MORE ABOUT THE JUG.

Interesting History of an Old Family of Early Settlers.

Ayden, N. C., Jan. 28. Editor Reflector:

About 1719, there came from England three brothers named Hancock, and settled in Pennsylvania, Maryland and North Carolina.

William Hancock settled in North Carolina, on Durham's Creek, in Beaufort county, and married soon thereafter Miss Bettie Durham, and to their union was born a son, whom they christened Durham Hancock. When this son attained his majority he moved to the little village of New Bern, and was one of the first trustees of that town. He was soon married and raised a family near the placid waters of the Neuse. Durham Hancock's oldest son was named George Hancock, and when he had developed into manhood he moved on Stoneton creek in Lenoir county near where the late Fred Jones and John Nelson once lived, and where the town of Grainger is now situated. He raised a large family of boys and girls. One of his boys was killed by Tories and his sister took his remains behind an old blind horse in a rickety cart with white oak tires, to the old burying ground on Durham's creek, and during her lonely trip she encountered the savage Indians, who detained her. Upon finding only a fearless woman with a corpse they fled in dismay, and while crossing the Dismal or Savannah she was accosted by some wild hyenas, but she still continued her lonely journey.

George had a son named James, who was fond of agriculture, and when he grew into manhood moved into Pitt county and settled on Swift creek, in the vicinity known as Fork swamp. He soon married and raised a family. His oldest son was named Herman Hancock, who wooed the heart of Miss Rhoda Worthington and lived near Hancock's, a Primitive Baptist church. To them was born several children, among them one girl named Mary, better known as "Pollie," who after her father's death lived with her widowed mother, and was quite prominent in that day as an herb and root doctor, and also told fortunes, etc. After the death of her mother she still lived alone, with only a few pet cats and a dog, until quite old. At her death of course all her belongings were converted into money. The famous jug that had been handed down through many generations was sold. Mr. R. L. Cox tells us he was the highest bidder, for 35 cents, and it was then full of honey. Since then he had dedicated its use to vinegar.

Gideon Pellet, who married one of James Hancock's daughters, was the first man who ever owned a set of steel cart tiers in Pitt county.

Dr. Haskett, the famous root and herb doctor, married one of Harman Hancock's daughters, and lived near New Bern, and some of their direct descendants live in both New Bern and Kinston and still practice the same profession.

These facts are correct as near as I can get them.

SEED CORN DAY.

Will be Held in Greenville on Tuesday, February 8th.

The corn crop is one of the most important in this section of the State. Aside from good methods of preparation, fertilization, etc., the kind of seed planted plays quite a large part in the question of yields.

In order to assist farmers in getting good seed to plant, the Farmers' Co-operative Demonstration Work will have a seed corn day at Greenville, on Tuesday, Feb. 8th., 1910. Several expert judges and several practical corn growers will be present to help select seed corn and make talks upon corn growing. They will be on the grounds from 10 a. m. 'till 4 p. m. The talks will probably occur from 1 to 2 p. m. Please come and bring with you from thirty to fifty of the best ears of your seed corn and have enough selected to plant a seed patch of one acre. In the fall we will go into the seed patch with you and help you make a careful field selection. We will then talk about preserving from weevils, storing and keeping your corn perfectly through the winter. Next spring we will start the same operation again and hope by this means to have some excellent seed corn on a large number of farms in this county.

We hope you will show your interest in this forward movement by coming out, and be sure to invite your neighbors and the boys to come. Remember the date, the place, and come early.

Yours cordially,
John F. Evans, Local Agent,
C. R. Hudson, State Agent,

PEOPLE KNOW CONDITION.

Editor Reflector:

There is a great stink in Greenville, so strong it is talked about by everybody except those who should take action—for which the tax payers put them in office—and it comes from the direction of the water and light plant. Something ought to be done to satisfy the people that the officers in charge are doing their duty, if they are. I don't make any charges, but it appears on the surface, and is being talked, that incompetency is the cause of thousands of dollars of Greenville tax payers' money going to waste in neglected machinery, such as boilers, pumps, engines, dynamos and a steam fire engine, to say nothing of the lack of fire and health protection they are and have been suffering.

A word to the wise is sufficient. The people are sitting up, taking notice and something is going to break loose before long. They know the condition of affairs, though it's on the quiet, even if there is no guage on the stand-pipe. Humble Taxpayer.

BOY'S CORN CLUB.

Several in Pitt County Have Entered the Contest.

The Reflector is glad to announce today that several Pitt county boys have entered the corn growing contest. A list of twenty-five have been handed us, and their names and post office addresses are as follows:

Roy Moore, John Joyner, Alfred Moore, Julius Jurnage, Willie Flanagan, Moses T. Moye, Farmville.

Samuel Worthington, Floyd Ellis, Roy Worthington, Dewey Harrington, Winterville, R. F. D. 2.

Major Smith, George Clark, Richard Clark, Winterville.

Henry Corey, Ira Hart, Kemp Jolley, Ayden.

Willie Laughinghouse, Johnnie Carroll, Grimesland.

Wilbur Congleton, Slade Gray, Allen Warren, Stokes.

Harvey Manning, Bethel.

George Allen, Leon Crawford, Gregg Tyson, Jr., Greenville, R. F. D. No. 1.

This is a good beginning, but we would like to see even a larger number of our boys enter the contest. There should be at least a hundred. If there are others who will enter the contest they should send their names to County Superintendent W. H. Ragsdale and get to work. The contest is open to boys between the ages of 12 and 18 years.

The Reflector also hopes that the business men of Greenville and Pitt county will offer premiums to the boys in this contest. We will be glad to publish any premiums that are offered. This corn growing contest means so much for the county that everybody should be interested in it.

SEED CORN DAY.

The Reflector Offers Two Prizes for Exhibits.

Pitt county is to have a seed day in Greenville on Tuesday, Feb. 8th. At that time farmers are asked to bring some of their best corn for exhibition, and an expert will examine it and show how to make seed selection from it. In this way every farmer who comes will be helped. The Reflector wants to see this seed corn day a great day for Pitt county and great good to come from it. As a small stimulus for exhibits on that day we are going to offer as a premium one year's subscription to The Daily Reflector to the farmer who makes the best all round exhibit of corn that day, and one year's subscription to The Eastern Reflector to the farmer exhibiting the five best ears of corn, the award to be in accordance with the decision of the examiner.

If any others want to offer premiums for exhibits The Reflector will take pleasure in mentioning it.

FARM DEMONSTRATION WORK.

Interest Growing and Farmers Providing Improved Implements.

Mr. J. F. Evans, the county agent of the farm demonstration work, tells us that more Pitt county farmers have decided to co-operate with it this year than at any time since the work was established in the county, and that these farmers are far advanced in their work for the year. Many of them began preparation of their land in December and much sub-soiling has been done, some of the plowing being 15 inches in depth. Mr. Evans says he knows of about a hundred two-horse cultivators being purchased by farmers this season, and that in the territory over which he travels the crimson clover crop is fully four hundred percent larger than last year. These things certainly speak well for the farmers of the county, and it is gratifying to see such interest being taken in farm demonstration work, and in improved land and implements.

FRIDAY, JAN. 28, 1910.

Raleigh has advanced far enough in the auditorium line to have a picture of the contemplated building printed.

They may succeed in depriving Speaker Cannon of his power, but it will not be done without a struggle to the finish.

Secretary Wilson in a recent address said that the real cause of the high price of living is that so many people are leaving the farms for the cities that there are not enough remaining to produce food for the increasing population. That may in some measure add to the trouble, but the secretary will have to dig deeper.

There is much excitement and alarm in Paris over the condition in which the city is left by the flood in the Seine river. One report says the flood practically undermined the city and there is danger of many buildings collapsing. Some of the more superstitious of the populace attribute the cause of the flood to Halley's comet.

Congress by a viva voce vote passed the Mann white slave bill which imposes a fine of not more than $5,000 and imprisonment not more than five years on any person who knowingly aids in the transportation of alien women for immoral purposes. This practice has been carried on to considerable extent by certain foreign residents of this country.

The business men of Greenville should unite in making the seed corn day here on Tuesday, Feb. 8th, an occasion of interest. A large crowd should be induced to come to town that day, and a place for showing the corn exhibits should be prepared in advance. Some premiums for the best exhibits of corn would awaken interest. Bear in mind that what helps the farmers, helps every other business.

The government has fallen down in its suit for libel against the New York World, the judge before whom the case was brought ruling that the statute under which the proceedings were begun is lacking in authority. The cause of the action against The World was the publication during the last campaign that President Roosevelt and President Taft and certain of their relatives were members of a syndicate that bought up French holdings in the Panama canal interests when it was known that the United States would purchase the stock, the syndicate profiting several million dollars in the transaction.

Who would have thought that an old North Carolinian living in a lonely farm house would at his death leave several millions of dollars worth of property to his heirs? But such seems to have been the case with the late Louis Hinton of Pasquotank county, who died a few days ago under such circumstances. It is said he owned valuable real estate in nearly every State in the Union. Besides his real estate title deeds there were found in his house a large number of personal securities, such as stocks and bonds of every kind, the value of which cannot be readily ascertained, but which are supposed to aggregate two million dollars or more. Here the question arises: What real pleasure did this old man derive from his labors in amassing such a fortune? He posed as a comparatively poor man and the many whom he could have aided derived no benefit from the accumulated wealth which did him no good. It comes to his heirs now, but he would much better have used some of it in conferring benefits upon mankind.—Charlotte Observer

FOUR MILES AN HOUR.

Not So Easy to Walk at That Rate as Many Persons Imagine.

There is nothing that the average person believes more implicitly than that he can walk four miles in an hour easily. Almost any one will say: "We were out walking for an hour and a half today. Let me see—four miles an hour; that makes six miles we went." And he is convinced that is the ground his party covered.

That same average person has only to try to walk four miles in sixty minutes to discover that it is good stiff going. There are many more folks who cover three miles in the time when they think they are going at the rate of a mile better than there are who actually know the pace they are making.

It is an easy thing to determine. For instance, one man started at One Hundred and Tenth street on Central Park West and walked down alongside the park. He noted the time when he started and swung along at a gait that he fondly believed was a mile in ten minutes. That, for instance, would be about one-half the speed that the average mile runner would make when he was fairly new to the game, but he would have had to train for a time to do that.

The walker didn't take out his watch until he had reached Ninetieth street, the end of his first mile. Then he looked. It was fifteen minutes almost to the second when he ended that mile.

This was a little of a shock, especially as there were only a couple of crosswalks in the way and there was a nice stretch of gravel path alongside the pavements on which to walk. But he started off again for the second mile. This time he walked steadily, using his hips, and eventually got striding at a clip that convinced him he was going at least four minutes better than the other time. At Seventieth street the inexorable watch showed fourteen minutes for the second mile.

"And then I was all out," said the walker, "and I made up my mind I wouldn't try to make time for the rest of my walk downtown. Those two miles in twenty-nine minutes were about my best. Perhaps I could have done the two in a little better, but to go on for two more would have pulled the average down. It taught me something about that four miles an hour idea."—New York Sun.

Twice in the Same Place.

Two good, old fashioned, easy going Mormon brothers were engaged in the hauling of logs on sledges from out of the Wasatch range of the Rockies. The snow was deep and the canyon very narrow and almost boxed. The trail where the sleighs ran was very close to high slanting angles leading to the bottom of the canyon, and at some points it was very hard for the sleighs to pass along without tipping over and hurling the driver and contents to the bottom of the canyon. At a point of this kind the foremost brother slowed down his horses, turned on his seat and yelled to his brother behind: "Oh, Hi! Right here as I was coming down yesterday the sled turned and we went right down the bank, logs and all, and, by Jukes, here we go again!"—National Monthly.

The Beggar's Stratagem.

For artistic methods the Parisian beggar is hard to beat. One man recently arrested was in the habit of wandering through the streets followed at a considerable distance by a Newfoundland dog. On seeing a bone or a crust in the gutter he would dart on it feverishly, and the dog would rush up and snatch it from him. A terrific struggle ensued, ending in the flight of the dog, bearing off the prize, while the man lay exhausted in the gutter. It is easy to imagine how kind hearted wayfarers after assisting him to rise would shower coins on a poor devil driven by poverty to fight so desperately for a meager crust.—London Chronicle.

CARDLAND.

The Games That Were Played in the Eighteenth Century.

After the advent of the house of Hanover the favorite games at court were "quadrille," an improvement of "ombre," and "commerce." The gains and losses of the kings and queens were, as a rule, restricted to 100 guineas, but on Twelfth Night it was customary for thousands to change hands. On one occasion Lady Cowper, a lady in waiting, refused for the sake of her children to take part in the game, as none sat down to the table with less than £200.

About the year 1740 a rage for "whisk," or whist, set in, but at first it was considered too wise a game for ladies to join in. Hume, the historian, never went to bed without his whist, and even the great Johnson regretted that he had not learned to play cards. In 1743 "Horry" Walpole finds it absolutely necessary to learn "whisk," "having waited in vain for its being left off." We find him in another letter threatening to build an altar to "Pam" to commemorate the escape of his charming Duchess of Grafton, who, it appears, had been playing cards in Rome when she ought to have been at a cardinal's reception, where the floor fell in and all the monsignores were precipitated into the cellar!

Cards were so very much in evidence in his time that even invitations were frequently issued and notes written on the backs of playing cards, which on that account were usually plain, without any design. The chevalier's famous order to retreat at Culloden was written on the back of the nine of hearts.

A fresh attempt was made in 1739 to remedy the state of gambling in England by passing an act which provided that "any person keeping a house or other place to game in forfeits £200, half to the prosecutor and half to the poor of the parish," whereupon two ladies of title, Mordington and Casselis, who kept open houses for gambling, claimed their privilege of peerage in order to intimidate the peace officers from doing their duty and suppressing the public gaming houses kept by them.—Blackwood's Magazine.

MONKEYS IN BATTLE.

They Fight Under Leaders and Roll Stones on Enemies.

Aesop's ape, it will be remembered, wept on passing through a human graveyard, overcome with sorrow for its dead ancestors, and that all monkeys are willing enough to be more like us than they are they show by their mimicry. An old authority tells that the easiest way to capture apes is for the hunter to pretend to shave himself, then to wash his face, fill the basin with a sort of birdlime and leave it for the apes to blind themselves. If the Chinese story is to be believed the imitative craze is even more fatal in another way, for if you shoot one monkey of a band with a poisoned arrow its neighbor, jealous of so unusual a decoration, will snatch the arrow from it and stab itself, only to have it torn away by a third, until in succession the whole troop has committed suicide.

In their wild life baboons as well as many varieties of the monkey tribe undoubtedly submit to the authority of recognized leaders. There is co-operation between them to the extent that when fighting in company one will go to the help of another which is hard pressed.

In rocky ground they roll down stones upon their enemies, and when making a raid, as on an orchard which they believe to be guarded, the attack is conducted on an organized plan, sentries being posted and scouts thrown out, which gradually feel their way forward to make sure that the coast is clear, while the main body remains in concealment behind until told that the road is open.

From the fact that the sentries stay posted throughout the raid, getting for themselves no share of the plunder, it has been assumed that there must be some sort of division of the proceeds afterward. Man, again, has been differentiated from all other creatures as being a tool using animal, but more than one kind of monkey takes a stone in its hand and with it breaks the nuts which are too hard to be cracked with the teeth.—London Globe.

Wanted to Bet.

The greatest trotter in the world for his time was being sold at auction, says Ainslee's Magazine. He was finally knocked down to a local millionaire for $26,000. The purchaser strolled out of the ring and over to a lunch counter, where he ordered a chicken sandwich.

The restaurant man sliced off a postage stamp wafer of chicken and inserted it between two slices of bread. The horseman passed over a dollar, and the attendant nonchalantly handed back a half. The horseman looked at the change with a puzzled gaze for a few moments and then pushed it back, with the remark:

"I will bet you."
"Bet me what?" asked the attendant.
"The half dollar."
"On what?"
"I'll bet you that the chicken brings more than the horse I just bought."

Charles Reade's Literary Method. Reade's literary work was, Sir Robert Anderson remarks, a rare combination of genius and plodding. A brass scuttle which stood by the fireplace held the illustrated and other papers which reached him week by week. From these he culled anything that took his fancy, and the cuttings were thrown into a companion scuttle, to be afterward inserted in scrapbooks and duly indexed. Materials for his novels and plays were thus supplied or suggested. The accuracy of his descriptions of events and places was phenomenal.—Blackwood's Magazine.

And the Cake was Mashed.

Thursday afternoon the store of Baker & Hart was thronged with ladies to see the mashing of the cake at the Majestic range demonstration. A large sponge cake, about 20 inches square and 5 inches thick, with jelly layers, had been prepared for the test. The cake was placed between two planks and four of the heaviest ladies present stood together on the top plank. The cake was mashed flat under the weight of the ladies, but soon after they stepped off it quickly came to its normal height. Much interest was shown in the test and after it was over the cake was cut in slices and distributed among those present. It was good cake, to say the least.

Both Late the Same Day.

Things will go wrong sometime. Thursday The Reflector spoke of the good record the Norfolk & Southern was making in keeping passenger trains on time, and that very evening both the east-bound and west-bound trains were away off schedule. The train from Norfolk encountered some trouble at Chocowinity that delayed it an hour, and the train from Raleigh was delayed by a freight car getting off the track at Eagle Rock.

Does it Pay You?

After you have paid the express charges have you made anything by buying your job printing from out-of-town printers? We are sure you haven't, without even considering the inferior quality of the paper. Cheap prices calls for cheap stock and cheap printing is not a good advertisement for you, rather it hurts your business, because strangers often size you up by the stationery you use. When quality of workmanship and stock is considered, our prices are low. Let us have your next order. We are always ready to compare quality and prices.

A Day in the Country.
