The farmers are very busy setting out tobacco plants. The weather is fine and they are making good use of it. They are nearly through planting cotton.

Meeting in Baptist Church.

For a week day service the attendance was very large in the Baptist church Monday afternoon, and Mr. Lumpkin's sermon was one that should work a change in every church member, as a number pledged themselves to that effect. His subject was the letter John was directed to write to the church at Laodicea that was composed of lukewarm Christians who were neither hot nor cold. He compared their condition with those to whom he was preaching with good effect.

At night Mr. Lumpkin preached of "Blind Bartimeus" who as he sat by the way side grasped the one opportunity as Jesus was passing to cry unto Him for mercy and received sight. Many beautiful lessons were drawn from this incident and application made to the condition of those who are blind in sin.

It is a joy to hear a man preach the Gospel as earnestly as Mr. Lumpkin. There will be service again tonight beginning at 7:45.

"Laughing Theodore" on the Jury.

Hearing a commotion up in the court house Monday night, we stopped to listen and recognized the jolly laugh of C. T. Cox, of Winterville. Then it flashed to mind that he was on a hung jury and was having his own good time. Being locked inside the court room with the jury, where there was no danger from the approach of a policeman or any one else to hinder, he felt "at liberty" sure enough, and his merry peals of laughter could be heard across the square. There is no question about his bringing the jury to the unanimous verdict that he is a good laugh.

when she was met by Raymond who wanted to know of her what she had done. When she apprised him of the fact that she had taken out a warrant for him he wiped out his pistol and sent five balls in her direction. She ran, screaming as she went. The police made chase but the scoundrel got away.—Wilson Cor. News and Observer.

Attend the orphans' concert in the opera house tonight.

T. L. Willingham, district manager of the Security Life and Annuity Co., passed through Monday evening going to Farmville to look after the payment of $2,000 insurance on the life of the late Joe Barrett.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

Strawberries and straw hats come along.

The bug is on hand ready for the potatoes.

The young fruit on the trees indicates that the crop hereabouts was not killed.

Those down at Adams' ten cents show, Monday night, say the performance was good.

The singing class of the Oxford Orphan Asylum arrived this morning from Winterville where they gave a concert last night. Tonight they give a concert in the opera house here.

The Home Merchant.

In an editorial on "Why it Pays to Buy Goods at Home" the Liberal (Kans.) Independent has this deserved appreciation of the home merchant:

"Without any thought of sentiment or suggestion that we owe allegiance to anyone the cold hard truth is that the retail merchants of our home town are the best business friends we have. The retail merchant conducts a school of commerce for our education—and tuition is free. Every man, woman and child gets the benefit of seeing in the home town about anything that is of real importance. He protects us against fraud and deceit. He stand for the square deal.

"You never ordered a $10 lightning rod of your home merchant and then found your note for a thousand dollars in the bank next day as a result. You never paid him $60 for a range that warped out of shape in six months—without your wife getting the money back. He never charged you $75 for a "trailer" buggy that you found out afterwards could be bought anywhere for $60.

"No, the home merchant is just like you. He lives where he does business and his success depends on making a friend of you and your neighbor. Like you, he has to 'make good'.

The retail merchant is now the one great factor in our commercial system and this is true solely because he renders us better service than we can get elsewhere. Take him away and our home town is gone; take our home town away and we deprive our children of the retail store, which is the greatest single educational factor in modern life. No, it cannot be. The retail merchant will continue to abide in our affections so long as we value our homes, because the average citizen is proud of his town (he always tells how close his farm is to it) and he secretly despises the method of peddlers—the peddler system is now known to be the legitimate father of the whole catalogue house business.

Hunter Roosevelt will hardly get so far into the jungles of Africa that the telegraph wires cannot find him.

The press dispatches say Hunter Roosevelt is running from smallpox in Africa. Why didn't he use his big sick on it?

The authorities found a moonshine still on the Vanderbilt estate near Asheville. "Cousin" George should put a stop to that kind of thing on his big farm.

It is said Carrie Nation sold enough souvenir hatchets on her campaign against saloons to buy a big farm. Maybe she will now settle down, stay at home and keep quiet.

Asheville came near having another big hotel fire Sunday morning. Fire caught in the engine room and did damage to the extent of $2,000 before it was extinguished.

The revolution in Turkey has proved successful and the capitol has been surrendered to the Constitutionalist forces. Martial law now prevails and a new government may be the outcome.

Cement.

Nothing could be more astonishing than the increased use of cement and of the great variety of purposes for which it is being used. Everybody knows by observation how it has taken the place of stone and brick for pavements and how much better pavement it makes than either of these materials. Already it goes into the construction of houses in many different forms. Sometimes it is made into blocks of artificial stones and laid up in the walls the same as stone or brick. Then again it is made into reinforced concrete which makes the building the equivalent of a monolith. It is cast into slabs, treated with white enamel paint and used in place of marble tops on counters. They are beginning to make bath tubs out of it, treating the interior with white enamel paint in the same way. We have seen a tombstone moulded and set up in good shape and the very inscription cast on it when the shaft was moulded. It is extensively used for bridges, for water-power dams, for skyscraper buildings and for a thousand and one things which formerly required stone, steel or lumber.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Seeing and Hearing.

Did you see the shot fired?" was the question asked of an Irishman called as a witness in a trial once had in Kansas City. "I did not," was the Celt's response: "but I heard it foired." "The evidence is not satisfactory," sternly announced the presiding magistrate. "Step down."

This legal finding was evidently not precisely to the liking of Irishman for no sooner had he left the stand and had turned his back than he gave way to a somewhat derisive laugh. This had the effect of arousing in turn the judge's ire, and he immediately recalled the offender. "How dare you show such contempt of court?" demanded his honor. "What do you mean by laughing in that manner?" "Did your honor see me laugh?" asked the Irishman, in a most respectful tone. "No, but I distinctly heard you laugh," said the magistrate. A twinkle came into the eye of the witness. "Such evidence is not satisfactory, your honor," said he quietly. Whereupon, every one, including the judge, laughed.—Lippincott's.

Says the Greensboro Telegram. We have heard it hinted that Senator Simmons had come somewhat under the influence of Senator Aldrich and is getting to be something of a protectionist. Evidence for this opinion is afforded by his attitude as to the tariff on cotton seed oil, the senior North Carolina Senator declaring that he is not in favor of placing cotton seed oil on the free list. This statement infers that Mr. Simmons would find it hard to be consistent with his stand on the cotton seed oil tariff and at the same time oppose any sort of a protective tariff. The Landmark says:

The fact that under the present tariff practically no cotton seed oil is imported is absolute evidence that the duty is for protection only, and if Senator Simmons stands for that it is difficult to understand how he gets around favoring protection in other cases. Of course the Senator will say that so long as there is to be protection he will stand for protection for Southern products, or at least insist that they have a fair show with the rest of the country, and this position is a strong one. But here is a case of a duty levied solely for protection; it produces no revenue. It would seem that one who can stand for that would be embarrassed to apposing a protective duty at any time.

Through a Puncture.

Ever see a drunken man trying to fill a bottle with the bottom broken out? It's a great waste, and it looks mighty silly.

But it's no more foolish and no more wasteful than for a sober man to expect his town to fill up with people and bubble over with prosperity when he is continually pouring his dollars into the wide world outside THROUGH THE MAIL ORDER HOLE in the bottom of his home town.

RAW DRUGS.

Castor Oil Comes as Pretty Little Brown and Black Beans.

Upon going into a pharmacy and looking over the mysterious jars and bottles and boxes that line the shelves did you ever wonder where on earth all of the drugs came from and how they appeared before they were ground up and made into oils or dried or pulverized or crystallized into queer shaped lumps? Each jar and box seems to hide some secret which you immediately become curious to solve. How many different lands do they represent? And, after they leave the jars that hold them now, what are they made into?

Who, for example, would connect a great pile of dry, thin twigs, neatly tied into small bundles, with sarsaparilla? These twigs are the creeping roots and rootlets of a prickly shrub that grows in Jamaica, and they are worth from 10 to 50 cents a pound.

Somewhat similar in appearance is Ipecacuanha, which also comes to us in dry twigs, which are part of the trailing root of a plant found in the damp forests of Brazil.

These roots receive no preparation save drying before they are shipped off to the United States. They are packed in large sacks, and the workmen who open the bales must beware of breathing the pungent, irritating dust given off, which is productive of unpleasant results if incautiously inhaled.

Castor oil, too, is hard to recognize in the pretty little brown beans, spotted with black and with polished skins, that arrive in bags from India. They look far too attractive to suggest the much hated dose of our early days.

Aloes, the base of many nauseous medicines, may be seen in its crude form as a solid mass resembling brown sealing wax, packed in heavy wooden boxes, from which it is chipped out in flakes with a chisel and hammer.

It is of different qualities and prices, according to whether it comes from Arabia, Socotra or the West Indies, and may bring any sum from $4 to $45 per hundredweight. Aloes is the juice of the big fleshy leaves of the plant of that name. This juice is pressed or evaporated from the leaves and poured into chests or kegs in a semifluid state, hardening presently into a solid block. Not infrequently it is inclosed in the dry skins of monkeys and in this strange form brought to market.

One of the most interesting of drugs is opium, both on account of its awful potency and by reason of its great value. A case of opium, about 225 pounds, is worth $400 roughly. The case is of rough deal lined with tin and contains a number of soft, dark lumps, like large handfuls of dough packed very closely together in a quantity of dry, chaffy seeds.

The opium which reaches America is of two qualities, one for medicine, the other for smoking, and comes from Persia and Asia Minor, China and India.—St. Louis Republic.

A GRATEFUL PATIENT.

The Coin That Was Measured by a Famous Surgeon.

Dr. Grenfell, an old London hospital pupil, in a sketch of Sir Frederick Treves in the Pall Mall Gazette tells the story of a tiny sovereign gold piece given by a grateful patient to the famous surgeon and guarded by him as a priceless treasure. A sailor from Norway had been operated on by Sir Frederick in hospital. His life had been saved, and he had gone his way. Late one evening a timid knock brought Sir Frederick himself at that unusual hour to his door; in Wimpole street. A tall, gaunt sailor in threadbare attire asked if this was where "Mr. Treves lives." At his earnest request, though somewhat under protest, he was allowed to enter. He at once proceeded to get out a jackknife, and from the lining of the belt of his trousers he cut out a small gold piece and offered it to Sir Frederick. On his refusal to accept it the man was so hurt that Sir Frederick listened to his story, and an interesting one it was.

The man had on leaving hospital sought a berth at the London docks, but, being a stranger, had been unable to get one. He had got out of money and had gone hungry day after day, though he knew that he had sewed up in his waistband by his wife in Norway the piece of gold in question. He had got so pulled down by bad living that he at last decided he must spend the money, but that very day he succeeded in getting a berth on a ship and his advance had given the food he stood so sorely in need of. He had promptly tramped all the way to Wimpole street, and his bearing was such that Sir Frederick found himself "bowing into the darkness, holding the gold piece in his hand and with an overwhelming sense of inferiority strongly impressed on his mind."

HIS WIFE'S CHOICE.

The Worried Man, the Wall Paper and the Comment of the Clerk.

With an apologetic air the worried man, who had been gazing in the decorator's windows, finally entered and asked to see samples of wall paper.

"About what price?" asked the clerk.

"Fifty cents a roll," said the man. "My wife won't pay any more."

"Well," said the clerk, taking down a roll, "here is something in light colors that—"

"Oh, no; that won't do. My wife says the children get light colored paper soiled too quickly."

"Here is something in a darker shade with—"

"That won't do at all. My wife wouldn't like that because it makes the room too dark."

"Here is a design in a medium tone—"

"I'm afraid not," said the man nervously. "That has a small figure, and my wife says small figures are always monotonous."

"Then how about this?" asked the clerk wearily, "with the big roses in it and the—"

"I'm sure that wouldn't suit my wife," was the answer. "She thinks the room is too small for large figures."

"We have a very pretty pattern done in a conventionalized—"

"Oh, please don't say that!" begged the man. "My wife told me particularly not to get anything of that kind. She thinks they are too dead looking."

"In that case," said the clerk desperately, "we have the very thing—medium background, with small flowers sprinkled on it in neutral colors, altogether a very—"

"I'm afraid that is hardly it," said the man, looking more worried than ever. "My wife says flowers on wall paper never look like anything but smudges."

"Say," said the clerk, rolling up his stock, "you don't want wall paper. You want a divorce."—New York Herald.

A Feat of Swordsmanship.

Napoleon, it is said, one day met an old one armed soldier and asked him where he lost his arm.

"Sire, at Austerlitz."

"And were you not decorated?"

"No, sire."

"Then here is my own cross for you. I make you chevalier."

"Your majesty makes me chevalier because I have lost one arm. What would your majesty have done had I lost both?"

"Oh, in that case I should have made you officer of the Legion."

Whereupon the soldier immediately drew his sword and cut off his other arm.

THE MAGIC OF HOUDIN

Remarkable Cleverness of the Famous French Conjuror.

HIS MOST WONDERFUL FEAT

A Mysterious Performance Before the Court of Louis Philippe That Was Probably the Result of a Subtle Bit of Psychological Reasoning.

A link connecting the names of Cagliostro, the great charlatan, and the French conjuror Robert Houdin may be found in a story that may be justly termed "The Most Incredible Feat of Magic Ever Performed."

In 1846 Houdin, then at the height of his popularity, was invited to St. Cloud to give a performance before the king, the royal family and court. The conjuror had only his young son as an assistant and could rely on no tricks of light or mechanism, as the exhibition was given in one of the drawing rooms of the palace. He finished with the following extraordinary performance:

Borrowing several handkerchiefs, he wound them into a package, which he laid on the table. Then he went about among the guests distributing cards on which were to be written the names of places to which it was desired that the package be invisibly transported. Houdin then handed the cards to the king, asking him to select three at hazard and from them choose the destination he liked best.

The first card read, "I desire the handkerchief to be found beneath one of the candelabra on the mantelpiece."

"That," said the king, "is too easy for the ability of a conjuror of the ability of M. Houdin."

The second read, "The handkerchiefs are to be taken to the dome of the Invalides."

"That," commented the king, "is better. However, it is much too far, not for the handkerchiefs, but for us. The third card suits me," said the king. "I desire that you should send the handkerchiefs into the chest of the last orange tree on the right of the avenue."

Houdin expressed his willingness to attempt the feat, and the king whispered an order that immediately sent a group of attendants to guard the orange tree in question.

The conjuror placed the package of handkerchiefs under an opaque glass bell and then, waving a wand, ordered the package to proceed to the place chosen by the king. When the bell was raised the handkerchiefs were gone, but in their place was a white turtle dove. A trusted attendant was sent to the orange tree to open the chest. He returned bearing a small iron coffer covered by rust.

"Are the handkerchiefs in this coffer?" asked the king.

"Yes, sire, and they have been there, too, for a long time."

"How can that be possible? The handkerchiefs were given you hardly a quarter of an hour ago."

"Yet it is so, and your majesty will be even more surprised when I prove that this coffer and its contents were placed in the chest of the orange tree sixty years ago. Deign to remove from the neck of the turtle dove the key of the casket."

Louis Philippe unfastened a ribbon holding a small rusty key, unlocked the coffer, found a document bearing the seal of Cagliostro and read:

This day, the 6th of June, 1788, this iron box, containing six handkerchiefs, was placed among the roots of an orange tree by me, Balsamo, count of Cagliostro, to serve in performing an act of magic which will be executed on the same day sixty years hence before Louis Philippe of Orleans and his family.

Beneath the parchment conveying this message was found a package containing what seemed to be the six handkerchiefs placed on the table a few minutes before. In his memoirs M. Houdin offers no solution for the mystery. A shrewd analyst has explained it as being no more than a clever bit of psychology on the part of the conjuror, who knew the character of Louis Philippe and knew him to be exceedingly clever in small things.

Deduction.

"Tell me what you eat, and I will tell you what you are," boasted an amateur sage.

"Well, I ate a Welsh rabbit and a lemon pie last night."

"You're a fool."—Kansas City Journal.

The Wrong View of the Situation.

The time to push out with the advertising is when business commences to lag. Too many business men advertise extensively while business is good and have it stopped when business commences to fall off. This is a good deal like fertilizing rich soil and leaving the poorer soil without fertilizer. The summer months are coming and usually during this season of the year business activity slackens to some extent. This is the time to be planting seeds for the summer months.
