GREENVILLE ICE COMPANY.

IMMENSE PLANT NEARING COMPLETION.

Capacity of Fifteen Tons per Day With Provision for Increase to Twenty Five Tons.

The outlook is that ice famines or difficulty in getting ice, that Greenville has at times been to some extent troubled with in the past, is to be a trouble unknown in the future.

The Greenville Ice Company, Hill & Johnson proprietors, is installing an ice plant that will meet the demands for ice in Greenville until the town grows considerably larger than it is. The plant is located near the transfer tract connecting the Atlantic Coast Line and Norfolk & Southern tracts near the junction of the two roads.

The Reflector reporter visited the plant Tuesday and was surprised to find it one of such magnitude and so complete in its equipment. Mr. Hill showed us through the plant, and with Mr. C. H. Smith, of Philadelphia, who is here for the York Manufacturing Company installing the machinery, explained the parts and working of the plant.

The freezing side of the plant is furnished by the York Manufacturing Co., of York, Pa., and the other machinery by Sullivan & Ehler, of Albany N. Y. It is all up-to-date in every particular. The freezing cans are for 300 pounds size with the tank large enough for an output of 15 tons per day, and capacity for adding a tank for 10 tons more whenever the demand may require. The power for the plant is furnished by a 120 horse high pressure boiler.

The building is 37x87 feet, three stories, covered with galvanized iron, and the storage room will hold 100 tons. It is expected to have the plant all completed and ready to begin operations by the first of May, and from then on the demand for ice here can be fully met.

It is also the purpose of Messrs. Hill & Johnson to establish a machine shop in connection with the ice plant, and this will be added sometime during the coming summer. This is a home enterprise that our people should sustain with liberal patronage.

BOY HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

George Cherry Falls Under Train and Comes Dangerously Near Losing His Life.

George Cherry, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Cherry, came dangerously near being killed Tuesday afternoon, and it is almost miraculous that he is now alive. George was around one of the stores near the Atlantic Coast Line depot when the 4:30 train came in and some one handed him a letter to mail on the train. The train was moving out before George reached it and he ran up to the mail car to hand the letter on. In some way he fell and was knocked under the moving car, but fortunately rolled far enough to be between the rails and thus escaped the wheels running over him. He grabbed an iron rod underneath the car and was dragged on the cross ties until the train was stopped, which was done as quickly as possible.

Though he escaped with his life, George was seriously hurt, one thigh being broken, his body severely bruised and cut badly about the head. He was taken to the home of his parents west of the railroad where his wounds were dressed and he is getting along as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

WINTERVILLE ITEMS.

Newsy Notes From Our Hustling Neighbor.

Winterville, N. C., April 7, 1909.

Be sure to hear the editor of the Progressive Farmer at the school chapel Friday night. Farmers, come and bring your families along with you. Mr. Poe's subject will be, "What can we do for the South?" There is a treat in store for you, for those who read The Progressive Farmer will bear us up in this assertion. You want boy and your girl to be something in life. If they ever be, they must come in contact with great minds in order to receive those aspirations that make successful men and women, merchants and neighbors, close your stores and places of business and you will get inspiration and renewed energies that will make you more successful and happier by coming out. If the farmer is progressive and thriving, your business will thrive. The bread maker is the mudsill. If Mr. Poe leaves his office and gives us his valuable services, surely we ought to show our appreciation of it by giving him a large audience.

Mesdames C. L. Patrick and W. J. Boyd, of Ayden, spent Monday here visiting friends.

Rev. T. H. King went to Ayden Monday night.

There will be Sunbeam exercises at the Baptist church Sunday night at 7:30. All are cordially invited to be present.

S. L. Ange, of Jamesville, spent Saturday and Sunday here with his son, A. W. Ange.

J. S. Cox, express messenger on the A. C. L., is spending a few days at home. He is now on the run from Baltimore to Charleston.

Capt. Thomas Johnson, Billie Munford, and Heber Munford, of Ayden, attended services at the Baptist church here Sunday morning.

Mrs. B. G. Taylor, of Ayden, was here Tuesday visiting relatives.

Misses Annie Carroll and Roland Cobb are visiting relatives here.

Rev. T. H. King filed his regular appointment at Mill's school house Sunday evening. He was accompanied by J. E. Greene.

Rev. B. F. Huske will conduct Easter services at the Episcopal church here Sunday afternoon at 3:30. All are cordially invited to these services.

Notice.

All of the members of the lookout committee that was appointed for the meeting at the Christian church are requested to meet me tonight at the church after prayer meeting to complete our arrangements for the meeting that begins the third Sunday in this month. Mr. Collier is coming highly recommended, he is said to be one of the strongest evangelists of the South and we want everything ready when he comes.

J. G. Latham,
Chairman Com.

Attention Pythians.

GREENVILLE POSTOFFICE RECEIPTS.

Last Year Shows Large Increase—Next Year Will Reach Free Delivery.

There is nothing that is a better index to the growth of a town in population and business than the postoffice receipts. Postmaster Roy C. Flanagan has furnished The Reflector some interesting figures showing the increase of receipts in the last two years. The amount for March 1908 was $620 86, and for March 1909, $717.24, an increase of nearly $200.

The receipts by quarters for the last year compared with the previous year were as follows:

| Quarter         | 1907       | 1908       |
|-----------------|------------|------------|
| Ending June 30  | $1,687.40 | $1,919.78 |
| Ending Sept 30  | 1,186.61   | 2,286.84   |
| Ending Dec 31   | 2,287.63   | 2,887.18   |
| Ending March 31 | 1,854.72   | 2,274.20   |
| Total           | $7,646.36 | $8,868.00 |

This shows an increase of $1,211.64 for the year ending March 31st, 1909, over the previous year. If the gain is as great in the next year, Greenville will be entitled to free delivery to begin July 1st, 1910. There is every reason to believe that the year will show the necessary increase, and the business people of Greenville should see that it is done.

As it was mentioned last week in the items, that we were thinking of organizing a debating society for the purpose of our young men to train themselves to speak on different subjects. We are going to organize Friday night. We will meet at the school house at Black Jack at eight o'clock if nothing prevents. We cordially invite all to be present and help us to begin our work. All come out and try to be there at the time appointed.

There are always more candidates than there are offices.

President Elliott is one who does not want an office, though a high one was offered him.

Look at the article relative to postoffice receipts an get an idea of what Greenville is doing.

Does the present day scramble for office argue well for prosperous conditions throughout the country.

Mr. Taft got 'possum in Atlanta and alligator in New Orleans, and we'll bet certain South Carolinians are hoping he will strike hornets in Charlotte.

When a serious accident occurs, ordinarily it might be thought to prove a warning to others against going in places of danger, but it seldom has that result. Though hundreds of mishaps arise from the careless handling of guns, people continue to handle guns carelessly. The same thing can be said in regard to going about moving trains and other places of danger.

Our railroads seem to be rapidly pulling themselves out of the hole they were some time ago forced into by a combination of panic and adverse legislation. The Seaboard it is said, has planned to expend in betterments and road improvements this year a round million of dollars. The Southern is diligently applying itself to the interrupted task of double tracking its system between Washington and Atlanta. The work is being conducted in sections, all of which will be joined up in the course of about eighteen months. The Danville Bee reports rapid progress on the double-tracking work between that city and Lynchburg and says that over thirty miles of the new work is now being used by the trains. Meanwhile work on the new cut-off around Lynchburg is in progress. This contract alone calls for half a million dollars, but will be worth it all in the way of improved service at Lynchburg and in the saving of time. —Charlotte Observer.

The Peanut Industry.

The March Bulletin of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture is devoted to the culture of peanuts, an especially important industry throughout Eastern Carolina. The papers were prepared by State Chemist B. W. Kilgore and T. E. Browne and include the history, statistics, varieties, climate and soils, seed selection, fertilization, planting, culture, harvesting and picking, together with much other data of great value to growers. The last census reports showed the largest gains in peanut culture in North Carolina of any State in the Union, the value of the crop for this State being $1,852,110. North Carolina and Virginia were the largest growers among the States that engage in peanut culture.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The farmers have not been going in very heavily on fertilizers this spring, and probably, in an effort to whoop up sales, the fertilizer companies have got into a rate war. Outs of from $3 to $4 a ton have been made and one of The Chronicle exchanges, Our Home, we believe, noted the fact that agents are asking the farmers to put their own price on fertilizers, the first time such a thing has been known. But even at the cut rates, there is some profit for the fertilizer men. The cut comes at just the right time for corn and while the farmers are not saying much, they are secretly planning to put more of the stuff than usual under their cotton.—The Charlotte Chronicle.

We are not concerned overly much about the alleged depletion of newspaper pulp-making woods. The sooner the supply is exhausted the sooner will the paper makers turn to cotton stalks and corn stalks, thus converting a waste product into a commercial commodity, and creating a new source of wealth for the South. Once this waste material is utilized, the South will stand between the world and a paper famine.—Charlotte Observer.

We do not know how that training school for incorrigible boys at Concord is getting along, but we do know of some that should be there who are not.—Greensboro Record.

A whole family in New Jersey have had their appendices removed. This must have been a family of some considerable wealth.—Durham Sun.

GOLDEN NEEDLES.

They Were Used When Gallants in France Did Fancy Work.

During the old regime in France, about which so much glamour remains to us, the very men who were living and making the history of the empire of Louis passed their leisure time in a way that seems to us of today utterly ridiculous. In all the fancy work on which ladies employed themselves the men seem to have taken part.

Poinsinet in one of his comedies represents a young marquis entering a room where two fair damsels are embroidering. One is working a piece of dress trimming, the other a Marly founce. The beau examines the embroidery with the eye of a connoisseur, points out here and there the specially good touches and is too polite to notice any defects. He takes a little gold tube out of the pocket of his richly decorated waistcoat and selects a dainty gold needle. He goes to the frame at which Cidalise is working and finishes the flower which she had begun. From her he moves to the sofa and, seizing one end of the founce, assists Ismene, to whom he pays special attention, to complete her task.

At this time it was the custom of the ladies invariably to carry their workbags with them to the evening receptions, in which they had not only their embroidery materials, but the last novel, the popular songs, their patch boxes and rouge pots. Gentlemen also carried deftly embroidered little bags into company, which held "a whole arsenal of cutlery and fancy articles, such as boxes of different shapes filled with lozenges, bonbons, snuff and scent."

At another period the fashion of the day was to cut out drawings from books and pamphlets and to paste them on screens, lamp shades, boxes and vases. The skill in this was to so arrange the drawings or parts of different drawings as to produce a curious or amusing effect. Then there came a season when all the rage was for charades and riddles, which gave a peculiarly good opportunity to exercise the light and rapid wit so conspicuous in the French. Every evening the drawing rooms were converted into impromptu charades. Some lady would suggest a word or phrase, and forthwith it would be converted into the subject of a sprightly little play. Many of the word games now current with us in America had their origin in the necessity the French salons were under in the last century to divert themselves. In some of the salons the fashion of keeping a daily chronicle of news, which was too often a mere chronicle of scandal, was adopted. Mme. Doublet de Persan issued bulletins which she called "nouvelles a la main." In her apartments two registers were kept, one of the authentic news received here and there by her guests, the other of floating rumors and on dits, and from these the budget of her chronicle was made up and circulated throughout France.—Appleton's Magazine.

Geese.

A Georgia editor wants to know in what part of the country the most geese are to be found. That is hard to say. Some would suggest California, some Georgia, some Tennessee, some Massachusetts, some New York, and, maybe, some especially mean ones the District of Columbia.—Washington Herald.

He who shall pass judgment on the records of our life is the same that formed us in reality.—Stevenson.

GRANT SIGNED.

He Indorsed the Order "Till the Day of Judgment."

General Grant has fitly been spoken of as "an unaffected great soldier." It may have been the blending of this large mindedness and lack of affectation that invariably made him so courteously kind to any one who asked his assistance, so generous in his praise of an opponent, even when that opponent was fighting him to the death. The following little story emphasizes all these qualities:

After the fall of Fort Donelson, to prevent the needless violation of property by either the army or by camp followers, protections were issued by the United States government. To Miss C., whose six brothers were fighting in the Confederate army, such a protection was granted. It had been signed by all the commanders of the post in turn—by Buell, Rosecrans, Schofield, Sheridan, Grainger and many others—and the list was long and impressive. At last it became necessary for General Grant's signature to be added.

"When I entered the office," says Miss C., "the general was smoking, his feet higher than his head. But he seemed instantly to stand upright before me, and his cigar was thrown away in a moment.

"I handed him my protection. 'You have rather a formidable list of names,' he said as he took it from me.

"And I hope that you will add yours to it and make it even more formidable," I replied.

"For answer he sat down again, ready to put his signature at the end of the parchment, when he suddenly stopped and looked at me.

"For how long do you wish this protection for your estate, Miss C.?" he asked.

"Until the day of judgment, general," I answered boldly.

"Then he smiled that sweet, quizzical smile of his that made so many people, even when they were his enemies, love him and said:

"My dear young lady, you have great confidence in your armies! But with such courage and with such a leader as General Lee I cannot wonder! Then, with a great flourish, he added the words, 'Till the day of judgment, Ulysses S. Grant,' and handed it back to me."—Youth's Companion.

His Great Weight.

Nothing expresses better the importance of a person—in his own or in the world's eyes—than to state it in terms of his relations with the physical world.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, it will be recalled, remarked that the axis of the earth sticks out in every man's back yard. A bonnet of not dissimilar kind is recorded of Washington Irving.

The conversation was turned on the pomposity of a certain American diplomatist.

"Ah, he is a great man," said Irving, "and in his own estimation a very great man—a man of great weight. When he goes to the west the east tips up!"

His Qualifications.

He was pleading his cause earnestly. "I am wealthy," he said, "and could make ample provision for you."

She nodded and checked one point off on her fingers.

"I have had experience with the world," he continued.

"I have passed the frivolous point," he went on, "and I have the steadfastness, the age and the wisdom to guard and guide you well."

He paused for an answer.

"The points you make are strong ones," she said, "but they lead undeviatingly to the conclusion that you would make an excellent father for me. You have all the necessary qualifications but just now I am looking for a husband."—New York Times.

AUTUMN LEAVES.

The Change of Color From Green to Red or Yellow or Brown.

Despite the commonness of autumn colorings, we do not yet know the full meaning of autumn colors of leaves. We do know that late in the summer the tree is preparing for the leaf fall by drawing the valuable substances of the leaf into the stem. It also ceases to make chlorophyll (the green substance of the leaf which aids in the making of the plant's food), and this gradually fades away in the bright light. By fading it exposes to view any other colors in the leaf, and all leaves contain yellow coloring matters called xanthophyll, whose function is not known, and it is these which give the yellow color to autumn leaves.

The red is formed differently. In bright light and cool temperature a new substance, called erythrophyl, is made from sugar and tannin in the leaf cells, and that has a red color. A brown substance is also sometimes formed, and, besides, the skeleton of the leaf itself turns brown as the leaf dies. It is the various combinations of these substances that give the many shades of autumn colors. Some students think these colors are a useful protection to the living protoplasm (life material) of the leaf after the green disappears, protecting it against the full blaze of light, which is injurious, but others think the colors have no use at all, but are simply the incidental chemical result of the processes in the ripening and dying leaf.

As yet the weight of evidence seems to favor the latter view, but the matter is still unsettled. It is generally thought that frost has something to do with it, but it has not, except to hasten it. Anything which affects the vitality of the leaf tends to hasten it, for which reason an injured branch of a maple will often show red autumn color even in summer.

The colors are brightest where the leaves receive the most brilliant sunshine.—Professor W. F. Ganong in St. Nicholas.

A Slow Horse.

One time when he was quite a young man Lincoln hired a livery stable horse to attend a convention where he expected to be nominated for some office. The horse went so slow that when he reached there the convention was over and the other fellow nominated. On his return he irately asked the stable keeper if the horse was good for anything at all. "Yes, for drawing the hearse to funerals," was the reply. Lincoln advised him earnestly never to send that horse to a funeral, for if he did judgment day would arrive before the corpse reached the grave.

A STRIKING CONTRAST.

Entering the United States Senate and the House of Lords.

When a senator is elected in the United States he sends his credentials on in advance. They are presented by his colleague, read from the desk and filed in the secretary's office unless some objection is raised, when they are sent to the committee on privileges and elections for examination. When a senator elect appears he steps quietly up to the clerk's desk, escorted by his colleague, takes an oath to support the constitution of the United States and is then led to a desk on the outer row, which his colleague has selected for him, where he receives the congratulations of his friends and introductions to the senators who care to make his acquaintance. He looks as wise as may be and waits for adjournment, when he goes to the secretary's office, writes his autograph in a big red book for the use of the cashier and draws his mileage.

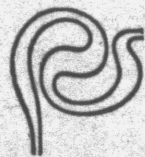

In the English house of lords the proceedings are very different. A newly created peer enters that historic chamber in a robe of scarlet velvet trimmed with ermine, attended by two fellow peers, who act as his sponsors and escorted by the black rod, as the sergeant-at-arms is known, and the garter king at arms, arrayed in a gorgeous tabard. The procession marches around, making low bows to the empty throne and to the presiding officer, who is the lord high chancellor, from different parts of the gilded chamber, to which that imposing person gravely responds. When the new peer reaches the throne he kneels reverently and places upon the empty chair, where his majesty ought to be sitting, the patent of nobility he has received from his sovereign. He is then led to the woolsack, where the lord chancellor administers to him the oath. His sponsors next lead him to the proper bench, where he takes his seat for a moment. Then all three rise and bow three times at the vacant throne and three times to the presiding officer. The lord high chancellor then leaves the woolsack and comes down to shake hands with the new peer and welcome him to the house. The other peers come also and tender their congratulations.

This is the Case With Many Greenville People.

Too many Greenville citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden and stooping or lifting an impossibility. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief, but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently.

The following statement should convince every Greenville reader of their efficiency.

J. Frank Powell, West Tarboro, N. C., says: "I suffered from a severe attack of La Grippe which left my kidneys disordered. Standing so much greatly aggravated the pains in my back and frequently I was forced to sit down. A dull ache across my loins kept me in almost constant misery and whenever I attempted to stoop or lift, sharp, shooting pains darted through me. I at length procured Doan's Kidney Pills and that they gave me relief in a short time. I have not suffered from backache since and my kidneys have been normal. I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other sufferers."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.
