LONGFELLOW TRAIL IN PROGRESS

BOTH PARTIES TO CASE ABLY REPRESENTED.

Evidence all in and Case will Probably go to Jury Friday—Fine Legal Ably Displayed by Lawyers

Kinston, N. C., Aug. 26.—The trial of J. S. Longfellow for bigamy that began in the Superior court here this afternoon, is a legal battle, the able array of counsel on both sides contesting the case at almost every point. Appearing with Solicitor Duffy for the State are ex-Gov. C. B. Aycock, ex-Solicitor J. E. Woodward, Loftin, Varner & Dawson and G. V. Cowper, while the defense is represented by ex-Solicitor L. I. Moore, Emmet Wooten and H. M. Shaw.

The first bill of indictment found at a previous term of court was quashed Wednesday afternoon, but almost immediately the present grand jury found another bill, and it is under the latter that the trial is proceeding.

When the case was called this afternoon the battle began in earnest. Mr. Moore for the defense offered four different motions, each in turn being overruled by Judge Ward. The first of these motions was for abatement on the ground that the alleged second marriage occurred in the State of Virginia, hence it was not in the jurisdiction of a North Carolina court to try the case. The second was asking for a bill of particulars as to the time and place of the alleged second marriage. The third was to quash the last bill of indictment on the ground that it was not legal: the court having convened and adjourned Monday owing to the sickness of Judge Allen, and Judge Ward coming later to hold the court. The third was for continuance on the ground that the bill of indictment being found Wednesday afternoon, the defendant had not had time to properly prepare his case under that bill.

Judge Ward in overruling the last motion said if at any time he saw the defendant was not getting a fair trial he would order a mistrial, which statement was accepted by the defense and the trial proceeded. The selection of the jury consumed some time and it was 4:30 o'clock when the body was empanelled.

The first witness called was Clerk of the Court Collins by whom was proven an affidavit setting forth Longfellow's first marriage;

The second witness was Mrs. Swift, mother of the young lady in the case. She testified that Longfellow first went to her home one night in March to ask her consent to his marriage to her daughter, Miss Bruce. Her decision was deferred until next morning, when he called again. She gave her consent to the marriage on certain conditions, which he accepted, but no time for it was set. She next saw him when he came to her home from the evening train one day in May, Miss Bruce having come home on an earlier train the same day. He spent the night at her home, leaving next morning. He returned to her home the following Saturday evening and remained there until Tuesday. The first intimation she had of their being married was when she called upon Longfellow to ask a blessing, when he turned to her daughter, addressing her as Mrs. Longfellow, for the latter to ask the blessing. Witness said she made no inquiry as to when or where they had been married.

Gray Sutton, proprietor of Seven Springs hotel, testified that Longfellow and Miss Swift were registered at his hotel May 13th as J. Longfellow and wife, stayed there four or five days, but both left at different times on the same day.

H. M. McCoy said that on the day Longfellow was arrested in afternoon, they took dinner at the same table at a hotel in Kinston. He asked Longfellow where he was going to locate and the latter replied "we have not decided yet."

W. L. Shelton testified that Longfellow visited his store in Stantonsburg on the 17th of March and in a conversation told him he was going to marry a lady named Miss Bruce Swift. A. F. Windham said he was present in Shelton's store and heard this remark by Longfellow.

All through the testimony of these witnesses there were constant objections by counsel on both sides.

At 6:10 court took a recess until 9:30 Friday morning.

Kinston, N. C., 27th.—W. E. Mewborne was the first witness this morning for state, he testified to having conversation with Longfellow in Battleboro on April 8th. Longfellow purchased post cards saying he was going to write one to his girl. He wrote and showed it to Mewborne, who remarked "I know that girl," the card being addressed to Miss Bruce Swift. Longfellow asked Mewborne about her and her family giving as reason for question he intended to marry her soon.

C. F. Harvey was introduced to identify handwriting of Longfellow. This was followed by reading eight letters he had written Miss Swift on different dates, in all of which his love for her was declared in strong terms.

The state here rested its case and defense then renewed motion for bill of particulars which the court refused. The defense then asked the admission of a sentence contained in affidavit by State that the alleged second marriage took place in Norfolk, May 1st. Judge Ward admitted this for the present, saying that he would later pass upon its competency when the defense disclosed its evidence.

The only evidence offered by the defense was two depositions—one by a sister of defendant, living in Maryland, who said her brother brought a young lady to see her in a Baltimore hospital on May 3rd and introduced her as Miss Swift, and that the young lady said she was in Baltimore doing some shopping and had met him there. Miss Longfellow stated that they spent most of the day with her and that it was shown in conversation between them that Longfellow was a married man. She also stated that when they left her that evening Miss Swift said she was going to her boarding house in the city and Longfellow said he was going to take a boat for Norfolk. The other deposition was by clerk of Corporation Clerk, of Norfolk, who said no marriage license for the parties was on record in that city. The defense then rested and the evidence closed.

The entire morning showed a pretty fight between lawyers on both sides. Speeches will begin this afternoon, four hours to be allowed each side, and the case will conclude sometime tomorrow.

Preaching the Practical.

Our advertisements are business sermons. Through them we preach the principles of practical business to the tobacco farmers. Money honestly and honorably earned is usually appreciated. Example is better than precept, and so practice is better than preaching. Read what the Farmers Consolidated Tobacco Company preaches, and profit by what it practices.

For sometime we have been practicing the profession of selling tobacco higher than some, and as high as the highest. Facts are those things which result in gains. Fancies are those things which deceive and result in losses. Beware of fancies! We have the facts. Ours has been tested.

Moral—Sell your tobacco with the Farmers Consolidated Tobacco Company.

LOSS OF JAPANESE LEAF TRADE

CAUSE FLUCTUATION IN PRICES OF TOBACCO PRIMINGS

Some Facts and Figures According to Government Report—Trust Not to Blame—Throw Primings Away

It is currently reported that primings and low grade leaf of that type is bringing somewhat lower prices than in recent years.

This condition is neither surprising nor alarming, and is readily accounted for. Japan for several years in succession was a very heavy buyer of this type of leaf, but for the last two or three years has so largely reduced her purchases as to make the loss of Japanese trade severely felt in this grade of leaf. A brief resume of the history of our trade in low grade cigarette leaf with Japan may be interesting, and will doubtless be instructive.

Prior to the time the American Tobacco Company entered Japan we had very little trade on this grade of leaf in that country. With the advent of the American concern into the Japanese Empire, however, they quickly created a demand for cigarettes for the most part made of the type of tobacco in question. The consumption of this grade of leaf, under the aggressive activities of the American Tobacco Company, grew by leaps and bounds, and by the year 1903 our shipments of leaf to Japan had crawled up to the respectable total of 4,429,591 pounds. This was thought at the time to be the climax, but the demand continued unexpectedly to increase, and our shipments were 5,119,688 pounds in 1904; 6,529,017 pounds in 1905, and 7,673,285 pounds in 1906.

It is well to note in this connection that our shipments of this grade of leaf to the Japanese Empire in 1906 were a very large percentage of our total production of such leaf.

Under the stimulus of this demand the price advanced beyond the legitimate value of leaf of this grade, and then the inevitable, but nevertheless the unexpected happened. Our shipments to Japan in 1907 aggregated only 2,045,998 pounds, a falling off in a single year of 5,627,287 pounds. The showing for the year 1908 was but little better. Now, it should be borne in mind that Japan for many years has grown large quantities of tobacco, and is increasing the output from year to year. Therefore, when the price of our priming types continued to climb to higher and higher figures, Japan simply quit buying in large quantities, and substituted home grown leaf. This she could easily do, because the tobacco business of the Empire had become a government monopoly, thereby enabling it to force whatever it might choose on the consumer. Under these circumstances it can readily be seen that there is little or no prospect of regaining any portion of the Japanese trade we have lost.

The above figures are taken from a government report recently issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor, and furnish food for careful thought.

Home manufacturers have little demand for this type of leaf, and hence it would be both unjust and unwise to censure them for not paying a big price for a grade of leaf for which they have such little use. The truth of the matter is that we have practically lost our best customer on this grade of leaf tobacco, and our home manufacturers are no more responsible for this fact than is the man in the moon.

Some years ago when Japan made a government monopoly of her tobacco business, there was great jubilation among growers of and dealers in this type of tobacco, because it was believed by many that the Japanese government would continue to be a heavy buyer in our markets in competition with home buyers, and that, consequently, prices would be boosted. It is unfortunate that these rosy predictions were doomed to such bitter disappointment, but the wholesome reflection will obtrude itself that after all the energetic American manufacturer was the best and most loyal friend that the producer ever had, or probably ever will have.

There is no occasion for excitement or despondency over this situation. The simple facts that we once had little trade with Japan—later we had a large, lucrative and unexpected trade with that Empire, built by the activities of an American manufacturer, that stimulated the production of this grade of tobacco, and boosted the price beyond its legitimate level. This partly caused the substitution of home-grown tobacco for that formerly obtained in this country, and the upshot of the whole matter is that prices are accommodating themselves to these changed conditions, and going back to merely normal figures.

We can remember, and so can many of our readers, the time when the lowest grade primings were thrown away as worthless, and while there is no prospect of the necessity of a resort to this method again, worse things could happen. It should be borne in mind that the elimination of the ground leaves from the parent stalk provides greater sustenance and vitality for the leaves higher up, which constitute the better grades of tobacco, and any loss in the destruction of the first primings is in some measure compensated for in the larger, richer, and heavier leaf that results from this process.

We, therefore, repeat that there is no occasion for abusing anybody about this state of affairs, or growing pessimistic about prices. This situation will adjust itself, and it is gratifying to know that there are justifiable grounds for believing that the better grades of tobacco will sell at remunerative prices.—Southern Tobacco Journal, Aug. 16th.

At Munford's Big Store.

One of the largest crowds that has ever been assembled in Greenville attended the sale now going on at C. T. Munford's big store Wednesday and Thursday. There was an enormous crowd blocking the sidewalk and street before the doors opened Wednesday morning.

This is proving to be one of the greatest sales ever held in this community. The entire stock has been taken out of Mr. C. T. Munford's hands and is being sold by the National Special Sales Company, of New York city.

On the opening morning twenty pairs of shoes were given away to the following persons:

Misses Olivia Wade, Fannie Bowen, Melissa Evans, Maggie Teel, Mattie Downs, Susie Williams; Mesdames Nora Jolly, Nannie Jolly, Sylvia Meeks, Clyde Smith and Messrs. D. J. Williams, Tom Forsner, Arthur May, J. S. Briley, J. C. Williams, Harvey Briley, A. D. Whichard, Julius Crawford, M. Morris and E. Mills.

The Reflector extends its best wishes to Mr. Munford and to the promoters of this sale.

Announcement.

I wish to announce to my friends and the prospective piano buying public that I have associated myself with Mr. Samuel T. White, (present treasurer of Pitt county) in the piano and organ business. We have formed a co-partnership as Fineman & White, and beginning September 1st we will open permanent warerooms in Greenville, N. C., where the following line can at all times be seen:

Knabe, Kranich and Bache, Lester, Henry & S. G. Lindeman, Story and Clark, Bjur Bros., Milton and Columbus. In choosing the above named group of instruments we have not only selected the highest standard of pianos manufactured, but by visiting the different piano factories, close study and the spot-cash buying conditions, which we have adopted, has placed us in position to thus offer to the prospective buyer the following motto: "Better pianos for same money. Same pianos for less money." It has always been my policy to please a customer and have him stay pleased. This can only be brought about by conscientious selling and business principles, which policy we expect to continue at all times. Thanking the public for their liberal patronage of the past and hoping for a continuance of same,

Very respectfully,
G. G. Fineman.

Distinguished Party Pass Through.

On the westbound N. & S. train yesterday evening were Hon. J. Bryan Grimes, secretary of state; Dr. B. F. Dixon, State auditor; Hon. W. T. Bickett, attorney general and Hon. J. Y. Joyner, State superintendent public instruction, returning to Raleigh after visiting Hyde county on a tour of inspection relative to the drainage of Matamuskeet Lake and the Hyde County Railroad matter. Governor Kitchen, who was one of the party, went to Scotland Neck from Washington to visit relatives.

School of Music.

The department of music at the Greenville graded schools will again be in charge of Miss Olive B. Gaston, of Syracuse University, New York. Persons desiring to enroll for lessons should call on or write the superintendent before the opening of the graded school. H. B. Smith, 826 tf Superintendent.

WHY COMMON TOBACCO IS LOW.

Elsewhere in this issue is an article taken from the Southern Tobacco Journal of Winston-Salem, relative to the loss of trade in leaf tobacco between America and Japan. The article is based upon figures in a recent government report, and is therefore accurate. Any one reading this article carefully will see that the present low price of common leaf tobacco is not without reason. A buyer cannot be expected to purchase an article for which he cannot find a sale.

In the early years of the tobacco industry in Eastern North Carolina the farmers did not trouble to save much of the low grade under primings, but when it was found that a demand had been created for low grades more attention was given to saving every leaf that could be cured. While there was no domestic demand for any manufactured product from these low grades, a sale was found for it in Japan, and that country became a large user of it. The figures in the report referred to show how rapidly this demand grew, until Japan was purchasing nearly seven and three quarter million pounds of this tobacco in a single year, and also that by the Japanese Government going into the cultivation of tobacco and making a grade that took the place of the purchases made in America, resulting in the American trade falling back to only a little more than two million pounds in a year.

It is also a fact as The Reflector learns from reliable sources, that Eastern North Carolina alone produces about eight million pounds a year of this common tobacco, and with Japan now using only about two million pounds of this, and practically no demand for it elsewhere, it is seen at a glance that there is great overproduction of it and the price cannot be other than low. It is folly to abuse anybody because the price of an article is low when there is no demand for it.

There is a remedy for this, but it lies mainly with the farmers themselves. They must stop saving this common tobacco and give attention only to better grades for which there is demand at profitable prices. Time and again the farmers of Pitt and surrounding counties have been advised to prime off the lower leaves of their crop and throw them back to the enrichment of the soil, as there was no profit in curing and marketing it. In this connection it is not amiss to refer (in addition to what this paper has said editorially) to articles written by Mr. E. B. Ficklen, and especially to those by Mr. O. L. Joyner, president of the Farmers Consolidated Tobacco Company. The latter, in keeping with the principles of his company to always protect the interests of the tobacco farmers, has not only been a liberal user of newspaper space but also, at large expense, sent out thousands of circulars advising farmers to curtail their crop and to strive to produce the higher grades. He has repeatedly urged the farmers that the only reasonable way to control the price of tobacco is to control the production, and make the quality required by the trade. The farmers must make up their minds to act upon the advice of such men who are laboring so earnestly in their behalf, or else continue to sell their crop at less than it costs to produce it. No relief is going to be obtained by a continuance of overproduction, and then listening to a cry of abuse of others and misrepresentation of the real facts.

We hope that every tobacco farmer into whose hands this paper falls will turn to the article referred to and give it a careful reading, and from it get an insight of existing conditions.

Endorsing the Trust.

Strange things are happening every day. It is the fashion to "cuss out" the American Tobacco Company and many a politician has sailed into office by doing so. Some of the tobacco farmers, however, now seem to be seeing another side to the matter and have actually gone on record as favoring the trust and adopting a whereas and a resolution to sell to it direct in preference to selling in the tobacco warehouses. This action was taken in Danville, last week, at a meeting of the Mutual Protective Association of the Bright Tobacco Growers of Virginia and North Carolina. According to the report in The Danville Bee, the vice-president of the association of Bright Tobacco Growers in his speech outlined a policy of friendship and good faith with the American Tobacco Company, which in the past has been arraigned and criticized at practically every gathering of the organization. He declared that it was not the intention of the association to destroy the American Tobacco Company's business, but to build it up. He said that in this corporation the farmers found the greatest and best methods of handling tobacco ever devised; that in their dealings with the trust, they "have been met with fairness and straightforward business methods by the American Tobacco Company and every demand has been granted." If this doctrine is endorsed by the tobacco growers in general there is going to be a good many headaches in political circles.—Charlotte Chronicle.

DETECTIVE STORIES.

Little Things as Aids in Solving Problems in Crime.

THE VALUE OF SMALL CLEWS

"In All My Experience," Says Police Sergeant Cuff, One of Wilkie Collins' Creations, "I Have Never Yet Met Such a Thing as a Trifle."

If you ask some London publishers they will tell you that no book sells so well as a detective story and that people still find a fascination in the achievements of Edgar Allan Poe's Dupin, Gaboriau's Lecoq and Tabaret and the redoubtable Sergeant Cuff of Wilkie Collins.

These men were the forerunners of Sherlock Holmes, and their feats of criminal tracking were as remarkable as those achieved by the famous character created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Perhaps the least known is Cuff, who figures in "The Moonstone."

Cuff looked for clues in trifles. Investigating a smear on a newly painted door, he was told by the superintendent who had the case in hand that it was made by the petticoats of the women servants. The superintendent said petticoats were trifles.

"In all my experience along the dirtiest ways of this dirty little world," replied Cuff, "I have never met such a thing as a trifle yet. We must see the petticoat that made the smear, and we must know for certain that the paint was wet."

Lecoq, the beau ideal of the French detective, was wont to explain his deductions to assistants, just as Sherlock Holmes did to his friend Watson. In the story of "File No. 113" a safe has been robbed. There is a scratch on the door of the safe which seems to have been made by the key slipping from the lock. But Lecoq explained that the paint was hard and that the scratch could not have been made by the trembling hand of the thief letting the key slip.

He therefore had an iron box made, painted with green varnish, like the safe. As Lecoq inserted the key he asked the assistant to endeavor to prevent him using the key just as he was about to insert it in the lock. The assistant did so, and the key held by Lecoq, pulled aside from the lock, slipped along the door and traced upon it a diagonal scratch from top to bottom, the exact reproduction of the one shown in a photograph of the safe. Thus it was proved that two persons were present at the robbery—one wished to take the money and the other to prevent its being taken.

In the play Sherlock Holmes, the detective, with the aid of an accomplice, raises an alarm of fire at the house of the Larrabees, during the excitement of which he is able to investigate the mystery of the purloined documents.

A somewhat similar incident occurs in Edgar Allan Poe's "The Purloined Letter," when Dupin, having obtained entrance to the house of a minister of the state who had purloined a letter of great importance from a lady, wished to take it from its hiding place—a card rack over the mantelpiece—and substitute a facsimile. While Dupin was talking to the minister there was a sudden report of a pistol beneath the window, followed by fearful screams and loud shouting. The minister rushed to the window, and while his attention was thus distracted Dupin took the real letter and substituted the false one which he had prepared. Needless to say, the diversion had been created by Dupin's assistants.

Although "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" somewhat overshadow the stories of other detectives which appeared in the Strand Magazine, one should not forget to mention Martin Hewitt, investigator, and Dick Donovan.

Both these detectives worked alone and were past masters in the art of solving robbery mysteries, murders and the crimes of secret societies.

And the value of noting trifles, particularly in detective work, is strikingly illustrated in "The Case of Mr. Foggatt." The latter had been murdered in his chamber, which was situated at the top of the building in which Hewitt had an office. Hewitt was the first one on the scene. The door was locked, and when he got into the room he found Foggatt lying across the table, shot dead. There was a sheer drop of fifty feet outside the windows. How had the murderer got in, and how had he escaped?

On the sideboard were the freshly bitten remains of an apple. Hewitt noticed that it had been bitten by a person who had lost two teeth, one at the top and one below. He also saw that the dead man had an excellent set of false teeth, with none missing. He observed, too, that an active young man could, by standing on the window sill, draw himself on the roof and thus escape. Thus Hewitt comes to look for a tall, athletic looking young man with two teeth missing. He finds him, obtains by a ruse another apple which he has bitten, compares the two and ultimately obtains the startling story of the murder from the murderer himself after the coroner's jury had returned a verdict of "accidental death."—London

Finest Walk in British Isles.
The finest walk in the British isles is probably the walk from Beaulieu up Glen Affric and down to Loch Duich, on the west coast, through the savage pass of Glen Licht. Impending over Glen Affric on the north are the giants of Middle Ross, the peaks of Mam Soul and Carn Eige, dominating a long range of 3,000 foot peaks. Northward and southward and still more to the west the 3,000 footers throng. In the valleys almost the sole inhabitants are the red deer and the roe. On the tops the eagle and the hill fox are much oftener met with than human creatures.—Scottish Review.

Emperor William's Appetite.

The emperor, William I., was a fine looking man notwithstanding his age, and he had that old world manner which is as attractive as it is rare. He was full of gaiety and chaffed some of the young people present. It was a mystery to me how he survived what he ate and drank, although he was doing a cure. He began with poached eggs and went on to potted meats and various strange German dishes, added many cups of strong tea, and ended with strawberries, ices and sweet, tepid champagne. We talked banalities. It was not very exciting.—Lady Randolph Churchill's Reminiscences.

FIGHTING FEVERS.

Why Vigorous Measures Are Necessary in Cases of Sunstroke.

A clinical thermometer is probably as matter of course a household convenience in most families as is a stepladder or a broom, and it is well that its use and the general significance of its disclosures should be understood by those in authority, but fussiness and constant resort to it and continual discussion of temperatures are to be deplored.

The old fashioned way of placing the hand upon the child's body and announcing that it felt feverish or had a fever without any regard to mathematical accuracy as to degrees and fractions worked just as well as, perhaps better than, the new fashioned way carried to a nervous extreme. At the same time a rise of temperature always means something, and it most decidedly means the calling in of a physician if it does not go down of itself or yield to simple remedies.

When the temperature is taken by the mouth the thermometer should register about 98.7 degrees, although this may vary at different times during the day in perfectly well people. When it registers 99 degrees or 99.5 degrees the person is said to be feverish. Anything below 98 degrees is subnormal, and anything over 105 degrees is called hyperpyrexia, or high fever.

In many cases fevers are a sort of blessing in disguise. These are the fevers caused by the toxins of bacteria, of which typhoid is a type. The whole system is then engaged in a fight against the germs, and the battle is waged to more advantage apparently when "the blood is fighting hot." This is why, although the fever can be beaten down by the application of cold and the administration of drugs, it is often poor practice to suppress it in this way. Getting the fever down may be a momentary satisfaction, but it does nothing to help cure the underlying cause. It is as if a general should insist upon silencing his own guns.

At the same time the fever must be watched and kept in check, because this sort of fight is calling for an immense outlay from the system, and a raging fever not only burns up bacteria, but it feeds upon tissue and blood and all it can find, as any one can testify who has watched or lived through a convalescence from one.

What is true of the fever of a germ disease is false altogether in the fever of sunstroke. In this case the fever is the disease. It is not a regiment of infantry, but a conflagration, and it must be put out as quickly as possible and by all the means at one's disposal—cold baths, ice packs, ice water, anything that will beat it down.

The character of a fever is a great assistance to diagnosis in many cases, and this is why a physician should always be asked to sit in judgment on it.—Youth's Companion.

His Depressor.

He was handsome, young, talented. He had apparently everything one could wish for as a start in life, but every time he came into a room where there were mirrors he absorbed himself in contemplation of the back of his head.

"That spot is getting thinner and thinner," he complained when he called on the woman and sat down after looking at it in all the mirrors in her flat. "Don't make any difference what I do with it, it keeps on getting larger. I've tried everything, rubbing it with kerosene, with hair tonics; can't do a thing with it."

"It's just as well," she consoled him. "If you didn't have that little bald spot to keep you humiliated there'd be no associating with you." —New York Press.

Digenantia.

"Do you believe in the superhuman?" "I used to, but I don't any more." "Why?" "I married him." —Chicago Record-Herald.

No man knows the weight of another man's burden.—Pliny.

Kidney Troubles Attack Greenville Men and Women, Old and Young.

Kidney ills seize young and old. Come quickly with little warning. Children suffer in their early years—Can't control the kidney secretions. Girls are languid, nervous, suffer pain.

Women worry, can't do daily work. Men have lame and aching backs. The cure for man, woman or child. Is to cure the cause—the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys—

Cure all forms of kidney suffering. Greenville testimony proves it. Miss Susan Kalsul, 53 N. Fifth St., Greenville, N. C., says: "I derived great benefit from Doan's Kidney Pills and take pleasure in recommending them. For some time I suffered from dull, nagging backaches and had distressing pains through my loins. My kidneys were very weak and the frequent passages of the secretions caused me great annoyance. My back pained me severely and when first arising in the morning I was so lame and sore that I could scarcely get around. I at length procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Wooten's drug store and through their use I was entirely relieved of these troubles. The fact that my kidneys have given me no trouble since leads me to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills most highly." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
