MARTIN LANG.

Former Greenville Lady Married in Hickory.

Hickory, Nov. 23.—One of the most beautiful weddings ever seen in Hickory was solemnized at the Presbyterian church here this afternoon at 3 o'clock, when Miss Alice Priscilla Lang became the bride of Mr. Wesley Nicholas Martin. Rev. J. G. Garth of the Presbyterian church performed the ceremony. The church was beautifully decorated in white and green with palms, ferns, ivy, etc.

Mrs. Saberia D'Anna played the bridal march from Lohengrin and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" during the ceremony and Miss Annie L. Abernethy sang several beautiful and appropriate selections.

Miss Reide Lang, of Farmville, was the maid of honor and Mr. Robert E. Martin the best man. Miss Olie Martin, of Hickory, and Miss Agnes Martin, of Greensboro were the bridesmaids. The ushers were Messrs. J. A. Martin and W. S. Martin, brothers of the groom, and M. H. Yount, J. M. Ramsay, J. C. Shuford and Leroy Abernethy. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white satin and carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore a gown of pink mesaline and the bridesmaids gowns of "Rodola a Suskana" silk with pearl trimmings and carried pink carnations. The ring-bearer, little Miss Evelyn Lang, sister of the bride, wore a charming accordion-plaited dress of white china silk.

The following out-of-town guests attended: Mrs. W. M. Lang and Miss Reide Lang, of Farmville, Miss Agnes Martin, of Greensboro, Mrs. E. R. Russell, of Charlotte, and Mrs. W. A. Rhyne, of Newton.

The groom's present to the bride was a beautiful diamond brooch, which clasped her bridal veil, and to the ushers handsome gold stick pins. The bride presented her attendants with handsome gold bro pins with the date of the occasion engraved upon them.

After the ceremony the young people drove to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Lang, where a delightful wedding supper was given in honor of them.

They took eastbound train No. 12 for Washington, Baltimore and New York. Their future home will be in Hickory.

Mrs. Martin came here with her parents from the eastern part of the State some time ago and is one of Hickory's most popular young women.

Mr. Martin is one of Hickory's foremost young business men, being the head of the Martin Company, plumbers, and has a host of friends in the city.

Stole His Turkey.

W. J. Turnage, the transfer man, went to bed mad Thursday night. His Thanksgiving turkey, which was disfigured only slightly by the carving for the midday meal, was put back in the kitchen stove to be kept for supper. During the afternoon some hungry thief visited the kitchen and appropriated the turkey. When the family were assembling for supper and sent to the kitchen for the turkey, no turkey was there.

N. C. CONFERENCE.

Methodists in Session at Raleigh—Bishop A. W. Wilson Presiding.

Wednesday morning at 9:30 in Edenton street church, Raleigh, the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, was called to order in its 73rd annual session. The presiding officer is Bishop A. W. Wilson, of Baltimore. He conducted the devotional service and the Sacrament of the Lord's supper was then administered.

The roll call showed 120 clerical and 16 lay delegates present at the opening session. Rev. W. G. Cunningham was re-elected secretary with Rev. G. T. Simmons as recording secretary.

The characters of the nine presiding elders were passed and their reports submitted, also those of a number of pastors.

The report of The Raleigh Christian Advocate and of the Methodist Orphanage were submitted to the conference. One hundred and thirty-nine children are now in the orphanage—50 boys and 89 girls.

The characters of the preachers sustaining supernumerary and superannuated relation were passed.

Conference adjourned its session at 11 o'clock Thursday in order to hear a Thanksgiving sermon by Bishop Wilson.

FRIDAY NOV. 26, 1909.

Not alone on one day of the year, but every day you should be thankful to God for the blessings He bestows upon you.

Too bad that the A. & M. boys met defeat at the hands of the V. P. I. team in Norfolk on Thanksgiving day. Yet this is the first defeat the farmer Tar Heel boys have taken.

After his long trip covering almost the entire country, President Taft ought to be sufficiently acquainted with the needs of the people to get up a good message to congress.

Uncle Sam sending so many troops down to Nicaragua looks like there may be something doing, and the natives had better be getting on their good behavior.

Anxiety for the safety of John Jacob Astor and his yacht, supposed to have been lost in the recent West Indies storm, has been dissipated by letters received in New York which he wrote from San Juan after the storm.

Some of the newspapers are venturing on dangerous ice again by making war on big hats the ladies wear to church and other places of public assembly. The Charlotte Observer goes so far as to intimate that the orthodox Jewish method of seating women to themselves behind a grating is envied by the victims of the present day big hat nuisance.

We hear that some people who desire to locate in Greenville are engaging houses for next year. That is the way The Reflector likes to see things, and a cordial welcome awaits all good people who come to cast their lot among us. The motto "Our Greenville, yours if you come," will apply to all. You cannot find a better town in Eastern North Carolina, or anywhere else.

Congressman David A. De Armond, of the sixth Missouri district, was burned to death while trying to save his little grandson from a fire which destroyed his home Tuesday. Both of them perished together in the flames. The death of Congressman DeArmond is a great loss to the nation, as he was a man of marked ability.

Small and the Waterway.

In the course of an interesting article on this subject The Raleigh Evening Times gives proper credit for the movement to Congressman John H. Small, who is known as "The Father of the Inland Waterway." It was through the faithful work of Congressman Small, The Times says, that congress was induced to appropriate over five hundred thousand dollars to begin this work and now two of the biggest dredges on the Atlantic coast are at work cutting a canal north of Beaufort. By the cutting of this canal and the cutting of a canal leading up to Norfolk a ship can pass down through Albemarle and Pamlico sounds and out to sea and never be bothered with the dangers of Cape Hatteras. This alone will open up Eastern North Carolina to the world and make the big sounds great centres of shipping just as the great lakes are for the North. The possibilities for future development in Eastern North Carolina are wonderful. When we get this great waterway the people of this State will owe it to the persistent work of Hon. John H. Small because he has devoted every energy possible for this one enterprise. When Mr. Small addressed that big assembly of capitalists and congressmen and senators from all over the North and East, it made every North Carolinian proud to see the way they received him. Everybody in the convention was talking about Small, the first man who talked waterways in congress.—Charlotte Chronicle.

TRUTHFUL REPORTS.

Greenville Reads Them with Uncommon Interest.

A Greenville citizen tells his experience in the following statement. No better evidence than this can be had. The truthful reports of friends and neighbors is the best proof in the world. Read and be convinced.
John G. Latham, 907 Cotanche street Greenville, N. C., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills in my case far surpassed any other kidney remedy I had previously used. For some time my kidneys were disordered, the secretions being too frequent and painful in passage. When I read of Doan's Kidney Pills, I was so much impressed that I procured a box at John L. Wooten's Drug Store. They seemed to go directly to the seat of my trouble and gave me relief in a short time. My kidneys were restored to their normal condition and I felt better in every way."
For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

QUICKSAND.

How It is Formed and Its Growsome Characteristics.

To most persons the word "quicksand" gives a sensation of horror similar to that produced by the thought of a snake, and many sensational accounts have given to quicksand almost human attributes. No ordinary observer would be able to distinguish dry quicksand from any other sand, and the average person would be unable to restore it to its "quick" properties even if he tried. If water is mixed with the quicksand the mass does not become mobile, and if the water is drained off the sand will be found firmly packed.

Quicksand is comparatively very light, weighing about ninety-four pounds to the cubic foot, while other forms of sand run as high as 171 pounds. Quicksand when examined under the microscope will be found to have rounded corners, like river sand, as distinguished from "sharp" sand. It is quicksand that is used in hour-glasses and egg glasses, partly because of its fineness and partly because it does not eventually cloud the glass by scratching, as would the sharp sand. It is its lightness that quicksand owes its deadly qualities, and a demonstration of how it becomes "quick" may be given by placing a quantity in a bucket and adding water by pressure through a hole in the bottom, allowing the water to overflow very slowly when it has worked up through the sand. The upward current will be found to loosen the sand and to raise the surface very slightly, separating and lubricating the particles so that they are easily displaced.

The bucket now contains genuine quicksand. The sand, owing to the support it receives from the water, has its weight, or supporting power, reduced proportionately, weighing in the water but thirty-two and a half pounds as against ninety-four pounds when dry. Bulk for bulk, the mixture is nearly twice the weight of a man, but is too mobile to give support and too thick to swim in. In its natural state, presenting an apparently firm surface, resembling simply damp sand, it is the most deadly man trap conceivable.

Quicksand requires in all cases an upward current which is not quick or strong enough to break through in the form of a spring. Ordinarily water flowing over quicksand will not make it dangerous. It may be formed in tidal rivers and on the shores of tidal seas by the rising tide saturating a porous stratum of ground below high water mark, and when the tide falls a return current is established through the porous (sandy) ground with a sufficient velocity to loosen the sand and make it "quick."

A permanent quicksand is found where a slow current of fresh water finds its way to the surface of the sand bed either in the bottom of a stream or elsewhere. Quicksands that are encountered during the sinking of walls and foundations are due to the influx of water when the work gets below "spring level" or the level of the water in the ground at that particular spot. The sand, being deprived of the lateral support of the water in the excavation, is pushed in from behind by the water currents flowing from all sides.

One of the most peculiar and growsome characteristics of quicksand is that it will soon engulf any object cast upon its surface, no matter how light that object may be, even a perfectly dry stick.—Harper's Weekly.

Eggs Worth Millions.

Two poached eggs on toast once formed the foundation of the great New York stock market. If the eggs were eaten securities advanced in price; if left untouched Wall street shivered and quotations crumbled. One morning the eggs proved worth a thousand times their weight in gold, for the news that they had been eaten with relish added 2 per cent to active stocks. Even 1 per cent on the $10,000,000,000 securities listed on the New York exchange would be equivalent to $100,000,000. By such trifles is Wall street swayed when seized by hysteria, when hypnotized by a personality, when lost to the sound reason that usually governs its actions.—Bert C. Forbes in Van Norden Magazine.

It Sounded Hopeful.

A young man who was not particularly entertaining was monopolizing the attention of a pretty debutante with a lot of uninteresting conversation. "Now, my brother," he remarked in the course of a dissertation on his family, "is just the opposite of me in every respect. Do you know my brother?"

"No," the debutante replied demurely, "but I should like to."—Lippincott's.

The Only Way.

"Is there any method that will enable a man to understand a woman?" queried the innocent youth.

"The only way to understand a woman," replied the home grown philosopher, "is not to try. Under these circumstances she will reveal herself sooner or later."—Chicago News.

No Chance of That.

The beggar accepted gratefully a nickel from the professional humorist.

"Thank you, sir," he said, his voice vibrant with deep feeling. "Oh, thank you, sir, and may you live to be as old as your jokes!"—Washington Post.

OCEAN WAVES.

Curious Facts About the Irregularities of the Tides.

To the ordinary landsman tides along the coast are most puzzling. He has been taught that the tides rise and fall twice in the twenty-four hours and that this depends in some mysterious way upon the moon. But when it occurs that in his travels he sees a spot along the shore where there is no tide at all he is at a loss to explain the phenomenon.

To be exact, there is only one ocean in the world where the tides follow the moon with absolute regularity. This is the great Antarctic basin, and the reason is that there and there only is to be found a sweep of water entirely uninterrupted by land. The enormous wave raised by the moon's attraction courses round the world south of Cape Horn and the Cape of Good Hope with absolutely nothing to break it. In the northern hemisphere great masses of land interrupt the tidal waves and, combined with the shallowness of inland seas, cause them to perform antics that seem most strange.

The depth of water has much to do with tidal irregularities. Out in the open ocean, when the tide is abyssmal—that is, about 5,000 fathoms—the speed of the waves is amazing. Where the depth decreases to five fathoms the tide travels at a comparatively slow rate. In England, for example, which is surrounded by narrow, land broken seas, the result is that the Britons get some of the most terrible and dangerous tidal races and currents.

The most formidable is the whirlpool between the island of Jura and Scarba, on the west coast of Scotland. This is known as the "Caldron of the Spotted Seas." Here is a race, running at a speed to be matched only by a mountain torrent. The force of a heavy tidal current pushing up a wide mouthed river causes what is termed a "bore." The most striking example of this tidal effect is seen on the Amazon, a moving wall of water thirty feet high and reaching from bank to bank rushing inland from the ocean.—New York Tribune.

ILLUSTRATORS' WOES.

Errors That Were Pointed Out by Unfeeling Editors.

"Now, what do you think of that?" asked the youthful illustrator ruefully as he tossed his comrade a letter. It was from an editor, and its mandate was stern. It said:

"Dear Sir—Permit me to call your attention to the importance of reading a story before attempting to illustrate it. I am aware that the modern artist does not observe this rule, but it is imperative in this office. If you will examine the text of the story sent you for illustration you will learn that the army officer mentioned is said to have taken his fishing reel out of his haversack, and you have made a picture showing this officer—who, by the way, is a brigadier general—with a knapsack strapped to his back. A knapsack, my dear sir, is not a haversack. Furthermore, no army officer ever carried a knapsack or ever will carry one. If the general should see your drawing he would be insulted. Will you please acquaint yourself thoroughly with the appearance of a haversack, correct your drawing and return it to this office at the earliest possible date?"

"Just think of having to know all such details!" exclaimed the artist wrathfully.

"That's nothing," his studio comrade responded consolingly. "I made an awful break once. I painted a picture to illustrate a story in which a widow got married, and I depicted the bride in a long white veil. Of course I thought the drawing was a beauty and a wonder, and I was ecstatic over the way I had handled that effect in white. Imagine how crushed I was to have the editor—by the way, she was a woman—smile witheringly and tell me that no widow ever wore a veil when being remarried. How was I to know that? I have never been a widow."—New York Press.

A King's Umbrella.

The king of the Belgians once left his umbrella in a hansom when driving to Brussels. This was returned to his majesty a few hours afterward by the proud caddy, who was offered for his honesty by King Leopold the sum of 100 francs. The astute Jehu, however, begged a great favor of the king. Could he have the umbrella instead of the money? The favor was granted, and before many days had passed the cabman had put up the umbrella for sale, and was knocked down to some royal enthusiast for 1,100 francs. When King Leopold heard of this he exclaimed, "Well, I've heard of an umbrella being put up to keep off showers of rain, but this seems to have been put up to bring down showers of gold!"—London Globe.

A Politician's Theory.

"Why did Diogenes adopt those spectacular methods in his effort to find an honest man?"

"Oh," answered Senator Sorghum, "I suppose he had a hard job that paid neither salary nor perquisites that he wanted to work off on somebody."—Washington Star.

Hubby's Plot.

"I wish I were a heroine, George."

"Why, it is easy for you to become a heroine, dear."

"I'd like to know how?"

"The woman who is not afraid to remain alone while her husband goes to a poker party is a heroine."—Houston Post.

LITERARY FORGERIES

Versatility and Cleverness of a Shrewd Scotch Lad.

FOOLED THE CONNOISSEURS.

He Poured Forth His Extraordinary Documents In Profusion to Supply the Demand and Was Finally Exposed by a Simple Little Slip.

From the days of Isidor Mercator, who forged letters of the bishops of Rome with such skill and success that they were treasured for centuries in the Roman archives, to the days of Ireland, the notorious forger of Shakespearean plays and letters, and Chatterton, the clever and ill fated boy who died miserably in his attic, there have never been wanting unprincipled men who could forge ancient manuscripts so cleverly that leading experts have been deceived.

But for versatility and cleverness none of these forgers of past centuries could approach the cleverness of a young Scotchman who years ago produced a long succession of forged manuscripts which completely baffled the connoisseurs of the world. The true and full story of these remarkable forgeries is almost unknown and is so extraordinary that it may well be told.

It was in Edinburgh that this incomparable forger practiced his arts, and it was by an accident that he was tempted to embark on a career which, after a spell of great success, involved him in disaster. One day the principal of an Edinburgh firm of lawyers told one of his clerks to clear out several boxes full of old documents, the accumulation of many years. Among them were several documents and autographs the value of which the clerk was quick to recognize, and he had no difficulty in finding purchasers for them. As the supply was limited and the demand constantly increasing it occurred to him to supplement the genuine documents with others of his own manufacture, and as he developed a remarkable skill in forging and had already won the confidence of a large number of collectors he found it easy to dispose of as many forgeries as he could produce at very profitable prices.

Many of them were sold to collectors in different parts of the world, others were disposed of by auction, and the remainder were pawned and sold as unredeemed pledges. These forgeries covered a very wide range and included autographs and letters by Cromwell, Mary, queen of Scots; James VI, Prince Charlie, John Knox, Rob Roy, Burns, Scott, Thackeray, Carlyle, Salisbury, Gladstone, Lord Nelson and many other men of note as well as vast quantities of Jacobite correspondence.

So cleverly were the forgeries executed that the largest purchaser of Scott's letters was a gentleman who as a boy had carried most of the great author's manuscripts from Abbotsford to his Edinburgh publishers and was as familiar with Scott's handwriting as his own, and the head of the firm that published Lord Byron's works purchased forty-seven letters purporting to be Lord Byron's for the sum of £125 7s. 6d. A very large collection of these manuscripts was purchased for a sum of over £4,000 and presented to the Lenox Library, New York, where they were for some time regarded with reverence as the chief treasure of the library, and another collection was presented to the city of Edinburgh.

Although these forgeries were poured on the market in such profusion, no suspicion seems to have been aroused. They were accepted without question by the experts and found ready purchasers at large prices. Whether the forger's success made him careless or whether it was due to one of those remarkable oversights to which the most skillful criminals seem liable and which bring their career to a close, the forger was at last exposed through a mistake of which such a clever man should scarcely have been capable.

Among the many forgeries he produced a poem signed by Robert Burns. It was called "The Poor Man's Prayer" and opened with this stanza:

Amidst the more important toils of state,
The counsels laboring in the patriotic soul;
Though Europe from thy voice expect her fate,
And thy keen glance extend from pole to pole.

This poem, which consisted of nineteen verses, might well have escaped detection with the rest but for the fact that a gentleman to whom the poem was shown discovered the identical verses in the London Magazine of 1766 in a poem addressed to the Earl of Chatham by one Simon Hodge, laborer.

Thus it appeared that if the verses were actually written by Burns the poet must have opened them under the pseudonym of Simon Hodge at the very immature age of a poet of seven years. Suspicion once aroused, doubt was at once cast on the hundreds of other documents which had emanated from the same source. The Lenox collection was submitted to the experts of the British museum and pronounced "a worthless lot of forgeries," and collectors all the world over awoke to the painful discovery that their treasures of old manuscripts were scarcely worth the paper they were written on. The forger's career was brought to a sudden termination. He was brought up for trial and sentenced to a term of imprisonment, thus closing a career of forgery which for daring, cleverness and success has perhaps never been equaled.—New York Press.

Great trees give more shade than fruit.—German Proverb.

ROMANCE OF A FORGER.

Richard W. Vaughn, the Original Bank-note Forger.

In 1787 a merchant in London by the name of Bliss advertised for a clerk and selected from the applicants Richard W. Vaughn, who, after a time, succeeded in winning the confidence of his employer to such an extent that the clerk was taken to the merchant's home and made a welcome visitor. Mr. Bliss had a young sister, with whom Mr. Vaughn immediately fell in love, and as his application for the position of brother-in-law was of much more consequence than his former one for clerkship his past record was carefully searched, and it was found that he had met with a disastrous failure in business some years previous and consequently was a bankrupt, with many liabilities and unpaid debts. He was told that he could never be accepted as a suitor for the young lady's hand until everything he owed had been paid in full. He seemed discouraged at this decision and expressed the opinion that the task was impossible, but in a short time he returned to his ladylove's family with the happy intelligence that he had fallen heir to a large property and could more than liquidate all his debts. He showed a number of banknotes in proof of his assertion and actually gave Miss Bliss five new twenty pound notes.

About this time the authorities at the Bank of England were much troubled by the appearance of a few forged notes. With little difficulty detectives traced them to Richard Vaughn. He admitted his guilt. It was attempted at his trial to prove he had not meant to put them in circulation, but only to win a wife with them. This defense, however, was useless, as he had passed them. He was found guilty of the crime of forgery, which in those days was a capital offense, and he paid the penalty of his misdeeds on the scaffold. History does not state what became of the girl who was the innocent temptation.

Vaughn has the doubtful honor of having led the way in banknote forgery. At that time an imitation was a much easier matter than it is at present, the note itself being only partly engraved, the amount, the name of the payee and the signature of the cashier being supplied in writing.

"No Lie Can Live Forever." Starvation has been known among the French commonalty before this—known and familiar. Did we not see them in the year 1775 presenting, in sallow faces, in wretchedness and raggedness, their petition of grievances and for answer getting a brand new gallows forty feet high? Hunger and darkness through long years!

Where will this end? In the abyss, one may prophesy, whither all delusions are, at all moments, traveling, where this delusion has now arrived, for if there be a faith from of old it is this, as we often repeat—that no lie can live forever. The very truth has to change its vesture from time to time and be born again. But all lies have the sentence of death written down against them in heaven's chancery itself and, slowly or fast, advance incessantly toward their hour.—Carlyle, "The French Revolution."

Kisses and Wins.

In the little Roumanian town of Helmagen an annual fair is held on the feast of St. Theodore. On this occasion the place swarms with newly married brides from all the villages in the district. Widows who have taken fresh husbands remain at home. The young women, in festive attire and generally attended by their mothers-in-law, carry jugs of wine, entwined with flowers, in their hands. They kiss every man they meet and afterward present the jug to his lips for a "nip." As he takes it he bestows a small gift on the bride. Not to take of the proffered wine is regarded as an insult to her and her family. She is therefore reserved toward strangers and only kisses those whom she thinks likely to taste of her wine. The kissing is carried on everywhere—in the street, in the taverns and in private houses.—Chicago News.

Strength of Woman's Hair.

A human hair of average thickness can support a load of six and a quarter ounces, and the average number of hairs on the head is about 30,000. A woman's long hair has a total tensile strength of more than five tons, and this strength can be increased one-third by twisting the hair. The ancients made practical use of the strength of human hair. The cords of the Roman catapults were made of the hair of slaves, and it is recorded that the free women of Carthage offered their luxuriant tresses for the same use when their city was besieged by the Romans.—Indianapolis News.

ELECTRICITY.

Two Kinds, Natural and Thermal, That Puzzle Scientists.

There is a kind of electricity that puzzles scientists, which may be termed natural electricity, but it has nothing to do with either lightning or the wall known cat's fur variety. One set of observations was made on the human eye with its optic nerve and the following results obtained:

It was found that when one end of a wire was placed on the front part of the eye and the other end on the optic nerve a current of electricity passed from one to the other; also that the size of this current varied with the amount of light that entered the eye and fell on the retina. Notice that this is a current of electricity, and not the static kind, as is that of the lightning and the rubbed fur. This same result was obtained when one end was placed on a freshly cut end of any nerve and the other end on the outside of the nerve.

Facts like these have caused many scientists to regard the body as a complicated producer of electricity, the nerves, like the insulated wires to and from our galvanic batteries, serving to conduct the electricity to and from the great central nervous organ, the brain.

Several years ago Dr. Siemens, in a lecture given before the Royal Society, tried to imitate the eye in this experiment. Crystalline selenium is a better conductor of electricity under the influence of light than it is in the dark. Its conductivity likewise varies for the different kinds of light—red, blue, green, etc. In Siemens' artificial eye, therefore, the retina was represented by a thin plate of selenium, and the source of electricity was an ordinary battery.

On opening the eyelids of this artificial eye and admitting light from a white illuminated screen a strong deflection of the galvanometer needle was observed. A black screen gave hardly any deflection, a blue one a greater and a red a much greater, but still short of that produced by the reflected white light. The eye was thus sensitive to light and color, and an imaginative scientist would not scruple to look upon the galvanometer as a kind of brain, the wires and battery as the nerves and body of an artificial organism entirely under his control.

While it is seen that all living animals can come under this head as actual producers of electricity, there are two animals that can produce enough electricity at will to do considerable damage—the torpedo and the electric eel.

One other kind of electricity that is a riddle so far is that which is produced directly from heat and called thermal electricity. If any two dissimilar metals are joined at both ends and one junction heated, a current will pass. If the same junction is cooled, a current will pass in the opposite direction. One of the greatest problems of modern physics is to get a practical way to accomplish this in great quantities so it may be applied to engineering.—New York Tribune.

A Typographical Tragedy.

"You have some professional humorists working on your linotype machines, haven't you?" asked the poet.

"Haven't noticed that any of them have a failing that way," answered the editor.

"Well, you're a poor observer. Do you read your own paper?"

"Occasionally."

"Did you read my poem, 'To Agatha,' in yesterday's issue?"

"No."

"I thought not. In the poem I wrote a line which read, 'I love you better than I love my life.'"

"That was a neat line."

"And one of your linotype humorists made it read, 'I love you better than I love my wife.'"

"Er—"

"Exactly—my wife. And my wife, not being acquainted with the failings of these key thumpers, thinks the poem was printed exactly as it was written."

Hard to Handle.

"This book," remarked the house to house merchant, as he dexterously insinuated one foot in the doorway and smiled pleasantly, "is well named 'The Mother's Guide.' With its aid you can bring up your children properly."

His victim thoughtfully examined the binding and felt the weight of the book. Then she gripped it by the edge with her right hand and brought it down, whack, on the other.

To the astonished salesman she appeared to be trying to see how convenient it was to handle, but for what purpose?

"I don't think I'll take one," she remarked at last. "I'm sure it's no better than the ordinary slipper!"—Pearson's Weekly.

AN EVENING SPENT

With the most versatile pianists, could not possibly bring you more enjoyment than you, yourself could derive from either

The Lindeman
Player Piano,
The Milton,
The Bjure Bros.
Or Lester
Player Pianos,

In fact, with either of these Player Pianos as a companion, you have the advantage of playing the music yourself--the music you best like, and playing it in that rich, full manner, bringing out the delicate beauties of the melody which even many skilled pianists fail to develop, and this, possible with the veriest novice, without your knowing one note from another.

We will take your deaf and dumb piano in exchange.

WORLD'S BANKNOTES.

Shape, Size and Color of Paper Money of the Nations.

The only paper money that is accepted practically all over the globe is not "money" at all, but the notes of the Bank of England. These notes are simply printed in black ink on Irish linen water lined paper, plain white, with ragged edges. The reason that a badly soiled or worn Bank of England note is rarely seen is that notes which in any way find their way back to the bank are immediately canceled and new ones are issued. The notes of the Banque de France are made of white water lined paper printed in black and white, with numerous mythological and allegorical pictures. They are in denominations of from 25 francs to 1,000 francs.

Bank of England notes are of a somewhat unhandy size--5 by 8 inches. South American currency resembles the bills of the United States, except that cinnamon brown and slate blue are the prevailing colors. German currency is printed in green and black, the notes being in denominations of from 5 to 1,000 marks. The 1,000 mark bills are printed on silk fiber paper.

It takes an expert or a native to distinguish a Chinese bill from a laundry ticket if the bill is of low denomination or a firecracker label if for a large amount, the print being in red on white or yellow on red, with much gilt and gorgeous devices. Italian notes are all sizes, shapes and colors. The smallest bills, 5 and 10 lire, are printed on white paper in pink, blue and carmine inks.

The most striking paper currency in the world is the 100 ruble note of Russia, which is barred from top to bottom with all the colors of the rainbow blended as when a sun ray passes through a prism. In the center in bold relief is a finely executed vignette in black. The remainder of the engraving on the note is in dark and light brown ink.

The American practice of scattering strands of silk through the paper fiber as a protection against counterfeiting is unique.--Harper's Weekly.

Missed His Only Chance.

There once lived a woman who never gave her husband a chance to say a word. The moment he opened his mouth she closed it with a torrent of words. It happened that he fell sick when his wife was out of town, and before she could get home death came and took him away. "I would feel better about it," she is still saying between her sobs, "if I could have been with John when he died. There must have been some last words he wanted to say to me."

The Review of Reviews

first, because it is a necessity--that is the rule in magazine buying of America's intellectual aristocracy. It is indispensable to the busy business man, who must keep abreast of the times, because it gives him the real news of the day in concise, readable form; it is invaluable to the thinking man, who demands only the truth and then draws his own conclusions, because it gives him just plain, straight facts.

It is helpful to the whole family. In it you will find a monthly picture of men and affairs by Dr. Albert Shaw, in his comprehensive editorial, "Progress of the World;" a clever cartoon history of the month; book reviews; the gist of the best which has appeared in the other magazines and newspapers of the world; pithy character sketches; and interesting articles on the all-important topics of the day. Authoritative, non-partisan, timely and very much to the point, "it's a liberal education," is the way subscribers express it.

OUR 1909-10 CATALOGUE

of all American magazines is a money-saver. You can't afford to order for next year without first seeing it. If you appreciate superior service, and demand maximum magazine value for the fewest dollars, write for it--today. It's free to YOU.

FAIR WARNING!

OUR LOW PRICES WILL STILL CONTINUE

WE HAVE NEVER GIVEN SUCH VALUES BEFORE

Creditors keep pushing us for their money is why we are having to sell goods at these low prices.

WE are sorry to say that we were so easy that every time we saw big values, we bought until we bought too many values, so here is where, and now is the time, when you can make your dollar do big buying at this low price, Fair Warning Sale, which is right at a season of the year that you never had this opportunity before. We are going to continue this sale, so that we can raise enough money to satisfy some of our creditors and pay one hundred cents on the dollar. We plead to you good people, if you want bargains, now is the time to get them. We have thrown our stock on the market to pay honest debts.
