VALUE OF FARMERS' INSTITUTES.

IMPORTANT TOPICS DISCUSSED BY PRACTICAL MEN.

Better Methods Along Intelligent Lines Bring Larger Profits to the Farmers.

The farmers' institute held at the court house in Greenville Wednesday, under the direction of the State Department of Agriculture, again emphasizes some facts that deserve attention throughout the county. Within the twenty years that tobacco has been cultivated in this section, the problems that the average farmer has had to meet have multiplied and become increasingly urgent. Farm practice has undergone a material change, labor has been unequal to the demand upon it, and the conditions of production generally have become more difficult to merge into results that would satisfy reasonable expectation from the abundance of our natural advantages. In the meantime, the average farmer in the county has advanced in a knowledge of his profession. He is better equipped in his experience with varied crops and in his familiarity with results of scientific investigation. The outcome must be in favor of a wise solution of such problems as appear to him of special importance.

One of the chief advantages of these farmers' institutes lies in centering attention upon some of these questions. Such, for instance, as the means of restoring or preserving soil fertility, or of controlling insect pests, or of treating diseases of crops, or of perfecting a given product to a point of greater profit—all questions in which every farmer is vitally interested. The institute not only assembles experiences along these lines, but often shows a newly blazed path by some earnest worker. Such a farmers' institute is not a rehashing of theories by a lot of kid-glove artists.

Prof. Sherman, who told the institute how to combat insect enemies, states that the department has a collection of about forty thousand specimens. Prof. Sherman is not a farmer. He is an entomologist. He knows a bug at sight, knows his life history, knows how to circumvent that bug when the farmer's crop is about to be destroyed or damaged. That touches one of the greatest problems of agriculture. The tobacco grower has to contend with the horn worm, the flea-beetle, and the bud worm; the trucker is busied with a multitude of insects, and the fruit grower's product reaches a profitable market over the track of the sprayer.

The San Jose scale would wipe out orchards by wholesale but for the entomologist. The spread of typhoid fever will be greatly diminished when the incubating medium of the housefly is treated as advised by Prof. Sherman. Of the two hundred farmers who heard this talk, not one is immune from embarrassment by some of these pests of the field, the barn, and the home.

Dr. McLendon, of Anson county, has had the pleasure of building up a run down farm. That's practical enough for you, if you've ever seen it tried. Having brought his farm—1011 acres sold at auction 24 years ago for $850.00—from a stage of fertility that wouldn't grow rye tall enough to be cradled, to its present uniform productiveness of a bale of cotton per acre, he speaks entertainingly of soil improvement and cotton culture. He tells of soil-building by deep plowing coupled with humus-making. It is a story of crop rotation and a gradually deepening soil filled with vegetable matter. It is also a story of "an appetite for grass," for the doctor grows some stock and something to feed them with. By making his own supplies his cotton is a surplus crop, clear even of the fertilizer bill. This is in sharp contrast to the practice that sends out of the State annually 35 million dollars of the 50 million brought in by North Carolina products, as it is also with the methods of that neighbor who "hoped with three more showers to get six round grains and three worms to the nubbin."

Following the broad lines indicated by Dr. McLendon, the talk by Mr. W. A. Petree was largely devoted to the general principles of farm improvement. It was noticeable that while these gentlemen spoke from the viewpoint of different specialists, Dr. McLendon from that of a cotton farmer and Mr. Petree from that of a tobacco grower, the same general scheme ran through the methods of each—soil improvement by practically the same methods, farm practice modified by local conditions; a deepening of the soil, the addition of humus, and a rotation of crops adapted to the locality and to the special objects in view.

After fifty years' experience with tobacco, Mr. Petree is frank to say that he does not know all about it. Like Dr. McLendon, he has gone about his work with a mind "open to conviction and inspiration." This is the attitude of the experimenter and investigator. It is the attitude of every seeker after truth. This sort of a man has use for all his faculties. He observes, compares, theorizes, tries out, tests other men's ideas, appropriates what is applicable and best. By such means is compensation.

MOONLIGHT MERRIMENT

Young People Have Delightful Trip on the Tar.

On Monday night last, the young men of Greenville gave a delightful moonlight sail on old Tar river in honor of Miss Kathleen Long, of Graham, whose visit here came to an end Wednesday morning.

Promptly at 9:00 p. m. the fastenings were loosened and the little launch "Myrtle" sailed from the Old Dominion wharf. After a trip of about twelve miles down the river a stop was made and a delightful luncheon and watermelon feast was enjoyed. A few minutes after eleven, the realization dawned upon the party that it was time to turn back since the remainder of the sail was up stream.

During the sail, the Green Lemon Quartette, an organization of home boys, rendered several beautiful selections. The most pleasant feature of the evening, however, was the singing of Miss Long.

The night was ideal. There seemed to be two moons—one drifting along among the fleecy clouds overhead, the other playing hide and seek with the shadows of the trees in the river below. The whole party appeared to be infected with the moonlight and all were half sadly silent, as they listened to the familiar old songs which were so sweetly sung.

Those who made up the party were:

Miss Kathleen Long, of Graham, with Frank Wilson.

Miss Mary Shelburn with Ames Brown.

Miss Lillian Burch with Tom Dupree.

Miss Jamie Bryan with Will Lipscomb.

Miss Margaret Blow with Willie Wilson.

Miss Susie Warren with Cecil Cobb.

MISS JENKINS ENTERTAINS.

Reported for Reflector.

Miss Roland Jenkins most charmingly entertained at progressive conversation Wednesday evening at the home of her mother, on Evans street, in honor of her cousin, Miss Hilda Knight, of Hassell. The guests began arriving about 8:30 and were received at the front door by Miss Roland Jenkins assisted by Mr. Lee Shelburn. They were then ushered into the parlor by Miss Hilda Knight, assisted by Mr. Percy Forbes. The parlor was beautifully decorated with Phlox and Hydrangers. The progressive conversation consisted of 10 conversations, each lasting about 10 minutes. For the most charming entertainers at these conversations a beautiful box of writing paper was given. The prize was won by Miss Ruth Cobb, who most gracefully presented the same to Miss Knight. The next contest was a guessing contest and was won by Miss Florence Blow, who also presented the prize, a beautiful fan, to Miss Knight. The booby, a pack of cigarettes, was won by Mr. Oscar Greene, another young gentlemen received a real lemon. At a late hour refreshments were served by Misses Martha and Bessie Harding, which was very much enjoyed by all present. The guests departed for their respective homes declaring Miss Jenkins a most charming hostess, and wishing Miss Knight a pleasant time during her stay in our beautiful little city.

of property in Cuba, following this with a passing around of the hat for contributions. A visitor standing near said he saw the same man and heard him tell the same tale in another part of the country about four years ago. So this is his method of going around and beating a living out of the public.

We're always prone to condone the offences of those we love and find excuse for their conduct. Especially is this true in the case of a devoted mother or wife. The other day in Illinois a husband who objected to the continued presence of another man in his home was shot dead by the fellow who had supplanted him in the affections of his wife. The public was so outraged by the act that lynching was suggested. The man who invaded the home and killed the husband has a wife, and notwithstanding he deserted her she finds excuse for him, lays all the blame on the other woman and is standing by him. He was a good husband and father, she says, until the woman put a spell on him, etc., etc. This wife deserves a better husband, one more worthy of such devotion; but sometimes the more worthless the man the more devoted the woman.—Statesville Landmark.

The infinite wisdom and goodness of the Almighty is well illustrated by the fact that he removed from this earth Judge Cloud long before the advent of the automobile. Judge Cloud was a fine man, a great man and a splendid judge, but he could not stand undue noise; whistling was an abomination in his sight; it set him on fire; his nerves could not stand the noise. Once he had a flock of geese arrested in a country town where he was holding court on account of the "hissing" they were making. And this is why we say the infinite goodness and mercy of the Lord is past comprehension, for were Judge Cloud living in this day, with all these horrible noises made by automobiles, he would do murder with a clear conscience. He would have an attack of "confusional insanity"—several of them Greensboro Record.

Hanging of a Peer.

May 5 is celebrated as the anniversary of the last occasion on which an English peer was executed for murder. The peer was Laurence Shirley, fourth earl of Ferrers, who shot his steward and was tried for the offense by his peers in Westminster hall, April 16, 1760, and universally condemned, in spite of the plea of occasional insanity. On the eventful morning he set forth on his journey from the Tower to Tyburn dressed in his best suit of light clothes, embroidered in silver and driven in his own landau, drawn by six horses. It is said that he was the first to suffer by the new drop, just then introduced in place of the barbarous cart ladder and three cornered gibbet and as a concession to his rank he was hanged with a silken cord.—London Chronicle.

Australian Grasshoppers.

Here is something funny. In Western Australia, where domestic servants are almost unobtainable and housewives do nearly all their own work, husbands are known as grasshoppers. The connection is not obvious, but may be explained after the manner of other households much nearer than those at the antipodes. Wives who are their own servants are compelled to recuperate at the seaside, and consequently Western Australia lords of creation in their absence prepare their own meals and do other domestic duties. Locally husbands thus employed have received the name grasshoppers as the masculine for the more familiar word grass widow, being since applied to the deserted wife.—Brisban Herald.

OLD HOARDING PLACES.

Secret Drawers and Hidden Nooks in Which Money Was Stored.

It was the common opinion of writers on economics in the seventeenth century that much currency was hidden in ceilings, behind wainscots and in secret drawers. Hogarth in his print of "The Inheritance," forming one of the set of "The Rake's Progress," has depicted a shower of coins falling from the ceiling of the room where a workman had accidentally disturbed the molding. Old cabinets and secretaries of any size have usually one or two secret drawers or cupboards, often most ingeniously contrived. It is surprising how well these secret corners elude detection, even when their existence may be expected or inferred. Some years ago the wife of a Kentish laborer was breaking up an old chest of drawers when she discovered a secret compartment nearly filled with gold coins of the reigns of William III. and George II. The chest had been purchased for a few shillings about twenty years previously, and the fact that this little store of coins had not been discovered earlier was all the more strange, because in all probability the drawers had been several times repaired.

A curious list of hiding places for money is afforded by two old books of memoranda and receipts relating to the Fulham Pottery works in 1693 and 1698. There are 240 guineas in a wooden box in a hole under the fireplace in the garret. There are 460 more in two covered receptacles under the fireplace in the old laboratory. Behind the door of the little parlor there is a can containing some milled money. Two boxes full of money were placed in two holes of the great furnace, from which they were to be drawn by a long, crooked iron standing behind the kitchen door. In all ten or a dozen such hiding places are named, and the money was variously contained in boxes, bags, cans, pots and purses.

There can be little doubt that the practice of hoarding money and valuables in private houses gave great encouragement to crime. A glance through the pages of early volumes of the Annual Register, largely devoted to the chronicles of crime, reveals a number of apparently hastily planned robberies, which resulted in rich hauls out of all proportion to the occasion. Some thieves get in at the garret window of a house in Devonshire square and carry off from the owner's bedchamber an iron chest containing cash, notes and other valuables to the amount of £10,000. Two men enter the custom house at Limerick and in a few minutes carry off cash to the amount of about £1,800. Such is the character of the crimes which were then most successful—a bold, quick bid for the treasure chest, which was almost certain to be well stocked and very often convenient for removal by two or three thieves acting in concert.—W. A. Atkinson in Chambers' Journal.

Gladstone and a Hat.

The most famous hat incident in the house of commons took place when Mr. Gladstone was premier for the third time and had to intervene on a point of order after a division had been called. The rules require that in such circumstances the member addressing the chair must do so with his hat on, and Mr. Gladstone could not find his hat. In despair he grabbed that of a colleague, which was at least four sizes too small for him, and the spectacle of the minute headgear rocking about on Mr. Gladstone's massive head was one that few who saw it will never forget.—London Globe.

Surprising, What Kodol Will Do

For you, when you need it. But the longer you neglect indigestion, the more you will suffer before Kodol can restore Good Digestion.

And, of course, indigestion if neglected long enough, brings on serious diseases in which Kodol cannot benefit you. Some of these there is no help for at all.

There are, in fact, very few ailments which cannot be traced directly to impure blood. And impure blood is always due to a disordered stomach.

Use Kodol and prevent Nervous Dyspepsia.

Kodol will effectually assist Nature to secure a complete restoration of good digestion. It does this by at once digesting all food in the stomach and keeping it digested, until the stomach is rested and can resume its own work. Kodol removes the cause—and the effect quickly removes itself.

When it is recalled that Apoplexy, Heart Disease, Cancer—and even Consumption—are due to poor digestion and poisons thus transmitted to the blood, and throughout the system—the importance of maintaining good digestion is at once realized.

We knew what Kodol would do before ever the first bottle was sold. If we did not know just what it will do, we would not guarantee it the way we do.

It is easy for you to prove Kodol—the next (or the first) time you have an attack of indigestion. And you will certainly be surprised at the results. It is perfectly harmless.

There can be no harm in trying something that may do you a great deal of good—when it costs you nothing if it doesn't.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 2 1/2 times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.
