RAWLS CONVICTED

Of Liquor Selling—Sentenced Three Months on the Roads.

Durham, Aug. 23.—After three days' trial in the most fiercely fought retailing case the city has ever had, Judge Sykes this afternoon found the ex-hotel keeper guilty and sentenced him to three months on the county roads. The defense appealed and the bond was fixed at $200.

The tremendous speeches were heard in the closing of the case, the first by Attorney V. S. Bryant in defense of his client the other by City Attorney R. O. Everett, largely in defense of himself.

The defense in the beginning of the trial asked for the quashing of the warrant on the ground that the city attorney had held out inducements to the negro, Fernie Foster, to testify against the defendant, Joseph Rawls. In support of that motion, it introduced the affidavit of Foster declaring in direct terms that the city solicitor had made such a proposition to him. The issues shifted largely until that time when Judge Sykes denied that motion to quash and the case proceeded. The attitude of the prosecuting attorney Everett was much under discussion during the speeches of Messrs. Bramham and Bryant, and the answer to the reflection of each was stopped by the State's replying upon Foster's testimony in toto.—Raleigh News & Observer.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Reported for Reflector.

That was a merry making throng of children gathered together out at Mr. O. E. Warren's home in West Greenville Monday afternoon from 5 to 7, the occasion being the eleventh and ninth anniversaries of Misses May Acca and Lila Ruth Warren. On arriving the children registered their names and guessed the number of beans in a jar. Miss Annie Leonard Tyson guessing the exact number, 499, was awarded the prize, a pound of chocolates. After resting a few minutes the crowd scattered about over the large lawn, and the fun began, one crowd see-sawing, others playing flinch and other games, while others were swinging high in the air, but the biggest crowd hung around the "merry-go-around" and when the conductor hollered "All aboard for the next ride" such a scramble for seats, and when the big black engine got up full steam, the children were flying through the air at a rate of speed almost equal to Bleriot crossing the English channel in his airship. It almost looked like "Ocean View" without the ocean. After about two hours of such sport the crowd was seated on the east lawn where delicious ice cream and cake were served. Quite a number of beautiful little gifts were received. As the evening shadows gathered the merry crowd dispersed wishing their hostesses many happy returns of their birthday.

Four Pickerts Coming.

Those prime favorites among Greenville theatre goers, the Four Pickerts, will begin a three nights' engagement in the opera house on next Monday night, 30th. The Pickerts have a strong company this season, sixteen people, and is better than ever with strong plays and good specialties.

STATE NEWS.

Happenings of Interest in North Carolina.

Durham, Aug. 23.—Upper Wake and lower Durham are filled with out-raged neighbors who are on the trail of Hilman High, of Durham, who ran away Saturday with the fifteen-year-old daughter of James Markham, a well known tobacco planter. An uncle, F. S. Brown, in town today, said there will be quick work made of High if caught. The girl is his niece, and their unthinkable infatuation has crushed the parents.

Raleigh, Aug. 23.—Five charters were granted today, the most notable being to the A. A. Shuford Milling Company, of Hickory, capital $123,000, authorized, $80,000 subscribed for a cotton mill, incorporators A. A. Shuford and others. Other charters were as follows: Cochran Mantel and Novelty Company, Charlotte, capital $25,000, J. E. Cochran and others, for the manufacture of mantels and novelty woodwork. Cole Insurance and Realty Co. Randleman, capital $25,000, A. G. Newton and others; Overman, Williams & Company, Salisbury, capital $125,000, for dealing in and transporting wheat, corn, rye and other grains, hops and produce generally and to operate steamers to and from Jacksonville, Fla., and dealing in farm machinery, E. R. Overman and T. G. Williams, principal incorporators; Alamo Amusement Company, of Charlotte, vaudeville and moving pictures, capital $10,000, F. M. Simmons and others.

A fatal riot took place in Huntersville late Saturday evening which resulted in the death of one man, the critical injury of another and the wounding of four or five more. The meeting of the belligerents took place on the main street of Huntersville, and while knives were brandished and bullets were flying, many citizens of Huntersville stood along the streets watching the battle, which was of the proportions of a riot, and in which it seemed impossible for anybody to interfere without jeopardizing his own life. Reece Hucks, whose home is near Croft, is dead with several pistol wounds in his body; Charles T. Cox, father of one of the belligerents, and himself in the row, was seriously injured as a result of loss of blood, is in a critical condition; Lester Hucks, brother of the dead man, is at St. Peter's Hospital, receiving treatment; Ed. Cox, who shot Reece Hucks, is in the county jail, with numerous slashes and cuts; Mack Cox bullet wound in the arm, and Gilreath and Batte' Davis cut though not seriously.—Charlotte Chronicle.

Pactolus August 23rd, 1909.

Mrs. J. J. Satterthwaite delightfully entertained a number of her young friends Friday evening at her home from eight-thirty until eleven, in honor of the visiting young ladies, Misses Eliza and Mary Moore, of Greensboro and Miss Ward Moore, of Greenville. Delicious watermelon was served and every one expressed their enjoyment of the evening and a pleasant good night.

It Was Henry Staton, Colored.

In an item appearing in The Reflector on Thursday of last week about the capture of a blind tiger near Bethel, the party arrested was named Henry Staton. This party was a colored man, and there being a white man living in Bethel also bearing that name, some not familiar with the circumstances have inquired if he was the party arrested. In justice to the latter and to remove any association of his name with it, we make this statement that the party arrested was a colored man.

The old soldiers are marching on Charlotte.

Wonder how Greensboro will feel if the census man says there are not so many as claimed.

Judge Guion said if a man don't like the laws of his state, let him move out. This might also apply to the man who will not speak good of his town—let him move out.

The strike at Pittsburg is alarming. Riot and bloodshed prevail and several people have been killed. Pity but what such troubles could be settled amicably instead of a resort to violence. But there will be such troubles until our immigration laws are more rigid.

Young Men and Politics.

What can they do for each other? Politics will not let men alone, young or old, and therefore, men are compelled to give some attention to politics. One of the ancient philosophers said that if good citizens did not give attention to their government they would be punished by being compelled to live under the rule of worse citizens than themselves. If I were going to amend this saying, I would add the query—Can there be worse citizens than those who pay no attention to their government? A scholar may be measured by his learning and a business man by his wealth, but a citizen must be measured by fidelity in the performance of his civic duties. The science of government is a noble science and the art of government is one in which the citizen may well desire to be skilled. Most of our great men have entered politics young; it is only occasionally that men distinguish themselves in public life who enter it late. However anxious a young man may be to enter politics he must always recognize that opportunity is necessary as well as preparation, that is, he must not only be ready to take advantage of an opportunity, but he must wait until the opportunity comes. As a matter of fact, however, failure to rise politically is more often due to lack of preparedness than to lack of opportunity. If the young man who loves his country, is in sympathy with his fellowmen, and is more anxious to serve than to hold high office, politics offers great opportunities.—The Commoner.

The Farm and Newspaper.

In an audience composed mostly of the members of the Farmers' Union, of Florence, Ala., last week one of the speakers expressed the mutual friendship between the farm and newspaper in the following: "As a rule, the farmer has no firmer friend than the country press. The home paper is distinctly the farmer's own paper, supported directly and indirectly by farmers, who compose the backbone of the subscription list of the printer and largely for what the enterprising merchant advertises. "Now, brother, let us not for-

"The man or the paper that fights my battles shall have my support. Another thing, the merchants advertising are the good ones that make it possible for us to get a good local paper. The man or local firm that is too penurious to advertise and help support the local press has no right to the farmer's patronage.

"I promise hereafter to go to the live advertiser and the man who does his share in supporting the local press, thus contributing to my support, rather than buy of a man who proposes to take all and give nothing back. If farmers as a class would support their friends, the other fellow would soon go out of business."—Florence, Ala., Times.

Nice Thing to Worry About.

They are talking about its being an eight billion dollar harvest this year, and some people are worrying whether there will be money enough to move such a vast amount of crops to the proper markets. The interstate commerce commissioners also predict a big shortage in freight cars. No doubt there is some cause for concern along these lines. But, after all, it gives one a comfortable sort of feeling to think that the crops are so large that the chief problem is how to dispose of them to the best advantage. It is a whole lot nicer to worry about that sort of thing than to be disappointed in the size and value of the crops themselves.

The Wilmington Star makes a new point in favor of good roads. It advocates them from the standpoint of morality as well as economy. It says: "If you desire to eliminate a fruitful source of utter depravity, come out on the side of good roads. A man can go to perdition faster on a mean road than he can get to market on a good one." In other words, bad roads not infrequently lead to the bad place. We are always finding some new ground upon which we are opposed to them.—Charlotte Observer.

The Value of Good Digestion

Is easy to figure if you know what your stomach is worth. Kodol keeps the stomach at par value, by insuring good digestion. Kodol cures Dyspepsia.

Kodol insures good digestion by absolutely duplicating Nature's normal process, in perfectly digesting all food taken into the stomach.

While Kodol is doing this, the stomach is resting—and becoming strong and healthy. A strong and healthy stomach guarantees a sound and active brain.

The man with a sound stomach—a stomach that is doing for the body just what Nature intended it to do—is the man who is always prepared for any emergency. He is "there with the goods."

The man with a sick stomach, is a man sick all over. When the stomach is irritated by undigested food, the blood and heart are directly affected. Then dullness, unnatural sleepiness, sick-headaches, vertigo and fainting spells, and even serious brain trouble develop. Kodol will prevent these.

Spurring the stomach and brain to special effort by "tonics" and "stimulants" doesn't cure anything, or accomplish any good. Neither does dieting. Indigestion and the serious ailments which it induces can be averted and corrected only by natural means.

Kodol supplies this natural means. It performs the stomach's work for it—just as the stomach should perform it—while the stomach takes a little rest, "for the stomach's sake."

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say, that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 2 1/2 times as much as the fifty-cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

A TIPSY DUKE'S PRANK.

The Story of How Mrs. Connolly Became Lady Michael.

In former times there used to be a certain Duke of Richmond, then lord lieutenant of Ireland, who belonged to the hail-fellow well met species. With his boon companions it was his almost daily habit to go to a certain fashionable inn at Bray, kept by one Michael Connolly. There much wine was consumed during his incumbency of the lord lieutenancy, and many and wild were the nights that the little inn at Bray witnessed. Connolly had a reputation as being the best cook in Ireland, and it was said his wine was the best to be found within the confines of the Emerald Isle. The Duke of Richmond said so, and he ought to have known, as he had eaten tons of the one and imbibed tons of the other.

Connolly's cooking and Connolly's wine were popular themes of conversation with his lordship, and he was not niggardly with his praise of either. Wine is a great leveler of ranks, and so it fell out one night that the duke, carried away by his admiration for Connolly's talents in kitchen and taproom, committed an egregious, amusing mistake. The night in question had been an even more than usually wet one at the inn at Bray, and the duke, the innkeeper himself and all of the duke's companions were lost to all sense of either proportion or the eternal fitness of things.

Therefore no one thought it strange when the duke sent for mine host and, after a speech of praise of his viands, the way in which they were prepared and especially of his wine cellar, bade him kneel. Then, striking him across the shoulders, he said, "Rise, Sir Michael Connolly!" And Sir Michael rose amid the rapturous applause of those present. It seemed quite the proper caper then, but the next morning, as it came back to still further jar the aching head of the duke, it bore a somewhat different aspect, and the principal question that agitated the dual mind was how he was to get out of the scrape.

Connolly was summoned and, in the faint hope that the ceremony had made no impression, asked if he remembered aught that happened the night previous. Sir Michael did and manifested a disquieting determination to hang on to his newly acquired title. But, as have lesser and greater men before and since, he fell a willing victim to bribery and finally agreed not to press his claim to knighthood. The price was heavy, but not too high to pay for the suppression of a tale that would make his grace of Richmond the laughingstock of London, and so the duke was turning, satisfied with his morning's work, when the late Sir Michael dashed his self congratulations to the four winds.

"Yis, your grace, I'll keep quiet," he said as he jingled the price of his title in his pocket, "but," thoughtfully—"but it will take more than the likes of me to keep my wife, Lady Michael Connolly, quiet about the matter." And it did. Michael was right. She was Lady Michael to her friends from that day on and always laid claim to the title. The duke was the laughingstock of London, as he had feared, but a reformed man as well, for he dared take no further risks.—London Tatler.

FOOD OF THE ANCIENTS.

In Greece and Rome Great Cooks Were Privileged Persons.

That the ancients knew little about the actual component parts of the substances that they ate is a fact that is clearly indicated by the qualities with which these foods were endowed. Thus many grave writers held that beans exerted a stupefying effect upon those who partook of them. Hippocrates trembled for his patients when beans were in blossom, and some authorities even asserted that hens that were allowed to eat this vegetable would cease to lay eggs.

scant, on the other hand, were regarded as the ideal food for children, "enlightening their minds, opening their hearts and making them of a cheerful disposition." To Hippocrates a dish of boiled cabbage, with salt, was a sure cure for violent attacks of colic, while Erasistratus regarded the cabbage as a sovereign remedy in cases of paralysis.

The onion and the leek were not only considered a cure for diseases, but Apicius asserted that he who wished to preserve his health should eat young onions, with honey, every morning before breakfast. Alexander the Great fed them to his troops because he believed that they had the power to incite martial ardor. Garlic was also given to those who were about to fight, that their courage might be excited, and Galen held that the man "that eats bacon for two or three days before he is to box or wrestle shall be much stronger than if he should eat the best roast beef or bag pudding."

In Greece and Rome the master of the culinary art was always a privileged person. He alone was entitled to carry a knife at his girdle. He was immortalized by the noted writers of the age as the "preserver of mankind," and when by chance one of his inventions attracted more than usual commendation fortunes were showered upon him.

Lavish as were the fees that were paid to cooks in those days, the biggest tip recorded in history was that of Antony, who bestowed an entire city upon the cook who prepared a repast that pleased the palate of Cleopatra.—Exchange.

Summer in Greenland.

Among the interesting observations made by the Danish northeast Greenland expedition is one on the sudden oncoming of summer in that land of ice and fiords. The change is described as sudden. Gradually the temperature of the snow had risen to the freezing point, and then in one day it all melted. "The rivers were rushing along, flowers were budding forth, and in the air the butterflies were fluttering." The birds came nearly all on the same day, and most of them even at the same hour. One day there were only the ordinary ptarmigan and the raven; the next there were the sanderling, the ring plover, the goose, the eider duck and many others.

Delicately Put.

"The first day out was perfectly lovely," said the young lady just back from abroad. "The water was as smooth as glass, and it was simply gorgeous. But the second day was rough and—er—decidedly dis-gorgeous."—Everybody's.

An Odd Perquisite.

One of the most curious perquisites in connection with English coronations is the right of one of the peers to claim the bed and bedding used by the heir apparent on the night preceding the coronation. In olden times this was a perquisite of considerable value, as the "bedding" usually consisted of richly embroidered coverlets of velvet or silk, with priceless hangings of cloth of silver and gold.
