AN ESSAY.

HOW TO TEACH LITERATURE IN SIXTH AND SEVENTH GRADES.

Read by Miss Cora Moore, of Farmville Graded School, Before the Pitt County Teachers' Association.

Before entering into a study of literature in parts, it should be presented as a whole. If possible read the entire sketch at one sitting. By this the child may grasp the thread of the story on which to establish a more complete study. Any writing is within itself a unit of thought and studied as whole we more clearly discern the style and author's power. A literary product may be compared to a finished masterpiece of architecture. In order to appreciate its grandeur and force, we have to view it as a whole. This gives a lasting stroke that kindles their curiosity and interest for a deeper study.

The sitting is the next thing to be considered. In the "Courtship of Miles Standish", Longfellow has taken a real chapter in history—the settlement of the Puritans in Massachusetts for scenic background and with that most skillful of artist's brushes, the Poetic Thought has painted one of the most beautiful pictures of Puritan life in America, drawing out in vivid contrast the rich colorings of natural scenery, the noblest type of human nature against the darker background of Puritan austerity and simplicity. This background is not only historical, but the characters are real persons clothed in real strength and imaginative beauty. Thus he has taken a rough, unwhetted stone and, by graceful touches of fancy, here and there, has chiseled into magnificent shape a charming masterpiece. Hence, the setting of a composition is a combination of colorings and descriptions intertwined with the historical or imaginary structure of the sketch.

The plot of a story is the thread which links together the chain of events therein. It may be divided into the complication or untangling, with the climax as a turn from the first to the last. Each crisis marks a change of the story, they are as knots tied in our thread up to the climax, after which, each successive event causes an untying of these knots and finally brings the thread out perfectly clear of tangles. The story sometimes shifts from one subject to another, this is to reawaken the interest. Perhaps the suspense will be broken for a moment but again reappear with some fresh annoyance. There may be several different threads in the story. All these points should be made clear to the pupil, having them draw an outline plot, putting in these different divisions and where they occur.

In a writing the characters are either real or imaginary. In the "Courtship of Miles Standish" they are real; notice how much they resemble the original persons. We almost feel that Miles Standish disposition and appearance are in reality before us.

These characters are sometimes pictured by a concise description, again by their actions and conversation. Longfellow, for instance, does not tell us that Standish is conceited, yet his self-aggrandizement is shown by the conversation between him and Alden, in which he compares himself to Cæsar. These characters may either be ordinary persons, or they may be marked by some peculiarity. Priscilla is just a sweet, simple girl of every day life, while in the "House of the Seven Gables" the characters, with few exceptions, are enveloped in a veil of mystery and oddity. Study, also, the strength and weakness of each, whether they develop in the story or are stationary. Evangeline, a beautiful, happy bride in the first of the story finally develops into a Sister of Mercy, stricken with old age and grief.

The style of different writings varies just as the authors. Bryant, the foster child of nature, sings of the forests, the babbling brooks, and the sun kissed mountain peaks; in Burr's writing there is a sweet, almost feminine, touch echoing tones of simplicity and Scottish legends. After scanning a selection from Poe's tragic pen we feel as if we had suddenly immersed from the mysterious spirit-realm of tragedy, darkness, and gloom. Notice the literary influences and bookish expression, also. The only literature the Puritans had from which to draw their expression of speech was the Bible, and, consequently, in the "Courtship" we see this influence distinctly shown. Study the kinds of humor found. Thus "Uncle Remus' Tales" cause a successive roar of laughter, but the episode of, "David Copperfield's" Peggotty and Barkies merely suggests a smile. Consider whether the style is full of pathos, harsh or musical, dignified and grand, or animated and simple; clear and natural, or obscure and ornamental.

In writing an author frequently uses figures of speech as a rhetorical decoration for ornamenting his style. These are to a writer as color to the painter, used generally to bring out the subject clear and more convincing. Criticise their quality and originality. Longfellow uses this simile in describing John Alden's feeling after receiving Standish's command: "To and fro in his breast his thoughts were heaving as a foundering ship washes the bitter sea." His are of a homely, familiar, kind, rather comparing objects not usually associated together. Sometimes human nature is compared to forms of natural objects, as is spoken of Standish, "He is a little chimney heated hot in a moment;" and of Priscilla—"May flowers blooming around him—the very type of Priscilla." Then at times the forms of nature are taken and bedecked in imagination and beauty as "silently one by one in the infinite meadows of Heaven, blossomed the lovely stars, the forget-me-nots of angels." Point out these figures of speech, of what type they are an example.

Contrast and harmony, they say, betoken the hand of an artist. Hence, among the best writings we discover a host of strongly drawn contrasts. They may be between characters, or between feelings and nature, or places, times, dress, customs, and circumstances. As an example of the first, take Basil and Benedict; both strong Acadian farmers, are friends and neighbors, yet one is of a happy, jovial disposition and the other is rather morose and serious. The contrast between human feelings and nature is shown in the scene where John Alden, crushed by the sense of his errand, passes through the woods where the birds are chirping of their freedom and happiness. Instead of contrast we sometimes find harmony, as in the scene where the Acadians, wrested from home, property and friends, are sadly meditating on their grief under the shadow of a terrible storm. In memory work 'tis well to leave it to the pupils to choose the lines in their opinion most humorous, pathetic, interesting, and beautiful, and any puns, adages, good descriptions, or moral lessons.

The study of literature gives us such a splendid field from which to gather our material for composition work. For oral compositions have different ones to reproduce the story as a whole, then give descriptions of characters and scenes. Much time should be given to this part of the study, since to acquire the smoothest and most artistic way of expressing our thoughts is one of the most important school studies. I suggest the following subjects for written work; comparison of characters, as Benedict and Basil; of different writings, as "Evangeline" and "Courtship of Miles Standish," of Evangeline, the bride, to Evangeline, the sister of mercy; of places and times; of some author to the hero in his writings, as Longfellow and John Alden. Descriptions of different scenes and characters, dress, customs, and events. Arguments as: Did Alden expect Priscilla's refusal? Have them make outlines and abstracts on the whole story, or parts of it.

An interesting feature of literature is the study of the adages or proverbs. For instance, Standish's motto, "Serve yourself you would be well served," which he forgets in the important incident of trying to win Priscilla, sends an under current of humor through the entire story. Another at the close when he realizes that he, a man nearing the close of life's pilgrimage, couldn't expect to win one in the spring time of life and says, "no man can gather cherries in Kent at the time of Christmas."

Repetition is so frequently used in some writings. The author, in doing this, has some motive. Longfellow makes free use of it in the story above mentioned. The lines—"nothing was heard in the room but the hurrying pen of the stripling," is repeated three times, and is to impress the silence that is reigning previous to the storm of excitement caused by the command of Standish.

The assignment of the lesson should be noted carefully. See that each pupil has a clear understanding of the work given, explain any parts that might seem difficult, and thus prepare them for an independent study and reasoning. Put questions on the board to be studied concerning the style, author, characters, plot, purpose and other similar subjects. Let all tend toward imprinting in their minds the central thought that is prominent throughout the poem. This accomplished the pupil will have been lifted to a lofty plain of mental and spiritual development.

Before the powerful force of literary genius fade the low rough things of the universe and the gateway whereby man may enter the enchanted isle of imagination and the temple of beauty and power swings ajar before our vision: Here grandeur and fancy sway their mystic sceptre and thrill our souls with an ever thirsting taste for all that is noble and beautiful. Under the spell of this intoxicating influence we are ushered into the very throne room of nature,

Charge Begins Next Monday.

In accordance with announcement recently made, on Monday, March 1st, the End of the Century Club will begin making the small charge of 10 cents a month or $1 a year to persons reading the books from the library. The reason for making this charge is to create a fund for providing new books for the library, the amounts heretofore contributed for the support of the library being insufficient to pay expenses and leave anything at all with which to buy new books. The small fee that will hereafter be charged will not be a hardship on any one, yet if there are any who desire to read the books but are unable to pay the fee they should let this be known to the librarian.

where we listen to the beauties and truths of nature's teachings, and in this myriad voiced world of the chattering brooks, murmuring pines, snow created mountains, crystal waters of the lake, the vibrant outburst of the storm, one finds the images and analogies that illustrate and interpret the life of man—

"Whether we look or whether we listen, we hear life murmur or see it glisten. Every clod feels a stir of night, an instinct within it that reaches and towers and groping blindly above it for light, climbs to a soul in grass and flowers."

And as if this were not sufficient we are beckoned to the ancient halls of fame, where clothed in all the magnificence that bespeaks a noble character, are the annals and spirits of each mighty hero of Italy, Greece, Europe, and of our own Columbia. What more could we wish than to commune with those who have lived sublime lives and as it were been fed with the coals, from, off the altars of patriotism.

But lo! from amid the splendor and glory of this wonderland bursts forth in even more brilliant colors the halo of a spiritual light from the shrine of a High Being, that calls forth an irrepressible longing for that which which will mould and fashion into moral beauty a character of noble thoughts and deeds. Then does it not behoove us as those whose privilege it is to lift this veil and direct the pupil's vision toward these exhibitions of power and grandeur, to train our ear to the glorious melodies of this many toned harp, and transmit the soul expanding raptures to each pupil, whose ears having once been attuned to the strength and harmony of this music will never cease to re-echo its melodies throughout the inner recesses of their souls. Then will be sown the seed from which will spring a nation great in intellect and high ideals.

The ground hog and the weather man have both strained their reputations.

Congress chocked the wheels on the senate in the salary raising business.

Maybe when Mr. Roosevelt's term expires the ground hog will take the leadership of the Ananias club.

All the trouble about fixing a salary bill so Senator Knox could get in the cabinet seems to have been wasted.

Some of the members may make a reputation out of it, and that was is what they were looking for mainly.

If the farmers will determine to raise less tobacco than the trust needs, and stick to it, they will see which way the price goes.

As it is so seldom that there is a sentence to hanging, possibly it is a waste of time to try to get the mode of execution changed to electrocution.

Though they say cotton and tobacco are sold at less than the cost of production, it is a fact that many farmers go right on raising too much of both, and too little of the food supply crops.

According to the Raleigh Times, the sixty car loads of people who were coming down to work for the new city charter, footed up a total of seven folks. That beat the negro's catfish for a "swunk."

One reason that so many of the independent concerns were absorbed is that they were working more for an opportunity to sell out to the trust at a big profit than they were to establish an opposition business.

Baxter Shenwell, who has been a prominent figure in courts, and was once tried for his life, has been convicted in Guilford Superior court of assault with deadly weapon and was sentenced to five months in jail. He took an appeal to Supreme court.

The Wilson Times took a lick at the trust because it bought out a local independent cigarette factory and moved it away, thus depriving Wilson of an enter prize that helped the town. The independent factory would not have sold to the trust if it had not got its price, and we would not be surprised if that motive did not prompt its establishment more than benefitting the community in which it was located.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Hyde county. The climate is ideal for early trucking. The people are of the very elect of the earth. There are but two enemies to this Paradise—the real location of the original Garden of Eden. They are: 1. Too much water; 2. Too many mosquitos. One remedy will kill both these enemies and that remedy is proper drainage. The arid lands of the West, thought twenty-five years ago to be worthless, by adding water through irrigation, have become valuable and fertile. The fertile lands of Eastern North Carolina will be trebled in value by proper drainage.

The crowning work of this General Assembly must be constructive. The drainage bill, drawn with much care and approved by learned lawyers and practical farmers and experts, means more to profitable farming in Eastern North Carolina than any plan yet considered. The individual farmer cannot drain his land, or, if he did, it would do him little good if his neighbor did not join him in drainage. The bill that passed the Senate without a dissenting vote and passed the House by a large majority on the second reading, means great things for development in Eastern North Carolina. There is no provision in it that can injure anybody. It has been well considered and will do great things for the rich lands, now so often flooded as to be unprofitable, of Eastern North Carolina. It would be a great mistake not to pass this act as it has come from the committee.

For three years agriculture has been unprofitable east of Greenville and in a number of counties west of that place because of heavy rains that have flooded the lands, literally drowning the crops. There is but one sure way to prevent this annual loss, and that is to pass the pending drainage bill.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Wabby and Weak Versus Solid and Strong.

Water can't rise above its level.

Nor can a community rise above the level of its citizenship.

If the citizens are lukewarm, limp and lazy, the town will be wishy-washy, wabby and weak.

If the citizens have VERTEBRA, VIM AND VIGOR, the town will be substantial, solid and strong.

Let's all brace up and make this town of ours a place of energy, ambition and enterprise.

LATHAM'S HOME RUN.

And How It Figured in Having Him Dubbed "the Dude."

Charley Comiskey told the story of how Arlie Latham came to be called "the dude."

"One spring during Latham's term of service with the good old St. Louis Browns," said Comiskey, "he jumped into the opening game of the season and won us a victory by knocking out a home run in the last inning. Chris von der Ahe from his place in the grand stand saw Arlie make his sensational hit and naturally enthused. After the game 'der boss president' entered the clubhouse and in that peculiar dialect of his said to Latham:

"Arlie, my pop, you must be glad that I, Chris, was proud mit you, an' I will show you vat my feelings is by giving you the present of somedings for you to wear on yourself. Take dis order on mine own tailor an' go an' dress up yourself."

"Chris' order on the tailor read something like this:

"Give to Arlie der 'tings vat he buys, an' send to me der bill."

"Latham didn't do a thing on the strength of that order but replenish his wardrobe. For three days in succession he showed up at the ball park in a fine makeup, and every suit of clothes was brand new. On the fourth day Chris got a bill from the clothing people for $100. Naturally he sent for Latham and demanded an explanation.

"Why, Chris, old pal," said 'Lath,' "there's nothing to explain. Didn't you agree in that order you gave me to pay for what I bought, and haven't I just begun to buy? Why, old pal, I have only got three suits and expect to be measured for another this afternoon. What's wrong?"

"Arlie," replied Von der Ahe, "you vas de one infernal dude in de bizness, I vill dis bill pay, but you vill yourself go to der tailor an' mit him explain vot I dink of der impudence of you yourself. You vill also stop mit de clothes you now have on an' do no more mit such foolishness mit der man vot pays your salary. Arlie, you vas one dude, an' if you play mit any errors dis afternoon I vill myself fine you all der botiful clothes you have yourself bought."

"From that day Latham became known to the baseball world as 'the dude.'"

A Curious Structure.

On the road from Clifton down to Avonmouth the traveler will pass, in the Avon gorge, a curious structure to which a singular tradition is attached, relates the London Tatler. The story is that a person named Cook about a century ago was told by a gypsy in the Leigh woods that his only son would be killed by a serpent before he reached the age of twenty-one. To avert this he built a high tower and shut his son in the topmost room with the intention of secluding him there until the fatal age was passed. However, by accident a viper was taken up in a fagot to the room to light the fire, and it crept from the fagot and bit the boy so that he died. Therefore the tower was called Cook's Folly, and that is its name to this day, whatever is the true explanation.

An Ignoble Use.

Washington Irving in "Crayon Papers" says: "I was once at an evening entertainment given by the Duke of Wellington at Apsley House to William IV. The duke had manifested his admiration of his great adversary, Napoleon, by having portraits of him in different parts of the house. At the bottom of the grand staircase stood the colossal statue of the emperor by Canova. It was of marble in the antique style, with one arm partly extended, holding a figure of Victory. Over this arm the ladies in tripping upstairs to the ball had thrown their shawls. It was a singular office for the statue of Napoleon to perform in the mansion of the Duke of Wellington! Imperial Caesar, dead and turned to clay, etc.

The Elder That Swore.

An elder of the kirk, having found a little boy and his sister playing marbles on Sunday, put his reproach in this form, not a judicious one for a child: "Boy, do you know where children go who play marbles on Sabbath day?" "Ay," said the boy. "They gang down to the field by the water below the brig."

"No," roared out the elder: "they go to hell and are burned."

The little fellow, really shocked, called to his sister: "Come awa', Jeanie. Here's a man swearing awfully."—"Reminiscences of Dean Ramsay."

AIR PRESSURE.

The Weight a Human Body Is Compelled to Sustain.

If a person who had given no thought to the matter were told that he is perpetually sustaining a weight of about fourteen tons and that that stupendous burden is ever varying, sometimes increasing, sometimes decreasing, to the extent of 400 and 500 pounds in the course of a few hours, he would probably consider that his informant was demented. But that prodigious load represents the weight of air which every person of average size is always bearing, although, as the pressure is equal on all sides, the cumbersome burden is not only not felt, but under certain conditions of the atmosphere, when the barometer stands high, indicating that the pressure is increased, a sense of invigoration is experienced, which passes away when he has been relieved of the additional hundred-weight or two which he was carrying. Some idea of the tremendous pressure of the air may be gathered by placing the hand firmly over the receiver of an air pump and exhausting the air therefrom. A large hand measuring eight square inches would then, if the air were completely exhausted, have a weight of exactly a hundredweight pressing upon its upper surface. Only a Samson would have sufficient muscular force to lift that load and remove his hand from the mouth of the receiver.

Although our atmosphere is so transparent and so diaphanous, yet its total weight is computed at the enormous total of five thousand five hundred million millions of tons! And when this ponderous element is set in violent motion, as in a hurricane, its weight and density are more readily realized, for then, when in all its fury the unseen air is madly rushing along or furiously whirling around and around at the rate of a hundred miles an hour, nothing except the most solidly erected structures can withstand its infuriate and fierce onslaughts. Great trees are felled in a moment, stacks of corn or hay are scattered to the winds, and even human beings struck by the tornado are hurled to the ground or even caught up and whirled through the air like feathers in a gale.—A. Banker.

He Drew the Line.

One of the governors of Missouri, Claiborn F. Jackson, married one after another five sisters. "When for the fifth time," says Arthur Herkimer, the Missouri historian, "Jackson broached a marital proposition to his father-in-law the old man was eighty and quite deaf. This is the conversation that ensued:

"I want Lizzie!"
"Hey?"
"I want you—to give me—Elizabeth?"

"Oh, you want me to give you Elizabeth, do you? What for?"
"For my wife."
"For your life?"

"I—want—to—marry—Lizzie!"
"Oh, yes, I hear you. You needn't rouse the neighborhood."
"Well, do you consent?"

"Yes, I consent," said the old man, and he shook his head and added slowly:

"Yes, you can have her. You've got 'em all now, my boy. But for goodness sake if anything happens to that girl don't come back here and ask me for the old woman!"

The Resemblance.

A promising young merchant recently presented his better half with a handsome piano lamp as a birthday gift. He was much flattered when she told him to give it his name until he asked her reasons for so peculiar a proceeding.

"Well," said she, "you know, dear, it has a good deal of brass about it, it is handsome to look at, requires a good deal of attention, is remarkably brilliant, is sometimes unsteady on its legs, liable to explode when only half full, flares up occasionally, is always out at bedtime and is bound to smoke."—London Tit-Bits.

"Are you blind, prisoner?" inquired the magistrate.

"Yes, your worship."

"You are charged with vagrancy. How did you lose your sight?"

"By a fit of applepox, sir."

"But there is a picture on your breast representing an explosion in a mine, through which, it is stated, you became blind. How is this?"

"Please, your worship, I couldn't afford to pay a hartist as could paint applepox."—London Answers.

Pat's Deficiencies.

Mrs. McCarthy's husband went out in a boat alone. The boat overturned, and he was drowned. A friend met her some weeks later.

"I hear," said he, "that Pat left you very well off—that he left you $20,000."

"True," said Mrs. McCarthy; "he did."

"How was that?" asked her friend.

"Pat could not read or write, could he?"

"No," said Mrs. McCarthy, "nor swim."—New York Press.

The Woman Hater—Can you explain why it is that a woman hardly ever thanks a man for giving her his seat in a street car? The Man Hater—Easily, sir! It's because she hardly ever gets the chance.—Brooklyn Life.

Hats as Aids to Matrimony.

"The wise woman is as careful about the choice of a hat as she is about the choice of a husband." The celebrated author who uttered this dictum may have exaggerated a little, but not much. And allow me, a woman to tell you solemn men whom I see sneering at the "frivolity" of my sex, that often the cleverest among you have had a wife for no better reason than that the woman thus selected had chosen a becoming hat.

A STEADY DRAIN.

Sick Kidneys Weaken the Whole Body--Make You Ill, Languid and Depressed.

Sick kidneys weaken the body through the continual drainage of life giving albumen from the blood into the urine, and the substitution of poisonous uric acid that goes broadcast through the system, sowing the seeds of disease. Loss of albumen causes weakness, languor, depression. Uric poisoning causes rheumatic pain, nervousness, nausea, cricks in the back, gravel and kidney stones. The proper treatment is a kidney treatment, and the best remedy is Doan's Kidney Pills. Great Greenville cures prove it.

James Hardison, 319 E. Fifth St., Greenville, N. C., says: "My kidneys were weak and the secretions passed too frequently, especially at night when I was forced to rise several times. In the morning my back was very lame and I was subject to pains through my loins. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Wooten's drug store, restored my kidneys to a normal condition. I am now able to sleep well and the lameness and soreness across the small of my back has entirely disappeared. I have found Doan's Kidney Pills to live up to representations and I have no hesitation in giving them my endorsement." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

THE LEGISLATURE.

What Our Law Makers Are Doing at Raleigh.

FORTY-FOURTH DAY.
SENATE.

Among the new bills were: An act to protect the good name of women; to regulate practice before justices of the peace; to amend the law relative to pensions; to regulate the sale of loose leaf tobacco by warehousemen.

The anti-trust law was again taken up and Senator Dockery opened with a discussion in favor of the Lockhart bill. He called the substitute a "Basset-Blow-out subterfuge" Senator Manning followed in a speech for the substitute, as did also Senator Bassett.

HOUSE.

Among the new bills were: To enforce the game law and help the school fund; to provide for proper examination and checking the accounts in the state departments and institutions; to protect sanitary conditions of certain schools, (by Dr. Cox); to protect birds; to amend the law as to hunting on lands of another; to provide for a traveling auditor; as to advertising public sales.

Further consideration of the revenue act was made a special order for Friday.

The bill to issue $250,000 bonds for taking care of insane came up and after a spirited discussion passed second reading.

A long string of bills passed third reading.
