The following communication from the Pitt County Medical Society was read:

At a meeting of the Pitt County Medical Society held December 30th, 1908, the following resolution was unanimously passed:

That this society respectfully request the Board of Aldermen not to grant license for the sale of whiskey in drug stores or medical depositories in the city of Greenville. That a copy of this resolution be printed in The Daily Reflector.

L. C. Skinner, Sect'y
Jan. 5 1909.

The board in compliance with this request adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, the Medical Society of Pitt county, did at its recent meeting by resolution request the Board of Aldermen not to grant any license to any druggist to dispense intoxicating liquors upon prescription, nor to grant any license for a depository for like purpose.

And whereas, the present Board of Aldermen of the town of Greenville, do not intend to grant a license to any person to dispense intoxicating liquors, near beers, or like concoctions;

Now therefore, be it resolved by the Board of Aldermen of the town of Greenville in regular meeting assembled, that this board will not issue any license to any person whatsoever to sell or dispense any intoxicating beverage of any kind whatsoever.

The Board of Aldermen having received this request from the Medical Society, also desires to request of the Medical Society that they adopt a resolution whereby no member of the Medical Society will give a prescription to any person for intoxicating liquors, and that they also refrain themselves from using any whiskey or alcoholic beverages in compounding any prescription themselves for their patients.

That a copy of this resolution be forwarded by the clerk of this board to the Medical Society of Pitt county.

Upon petition from Hope Fire Company, the board passed an order supplementing the funds in the hands of the company for

THE LEGISLATURE.

What Our Law Makers Are Doing at Raleigh.

SECOND DAY'S SESSION.

The second day of the General Assembly was devoted largely to hearing the message of Gov. R. B. Glenn, which he himself read before a joint session. The governor sent a communication requesting the privilege of appearing in person to read his message. The request met with some opposition in both the senate and house which provoked warm discussion, Senator Pharr, of Mecklenburg, leading the opposition in the senate and representative Morton, of New Hanover, in the house. When the matter came to a vote the request of the governor was granted by a considerable majority. The two branches then went in joint session and heard the message read.

SENATE.

Senator Manning introduced a bill providing that the University be allowed to comply with the requirements of the Carnegie fund.

Senator Blow introduced a bill amending the jury tax law in Pitt county. This bill later passed second and third readings and was sent to the house without engrossment.

Senator Elliott introduced what he called a "rest and peace" resolution, asking that there be but little legislative reform and that the senate adjourn in four weeks.

A resolution providing for inauguration day exercises on the 12th passed its several readings.

President Winston announced the several committees of the senate. Senator Blow is chairman of the committee on education, and also a member of the committees on fish and fisheries, on pensions and soldiers' home, and on judiciary.

HOUSE.

No bills were introduced in the house, that body adjourning after hearing the message of the governor.

Mayor Whedbee and Alderman Flanagan were appointed a committee to draw such amendments to the town charter as the board desires to submit to the legislature for passage at this session. The principal amendment in contemplation is in regard to condemnation proceedings where property is needed in further improvements of the town.

The mayor was authorized to employ a stenographer whenever the service of such a person is needed.

Mrs Laura Savage was released from payment of taxes on property valued at $1,570, erroneously charged against her.

QUINERLY ITEMS.

Quinerly, N. C., Jan. 7, 1909.

The new year dawned bright and glorious. Let us hope that a beneficent providence will decree prosperity to all once again!

Many are talking "hard times" but since that seems to be a prevalent evil, not peculiar to us alone, there is some consolation.

The farmers are reviving their downcast energies and are beginning their New Year's work with revived vigor and a determination to farm better in 1909. This spirit of modernness or more thorough and business like methods on the farm is slowly but surely working its way to the front, as is evidenced by the increasing use of labor saving machinery and better work stock, along with the adoption of the idea that brain and judicious thinking are valuable assets on the farm.

Quinerly school reopened Jan. 4th with several changes in the teaching force and with some vacant desks but not a few new faces. Miss Ida Blount retains her position as principal. Miss Marie Griffin, who was assistant last fall did not return, and Miss Gladys Chapman (formerly music teacher only) is teaching the primary grades also. The enrollment was about forty five.

The stockholders of the local telephone company are installing new poles between Quinerly and Grifton.

Ed. Patrick, a lifelong citizen of this community, is moving to his new home in Lenoir county near Grifton. He has rented his farm to Tom Wothington, who will go there at an early date.

C. W. Lancaster recently moved to the former residence of W. F. Harding near the school house.

Gus Barrington is installing a steam mill on his farm.

David James has assumed the duties of superintending the farm of the late E. S. Laughinghouse.

There was a dance at the home of Mrs. T. H. Fleming last week.

E. A. Johnson lost a horse a few days ago from injuries sustained in the log woods.

G. A. Johnson & Co. will continue their mercantile business at this place during the ensuing year.

M. B. Whitfield and sister, Miss Annie, returned to Kinston several days ago after having spent the holidays with thier father, Dr. Whitfield.

J. P. Quinerly, Josephus Quinerly and H. Q. Best went to Greenville last Friday.

County Commissioner J. P. Quinerly attended the meeting of the board Monday.

Misses Helen and Ruth Chapman and Josephus Quinerly and Hinton Best returned to their colleges in Raleigh (Peace Institute and A. M. College respectively) Monday night.

Annual Meeting F. M. F. I. Association

GREENVILLE WHOLESALE CO.

Adds New Member And Plans Larger Business for the New Year.

S. E. Gates, of Mt. Airy, a former salesman for the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., in this territory, has purchased one-third interest in the Greenville Wholesale Company, and becomes a member of that firm. Mr Gates will devote his time to the road in the interest of this company and will no doubt add to their already large trade. With the two former members of this company, D. S. Smith and W. J. Hardee, he makes a strong team and the business of the company will be largely increased this year. They handle groceries exclusively, are members of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, and cater only to the trade of retail merchants.

The company thanks its many friends for the liberal patronage heretofore extended, and solicits a continuance of their favors.

W. C. Cannon continues with the company as salesman and will be glad at any time to serve his friends.

A. & N. C. Divident.

At the meeting of the directors of the Atlantic and North Carolina railroad, held in Beaufort yesterday, a semi-annual dividend of 1 1/2 per cent. was declared. The new building for the storing and preservation of the records of the railroad, having been completed, was examined by the directors and accepted. A resolution was adopted by the directors allowing the experts appointed to examine and report on the physical condition of the road an extension of 20 days, in which to file report, with positive provision that no further extension of time is to be made. The experts were to have reported at last meeting of the directors, but owing to a disagreement among them, the report was not ready. An extension then was allowed, which period of extension expired today.—Kinston Free Press, 6th.

Sale of Stock of Goods.

The undersigned offers for sale in bulk the entire stock of goods, lately assigned to him by J. L. Carper. Persons desiring to bid on stock will be shown the same either by the undersigned or Mr. J. L. Carper. This stock must be sold on or before the 12th day January. This is a good opportunity for some one to purchase at a bargain a stock of goods consisting of clothing, shoes, hats and gentlemen's furnishing goods and a small amount of store fixtures.

BIG FIRE IN WASHINGTON.

The Havens Mill Destroyed at a Loss of $80,000.

Special to Reflector.
Washington, N. C., Jan. 8.—About 4:30 o'clock this morning the night clerk in Hotel Louise heard heavy explosion in Havens' milling plant in the rear of the hotel. The clerk went back to investigate and found flames breaking out of the mill and gave the alarm. The fire was no doubt caused by overheated mill feed in the mill.

The loss to the Havens property is total and estimated at $80,000. The gin of Bragaw & Co. near the mill was also destroyed. At 2:30 o'clock this afternoon the fire is still burning and the city fire department is yet at work on it.

FRIDAY, JAN. 8, 1909.

And Wilmington is trying to get a visit from the president elect.

The over thirsty are trying almost any substitute that will make drunk come. The mayor of Wilmington had a case before him where it was found that the defendant got drunk on Jamaica ginger.

A Gastonia bride of eight days left her husband and returned to her parents. The cause of the separation was an opossum which her husband bought and wanted her to dress and cook. She drew the line on the 'possum and would have nothing to do with it.

This talk of the president appointing a Democrat as judge of the Eastern District of North Carolina is mere twaddle. Not that a Democrat is not good enough to hold the position, but it belongs to a Republican. And the appointee should be a resident of the district.

Governor Glenn's message to the General Assembly on Thursday was an able document, and truly characteristic of the great governor, soon to retire, who has done so much for the State during his administration, and wants to see the commonwealth continue her march of progress. He makes many valuable recommendations upon which the General Assembly should act. While the message is too long for The Reflector to print in full, we shall print some extracts from it during the next few days.

Primaries and Elections.

Obtaining nominations and being elected to office are becoming too expensive, and, alas, often fraudulent methods are resorted to in order to win. While it seems that in these days the office does not seek the man, but the man the office, still he should be required to do so with clean hands and correct practices. To remedy this growing evil, after a most careful study of all suggested plans, I recommend a legalized primary law for the nomination of all state, county and municipal officers, and that on a certain day, to be fixed in the law, at least sixty days before the election, there be held throughout the entire state, at the regular polling precincts, a legalized primary for all political parties.

In this law I earnestly ask that you insert a publicity clause, requiring every candidate, manager, worker, friend or other person collecting or using money in the interest of a candidate, either in the primary or at the regular election, to render, under oath, a statement of the amount of money received, from what source, and how expended. Also insert a clause that whenever any newspaper or individual, during a campaign, either in the primary or at the regular election, shall, for the purpose of injuring or detracting from any candidate's chances for election, wantonly and falsely make any scandalous, malicious, immoral or degrading charges against any candidate, either orally or in writing or in print, said newspaper, person or persons so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. It is right that true charges be made, and, if true, should be made to prevent bad men from being elected or nominated; but before making such charges the paper or persons should be certain they are true and not, for malicious purposes, try thus to ruin and degrade a candidate.—Extract from Governor's Message.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Governor's Salary.

In the very first days of your session I ask you to increase the governor's salary from $4,000 to $6,000, and the salary of the commissioner of labor and printing to $2,500. All other salaries except these were increased at the last session. Members of congress get $7,500 per year, work about half a year, and can engage in other work. Many sheriffs and clerks in North Carolina get over $5,000 a year, yet the governor, who cannot engage in other work, but works all the time and has to entertain a great deal, only gets $4,000. Gentlemen, it is not enough. Asking this increase can do me no good, for in less than a week I return to private life. I have lived economically, and yet each year I have spent $2,000 more than I have received. A governor ought not to desire to make one dollar, for to hold the office is a great honor, but he ought not to be required to serve the people for less than his actual expenses. I ask you, therefore, to at once increase the salary of the governor and the labor commissioner, for after they are inaugurated it cannot be done.—Extract from Governor's Message.

FUGITIVE SPAR BUOYS

Rescuing These Stray "Sticks" Is Perilous Work.

SIGNBOARDS OF CHANNELS.

How These Mariners' Guides Are Anchored and How They Sometimes Break Away and Are Hunted Down by the Lighthouses Service Tenders.

When the winter gales begin to blow, the tenders of the lighthouse service turn their stems toward northern seas to hunt stray spar buoys. Of all the work of the coast patrol this, perhaps, is the most exposed to danger. Pulling these "signboards" out of the sea or putting them over side is like "yanking" spiles with a ton derrick on a heaving platform.

Although passengers in the boats that ply the waters of New York harbor, Long Island sound and other waterways along the coast see many spar buoys, they give them little thought. With the man at the wheel it is different. Color, shape and size give him volumes of information, and he looks upon the spar buoy as an invaluable guide.

In the government inventories they are listed as "sticks," although they are sometimes sixty feet long. They are anchored in the bed of a river or harbor channel, their "up ends" painted in such a way as to indicate to the observer the formation of the bottom. On the margin of government charts explanatory notes tell one that vessels approaching a harbor from the sea should leave red buoys with even numbers on the right and black, with odd numbers on the left side of channels. Black and white striped buoys, the stripes running perpendicularly, mean an obstruction in the channel, with room to get by on either side. If balls or cages ornament the "up ends" it means a turning point, the color and number indicating the course.

These sticks are put down with heavy iron anchors and sometimes great stone weights. One would suppose that so fixed they never could get away, but they do, and it is a job to find them. Ice floes break their cables and sometimes crush the sticks; storms pull them loose, and ships in the fog or darkness foul them and tear them from their hold on the bottom. Not infrequently ships use them as moorings, although this is forbidden.

There are instances where the anchors of a spar buoy have been secure enough to hold against ice pressure and in a narrow channel cause a dangerous jam. But such cases are few, for when this happens the weight of the ice usually becomes so great as to force the buoy under, and the pack slides on.

If the ice pack gets under the buoy so as to lift it there is only one result—the parting of the cable. Then off starts the spar upon a journey maybe of thousands of miles, perhaps of only one or two. It may fetch up on the nearest shore, and it may drift to the coast of Europe or into the southern seas. On the Irish coast today is one which traveled there in six weeks from New York harbor. It was presented to the British government by the United States and now floats off the coast on which it stopped after its long Atlantic journey.

If it is a long chase to find the stray buoys it is even a more difficult task to recover the anchors left behind by the fugitive spars. Tenders that sail out of the harbor have a derrick and tackle rigged in front of the pilot house, with a donkey engine to lift and pull. The location of every buoy is marked on the charts to a degree, so it is not difficult to find the desired position. The serious business is dragging for it to hoist it aboard ship. Here the donkey engine comes into play. Another hazard is to pull a spar buoy aboard. If a sea happens to be running the captain of the tender has to use extreme care. Should a big roller get under him and suddenly tighten the lifting chains either they would give way or the weight would come up too fast, the crew in either case being placed in jeopardy of their lives.

But the risk these men run is all in the day's work. To them a job in a seaway on a lee shore is regarded as no more monotonous task than repainting a row of buoys on land.—New York Post.

He who has once done you a kindness will be more ready to do you another than he whom you yourself have obliged.—Hofmes.

THE SOAPLESS AGE.

Health With Neither Sanitation Nor Rational Medicine.

Soap was unknown to the classical age both in Greece and Rome, says the New York Medical Journal. Pliny mentions a compound which he calls "sapo," made by the Gauls and Germans, and the ingredients that entered into it. He also informs us that it was more used by the men among the latter than by the women. It appears, however, to have been a pomade for the hair rather than a soap. Whether the term is Celtic or Teutonic we do not positively know, probably the latter. That the word was later borrowed by the Greeks from the Romans appears certain from the name "sapon," still in common use among them. The name eventually was adopted by most of the people of Europe, the Turks calling this article so much in demand in our day "sabun" and the Finns "saippio." In its stead the ancient Greeks used flesh scrapers. These were so highly esteemed that they were sometimes made of gold and given as prizes in athletic contests. Herein we see how men's ideas of the fitness of things change with the people and the age. Nowadays one would hardly commend himself to a friend or an acquaintance by the gift of a cake of soap or a comb.

This can, however, not be said of Athens. The mortality does not seem to have been much greater than it is in our own day. Five hundred years before Christ the average of human life was reckoned at about thirty-three years. We are often astonished at the enormous population assigned to some countries. There were few large cities in the modern sense of the term. As the houses were seldom more than two stories in height, the population cannot have been very dense. In Athens the reputable women seldom went out of doors. The men spent most of their time in the open air. What effect occasional overcrowding produced may be seen from the description of the terrible plague in Athens near the end of the fifth century B. C., as given by Thucydides, when the surrounding population was driven into the capital by the exigencies of war. As the countries of which we know most were grouped around the Mediterranean sea, where the climate is mild, outdoor life occasioned no discomfort, to say nothing of habit. In some parts of Italy whole families still live in caves. In Spanish cities the tourist who is out late at night is surprised to find the streets littered with persons lying asleep. To the natives it is the most natural thing in the world. The population of China is evidence that filth is not incompatible with an exceptionally large number of inhabitants to the square mile, notwithstanding the prevalence of infanticide. The writers who have made the most careful study of the economic condition of France have reached the conclusion that the population of the country at the close of the middle ages was as great as it is now. It was, however, fearfully cut down by the Hundred Years' war and the plague. Yet during all this period there was no rational practice of medicine. Until quite recently most of the villages of continental Europe were without a resident physician. Such is still the case in many parts of the world that are reckoned civilized.

While nobody doubts that medical practice fills an important want in modern civilization, there is no question that it is largely due to civilization that the want exists. They had automobilized in twenty-five miles to see Mr. Highflyer's pet oculist, and on the return trip three tires, one after another, had blown up, whereupon Mrs. Highflyer remarked plaintively and with intense conviction, "My dear Alfred, it would have been so much cheaper to have kept you at home and bought you a glass eye!"—New York Times.

NOT IN STOCK.

The Peddler's Parting Shot at the Aggressive Woman.

It was wash morning, and the kettle had boiled over, the baby had dropped a whole paper of blue into the rinse water, the wringer would not work, and her feet told the large, crooked nosed, rawboned woman of the house that a storm was brewing—outside the house as well as in. He came up the steps briskly and walked into the kitchen through the open door without as much as saying, "By your leave."

"Mornin', madam. Want any combs, brushes, hairpins, tablecloths, towels, lead pencils, tooth-brushes or chewing gum?"

The peddler put his hat on the floor and began to open his pack, but was brought up sharply by the first return fire.

"No, I don't. Nor I don't want any dime novels, nor chalk eggs, nor five cent calico, nor face powder, nor desiccated puzzles, nor lamp wicks, nor eye salve, nor corn plasters, nor imitation beeswax, nor sperm candles, nor needle papers, nor celluloid buttons."

"Just so. And I don't suppose it's any use to ask you whether you'd like to look at a bottle of wrinkle fillin' for shop worn complexions?" he asked, buckling the straps again.

"Not a bit. And I know you haven't any books on good manners or you'd read 'em yourself occasionally."

"None of the people I call on would appreciate 'em, madam. And now, if you think you'd have no use for the new patent megaphonic, telephonic, invisible ear trumpet that you can fasten to your kitchen window and hear and distinguish clearly everything your neighbors say, or the famous and celebrated long range telescopic binoculars, with which you can positively see through four ply window glass and look directly into the kitchens of houses forty rods away, why, I'll be on my way again." And he picked up his pack cheerfully.

"Hold on!" exclaimed the lady, following him to the door. "I don't know but I'd look at them things—if they don't cost too much."

"All right, madam," rejoined the peddler, putting his hat on one side and hiking it down the garden path, "if I see any feller that's got 'em to sell I'll send him around."—New York Times.

Remembered Too Late.

Speaking of the queer doings of absentminded people, the following anecdote is related by the London Globe: "A very irritable man left his house one morning to attend a race meeting some distance off. In order that he might have enough money to pay his hotel bill he tied a sovereign in the corner of his handkerchief. In the train he drew his handkerchief from his pocket and noticed the knot in the corner. 'Now,' he said to himself, 'what was it I wished to remember?' Much thought failed to enlighten him upon the point, and at last, in a fit of passion, he hurled the handkerchief out of the window. Then he remembered."

LIBERTY POLES.

Emblems That Were Dear to the Hearts of Our Forefathers.

An interesting feature of the early history of our country was the liberty pole, so dear to the hearts of our forefathers, but generally unknown to the present generation.

Liberty poles were for the most part erected after the Revolutionary war was so long an acknowledged fact that the rebels could take time to give it some picturesque expressions.

After the republic was established no more was heard of them until the war of 1812 roused the antagonism of the people, and up went the long shafts again, each a protest against British aggression.

During the whisky insurrection in the last decade of the eighteenth century, when seven counties of Pennsylvania and Virginia arrayed themselves in defiance of the government, liberty poles shot up during the night in the rebellious towns and villages, painted a bright red, as signals of war.

Liberty poles were erected during presidential campaigns in the first part of the last century by both Whigs and Democrats.

They were usually made of white pines, lashed together until they reached a great height. The more fervid the zeal of the party the higher rose the pole. Sailors were often brought out from the seacoast to inland towns to assist in the erection and to rig flags, to the amazement and delight of the boys who knew nothing of ships or seamen.

Mass meetings were held under these poles, which were often regarded with superstitious affection. The blowing down of a pole by a high wind during a campaign chilled the hopes of one party and cheered the others.

These singular emblems of protest against oppression have wholly disappeared of late years throughout the country, except in some remote districts, where old customs are still cherished by rural communities.—Chicago Record-Herald.

ANCIENT ARAB TOWNS.

The Few That Still Dot the Shore of the Red Sea.

A few Arab towns may be found along the coast, and few and far between as they are, one would wonder to what they could possibly owe their existence. Outside of their diminutive confines the eye searches in vain for a sign of cultivation or of human habitation. Yet there they stand, as they have stood, most of them, for more centuries than any one can tell. They are said to date back to those days when the kingdoms of Egypt took their places among the kingdoms of the world. Time has swallowed their history even as the sands of the desert have swallowed the still more ancient cities of the interior.

A huddled little group of white buildings, dominated by the inevitable minarets, stands quivering and winking in the everlasting heat haze just on the line where the deep blue sea meets the brown monotony of the desert. It might be an architectural group in sugar taken from some titanic wedding cake and planted there hokus bokus. Take a walk through its narrow, tortuous streets, and you will find them busy enough in their dreamy eastern fashion. Arabs, turbaned and spotlessly attired, are passing to and fro or bargaining at booths with the half naked rustics who have come in from the desert. Long strings of camels laden with the produce of the far interior are halted at the merchants' doors.

About Bananas.

Children, fruiterers say, prefer black bananas with soft, discolored flesh to the yellow ones with white and firm flesh that are usually eaten, and thus the children show that the taste of the young is the healthy taste, for in banana land, say the fruiterers, wherever the banana grows there it is only eaten in a state that would be called spoiled here. In the tropics what we call a ripe banana would be called a green one. Its skin must turn black, its flesh must grow soft and brownish, before the tropic people or the tropic birds will touch it.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Don't Wait for the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness Profit by Greenville People's Experience.

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches and dizzy spells are common early symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect this. The attacks may pass off for a time but return with greater intensity. If there are symptoms of dropsy—puffy swellings below the eyes, bloating of limbs and ankles, or any part of the body, don't delay a minute. Begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and keep up the treatment until the kidneys are well, when your old time health and vigor will return. Cures in Greenville prove the effectiveness of this great kidney remedy.

Mrs. J. F. Stokes, Cor. Twelfth and Evans Sts., Greenville, N. C., says: "For some time I suffered severely from kidney complaint. The kidneys were very irregular in action and at times caused me great annoyance. I had bearing down pains through my abdomen and sharp shooting twinges through my loins causing me untold misery. There was a tender spot across my kidney regions and at times my limbs pained intensely. I finally read of Doan's Kidney pills and was so much impressed that I procured them at Wooten's drug store. They soon relieved the pains in my sides and limbs, restored the secretions to a regular and normal condition and at present I am feeling a great deal better in every way. I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for the great improvement in my condition."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
