landmark.

It is doubtful if independent companies could furnish the products of the trusts at the prices now charged by the trusts, but we would then know that if we were paying more the trusts would not be getting rich off of us.—Durham Herald.

Every Tub Stands
On Its Own Bottom.

And so does every town.

If the bottom of this town drops out, what are we going to stand on?

And the bottom will drop out—

If we fail to stand together and work together for the good of the community—myself, yourself and the other fellow.

In order to build to the top, there must be a solid bottom.

CHINESE TURKESTAN.

A Province That is Over Two Thousand Years Old.

Over 2,000 years ago China, the dean of nations, spread her conquests far westward to the sea of Aral, the so called lake of Cathay. Hordes of barbarians soon drove her back a thousand miles, but she was able to maintain her authority to the east and south of the Tianshan, or Celestial mountains. With them as a bulwark, she organized the new province—commonly known as Chinese Turkestan—which comprises the great Lob or Tarim basin, together with the more northern regions of Turfan, 300 feet below sea level, the fertile vale of Ili and the waste plains and mountains of Dzungaria.

Time and again the Chinese rule in Hsinking has been overthrown, sometimes for centuries and sometimes for only a score of years, and time and again China has reconquered the province. With each conquest Chinese officials and merchants have poured in. They have taken to themselves wives of the Aryan inhabitants. They have built government houses, forts and towns—largely of mud—and they have entirely dominated the mild Chanto natives. Then, when foreign invasion has driven them out, they have disappeared, and Hsinking, lapsing into its ancient apathy, has become as though the Chinese were not nor ever had been; hence today, in spite of 2,000 years of intermittent Chinese rule, Turkestan is still the "new province." It is related to China much as Utah and Arizona were to the rest of the United States before the days of railroads. It resembles those states in other ways also, especially in climate and topography, although in every respect its extremes are far greater than theirs.

Out off from China by 300 or 400 miles of the most rigorous desert and from the rest of mankind by the greatest of mountains, this old new province has pursued the tenor of its way almost uninfluenced by the world at large. During the two millenniums since the coming of the Chinese the people of Hsinking have been converted from paganism to Buddhism and then to Mohammedanism. They have been conquered by Uighurs, Tartars and Tibetans. A new language, Turki, has been imposed upon them, and they have suffered from famine, war and pestilence and their attendant ravages. Yet the character of the people appears to have changed but little. The accounts of ancient Chinese pilgrims to India and the evidences found in ruins indicate that the life of the past was not unlike that of today. The original Aryan stock still remains dominant, though more or less mixed with half a dozen other races. — Ellsworth Huntington in Harper's.

near Miss Eliza.
About the year 1707 William Penn became heavily involved in a lawsuit, and the author of a biography, entitled "Quaker and Courtier," says that he was greatly in fear—under the laws of the day—of being arrested. Many noble personages were in the same plight, but no other, it is believed, resorted to Penn's expedient in meeting the situation.

In the door of his London house he had a peeping hole made, through which he could see any person who came to him. A creditor one day sent in his name and, having been made to wait more than a reasonable time, knocked for the servant and asked him:

"Will not your master see me?"
"Friend, he has seen thee," replied the servant calmly, "and does not like the looks of thee."

Domestic Economy.
They had automobilized in twenty-five miles to see Mr. Highflyer's pet oculist, and on the return trip three tires, one after another, had blown up, whereupon Mrs. Highflyer remarked plaintively and with intense conviction, "My dear Alfred, it would have been so much cheaper to have kept you at home and bought you a glass eye!"—New York Times.

The Right of the Kiss.
Some say kissing is a sin, but if it was a lawful, lawyers would not allow it; if it was a holy, ministers would not do it; if it was a modest, maidens would not take it; if it was a plenty, poor folk would not get it.—Robert Burns.

Applying the Rule.

After Sunday school little Ned and his younger cousin, Horton, were permitted to play in the yard on condition that they would be very good and quiet. They had not been out long when Ned's mother heard loud screams. Upon investigating the cause she found her small son sitting on his cousin, pounding him vigorously in spite of Horton's pitiful wails.

"Well, mamma," Ned exclaimed, "I wanted to teach him the Golden Rule, and he said he wouldn't learn it."—Detroit Free Press.

Books to Read.

The remark as to Macaulay being "a very common sort of book buyer, who always bought books to read," which, Sir George Trevelyan tells us, emanated from the late Bernard Quaritch, recalls an anecdote related by Locker-Lampson in "My Confidences." "Bedford, emperor of morocco, once sent me home a little binding which I considered unsatisfactory—the volume did not shut properly; it gaped. When I pointed out this grievous defect, his only remark was, 'Why, bless me, sir, you've been reading it!'"—London Chronicle.

Unkind.

"My dear," exclaimed a young bride, "my husband writes so beautifully! You really ought to see some of his love letters!" "Yes, dear, I know," was the unkind retort. "I have a drawer full of them at home!"—Manchester

The man who uses a falsehood for polley, like the woman who powders, soon gets into the habit of putting on too much.—Pattender.

OLD TIME TURKEY EAT

A Once Popular Feast in the Pennsylvania Mountains.

GONE WITH THE WOODSMEN.

The People, Traditions and Associations That Made It Possible Are No More, and It Joins in Oblivion the Apple Cut and Quilting Bee.

"It isn't because there is no more material in the Blue mountain region of Pennsylvania to provide a turkey eat that we have had the last of those famous festivities," said a former dweller of the district described, "for there are still wild turkeys a-plenty."

"The turkey eat has gone out with the passing of the people whose homes, traditions and manner of life made it possible and with the occupation that was once theirs."

"In the days when the turkey eat was the great winter festivity in the mountain districts between the Schuylkill and the Juniata watersheds the sparse population was chiefly of rude and rugged woodmen and their families, many of them descendants of pure Pennsylvania Dutch stock. Scores of them depended almost entirely on their skill with gun and trap for their food supply."

"The cabins of these mountaineers were built of logs, the chinks between which were filled in with clay. A huge stone chimney rose at one end of the cabin outside, covering that entire end, while on the inside it opened on a broad fireplace across that end of the room."

"The cabin was banked all around with earth, against which hemlock and pine boughs were heaped. Sometimes rows of cord wood were piled up almost to the eaves, the better to keep out the cold, which is always intense during winter on those wind swept hills."

"There was rarely a cabin with more than one room. The walls were dark and smoky, and from rafter or beam hung plentifully strips of jerked venison and chunks of smoked bear meat, along with hams and bacon from the family pigs fattened in the woods and almost as wild as the bear and the deer. But the choicest and best beloved thing of the cabin's larder was the fat and well frozen wild turkey."

"While the woodsman's cabin was always prepared for a turkey eat, it never knew when it was coming. A turkey eat began with the making up of a party in a neighboring village or settlement. Taking along a fiddler, they would appear at this, that or the other woodsman's cabin of a winter evening, and the woodsman and his family did the rest."

"Instantly the birch wood pall of cider came forth. While the cabin's guests drank cider the host prepared and spitted the turkey over the firecoals in the fireplace to roast for the feast. When it was ready for the table it was placed before the guests on a big tin platter. Each one carved for himself, the plates being squares of birch bark."

"The turkey eat was not complete, though, without a liberal supply of 'paan haas' and head cheese, and with it went the sweetest of rye bread and butter. Paan haas is a strictly Pennsylvania Dutch creation."

"It is made from the rich juices left after boiling the ingredients for head cheese, these being thickened to a stiff paste with buckwheat flour. This paste is pressed in forms until cold and is served in slices. It is a dull blue in color, very rich and very good."

"After the feast the turkey eat was rounded out by a night of jollity superinduced by the fiddle and maintained by it in its music for the old fashioned cotillon figures and reels, which were danced until the gray of morning."

"But most of those old time woodsmen have passed away, and on those who are still dwellers in the mountains the game laws have forced a situation that leaves them with their ancient occupation gone, and the hunt being no longer a source of maintenance its traditions have departed with it. The newer generation of these people is of other tastes and associations, so while the wild turkey is yet in proximity in that Blue mountain region to supply the material for the festive turkey eat the traditions and associations that made it possible are no more, and it is gone, like the apple cut, the quilting bee, the pig killing frolic and others of the old time rural pastimes that are now but a memory."—New York Sun.

Pilgrims for Mecca arrive and embark on the dhows that ride at anchor in the roadstead. Many of these poor faithfuls have come from the uttermost confines of the Mohammedan world, from the western Sahara, from Kano, from Timbuktu. They will have been away three, four and even five years from their countries by the time they get back, if they ever do get back. Now they are poor in the world's goods, most of their little hoards have been spent on the road, but faith and hope are to them an endless store. Mecca is near, and, having reached it, what matters afterward?

Formerly the traffic in slaves played a considerable part in the affairs of these towns. Now, though the trade may and does go on surreptitiously, the vigilance of those masterful, interfering English makes it but a poor speculation for the "city man" of the Red sea.—Chambers' Journal.

A Clever Dog.

"Yes, dogs are undoubtedly sagacious animals," Jones said to his friends, "but none of your dog stories will beat this. My friend Johnson had a most intelligent retriever. One night Johnson's house caught fire. All was instant confusion. Old Johnson and his wife flew for the children and bundled out with them pretty sharp. Alas! One of the children had been left behind, but up jumped the dog, rushed into the house and soon reappeared with the missing child, which he deposited on the lawn. Every one was saved, but Rover dashed through the flames again. What did the dog want? No one knew. Presently the noble animal reappeared, scorched and burnt, with—what do you think?"

"Give it up," chorused the eager listeners.

"With the fire policy, wrapped in a damp towel, gentlemen!"
