TRIBUTE TO THE CONFEDERACY.

EXTRACTS FROM MR. E. L. STEWART'S SPEECH.

Delivered to the Bryan Grimes Camp on Memorial Day.

He spurned all that was low and wicked, and now wrote in a blank book a number of maxims as rules for his life. One of these rules every young man should keep in mind. It was, "You may be, whatever you resolve to be." We shall see that this was indeed the guiding star of his life. Whatever he willed to do, he always did by sheer force of endeavor. At this time it was evident that it was his purpose to place his name high on the roll of earthly fame. Beneath his shy and modest manner, there burned the desire to be great. His life was not yet ruled by the love of Christ, but shows some of the highest and noblest aims.

Jackson was twenty two years of age when he left West Point as second lieutenant in the United States army. Our country was then at war with Mexico, and he was sent to the South of that country. The American army, with its waving flags and bright guns, presented a spectacle of splendor which Lieutenant Jackson never forgot.

After the first battle he was placed in the light artillery service. This change was just what young Jackson wished for though more dangerous, the light artillery service gave him a better chance to win the honors for which his soul thirsted. He knew no fear; battle contained no horror, for beneath the dark cloud of war shone the sun of glory, and he was striving to bask in his presence.

Shortly after he was promoted to the rank of captain, the battle of Chapultepec was fought, in which Jackson's command of two regiments were nearly all killed by the deadly cannon of the enemy. The commanding officer sent him word to fall back. His reply was this: "Send me ten more men, and I will advance and take the guns which are doing such deadly work." Then turning, and with the aid of one man, he wheeled a cannon across a ditch, and began a rapid fire into the enemy's ranks forcing them to retreat. The victorious Americans entered the city, and Mexico was forced to sue for peace. For his brave conduct in this battle Jackson was promoted to the rank of major. So we see step by step, he gradually mounts the ladder of fame; and his gallant and meritorious services were heralded to the world through the official reports of his superiors.

Jackson remained in Mexico a while longer, and was then sent home. After thinking seriously for the first time in his life about religion, he was now baptized and admitted to his first communion. Soon after this he was elected professor in the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington. Here his life was marked by great faithfulness, and by an earnest yet unobtrusive spirit. Conscientious fidelity to duty marked every step of his course here. Strict, and at times stern in his discipline, he was not always a popular professor; but no teacher ever possessed to a degree the unbounded confidence and respect of the cadets for his unbending integrity and fearlessness in the discharge of his duties. For ten years he prosecuted his unwearied labors as a professor, making during this period, in no questionable form, such an impress upon those who from time to time were under his command, that when the war broke out the spontaneous sentiment of all cadets and graduates was to serve under him as their leader.

He left the institute in 1861 in command of the corps of cadets; and as dangers were rapidly thickening around the state, he reported for duty at Richmond. Duty became now, more than ever, the rule of his life—duty to God, and duty to man. Like St. Paul he kept his body under and would not allow any weakness to overcome him. He used neither tobacco nor spirits, giving as a reason that he was more afraid of it than all the Federal bullets. The immortal Jackson afraid of strong drink! What a lesson to those who have not the courage to say "No", when tempted to do wrong.

In 1861 he married the daughter of a minister of North Carolina, and he now lives in Charlotte, N. C. His home life afforded him much happiness, for there military sternness left his brow, and the law of love took its place. This good and peaceful life, however, was short. The black cloud of war was hovering over the country, and threatened to pour forth at any minute its contents of death and destruction upon the hitherto peaceful land. At last it did burst in all its fury, sweeping Major Jackson away from his quiet life and loved wife and friends into the midst of carnage and death, and to deeds that caused his fame and immortal virtues to be sounded mid a halo of lustre throughout the world.

Having organized the Stonewall Brigade, which was so famous through the sagacity of their leader, he immediately repaired to the scene of action. He was tall, and very erect, with large hands and feet. His brow was fair, and broad; his eyes blue, placid and clear, when their owner was calm, but dark and flashing when he was aroused. His step was long and rapid, and if he was not a graceful rider, he was a fearless one. In battle, as he rode along his columns, hat in hand, bowing right and left to his soldiers whose shouts arose on high, no figure could be nobler than his. Few, even of his intimate friends, were conscious of his great military genius, so he burst upon the world as a meteor darts across a starlit sky.

In the terrible battle of Bull Run, the thin ranks of the Confederates began to waver when Gen. Lee rode up to Jackson saying "General, they are beating us back." Then said Jackson, "We will give them the bayonet." Lee, catching the spirit of Jackson, galloped back to his men saying, "There is Jackson standing like a Stonewall." From that time, the name which he had received in a baptism of fire, displaced that which he had received in a baptism of water, and he was known ever after as "Stonewall Jackson." By his nerve and courage he so inspired the Stonewall Brigade which he commanded, that they rushed pell mell into the ranks of the foe. Their vigor and determination was imparted to the other brigades, and they acted likewise, with the result of a complete victory for the Confeder-

DEBATE FRIDAY NIGHT.

Representatives of Goldsboro and Greenville Schools in Contest.

The Henry Grady Debating Society of the Greenville graded school desire to announce the debate with the Aycock Debating Society, of Goldsboro, in the opera house tomorrow at 8:30 p. m.

The query for discussion is "Resolved, that the next Legislature should enact a law to go into effect Oct. 1, 1912, requiring all children in North Carolina between the ages of seven and fourteen to attend school four months each year." Greenville will argue the negative.

The debate is open to the public, and such persons as are willing to be quiet and give representatives of these two debating clubs their attention are cordially invited to be present.

We especially ask that no babies or small children be brought to the debate. They do not understand the discussion, get tired and restless, become disorderly, and the result is disorder and confusion. Last year, on account of children one of our speakers in the debate became confused and forgot his speech.

School children will be admitted by ticket only. We shall distribute tickets to all pupils above the fourth grade. No others will be admitted.

We ask the people of Greenville to aid us in extending all the courtesies to the Goldsboro gentlemen that may be proper. No "rooting" or undue cheering of any kind will be permitted. We trust that our people will be liberal in their applause for the Goldsboro boys, also for our own, should they merit it. It is our purpose to try to treat our visitors as we would like to be treated in Goldsboro. We ask our people to join us in displaying this spirit.

Henry Grady Debating Society.

It Was a Record Breaker.

That big sale which began at Munford's store Wednesday is without precedent from the standpoint of the large number of shoppers it attracted to town. Several times through the day the crowd was so great in the store that the doors had to be closed until some were ready to go out before others could be admitted. It was a great sale, and will go on for some days.

ates, and a promotion to Brigadier General for Jackson.

Being ordered away from his beloved brigade to another part of the field, he ordered them to march out under arms, and rode to their front with his staff. His parting with them was very touching. No cheer arose, but every face was sad. After speaking a few words of praise and love; he threw the bridle reins across the neck of his horse, and said: "In the army of the Shenandoah, you were the first brigade. In the army of the Potomac, you were the first brigade. In the Second Corps of the army you are the first brigade. You are the first brigade in the affections of your General, and I hope by your bearing you will be handed down to posterity as the first brigade in this our Second War of Independence. Farewell." He then waived his hand, and left the ground at a gallop, followed by the cheers of his brave soldiers. (Continued Friday.)

A GREENVILLE BOOSTER RIGHT.

He Had Wind That Could Not Be Shut Off.

An enthusiastic Greenville booster was on the A. C. L. train a few days ago going down to Norfolk. Getting a bunch of interested passengers seated around within hearing, he put in the time entertaining them with stories of Greenville and her progress. Beginning with the movement that brought about municipal light and water plants and sewerage, he followed on through the successive steps of educational progress in town and county, securing manufacturing enterprises, location of East Carolina Teachers' Training school, building and loan association, paved streets, concrete sidewalks, steel bridges, sand-clay roads—not overlooking fine horses, handsome residences, splendid churches, beautiful women, healthful surroundings, freedom from miasma, and all such.

This went on for an hour or two when one man, sitting a little further off and apparently not much interested, exclaimed, "My lord, man, haven't you got anything else to talk about but Greenville?"

"Don't want anything else sir," replied the booster. "Greenville is good enough to talk a week on without stopping."

"Well, if you are going to keep up that song I'm going to ask the conductor to stop the train and let one of us get off," he fired back.

"All right," added the booster, "you can take to the woods if you want to, but I am in this race to the finish."

From the laugh of the crowd and cries "go on with your song" the interrupter saw he was squelched. That booster's wind could not be cut off, and he may be talking yet, as his subject is certainly great enough.

SANS SOUCI CLUB.

Reported for Reflector.

On Wednesday afternoon, the Sans Souci Club was delightfully entertained by Miss Helen Forbes. The club was called to order by the president, and in absence of the secretary Miss Irma Cobb, acting as secretary protem, called the roll and read minutes of the last meeting.

After discussing the business of the afternoon, the program was taken up which consisted of voice and piano music, delightfully rendered by Mrs. C. C. Skinner, Mrs. W. L. Hall and Miss Irma Cobb.

In the clever contest provided by the hostess, Miss Minor was the lucky winner of an attractive picture, which she presented to Miss Aydlett. Dainty refreshments were then served, after which the club adjourned to meet next with Miss Lottie Skinner.

It was a pleasure to the club members to have with them as visitors, Miss Aydlett, Elizabeth City, Miss Wray, Shelby; and Misses Minor, Waddell, Herndon, Lewis, Mrs. C. C. Skinner, New York, and Mrs. W. L. Hall.

Bishop Galloway presided at the session of the North Carolina Conference held in Greenville several years ago, and is well remembered by the people here, and many feel grieved at his death.

Another Pleased Policy Holder.

Whitakers, N. C., April 13, 1909.
H. Bentley Harris:

District Manager,
Mutual Life Insurance Co. N. Y.

Dear Sir:

I am just in receipt of yours of the 10th instant enclosing your company's draft for $247.08 as a dividend accumulation on my policy No. 353841, which is indeed satisfactory. I consider to carry insurance in a high dividend paying company like the Mutual Life, is to wisely invest a small annual sum, which combines protection with investment. I have great confidence in The Mutual Life.

Very truly yours,
O. D. Mann,

Governor Kitchin might save trouble for himself by making the appointment early.

Town politics is being talked now and will have the right of way for the next three weeks.

If the ground hog is getting any satisfaction out of this near frost weather he is more of a hog than ever.

After the Raleigh Times' slaughter house disclosures, Raleigh folks have just about quit eating meat. It is lucky that the vegetable crop is close by.

New Bern is on a move to have street cars. Greenville will have to wake up to that need some of these days, as the town is already nearly large enough for it.

May should stop monkeying with these cool nights and get down to her summer work. If the weather keeps up these capers we will never know when it is safe to take 'em off.

The New York Central and Hudson River railroad has been made to pay fines aggregating $186,000 by the United States circuit court for violation of the law in regard to freight rebates.

Governor Kitchin can keep the fun going by appointing a man who already has an office as successor to Judge Connor. That will create another vacancy and bring on a scramble for that also.

The Reflector will have to take back what it recently said about the Wilmington Star. That paper has now changed its style of make-up and lost the familiar ear-marks given by its former owner, Major Bernard.

Some of the papers are wondering what the Greensboro Industrial News would say about the president's appointment of Judge Connor, if that paper was now alive. Why do you fellows keep trying to disturb the slumbers of the dead?

The Raleigh Police Commission has completed the hearing of the charges against Chief of Police J. H. Mullins, under which he was temporarily suspended on the eve of the recent primary in that city, and as a result the suspension of the chief was made permanent.

J. C. Davis is one man who should be either confined continuously in the insane asylum or in the penitentiary. He is certainly not the kind of man to go at large. The ease with which he robbed people, mainly widows, shows how readily they bite at investment fakes offered by strangers.

 The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The value to the merchants of having a large crowd of shoppers in town was fully shown Wednesday. One store had a big special sale and the overflow from that store benefitted all the others, as the people who came did not confine themselves to any one place. It would pay the merchants to get together and frequently have special sale days to bring people here.

Sympathy For Criminals Too Easily Aroused.

Gov. Kitchin has been turning his pardon mill wheel quite lively for the past few weeks, and at the present rate seems destined to excel his predecessors in this respect. One of two things seem evident: either there is an alarming miscarriage of justice by the courts or a sympathy for the criminal that is too readily and easily awakened. There are exceptions, of course, where ill-health follows conviction and the strain of imprisonment or hard labor. It is this general pardoning business which is calling for discussion. If a man commits a crime, is found guilty without a doubt, then he should pay the penalty. Those suffering for the crime are too soon forgotten in the zeal manifested to liberate the perpetrator. Society, property and life must be protected regardless of cost. This executive leniency to set aside judgments does not aid in checking crime, which is keeping pace with every moral and religious uplifting effort throughout this and every other State.—Winston Republican.

Civic Activities Among Women.

The co-operation of civic associations with municipal officers has become a well established feature of our local governments and in this field of endeavor women may rightfully find scope for the exercise of their talents and their ideals. There are many points at which municipal government touches the everyday life of women. Education of children, playgrounds and parks the making a city a better and a pleasanter and more beautiful place to live in—all these should vitally interest them. For this reason the movement begun by the members of Washington's Twentieth Century Club looking to improvement in methods of street cleaning and collection of refuse, and enlisting the co-operation of householders in keeping their own premises clean and sightly, is in every way commendable.—Washington Herald.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Vegetables In England.

Until the end of the reign of Henry VIII., according to the historian, Hume, no carrots, turnips or other edible roots were produced in England. The few that were used were imported, and the state papers contain numerous references to the dispatch of messengers to the continent for rare vegetables and salads to grace the table at important royal banquets. Cucumbers also were unknown until the sixteenth century, and celery owes its introduction in England to the French marshal, Tallard, who was imprisoned in England after his defeat by Marlborough. Broccoli and cauliflowers came from Cyprus in the seventeenth century, and the potato, taken to England by Sir Walter Raleigh about 1584, was not in general use until 1663, when the Royal society directed attention to it and recommended its cultivation.

The Flame of Destiny.

During the course of conversation between two ladies in a hotel parlor one said to the other, "Are you married?"

"No, I am not," replied the other. "Are you?"

"No," was the reply. "I, too, am on the single list," adding: "Strange that two such estimable women as ourselves should have been overlooked in the great matrimonial market! Now, that lady," pointing to another who was passing, "has been widowed four times, two of her husbands having been cremated. That woman," she continued, "is plain and uninteresting, and yet she has them to burn."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Why She Didn't Appeal.

The woman with the prematurely gray hair was telling them about her case in court.

"I didn't win," she said, "and I won't appeal. I don't care. I'll let it go."

"Why?" asked her listeners.

"Why, because if it never comes up again I won't have to tell my age. Don't you know, the judge looks hard at you and says, 'How old are you?' when you go into court. And if you don't tell the truth you'll be jailed for perjury."—Philadelphia Press.

Barratry.

In English law the term "barratry" signifies an offense committed by the captain of a ship in embezzling or injuring goods committed to his care. In Scotland the word means the acceptance of a bribe by a judge in return for his verdict and used also to stand for the sending out of money from the country to purchase benefices from the pope. The term is derived from the Italian "baratiare"—to truck or bargain.
