CALL MEETING

Of the Chamber of Commerce for Tonight.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce are called to meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the court house for the particular purpose of selecting delegates to attend a meeting to be held in Washington, N. C., on Thursday night. The purpose of which meeting is indicated in the following letter of the Hon. John H. Small:

Washington, N. C., Oct 14. My Dear Sir:

I wrote to several gentlemen in the larger towns in Eastern North Carolina, suggesting that they meet in this town on last Wednesday evening, 13th inst., for the purpose of considering plans for making the trip to the Norfolk Waterways Convention by steamer, which convention, as you know, meets on November 17th. Among others, I wrote to Dr. L. S. Blades and Mr. J. H. LeRoy, Elizabeth City; Messrs. Frank Wood and Horton Corwin Jr., Edenton; Messrs. J. J. Wolsenden, T. A. Green and C. E. Foy, New Bern; Messrs. W. S. Chadwick and C. L. Abernethy, Beaufort; Mr. W. L. Arendell, Morehead City; and Dr. Laughinghouse, of Greenville. Only Mr. LeRoy, Mr. Corwin and Mr. Chadwick indicated an intention to attend, and even these three gentlemen failed to attend. There will be one of the most important waterway meetings ever held in the South and the presence of the president and vice-president give indication of its national importance. It is universally considered that a free and protected waterway from Norfolk to Beaufort and thence to Wilmington will constitute a vital factor in the development of North Carolina. While this Norfolk meeting is intended to promote the construction of a continuous waterway from Boston to Florida, it is well to remember that the length from Norfolk to Beaufort is the only one which has received congressional recognition and is already under construction. It is of transcendent importance to our State that we maintain this lead.

Delegates from the seaboard states north of Norfolk will come down in steamers. Delegates from Eastern North Carolina ought also to make the trip by water with the best facilities we have at hand.

May I ask this question without giving offense. Is there not enough public spirit in Eastern North Carolina to recognize in an effective way this great meeting? Are there not a few citizens in their respective committees who will present this matter to their citizens and arrange for delegations to this convention? I am only an humble worker in the ranks, and while I am taking the lead at this time in arranging for an adequate representation from the state, yet the co-operation of the intelligent and progressive citizens in every community is necessary in order to secure a proper representation from Eastern North Carolina.

May I again call a meeting to be held in Washington, N. C., on the evening of October 21st.

Very sincerely,
Jno. H. Small.

Also the very important matter of making arrangements to make the inauguration exercises of the Training school on Nov. 12th the greatest event in Greenville's history. To do so, the matter of arranging to entertain the great number of people who will come

A GREAT STATE OCCASION.

President Taft's Visit to Wilmington Promises to be one of the Greatest Events in the History of North Carolina.

A long list of attractions have been arranged by the people of Wilmington to entertain President Taft and the thousands of visitors who will join in welcoming him on the occasion of his visit to that city on Tuesday, Nov. 9th. The city will be gaily decorated and brilliantly lighted, and the parade of National and State troops, with numerous brass bands, promises to be with in itself a great event.

The marine parade on the Cape Fear river to and from Fort Caswell and Fort Fisher, to accompany the revenue cutter Seminole with Mr. Taft and his party aboard, will be composed of a convoy of a flotilla of four torpedo boats and numerous excursion steamers said to be adequate to carry all who wish to join the merry and happy throng on this gala occasion.

Electric cars will make fast and frequent trips to the ocean. An added attraction at this particular season will be the opportunity to see the large ocean steamers loading cotton for Liverpool.

Hotel and boarding house facilities will be augmented by accommodations in many private homes. Accommodations can be in advance by addressing Hotel Committee Taft Celebration.

The president will be accompanied by several eminent statesmen and other prominent citizens, including a number of leading correspondents, reporters and photographers from the metropolitan newspapers and illustrated publications. These and many other attractive features, together with the best of all—the public reception to and speech by Mr. Taft—will be a history making epoch in Wilmington, which extends a cordial welcome to all to come and have their names enrolled as a visitor and spectator in this historical event, of which future generations will read with interest and pride.

The Atlantic Coast Line will run three special trains on November 9th, the day the presidential party will be in Wilmington, namely; from Florence, Sanford and New Bern, the regular trains in one or more sections being designed to accommodate the visitors from Rocky Mount, Goldsboro, etc. The special trains will all return in the evening after the president leaves for Richmond.

The Coast Line will place round trip tickets on sale at low rates from about 150 stations to Wilmington and return, to be sold Nov. 8th and 9th, good to return up to and including November 10th. They will also put on exceedingly low rate for military companies.

Everybody says Greenville is a growing town, and is destined to be the leading town of Eastern Carolina. The coming of the Training School demonstrates this fact, and show's the spirit of the progressiveness of the people and many own Greenville Height lots.

here on that date to take part in President Wright's inauguration must be begun at once and will be taken up at this meeting. If you are interested in your community come to this meeting tonight. F. M. Wooten, President.

A. & M. COLLEGE NOTES.

West Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 18 Daily drill is the order of the day, until after the parade at the fair. At this drill there will be a competitive contest between the four companies for a pennant.

The college glee club is practicing regularly under its instructor.

C. W. Hewett, an alumnus and former physics instructor of the college, stopped by recently on his way to John Hopkins University, where he is studying for a doctor's degree.

B. S. Skinner, superintendent of the college farm, is harvesting large quantities of peavine hay. Cover crops for the winter are being put in rapidly. Our farmers should resolve not to permit their lands lie loose through the winters. It is not best for the soil.

Prof. I. O. Schwab is now visiting the Ahsokie High School where he is formulating plans with the county superintendent for the boys county corn club. Why not do likewise in the "Empire of Pitt?"

President Hill, with State Superintendent Joyner, spoke at the dedicating of the new five thousand dollar brick school at Dover last Tuesday night. This school is to be one of the proposed county agricultural schools, which every county should have, as a preparatory department of the agricultural department of this college, as well as for the fundamental training for those who never enter college.

Several of the students of the live stock judging accompanied Prof. Avery to the Richmond fair. Many fine animals, especially beef cattle, are always exhibited there. It is a pity that our boys are forced to go from the State to find typical specimens of live stock.

The college will soon have as its guests two noteworthy conventions. During fair week the Textile convention will convene. The Farmers National convention will meet in Pullen hall Nov. 3 to 8. It is expected that the congress will reach twelve hundred members from the various parts of the union. Some of the foremost men of the nation will be among the speakers.

The college lyceum course usually furnishes tour of five entertainments during the year. These are free to the students and their friends. The first of these entertainments was given Monday evening, Oct. 4th, by the Haron Sisters, a musical quartette. The program was replete with readings and excellent music.

Prof. F. A. Waugh, a prominent American landscape gardener, visited the college for the purpose of laying off the grounds in the most artistic and beautiful manner. His plans will include the location for future buildings using a harmonious scheme for the development of the grounds. We anticipate much addition to the beauty of the campus.

The new dormitory being built of red brick and trimmed with white limestone, is one of the handsomest buildings on the campus. It possesses the beauty of a large edifice and suite of small buildings, as it is separated into six sections by fire proof walls. Each room is equipped with a clothes closet, steam heat and electric light. A central bath room is provided. When completed a handsome arcade will run the full length of the building. As soon as practicable this building will be used to

No Prayer Meetings Wednesday Night.

During the recent Hudson-Fulton celebration in New York the sailors from the United States and foreign fleets heard a song that pleased them mightily. President Taft, of the United States and President Diaz, of Mexico, have had their meeting, and both countries go right on as before.

Judge James C. McRae, dean of the University law school at Chapel Hill, died very suddenly on Sunday. He was 71 years of age and had been a very prominent and useful man to the State.

Pitt county farmers should get interested in the exhibit of products to be made at the National Farmers' Congress in Raleigh early in November. A number of premiums will be given for the best exhibit of crops and the way is open for this county to win some of them.

On the occasion of the meeting of Presidents Taft and Diaz at El Paso, the border line between the United States and Mexico, the saloons of the city were all ordered to be closed. If saloons were not regarded as a menace to safety there would be no need to order them closed on such occasions. The government licenses them and yet admits they are dangerous.

The Home Paper.

The Minneapolis Star inquires; "If a member of your family did would you print the resolutions on a bill board? If your wife entertained, would you send an account of it to the theatre program man? If you were going to enlarge your business would you advertise it in a hotel register? If you were going to have a wedding in your family, would you get out a handbill? You would send such items to a newspaper, would you not? Then why don't you put your advertisements in a newspaper? Every man who uses a billboard is adding to nature faking. The newspaper builds your town. Why not help build up the newspapers? There is no better advertisement in the world for a town than a good newspaper. A newspaper is the barometer of the town's industry. Show us a good newspaper full of advertising and we will show you a good town full of live merchants. Billboards are an eyesore; handbills are a nuisance; theatre programs are worthless; hotel registers from an advertising standpoint are ridiculous. Newspapers are town builders, town advertisers, fortune makers, news disseminators, sermon deliverers, prosperity forecasters. They are a necessity, not a luxury. They must be maintained. Without them we would retrograde to the medieval days. Don't patronize them from a charitable standpoint. Patronize them because they deliver the goods, that is, if they are the right kind. Out out the foolishness and work for the upbuilding of your town and state by upbuilding your newspapers.

Attention in every county should be called to an act of the last legislature (chapter 702) which should be rigidly enforced. We refer to the act which makes it the duty of the superintendent of health to have the county courtroom "thoroughly fumigated and otherwise put in proper sanitary condition during the week preceding each and every regular and special term of the superior court." The expense, of course, to be paid by the county commissioners out of the general county fund.

This act is most timely and should meet with general approval. Many of our courtrooms are in a filthy condition, men spitting all over the floor, the atmosphere oppressive with loathsome smells, and germs of disease abundant. Even with all proper sanitary precautions a crowded courtroom, filled many days with all sorts of people, becomes almost a pestilential spot, and, to say the least, is very injurious to health. Our judges, who have to breathe the foul air of a crowded courtroom day after day and week after week, are certainly to be pitied, and the wonder is that they can stand it.—Pittsboro Record.

A PIONEER AERONAUT

The Brave and Daring Frenchman Pilatre de Rozier.

TRAGIC END OF HIS CAREER.

He Was the First Aeronaut to Lose His Life From a Balloon, and He Was Dashed to Death With a Companion From a Height of 1,700 Feet.

Jean Francois Pilatre de Rozier, who was born at Metz in 1756 and who was killed, a martyr to his zeal, by a fall from his balloon at Boulogne, France, June 15, 1783, was the first aeronaut to lose his life in the dangerous work of mastering the air.

Pilatre de Rozier, who had made ascents in the Montgolfier balloon, determined to solve the question of balloons as mediums for carrying passengers and could think and dream of nothing but how he could fashion a machine that would carry him on an aerial voyage. When his balloon was finished he made some twenty-three ascents, nearly always alone, but occasionally accompanied by the Marquis d'Arlandes, a brave soldier and one who had faith in Pilatre's ideas. The balloon was always held captive by strong cords.

Whenever he went up there was a crowd to watch him. One day there was a thrilling moment. The balloon drifted toward some high trees, and it seemed inevitable that the tissues would be torn by the branches and Pilatre dashed to the ground. They saw the young man calmly throw a bunch of straw on his fire and quickly pour over it two small bottles of oil. Instantly the fierce heat sent the balloon up safely, and it swept beyond the danger line of the trees. A mighty shout went up from the crowd, and when he came down Pilatre had an ovation.

He now felt ready to make his grand experimental trial trip, but the king would not allow him to go, as he feared to lose so brave and scientific a man. Pilatre was in despair, and at length the king said that he would give him the opportunity to test the safety of his balloon in the following way: He would give full pardon to any two criminals who were willing to go up in it, provided Pilatre did not himself go.

The scientist was very angry. He said: "What! Shall vile criminals, foul murderers, men rejected from the bosom of society, have the glory of being the first to navigate the air? Never while Pilatre de Rozier draws breath!"

After repeated prayers for permission to make his experiment he appealed to the influence of the Duchess de Polignac, the governess of the royal children. To her petitions the Marquis d'Arlandes added his and asked to be allowed to accompany Pilatre. At length consent was obtained.

On Nov. 21, 1783, Pilatre and the marquis made an ascent from the gardens of the Chateau de la Muette, in the Bois. They sailed safely across the Seine, over the Hospital For Old Soldiers, over the Military school and landed about five miles from Paris. Their return was greeted with wild enthusiasm.

The marquis rode back, but Pilatre had to go first to his house and get a coat, for some one had stolen his in the mixup of their coming down, when the balloon, of course, collapsed.

Pilatre now announced that he would cross the channel from Boulogne to England. A wealthy Frenchman advanced the money to construct an improved machine that he was certain could stay in the air as long as necessary. This new invention was a balloon filled with hydrogen gas. Under it was a cylinder by which he expected to rarefy the air contained in it so that he could either ascend or descend easily and so reach currents of air that would take him in any desired direction.

It was five months before there came a day suitable for making the aerial trip. A physician who loved adventure and believed in the success of the experiment went with him from Boulogne.

They cut the cords that held the balloon at 7 o'clock in the morning. The ascent was majestic, and when at a height of 200 feet the balloon swept into a current of air that took it toward the channel. Suddenly a cross current swept it back.

Pilatre hastened to let some cold air into the cylinder and in some way made a rent in the balloon. They were 1,700 feet high, and instantly they were dashed to the earth, mangled and crushed frightfully.

France still remembers his enthusiastic faith in his scientific efforts, and in many places are memorials and inscriptions that perpetuate his fame.—Boston Globe.

Visitor (passing through dining room with little Tommy, discovers mince pie on sideboard)—"Helgho, but that's a fine pie! Who made it?"

Tommy—Gran'ma; she always makes the pies.

Visitor—Does she, indeed? Well, I'd like to get my teeth into that one.

Tommy—You would, eh? Well, gran'ma's got ahead of you. Don't you see the prints of her'n all around the edges?—Boston Courier.

BURNING DIAMONDS.

Costly Experiments Finally Settled a Much Disputed Question.

In the year 1694 it was discovered by actual experiment that a diamond would burn. Then Cosmos III. had one fixed in the focus of a burning glass, and after some exposure to the rays of the sun it cracked, corruscated and finally disappeared like a ghost, leaving not a single trace that it had ever existed, not even an atom of ashes.

But experiments of this sort were costly. They were long in yielding any scientific result. It was only a king or a sovereign prince that could afford to see his jewels vanish like the gifts of a fairy godmother. Another potentate, Francis I., tried the quality of a number of valuable diamonds in the heat of a furnace and may have felt some gratification when he found that they had disappeared. This was in 1750, and about twenty years later scientific experimenters burned a magnificent diamond in Paris.

A jeweler named LeBlanc now came forward and denied the possibility of burning a diamond, even going so far as to accuse the chemist Macquer of fraud in conducting his diamond burning operations. He had often, he asserted, exposed diamonds to great heat, with the sole result of increasing their brilliancy.

A Mr. Streeter had done the same with success, but it seems that LeBlanc only knew half of what Mr. Streeter knew. When Macquer demanded that the jeweler inclose some diamonds in coal in a crucible he rashly assented, and in three hours they had all disappeared.

Then Maillard, who seems to have had his suspicions of these operations, put three diamonds in an earthen bowl packed in powdered charcoal and exposed them to intense heat without injury. Next Lavoisier came forward with his explanations of the phenomena attending the results of these various experiments. He says that by shutting out the air diamonds are preserved in the intense heat of a furnace, but that the admission of oxygen, which combines with the carbon of the diamond, allows it to burn almost as readily as a piece of coal.

Roguish Ravens.

The raven of southern Europe is a bold fellow—not unlike his cousin, the crow. Some notices of the bird, given by an English traveler in Corsica, offer amusing proof of this.

A youth whom I employed to carry my camera could never look on ravens with any equanimity, for he had suffered much from their thievish impudence when sent to the bush to gather firewood. On one occasion he lost his dinner, a loaf of bread wrapped in a napkin, although he was working close to the spot where he had laid it and had turned his back for only a minute. But the most unpardonable insult he had ever received happened on a day when he was out gathering wood. As he was stooping down to bind a bundle of fagots a raven suddenly swooped from behind, lifted the cap from his head and flew away with it to a lofty crag, from which she uttered croaks of triumph. The cap was subsequently seen lined with straw and serving for a nest.

The Sack Tree.

Before the advance of civilization trees provided the principal articles of "clothing" for inhabitants of tropical regions. One of the best examples of these trees is the "sack tree" (Antiaris innoxia) of Ceylon. To obtain the bark of this tree is felled and cut into sections, and these are submerged in still water for several weeks for the purpose of rotting the bark, the latter then being washed and pounded so as to separate the parenchymatous tissue from the closely interwoven layer of fibers. The bark is afterward dried and bleached, when it is ready for use in a fashion according to the fancy of the wearer. The sections of the bark may be cut so as to adapt it for either a ready made skirt, kilt or shirt.—London Chronicle.

How New Zealand Became British.

How New Zealand became a British possession is one of the romances of colonization. In 1839 it was a sort of no man's land, but it leaked out that France contemplated annexation. There was a race from Sydney between a British and a French man-of-war, the former winning by a few hours and securing New Zealand for the British crown. A few years previously a French adventurer, Baron de Thierry, at the head of 100 followers, whom he had recruited in Sydney, had proclaimed himself "king of New Zealand," but the baron had not sufficient funds to maintain a monarchy. His subjects deserted, and his reign collapsed.

OUR OLD TREES.

California's Giant Sequoias Antedate the Pyramids.

The giant sequoia trees of Calaveras county, Cal., are the oldest living things on the face of the earth. Not another thing that has life in it but was germinated since they began their existence. No one knows exactly how old they are, but some that have been felled indicate that they were more than 4,000 years old, so that it is safe to say that these large trees have been growing for at least that length of time. One of them is estimated to be at least 5,000 years of age and is still in a healthy condition and bids fair to live hundreds or even thousands of years longer.

When the pyramids of Egypt were built these trees were of goodly size. When Rome was founded they would have furnished beams for the bridges. The temples of ancient Greece and Assyria might have been decorated with their leaves.

One cannot behold these gigantic trees without a feeling of awe at the ephemeral existence of things in general. There they stand, themselves young in the record of the world, yet the oldest living things upon the face of the earth. All else that was alive when they came into existence has perished. Empires have sprung up, flourished, died since these sprouts poked their tender heads above the soil. Colossal monuments of art have crumbled into dust. Races have evolved, prospered, perished and been forgotten since they first budded in their youth; continents have been formed, mountains have been formed, the confines of the seas have been altered by erosion or by earthquake; lakes have come into existence and dried up. Harkening back to the days of their youth, it is a new world which they behold at this time.

As for the life of man himself, a mere breath compares with theirs. It is a proud family that traces its ancestry back for a dozen generations—for a couple of hundred years. The royal houses of the world are sometimes able to trace their lineage for a thousand years, when it is lost in the dim light of uncertainty. Yet here stands the monarchs that have waved their plumes in triumph for many times as long as the oldest of the royal houses.

Man is born and obtains his growth, he struggles and succumbs, his body is given to the worms, his bones are pulverized into dust, his very name and place forgotten and other generations come upon the scene, yet these trees go about their way of living, gathering up the moisture and the chemicals and building them into wood and bark and leaves, apparently unmindful of the passing of time.—Dayton News.

OUT HIS MIND.

"Have you forgotten that X that you borrowed of me some time ago?"

"Oh, no. I still have it in my mind."

"Well, don't you think this would be a good time to relieve your mind of it?"

The sorrow of yesterday is as nothing, that of today is bearable, but that of tomorrow is gigantic because indistinct.—Euripides.

The Value of Good Digestion

Is easy to figure if you know what your stomach is worth. Kodol keeps the stomach at par value, by insuring good digestion. Kodol cures Dyspepsia.

Kodol insures good digestion by absolutely duplicating Nature's normal process, in perfectly digesting all food taken into the stomach.

While Kodol is doing this, the stomach is resting—and becoming strong and healthy. A strong and healthy stomach guarantees a sound and active brain.

The man with a sound stomach—a stomach that is doing for the body just what Nature intended it to do—is the man who is always prepared for any emergency. He is "there with the goods."

The man with a sick stomach, is a man sick all over. When the stomach is irritated by undigested food, the blood and heart are directly affected. Then dizziness, unnatural sleepiness, sick-headaches, vertigo and fainting spells, and even serious brain trouble develop. Kodol will prevent these.

Spurring the stomach and brain to special effort by "tonics" and "stimulants" doesn't cure anything or accomplish any good. Neither does dieting. Indigestion and the serious ailments which it induces can be averted and corrected only by natural means.

Kodol supplies this natural means. It performs the stomach's work for it—just as the stomach should perform it—while the stomach takes a little rest, "for the stomach's sake."

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate. All druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 2 1/2 times as much as the fifty-cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago

THE PETRIFIED MAN.

Cardiff Giant Swindle That Came to a Sudden End.

Not very long after Barnum's Cardiff giant went into history some young men appeared at Lancaster, Pa., with the petrified body of a man which they said they had found on their father's farm in Iowa while plowing," related the man who was telling of the incident. The young men were exhibiting their petrified man in a tent, charging 10 cents admission. To the large and keenly interested crowd they explained that while working on the field one day the plow struck something hard, supposedly a rock. The plowman stooped down to remove the obstruction, but could not. He called his brother. By their united efforts with shovels they uncovered the rock, which turned out to be a petrified man, perfect in every outline. A great many people came to the grave and identified the remains as a neighbor who had gone off to the war, returned home and mysteriously disappeared. A mark under the eye and some peculiar scars in the back were the main means of identification, the speaker said, and there was no doubt that the soldier had died and turned to stone.

The large man who had been listening thoughtfully spoke up when the description was finished. "You are sure that's Jim —?" he asked.

"Certainly," said the speaker. "My father knew him well. He has positively identified him."

"Know how he came to his death?"

"No, sir. It's a mystery."

"Then we'll hold an inquest."

In response to the amazed exclamation from the owners of the petrified man the inquisitor explained that he was the prosecuting attorney of the county and that it was his duty to see that inquests were held in all cases where death was mysterious. The boys protested, but in vain. They tried to get out of town with their exhibit, but were arrested and put under bond. The petrified man was laid out in state and the coroner summoned. He brought a mallet along. The crowd was immense, for this time the show was free.

"If there's anybody here who knows how this man came to his death he will please come forward," said the prosecutor.

"Nobody responded, for the boys had jumped their bond.

"Then I will make a postmortem examination," said the coroner, picking up his mallet.

"He tapped the petrified soldier alongside the head. It rolled around and around like a baby on a doll rack when the thrower hits a bullseye. Then he tapped an arm. That member also did the whirling act, because an iron rod ran through the center. The other arm performed the same way under the coroner's scientific manipulation.

"What do you find was the cause of death, doctor?" asked the prosecutor.

"Too much iron in the system."

"Without another word he picked up his mallet and left the death chamber. The petrified man was patched up and sold to a traveling speculator for $60, which just about covered the costs of the inquest and the attorney's fees. The last I heard of the petrified man he was being shown in the Ozarks as the remains of a Persian king or duke who had been slain several thousand years ago by his subjects, who thought he was hard."—New York Sun.

Her Aim.

"I understand you shot a burglar during the absence of your husband," said the great detective.

"Yes," admitted the frail little woman, "I did."

"What became of him?" asked the detective.

"Why, the other burglar carried him away," answered she.

"Which other burglar?" he said.

"The one I shot at," she explained.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

Its Effect Upon the Customer to Whom It Was Made.

A business man of Dayton, O., tells this story of some commercial friends of his:

A customer who bought in a small way from the wholesalers and whose credit was not of the sort known as gilt edged visited the city and purchased a $2,500 bill of goods, paying $2,500 in cash and giving his note for the remaining $300.

After the transaction had been closed and the paper and currency had changed hands the customer said:

"Now, after a deal of that size it is customary to give a purchaser a present. Come across with it."

"We'll throw in a pair of suspenders," laughed the salesman temporarily.

"A pair of suspenders, eh! Say, quit fooling. I really mean it. I expect you to do something in acknowledgment of my patronage."

The salesman went to the manager with the problem, and the manager said:

"Well, if he feels that way about it we might encourage him a bit. We'll do something that ought to please him greatly. Give him back his $300 note. Make him a present of his paper. That will make him a cash customer and raise his credit and save him money besides."

The salesman went back, pleased to be the bearer of such joyful tidings of liberality in business.

"Well, sir," he said, "we've arranged about that present, all right. Here, with a flourish, "is your note. We give it back to you."

The customer did not seem enthusiastic. Instead, without looking at the note he asked:

"Is it indorsed?"

"No," said the salesman in astonishment.

"Then I guess you better gimme the suspenders," said the disappointed customer.—Chicago News.

Had Wings, but Couldn't Fly.

At an examination in a village school a class of infants was being questioned on natural history. After several questions the inspector asked:

"What bird that comes from Africa has wings, but can't fly?"

The class was dumfounded.

Thinking to encourage them, the inspector offered a sixpence to the little boy or girl who could tell him. After a few seconds' hesitation a little girl of four years put out her hand.

"Well, my little dear," said the inspector, "what is it?"

"Please, sir, a dead un!"—London Tit-Bits.

Sugar in Olden Times.

Cane sugar was produced by the Chinese at a very remote epoch. In western countries it was a more recent introduction. The Roman writers Pliny, Varro and Lucian at the beginning of our era barely mentioned it. It was then known by the name of Indian salt and honey of Asia, Arabia or India. In 1090 crusaders arriving in Syria discovered sugar cane, which became a favorite dainty of the soldiers. During the following centuries the sugar cane was introduced into Cyprus, the Nile delta, the north coast of Africa as far as Gibraltar, Sicily and the kingdom of Naples. It reached Spain in the fifteenth century and thence was carried to Madeira and the Canaries. In 1644 the French imported it into Guadeloupe and a little later into Martinique and Louisiana. The Portuguese introduced it into Brazil and the English into Jamaica.—Scientific American.

The Personal Argument.

"Do you think the world is growing better, George?"

"Do I understand that you want me to decide whether I am a better man than my father or not?"

"How funny!"

"Oh, I don't know. Are you a better woman than your mother?"

"Why, of course not. How absurd!"

"Then how do you expect the world to grow better when you fail to help it along?"

"George, you are very rude."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Almanac.

The word "almanac" is derived from the Arabic "aland manah," which means to count and thus aptly applies to measurements of time. In ancient days almanacs were employed by the Alexandrian Greeks, but it is uncertain as to when they were actually introduced in Europe. In 1150 A. D. Solomon Jarchus issued an almanac in script, but the first printed one was brought to Vienna in 1457 by the great astronomer, Purbach. The most celebrated almanac maker was an adept in the so called black art, Nostradamus, and since his time, somewhere toward the middle of the fifteenth century, almanacs with predictions have been in vogue, and their pictorial prophecies and weather lore have invariably appealed to a large number of people.

NUTS AS FOOD.

They Contain Little Water and Much Fat and Protein.

The edible portion of nuts, with few exceptions, is very concentrated food, containing little water and much fat. In general nuts are also rich in protein. Those ranking highest in this nutrient, the pignolia, a variety of pine nut imported from Spain, with 33.9 per cent; the peanut, with 29.8 per cent, and the butternut, with 27.9 per cent protein, surpass most ordinary animal or vegetable foods in this respect. The almond, beechnut and pistachio, with 21.4 per cent, 21.8 per cent and 22.6 per cent respectively, compare favorably with dried legumes. The Brazil nut contains 17.4 per cent protein, the filbert 16.5 per cent, the walnut 18.2 per cent, the hickory nut 15.4 per cent, the pine nut 14.6 per cent, the pecan 12.1 per cent and the dry chestnut but 10.7 per cent. The dry acorn, fresh chestnut and cocconut, with 4.4, 6.4 and 6.6 per cent respectively, are not as rich in protein as bread.

Of the nuts here included the richest in fat is the pecan, with an average of 70.7 per cent, but seven other varieties—the Brazil nut, butternut, candlenut, filbert, hickory nut, pine nut and walnut—contain upward of 60 per cent. The almond, cocconut and pistachio yield between 50 and 60 per cent of this nutrient. The beechnut, peanut and pignolia contain about 50 per cent. In other words, in thirteen of the varieties of nuts appearing in the foregoing table half or more of the edible portion is fat or oil.

Only a few of the commonly used nuts yield any notable amounts of total carbohydrate matter, the dry chestnut, with 73 per cent, rating highest. Beechnuts, pine nuts and peanuts have about 18 per cent. The quantity of starch found is, with some exceptions, quite small, ranging from 3 per cent in the beechnut to 27 per cent in the chestnut.—Department of Agriculture Report.

Food Scarce.

"This circular describing the Mountingvue says you can sit at the dinner table and see the beautiful mountain peaks," said the man who contemplated going.

"That is true," replied the one who had been, "and that's just about all you can see."—Yonkers Statesman.

Looking For a Bargain.

A young man who works in a Chestnut street store was invited to his employer's home for supper last night. The purpose of the invitation was to introduce the young man to the employer's daughters.

After supper the old man said: "Yes, I am proud of my daughters and would like to see them comfortably married, and as I have made a little money they will not go penniless to their husbands. There is Mary, twenty-five years old and a really good girl. I shall give her $1,000 when she marries. Then comes Rose, who won't see thirty-five again, and I shall give her $3,000. And the man who takes Eliza, who is forty, will have $5,000 with her."

The visitor reflected a moment and then inquired: "You haven't one about fifty, have you?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Public Library.

The library under the management of the End of the Century Club has been a great benefit to the community, as well as given pleasure to many readers. Finding it impossible to enlarge the library, or even to run it with the money we have we ask the people of Greenville to help us, by reading the books and paying one dollar per year for the privilege. Realizing the great benefits derived from reading good books we hope the public will become interested and help us in this work. Subscribers will have the privilege of sending names of new books desired, to the librarian. New books will be added monthly, and many other improvements made. Beginning on November the first the library will be opened on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 3 to 5 p. m.

LEPROSY.

The Modern Disease Is Different From That of Olden Times.

There is possibly no disease the presence of which inspires greater fear in the public mind than does leprosy. This is perhaps in a measure due to the loathsomeness of the disease in its later stages, but it is in most cases simply fear of a name.

The disease or diseases spoken of as leprosy in the Bible are popularly supposed to be the same as the leprosy of today, and the evident fear the leper inspired in the people of old is held to justify the dread with which he is still regarded. The Biblical descriptions do not, however, fit modern leprosy, so that, whether the fear of the "leper" of olden times was or was not justified, it should not be allowed to color the view with which the leper of today is regarded.

Leprosy is indeed an infectious disease—that is to say, it is due to the presence in the tissues of a bacillus known generally as Hansen's bacillus, after the Norwegian physician who discovered it. But whether it is contagious under the ordinary conditions of modern life, in temperate climates at least, is held by specialists in diseases of the skin to be very doubtful.

Of the few lepers known to the physicians in all the larger cities some are cared for in hospitals and others live at home and visit the clinics or the doctor's office from time to time. Yet an instance in which another person has acquired the disease from any of these lepers is unknown.

There are many diseases more to be dreaded than leprosy because more rapidly fatal, more painful or more contagious. Yet none of them, except perhaps smallpox, is more feared.

The illogical terror of leprosy may be the cause of great cruelty to those afflicted. There are thousands of people who show culpable indifference to the enforcement of the laws against spitting in public places, although they know full well that the success of the crusade against tuberculosis hinges largely upon care in this regard. Yet these same persons would fly in horror from any place that had harbored a leper.—Youth's Companion.

John Wesley's Quarrel.

John Wesley once had a disagreement with Joseph Bradford, his traveling companion of many years, and they agreed to part. They retired for the night, each firm in his determination and each doubtless deploring in his heart the separation soon to follow between two friends who had been so devoted and mutually helpful. In the morning Wesley asked Bradford if he had considered during the night their agreement to part.

"Yes, sir," said Bradford. "And must we part?" inquired Wesley.

"Please yourself, sir," said Bradford grimly.

"But will you not ask my pardon?" demanded Wesley.

"No, sir."

"You won't?"

"No, sir."

"In that case," said Wesley gently, "I must ask yours."

It was not the ending which Bradford anticipated. A moment he hesitated, and then, breaking into tears, he followed Wesley's example and forgave and was for-

The Landlord's Name.

Sir Edward Malet's memoirs give the following as Bismarck's favorite story: "A traveler in the shires rested at noon at a wayside hostelry and took luncheon. When it was finished he asked for his bill. The landlord brought it to him. After casting a glance at it he looked at the boniface and said, 'What is your name?' 'My name,' replied the landlord, 'is Partridge.' 'Ah,' said the traveler, 'by the length of your bill I should have thought it would have been Woodcock.'"
