THE RIGHT KIND OF FARMING

Tobacco, Cotton, Hogs, Wheat, Oats, Corn and Potatoes.

Mr. Editor:

In my canvassing trips a few days ago it was my pleasure to spend the night with Mr. Will McArthur and in looking around over his farm, I found an example worthy of imitation by our best farmers. In fact all his neighbors point to him as the only farmer in their section, yet none imitate or profit by the example set them. In his fields he had a moderate crop of tobacco, cotton, corn, oats, cane and potatoes, none to the extent of over cropping, but all well worked and in the highest state of cultivation. In the pasture he had ninety-six head of hogs, some fine milk cows, and a few beefs for the winter.

In his crib was plenty of old corn and fodder and oats and in the ginny was 167 bushels of nice wheat just thrashed out and nicely put away. He has several large grape vines and sells much of their product, a fine orchard and sells many bushels of peaches and apples. His good lady had over 300 of the finest chickens I have ever seen. It was a sight to see Grandpa Starkey feeding them, with the wheat screening.

And when I went to the table and partook of that home-made flour good brown ham gravy, fat chicken, and Jersey butter and every vegetable and fruit of the season, I said to myself this is living 9 days to the week.

Here is an example that will do to point to. Our people have it in their own hands to solve the living problem, trust questions, or any other question. Our lands and climate will produce all that mankind could ask and by a proper diversification, none of the crops would be overproduced and higher prices could be maintained. I sincerely hope that our people may be stimulated to the necessity of adopting such methods of farming.

J. R. Hutchings.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

Good Attendance of Farmers and Interesting Topics Discussed.

Between one and two hundred farmers gathered here in court house today to attend the farmers institute, and it was a time of interest and profit to them. The institute is in charge of Prof. Franklin Sherman, Jr., of the State Department of Agriculture, and with him are two practical farmers, Mr. W. J. Petree, of Stokes county and Dr. W. J. McClendon, of Anson. These gentlemen deliver addresses on soil improvement, cultivation and rotation of crops, and other subjects, that are helpful to the farmers. They give examples from their own experience, as well as from others, as to best methods of farming.

Two sessions of the institutes are held, morning and afternoon, but owing to the crowded columns of The Reflector today we have to defer a fuller report. The same gentleman will hold an institute at Grimesland Friday.

What the Rain Brought.

We are reliably informed that during the heavy rain Tuesday a live alligator was seen on the street. This morning Mr. T. R. Moore also had a turtle that was captured in one of the ditches.

The Reflector does job work.

GREENVILLE FLOODED.

Editor Reflector.

The scene that was presented on Dickinson avenue Tuesday afternoon would cause a stranger to believe that Greenville had canals for public use, instead of paved streets. During the rain fully two hundred yards of this main thoroughfare was completely submerged by a flood of water that was destined for the sewers, but somehow missed its destination and ran down the street.

Venice is famed as the "City of Water," but on days like that of Tuesday Greenville has Venice "skinned a city block." It was a case of water here, water there, and water everywhere. So completely were the streets blocked with water that the nearest route to the A. C. L. depot for a pedestrian was to follow Fifth street to the railroad, and then "hit" the cross ties.

Some cities have swimming pools for the benefit of its citizens, but Greenville is the only one that can boast of the ability to turn its paved streets into pools on rainy days.

The scene on the street near the Presbyterian church about 2 p. m. was a unique one. The shouts of the boys in bathing; the barks of swimming dogs, the splash of horses fording the street, and the occasional "chug, chug," of some rash pedestrian who undertook to wade through the surf, were enough to cause people to wonder why the sewerage contractors were so kind as to provide a swimming pool without additional cost to the town.

I have noticed, Mr. Editor, that you have been advocating the building of bath houses along the river. Now, don't you think it would be a better plan to build them at the corner of Dickinson avenue and Corey's lane? Or perhaps a more paying proposition would be the building of a flat boat to ferry passengers from Greene street to the N. & S. depot. Oodles of money could be made on days like Tuesday. Let somebody take up this alluring proposition.

C.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 28, 1909.

It was not any near-rain Tuesday, but the real article.

Dr. Elliot, like Congressman Cowles, must have been talking mainly to hear himself.

In court records it is not unusual for a man to be pulled for beating his wife, but here is a case in which the table was turned. In Wake county Superior court Judge Allen sent a woman to the workhouse for six months for beating her husband. In addition to treating her husband bad, the woman conducted a blind tiger.

The Greenville tobacco market will open next Monday, and a word of advice The Reflector would give the farmers is, do not crowd the market early in the season. August will be a month of warm weather, when tobacco will be hard to handle safely, and if the farmers crowd the buyers during that month it will result in a glutted market which means low prices. It is better to sell the crop slowly, especially early in the season, and hold back for cooler weather. This is the plan the farmers should follow if they want satisfactory prices for their tobacco.

One of Greenville's greatest needs is better drainage, and it is a matter to which the aldermen should give immediate attention. Under the system of street work that has long been the custom here, the centres of the streets have grown constantly higher with little or no attention being given to proper grade or drainage. As a result of this, portions of the town are flooded with every large rain, doing much damage not only to the streets but also to the property of citizens. It creates expense to the town to repair the streets after every rain, and also makes the town in danger of damage suits by people who are injured. The safest and least expensive alternative is to remedy the trouble with proper drainage.

A good newspaper is an advertisement for the community in which it is published. It works daily to further the interests of that community and "boost it up." Still some of the biggest merchants and firms in the town never carry a line of advertising in the local papers. They leave their papers to depend on outside support. This applies to New Bern as well as to some other towns in this state.—New Bern Sun.

CHINESE ART.

Two Distinct Methods in Depicting Scenes of Nature and Life.

Chinese paintings are subjects that until very recently were but slightly known to occidental students of art. Yet recently light on this subject shows that some of the Chinese artists as early as the first crusade had created paintings not only cleverly drawn and masterfully colored, but filled with that subtle artistic sense that is universally understood and appreciated by cultured mankind.

Chinese temples have furnished the best examples of Chinese paintings, just as the great cathedrals of Europe have given to western civilization the best pictures from the brushes of the Italian, French and Flemish artists. These paintings are mostly Chinese landscapes, although the hunting picture of Chao Meng Fu, called "Mongols Hunting," is one of the most famous Chinese pictures. Nature studies, especially of birds, are frequent.

But the most singular and interesting point about Chinese painting is perhaps the fact that the two distinct methods were used. The first was called the "kakemono" method, in which the view was supposed to be the same as if one stood on the top of a hill and looked down on the painting, in place of standing in front about on a level.

This method, coupled with some queer views as to perspective values, is what causes Chinese paintings to have their weird appearance to foreign eyes when the beholder has never studied Chinese art methods.

The "kakemono" method is sometimes used, and in these paintings the method used is practically the same as in our own schools of art. The finer elements of painting, such as feeling, repression, color schemes, etc., are said by art critics to be superbly demonstrated by a number of the finer Chinese artists.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Another Prescription.

The middle aged man who was giving himself a half hour's walk before breakfast had taken his ten-year-old boy along. "Papa," asked the lad, "do you like such a long walk as this?"

"Not particularly."

"What do you take it for?"

"I thought you knew. I am doing it by the advice of Dr. Ringgold. He says it is the best exercise in the world and every man ought to devote half an hour before breakfast, if he has the leisure, to—"

"Honk, honk!"

Heeding the warning, they stepped out of the way of a huge touring car, which whizzed past them at the rate of thirty miles an hour. The man who was steering it waved his hand in greeting, and the middle aged man responded rather stiffly.

"Why, he knows you, doesn't he, papa?" asked the boy.

"Yes."

"Who is he?"

"Dr. Ringgold."—Youth's Companion.

Small Mercies.

The young English tourist who had been staying for a week at a hotel in the Scottish highlands for the purpose of taking advantage of the fishing was at the end of that time rather inclined to think that the fishing had taken advantage of him. He had caught nothing, and his expenses, of course, had been none the less heavy.

On the last day of his stay, however, he landed a fine salmon.

"Well, Donald," he said to a canny Scot at the hotel as he proudly surveyed the fish, "it's a nice catch, and so it ought to be. It has cost me £15 at least."

"Aweel," replied Donald calmly, "it's a gr-great blessin' ye didna catch any mair!"

Mme. Modjeska's Dramatic Josh.

There are some good stories told about Mme. Modjeska, the famous Polish actress. Perhaps the most amusing, however, is that which relates how she joshed a private audience that had been beseeching her to recite something in her native language. Demurring at first, the famous actress at last gave way, and the audience sat spellbound as she dramatically uttered unintelligible words. Great applause was the reward for the effort, but what the feelings of the people must have been when they learned that she had merely recited the numbers from one to a hundred in Polish it is scarcely possible to describe.—London Tit-Bits.

Where Women May Not Pray.

In some parts of the world the women are not even allowed to pray. Certain Hindoo congregations deny their women this privilege, and among the Ainus women can pray only in very rare cases as the deputies of their husbands. The natives of Madagascar, however, stretch a point and permit their women to intercede with the powers of evil, but prayer to their supreme being is strictly a masculine prerogative.
