STATE NEWS.

Happenings of Interest in North Carolina.

A pathetic death was that of little Leona Stephens, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stephens, of the vicinity of Huntersville, who was brought to this city suffering from a grain of corn which had become lodged in her wind-pipe. She was taken to the Charlotte Sanatorium where a skilled surgeon performed a delicate operation about 10 o'clock in the morning, removing the foreign substance and for awhile the child seemed to be breathing more easily. A turn for the worse came, however, and she died in the afternoon. It is understood that thromatic pneumonia had set in while the grain was in her wind-pipe, though the official diagnosis was not learned.—Charlotte Observer.

Balked by the Phone.

A chicken peddler who comes down in this section from Charlotte went back one day last week a very much disgusted man. He made a trip down in the southern part of the county, but for some reason could not buy a chicken. In telling about it he did not say why the women folks turned against him and would not sell their poultry, but he cursed the telephone system which spread the news. For sixteen miles, he said, not a chicken could be bought for there was a 'phone in every house, big or little, and the news of his coming went ahead, so that before he could even stop his horse or tell his business at a house, a woman would be in the front door singing out, "No you can't buy any chickens here!" He was disgusted with county 'phones.—Monroe Journal.

Trade Report.

Richmond, Va. Aug. 12, 1909. Bradstreet's Saturday will say for Richmond and vicinity:

Trade generally is satisfactory for a between season period and the tendency is towards improvement. Dealers in practically all lines anticipate an active trade as the fall season advances. Dry goods and notions are fairly active. Shipments of vegetables to northern markets are up to the normal. In North Carolina some of the 1909 crop of tobacco is being offered and prices are reported equal to those of last year. Recent rains have improved crop conditions generally, however, the corn crop in Virginia is reported below the average. Retail trade is quiet. Collections show improvement.

Died in Baltimore.

The infant son, aged about 18 months, of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Tunstall, which some days ago was taken to a Baltimore hospital for an operation, died there Wednesday night. Mrs. Tunstall and her mother were there with the child and will reach home with the remains this evening or in the morning. The funeral will take place Friday afternoon in Cherry Hill cemetery.

Gives Class Sail.

Wednesday evening Mrs. E. B. Higgs, one of teachers of Memorial Baptist Sunday school, gave her class a delightful sail on Mr. W. S. Moye's launch. They went several miles up the river and had lunch and ruit on board.

ROCHDALE ITEMS.

Rochdale, N. C., Aug. 10, 1909.

Master Mack Smith went to his uncle's, J. R. J. Joyner Saturday evening and returned Sunday evening.

Misses Rosa and Ellen Smith went to Mount Herman in Greene county to attend an ice cream supper last week.

Miss Mattie Little returned from B. P. Willoughby's Sunday.

Miss Agnes Smith returned from Snow Hill Sunday evening.

The farmers are nearly all through curing tobacco in our section.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith Haywood Smith and David Smith and Misses Martha Belle and Jessie Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Smith, E. S. Normon, Jasper Joyner and Miss Mertie Flanagan were at Sunday school and at C. E. McLawhorn's Sunday evening.

Misses Rosa and Ellen Smith went to Haywood Smith's Monday on a visit.

Lloyd Smith showed us an ear of corn of the present crop that is 15 inches long. It grew on his farm in Smithtown.

To the great disappointment of a good many people Mr. and Mrs. C. E. McLawhorn received notice that Rev. S. P. Speigle would not hold the protracted meeting the week after third Sunday, but would hold it the week after fifth Sunday. We hope all will take notice that the meeting will not commence until the fifth Sunday in this month.

Two Remarkable Men.

Mr. Duke Allsbrook, of Scotland Neck, is now in his 89th year. He is possibly the only living man in the county that served in the civil war and had two sons that served with him now living. Their names are Wilson Allsbrook, aged 65 years, and Bennett Allsbrook, aged 67 years. They are all in very good health and have a fair chance of many more years of usefulness.

Another similar case to the above has been called to our attention from Bertie county. Col. Stephen A. Noffleet is 89 years old and has two sons, now living, that served in the civil war.

These are two most remarkable men and families and if any other county has a better record we would like to have it.—Scotland Neck Commonwealth.

Invention to Displace Pneumatic Tires.

Mr. D. M. Coiner, of Statesville, has invented a spring wheel—or a spring for wheels—that is designed to displace pneumatic tires. Springs are placed in a wheel, radiating from the hub and so arranged that they take place of pneumatic tires and will give better service. The invention is designed primarily for automobiles but can be used on other vehicles.

Mr. Coiner has applied for a patent and if his invention proves a success, as he believes and his friends hope it will, it will prove a valuable one and should bring Mr. Coiner a large sum.—Statesville Landmark.

N. & S. Train Delayed.

For the last two evenings the west bound Norfolk & Southern train has been considerably delayed. The trouble was due to a wreck which occurred near Plymouth in which four cars of a freight train were derailed and demolished, and some damage done to the track.

STRIKE AT AYDEN.

Trouble Among Employees of Lumber Company.

Ayden, N. C., Aug. 12th, 1909. —There was much excitement here yesterday over a strike that took place among the employees of the Ayden Lumber Co. It seemed that a man named Charlie McLean, an Englishman, who had been at work several months for the company, was the leader of the strike and had induced employees to join in a demand for an increase of wages. The demand was made and refused by the company, whereupon all the men except McLean started back to their work. McLean took the view that if the demand was refused the men should quit work, and when they took the other view and started back to work he undertook by force to drive them off and did frighten several away.

Warrants were issued for McLean and another man named Lancaster, but when an officer went to serve these McLean had skipped, Lancaster was given a hearing before Mayor Barwick Wednesday night, but no evidence against him was developed and the case against him was dismissed.

All is quiet now and the other men have returned to work.

Is Honored Still Another Time.

The many friends of Mrs. Kate R. Beckwith in this county and Hyde will doubtless be pleased to learn she has been elected lady principal by the trustees of the East Carolina Teachers' Training School, at Greenville, N. C.

The News feels confident the board made no mistake in their selection, for she is a woman well fitted for the position.

Mrs. Beckwith is the widow of the late S. T. Beckwith, a talented lawyer of this city. She has taught here and was at one time a member of the Louisville Female College corps of teachers. She will add strength to the faculty of the State's new institution.—Washington News.

Ex-Governor Jarvis Here.

Among the visitors in the city is ex-Governor T. J. Jarvis, of Greenville. He is always a welcome visitor, for he has many strong friends here.

Governor Jarvis is taking a deep interest in the East Carolina Teachers' Training School at Greenville, and is especially pleased with the handsome buildings that have been erected. He feels that the institution will do great good for the educational interests of the State and expects that there will be a large patronage for the school.—Raleigh News & Observer.

Working for Railroad.

Several citizens of Washington passed through here this morning going to Raleigh to attend a meeting in the interest of building a railroad from Mattamuskeet, in Hyde county, to Washington.

BLACK JACK ITEMS.

Black Jack, N. C., Aug. 12, 1909.

J. S. Dixon and J. A. Clark went to Greenville Thursday.

Misses Bettie and Janie Harper spent Saturday night and Sunday with Miss Bertha Coward, near Salem.

Misses Clara and Mattie Mills spent Saturday night and Sunday with Miss Lena Dixon.

Miss Zora Edwards was the guest of Miss Martha Williams Saturday night and Saturday.

There were several from here attended Sunday school at Galloway's school house Sunday morning.

Miss Maggie Clark spent last week with her sister, Mrs. Elijah Mills, near Simpson.

The farmers are about through curing tobacco. The crop is fairly good in this section.

Some of the farmers have commenced pulling fodder.

What the Editor Cannot Do.

Don't think because the reporter sees you get on the train he ought to know who you are and where you are going, or if he sees you greet some friends that he knows who they are and where they are from. We aim to get up all the news, but you may be the one we don't happen to know. We try to become familiar with names and faces, if possible. But during the years past we have been to church and failed to see you there; we have hung around the town pump, but you weren't there; we have loafed on the street, even risked our reputation on back streets on dark nights, but you weren't all there. And we'll be hanged if we know where to find you all. So if you are going or coming, or know anybody cutting up queer capers, let us know.—Norton (Kansas) Telegram.

An Old Man's Lesson.

We met a poor old man today who is dependent on his relatives, and they don't like the enforced task of taking care of him. "Had I eaved 10 cents a day during my younger years," he said, "I would have been independent. I might have saved a dollar a day during all my working career and not have stunted myself in the least." This old man's experience is worth thinking about. The trouble with American men is that they waste dimes while looking for a million dollars. At the end of life they have neither the dime nor the million dollars.—Ex.

Making Money on the Farm.

Mr. George E. Ransom, one of Northampton's most extensive and successive farmers, shipped a car load of fat beef cattle from Rich Square to the Richmond market last Saturday. Mr. Ransom is a son of the late Senator Ransom who made money farming, and is following the footsteps of his distinguished father in his love for the farms.—Roanoke-Chowan Times.

A Greenville Girl.

Miss Maude Evans, a graduate of the Petersburg Woman's college, has been elected to a position in the faculty of the flourishing Pikeville High school.—Goldsboro Headlight.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Baptist church will meet with Mrs. D. J. Whichard Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

C. T. Munford, who with Mrs. Munford and their son, Charlie, were with the Gattis party on the thirty-five days trip through out the West, has returned home and says it was the trip of his life. Mrs. Munford and Charlie stopped in Wilson to spend a few days with relatives.

The umpire holds an unenviable job, and is lucky if he comes out at the end of the season with whole bones.

We extend sympathy to Editor W. K. Jacobson, of the Washington Progress, upon the death of his mother which occurred a few days ago.

Clayton beat Durham out in the race for the orphanage to be established by the Pythians of the State. Durham offered 50 acres of land and $6,000 cash, while Clayton's offer was 40 acres of land and $7,500 cash. Work will begin on the orphanage in a short while.

The present price of tobacco ought to convince the farmers that it would pay them far better to raise less of it and put more acres in food crops. It is hard to break them from the habit of raising the so-called money crops, but when the money derived therefrom is not enough to cover the expense of making the crop, it is time for a change. Farmers are certainly not going to better their condition to any great extent until they raise all their home supplies. They are in much better position to stand low prices for money crops when they have well-filled smoke houses and barns.

Humbuggery Run to Seed.

This talk of "downward revision" of the tariff is so laughable in its absurdity that few people or party organs, unless just enough to save their faces, have taken it up at all. "There was a great rush of importing merchants in New York, Philadelphia and other cities," notes The Philadelphia Record, "to get their woolen goods and other textile fabrics, including silks and hosiery with many other articles, through the customhouse before the president's signature was affixed to the fatal tariff. At the same time goods to the value of millions were taken out of bonded warehouses to escape payment of the increased duties. Not less than twenty-five or thirty ocean-going steamers laden with goods arrived with all speed just in time to be too late. Such is the answer of the business world to the fool pleas that this is a downward revision of the tariff. Were the duties reduced, as its authors pretend, the importing merchants would have waited to the last hour in order to obtain advantage of the reductions."

The American people proverbially love to be humbugged but it will be hard to humbug them with quite such a flimsy plea as "downward revision" transparently is.—Charlotte Observer.

Does the Lord answer prayer every time? Perhaps not, but he does when it is right, but even then it is not exactly what is prayed for. "Once upon a time" three excellent gentlemen were running for mayor of Greensboro. At that time no party lines were drawn; it was an open fight. A well known minister of the city, evidently having a rather poor opinion of one of the candidates and a most exalted opinion of another, prayed on Sunday night before the election on Monday that a godly man, a good man might be chosen as the city's chief executive. No names were mentioned, but a good many in the congregation imagined they knew what he meant. When the election was pulled off the candidate so strongly opposed by the minister won out handsomely. The next morning the successful candidate and the minister met in the postoffice, when the newly elected mayor said to him that the Lord certainly did answer his prayer; that he prayed that the best man might be elected mayor—"and he was; I was chosen in answer to your prayer," he said. The minister acknowledged the doubtful compliment and both have been the best of friends ever since.—Greensboro Record.

When the McKinley bill was passed in 1890 everything went up. The price of living increased amazingly, and two years following the enactment of the McKinley bill there was elected a Democratic president and congress as a reminder to the Republican party that there is a limit to the taxation which the consumer will stand, but the people's memories are short sometimes and they would soon forget the rapid rise. If prices continue to soar the housewife will have much to do with the election next fall, and the greatest campaign argument will be at the counters of the retail stores throughout the United States.—Asheboro Courier.

The Charlotte Observer suggests that the canning industry is not engaged in as extensively as might be in the South. The same thing is true of a number of other industries, but perhaps it is particularly true of the canning industry. A lot of stuff is allowed to go to waste every year. It ought to be saved.—Greensboro Telegram.

MANY SUDDEN DEATHS FROM POISONOUS RHEUMATISM.

If Uric Acid is allowed to stay in the system sudden death can scarcely be averted. If any sufferer will go at once to J. W. Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know, this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 2 1/2 times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

A MEAL WITH A MOOR

The Repast Began With Green Tea Served In Glasses.

FOOD EATEN WITH FINGERS.

Table Manners in a Moorish Gentleman's House—A Particular Mark of Favor by the Host to His Guests That is Not Always Appreciated.

During my stay in Fez I took every opportunity of gaining a closer insight into the domestic life of the inhabitants, and for that reason, writes Lawrence Harris in the London Graphic, I heartily accepted an invitation to dine with Abdullah el Fast, the minister for foreign affairs.

On arriving at his home I was ushered into a large room in which were seated five or six guests of high rank. Abdullah took me by the hand and gravely introduced me to the company. A silken cushion was placed on the divan, upon which I seated myself.

The repast commenced with green tea served in small glasses. The custom of preparing this is peculiar to the country. To the principal native guest is given the honor of making the tea. In this case it was Raisuli, who, being under British protection, had been invited to dinner in my honor. He accepted the invitation to do the honors of the evening and ordered the negro to place the native brass tray in front of where he sat cross legged on the divan. The methods of proceeding are not such as would recommend themselves to an English tea party.

Measuring out the tea in his hand, he dropped it in the pot. The negro slave then poured boiling water over it. This was swilled around and the water poured off. The pot was then filled with huge lumps of loaf sugar, broken roughly from a sugar loaf, and a little mint was added. A small quantity of the concoction was poured into a glass, sipped and poured back again into the pot. This process was continued until the required delicacy of flavor was reached.

The company then drank the customary three glasses of this syrupy mixture, drawing it through their teeth with a sound like a horse drinking. As each glass was finished and replaced in the tray it was refilled and handed back by the "keeper of the pot," who was supposed to remember to whom each glass belonged. At a sign from the host the tray was removed, and another slave approached each person with a brass bowl, soap and towel and a bronze kettle of warm water. The guests washed their right hands preparatory to the dinner.

We all sat around a small table about six inches high, upon which was placed the dish. The courses were many and varied. As says the Hadith, "The blessing of God rests on the food taken with the fingers," so all good Mohammedans follow the words of their prophet. No knife must be used on bread, and the small round loaves are broken up and handed around. The tajin, or stew, is not difficult to manipulate, although the olives floating in argon oil slip through your fingers. Miniature tugs of war occur with your vis-a-vis in the effort to dismember a fowl or divide tough meat.

As a particular mark of favor the host will from time to time place before you a little titbit which he has torn off with his greasy fingers. However your stomach rebels against it, you have to swallow the morsel. During the meal the national dish of couscous is invariably served. This dish is made from broken grains of wheat specially prepared by the women. It is served piled up like a huge cone, with the meat on top. Each person scoops out his own little hole in the side and must not trespass on his neighbor's portion.

To the inexperienced it is difficult to manage the couscous without making an awful mess of it. The small grain must be judiciously compressed into a loose ball and then shot into the mouth with the back of the thumb. The Moors take extreme delight in watching the ineffectual efforts of Europeans who are in difficulties with their couscous. Moors are very great eaters, and little conversation is carried on during the meal. A bowl of water is passed from hand to hand for those who require drink. The last course finished, the bowl and water are once more requisitioned and the hands and mouth washed.

Troubles must come to all men, but those who are always looking for them will have the largest share.

BARRIE'S EARLY CAREER.

The Opposition He Encountered and His Friend the Tailor.

Among the confidences that J. M. Barrie has made concerning the early years of his career there is none more intimate or more enlightening than this bit, which adds the pathos of a story strangely in contrast with his own:

The malignancy of publishers could not turn me back. From the day on which I first tasted blood in the garret my mind was made up. There could be no hum-drum profession for me. Literature was my game. It was not highly thought of by those who wished me well. I remember being asked by two maiden ladies about the time I left the university what I was to be, and when I replied brazenly, "An author," they flung up their hands, and one exclaimed reproachfully, "And you an M. A.!" My mother's views at first were not dissimilar. For long she took mine jestingly as something I would grow out of, and afterward they hurt her so that I tried to give them up. To be a minister—that she thought was among the fairest prospects, but she was a very ambitious woman, and sometimes she would add, half scared at her appetite, that there were ministers who had become professors, "but it was not canny to think of such things."

I had only one person on my side, an old tailor, one of the fullest men I have known and quite the best talker. He was a bachelor (he told me all that is to be known about woman), a lean man, pallid of face, his legs drawn up when he walked as if he was ever carrying something in his lap. His walks were of the shortest, from the teapot on the hob to the board on which he stitched, from the board to the hob, and so to bed. He might have gone out had the idea struck him, but in the years I knew him, the last of his brave life, I think he was only in the open twice, when he "flitted"—changed his room for another hard by. I did not see him make these journeys, but I seem to see him now, and he is somewhat dizzy in the odd atmosphere. In one hand he carries a box iron. He raises the other, wondering what this is on his head. It is a hat. A faint smell of singed cloth goes by with him. This man had heard of my set of photographs of the poets and asked for a single sight of them, which led to our first meeting. I remember how he spread them out on his board and after looking long at them turned his gaze on me and said solemnly:

What can I do to be forever known And make the age to come my own?

These lines of Cowley were new to me, but the sentiment was not new, and I marveled how the old tailor could see through me so well. So it was strange to me to discover presently that he had not been thinking of me at all, but of his own young days, when that couplet sang in his head and he, too, had thirsted to set off for Grub street, but was afraid, and while he hesitated old age came, and then death, and found him grasping a box iron. —Argonaut.
