WILLIAM ROBERT HORNE.

Sketch of His Life by an Intimate Friend.

William Robert Horne was born in 1837. He came of sturdy old English stock on his paternal side. His great grand father, Jacob Horne, came from East Virginia and settled where the city of Rocky Mount now stands, where his grand father, Henry Horne, was born in 1805. He moved to Pitt county in 1827 where he married Eliza Bon. From this union Josiah Robert Horne was born. Robert Horne married Martha Joyner, mother of Amos Joyner, and to them two children were born, William and Eliza. His father having died before he was 3 years old he was raised by his uncle, Franklin Joyner.

The writer had been closely associated with deceased all his life. He was my brother-in-law, cousin and my true friend. He was of that type of men known as country gentlemen, lived on his own soil, subsisting on the flesh of his own animals reared by him, and the fruits of his own field and garden. At his death he owned a large fertile farm, owned fine herds, had comfortable houses for his laborers and stables for his stock; plenty of turkeys and chickens and fruit for his family and all friends that came his way.

William R. Horne married Florence Edwards in June, 1887. No children were born to them. She was one of those true and good helpmates and was as devoted to him as any wife the writer has ever known, nursing and cheering him till the summons came.

Bill Horne, as he was familiarly known, was a lover of books and newspapers. He was the best posted country gentleman to be found. His tact for reading with his wonderful memory and business judgment made his counsel sought after by the best men of his acquaintance. His good wife and aged mother, (the latter 76) two half sisters, Mrs. Askew and Mrs. Pollard, of Farmville and a nephew, John Tyson, of Ensley, Ala., survive him.

This good and worthy man had for some months been suffering with bladder trouble. The best physicians were called to his bedside but nothing could be done to save him. On the 23rd day of Jan. 1910, his soul passed over the river to realms above, and on the 24th his ashes were laid to rest in the cemetery at Farmville. G. T. Tyson.

WOODLAND ITEMS.

Woodland, N. C., Feb. 1, 1910. We are glad to have some new families to move to our neighborhood.

There are some very large stumps being taken up around here. That is important on a farm.

We are sorry to know that Dixie McGlohon is sick and hope he will soon improve.

We had a very large crowd out to Sunday school Sunday afternoon.

It is very pleasant to be back to your old home and see the school children that you once were with, but still there are some absent and new ones have taken their places.

Don't forget the preaching at Reedy Branch first Sunday in February.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Baptist church will meet Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock with Mrs. R. L. Humber.

SEED CORN DAY.

The Reflector Offers Two Prizes for Exhibits.

Pitt county is to have a seed day in Greenville on Tuesday, Feb. 8th. At that time farmers are asked to bring some of their best corn for exhibition, and an expert will examine it and show how to make seed selection from it. In this way every farmer who comes will be helped. The Reflector wants to see this seed corn day a great day for Pitt county and great good to come from it. As a small stimulus for exhibits on that day we are going to offer as a premium one year's subscription to The Daily Reflector to the farmer who makes the best all-round exhibit of corn that day, and one year's subscription to The Eastern Reflector to the farmer exhibiting the five best ears of corn. The award to be in accordance with the decision of the examiner.

If any others want to offer premiums for exhibits The Reflector will take pleasure in mentioning it.

UNIVERSITY NOTES.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 31. Editor Reflector:

Dr. Robt. B. Lawson will coach the University of North Carolina baseball team this spring. Dr. Lawson is an alumnus of the University. As an undergraduate and as a medical student here he was a member of the Varsity baseball team and a substitute on the football team. His remarkable pitching for three consecutive years placed Carolina among the front rank of American colleges. During these three years, '98, '99 and '00, Carolina held the Southern championship.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke, of Princeton, has been selected to deliver the McNair lectures for next session. Dr. Van Dyke is a household name wherever the English language is spoken and the student body is to be congratulated upon the opportunity of hearing such an eminent writer and distinguished speaker. The theme of these lectures is always religious. Those who have delivered them in the last few years are Dr. Francis H. Smith, of the University of Virginia, Ex-President F. L. Patton, of Princeton, and President David Starr Jordan, of Leland Stanford University, California.

Dr. Joseph Hyde Pratt, State geologist, president of the Southern Appalachian Good Roads Association, and professor of economic geography in the University, presided over the good roads convention in Raleigh, and delivered the principal address.

The thirty six student Bible class leaders met Thursday to plan for the spring Bible study. Last fall these leaders conducted thirty-six voluntary Bible classes. The total enrollment of these classes was 375, the largest Bible student enrollment in North Carolina, and the third largest in the South.

Tobacco Sales for January.

According to the figures furnished by Secretary E. B. Ferguson, of the Tobacco Board of Trade, the sales of leaf tobacco on the Greenville market for the month of January were 439,704 pounds for $36,382.31, an average of $8.27 per hundred.

For the season to date the sales were 10,742,410 pounds for $967,608.24, an average of $9.01 per hundred.

AYDEN ITEMS.

Newsy Notes From a Husting Town Briefly Told

Ayden, N. C., Feb. 1.

Mrs. A. L. Harrington, of Kinston, spent Sunday in town. Mrs. Luther Bell and children, of New Bern, left Sunday for Rocky Mount to visit her mother, after spending a few days in Ayden with her sister, Mrs. Osborne Nobles.

Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Berry and Virginia Bell Cooper, returned Monday from a visit to relatives in Scotland Neck.

Mrs. Celia Sullivant has purchased the residence of Alexander Campbell Nobles, near the Baptist church. She, with her son-in-law's family, W. T. Hart, expect to occupy it.

W. E. Patrick shipped a very fine pony to J. J. Gentry, Winston-Salem, last week. He tells your scribbler he has sold stock in sixteen counties this season. Hurrah for Pitt!

R. W. Smith has purchased the residence of A. P. Murray, on Blount street. Mr. Murray has purchased a stock and truck farm near Zebulon, and will move soon to his new home. He has made us a good citizen and we are loath to see his good family leave our community.

We saw a letter from our old friend, C. A. Fair, yesterday. He said they had been wrapped in snow storms, blizzards, etc., for more than a month, and there was no land on earth like the "Sunny South." He is now in Adamstown, Md.

Mr. Pollock and son, of Trenton, are visiting his daughter, Mrs. J. R. Tingle.

Amos Joyner, of Fort Barnwell, spent Monday night here, on his return from Greenville.

Mrs. W. S. Blount, of New Bern, is visiting her husband, at Hotel Blount.

D. S. Moore, of Battieboro, spent Sunday in town.

The Ayden auxiliary of the Christian church rendered a splendid program at Rountrees church Sunday evening.

For barbed wire and nails, see J. R. Smith Co. Just arrived a car load.

When Traveling is Bad.

The telephone has an added value, because it affords the one method of communication not affected by road conditions. When snow or rain make walking difficult or impossible a telephone in your residence proves not only a means of social intercourse, but also a means of transacting much of your business that would otherwise be neglected; and five cents a day will put a telephone in your residence.

STATE NEWS.

Happenings of Interest in North Carolina

Waxhaw, Jan. 30.—Tom Ashby, an employe of the Broom ginnery at this place, was instantly killed Saturday afternoon. While attending to his duties about the ginnery, Ashby, in some manner, was caught in a belt and hurled around the shafting. His head was crushed, one arm torn from its socket and the body was otherwise horribly mangled.

Asheville, Jan. 31.—A serious accident befell Gus Hennett, an employe of the Hans Rees tannery Saturday while enroute to his work from West Asheville. Hennett, it seems, was walking along the tracks of the Southern Railway when an engine came along. He got off the track to allow the engine to pass but as he stepped from one track on to another—what he thought was "safety"—he was struck by a shifting engine and both legs so badly mangled that amputation was necessary.

HAS SLEPT FOR 16 DAYS.

Case of Wealthy North Carolinian Puzzles Toledo Doctors.

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 30.—Physicians and detectives are mystified over the peculiar condition in which J. F. Smithwick, a wealthy cotton merchant of South Creek, Beaufort county, North Carolina, has remained for two weeks at the State hotel. During his strange sleep, which began sixteen days ago, Smithwick has not spoken over a dozen words at all times seems to be unconscious.

It was supposed when Smithwick was found unconscious in his room that he was the victim of gas, a small gas jet above his bed being found partially turned on. There is no doubt in the minds of physicians that Smithwick's condition was brought on by something besides gas. At no time has the victim come into actual consciousness. At times he opens his eyes and watches the figures in the room, but does not speak.

Smithwick formed an acquaintance with a Toledo girl through an advertisement published in a matrimonial paper. After several week's correspondence he came to Toledo and met his fiancée. According to her statement they had planned an early date for their marriage.

When he was found unconscious in his room at the hotel the police started an investigation but the whole affair appears as much a mystery today as it did the day he was found unconscious.

Smithwick is fed through a tube and is given principally liquids. He has not been removed from the hotel, as it is feared any movement might prove fatal. The attending physicians do not entertain much hope for his recovery. And so Smithwick remains sleeping. When he will awake is as deep a mystery as what caused his relapse into the unconscious state. Up to the present he has slept just 384 hours.

Several nurses have been in constant attendance working under the directions of attending physicians, who had charge of the victim's case.

Many physicians, both local and foreign, have been called in to see the patient, but all go away with a snake of the head—they are puzzled as the rest.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL BRIEFS.

The Visitors Here and People Who Travel.

District Attorney Harry Kinler is home from Raleigh where he has been engaged several weeks in Federal court.

J. C. Taylor, who has a position with the Atlantic Coast Line at Florence, S. C., came in Monday evening to spend a few days.

Miss Lottie Woodson, of Shelby, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. T. J. Jarvis, left this morning for Plymouth to visit relatives there.

Miss Annie Lee Davis, one of the music teachers at East Carolina Teachers' Training School, left Monday evening to spend a few days at her home in Goldsboro.

S. J. Everett and family arrived Monday evening from Williams-ton to make their home here. They occupy the R. M. Moye house, on Dickinson avenue. Mr. Everett will practice law here, having his office in Masonic temple building.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

February.

Odd Fellows meet tonight.

Subscribe for The Reflector.

Look out for the ground hog tomorrow.

This is the shortest month of the year, and is usually the worst in the way of weather.

A portion of Monday's issue of The Reflector got off the press with Saturday on the first page date line.

With February starting off this way we hope the ground hog will not be able to see his shadow tomorrow.

The C. W. B. M. of the Christian church will meet with Mrs. E. A. Moye, Sr., Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The King's Daughters will meet Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock with Mrs. A. L. Blow. The chapter will hear a report from the different committees.

Beautifying the Streets.

It is the time of year now when people living along those streets with concrete sidewalks should be getting ready to beautify them. Between the sidewalk and street a park strip has been left, and these strips should be beautified by sowing them in grass. Prepare the soil now by pulverizing and fertilizing and have it ready for the grass seed. With proper attention these strips will add greatly to the beauty of the streets.

A Treat for Reflector Readers.

We wish to announce that in a few days The Reflector will begin a serial story—Truxton King, by George Barr McCutcheon—which will be a great treat to our many readers. Mr. McCutcheon is the widely known author of Graustark and Beverly of Graustark, and we can assure our readers Truxton King, his latest novel, is just as fascinating as the other two stories.

PACTOLUS ITEMS.

Pactolus, N. C., Jan. 25, 1910.—Mrs. B. B. Satterthwaite went to Washington Wednesday and returned Saturday.

Joe Rollins left last week for Rocky Mount.

Miss Sadie Chauncey, of Belhaven, is visiting her brother, W. C. Chauncey.

Dr. M. W. Ball, of Newport, N. C., was in town Thursday prospecting.

Mrs. W. C. Chauncey and Miss Sadie attended the basket party at Stokes Friday night.

Mrs. J. R. Davenport, who has been sick is improving very fast.

Mrs. J. P. Fleming returned home Sunday after spending last week with friends in Greenville.

Hagan Hodges, who is troubled with rheumatism, is not able to get about very well.

J. R. Wilson found a meteoric stone while walking across his farm. It was warm when he picked it up. There were several smaller ones around when the large one was found. He carried the larger one to the house, and it soon dissolved into a fine substance.

I am sorry that some one got the wrong idea about the item in last Tuesday's paper about Mr. J. H. Gurganov. The portion that was in quotation marks was only a pleasantry, and not to defame.

There were three basket parties near here last week, one each at Langley's school house, Jones' school house and Stokes' school house.

If we could skip over February it would save much of the fuel bill.

If you haven't the price to order a meat dinner you can ease off by saying you have joined the boycott.

President Taft has interposed in behalf of Speaker Cannon, by telling the boys they must stop fighting him. Now, boys, be good, or you will lose your chance at the pie counter.

Already some of the airship makers are getting up petitions to congress to determine the value of aerial craft in warfare. Better be sure first that they are dependable navigators in ordinary traffic.

Economy is alright, but it can be started at the wrong end. Publicity is a great incentive to trade, and the business man practices the wrong sort of economy when he denies this to himself and his business.

Nothing was more plainly shown by Mouday's fire than that Greenville is very much in need of some kind of fire alarm system. The old steel car wheel rim suspended at the city hall is about the poorest excuse for a fire alarm that could be imagined. When it is sounded it cannot be heard over one-fourth of the town, and people shut up in their houses two blocks away do not hear it. Such an excuse for a fire alarm is a farce. It would not be creditable to a cross roads hamlet, much less a town of five thousand population. The aldermen could not do a better thing at their next meeting than consider the matter of a fire alarm.

The advertiser should bear in mind that there is no better way of reaching the attention of Pitt county people than through The Reflector. The piano contest which the paper held the three months before Christmas added several hundred new names to our subscription list, making the circulation of the paper much larger than at any time in its history, and the list keeps growing all the time. The paper goes to a class of people who have money to spend, and they read the advertisements for information as to how and where to spend their money judiciously. Space in this paper brings results, and the advertiser will be convinced of this by increased trade.

The Size of It.

The editor of a newspaper is often accused of leaving out certain items of news purely because

WHEN RUBBERS BECOME NECESSARY.

And your shoes pinch, shake into your shoes Allen's Foot-Ease, the aniseptic powder for the feet. It cures painful, swollen, smarting, sweating feet, and takes the sting out of corn and bunions. Just the thing for patent leather shoes, dancing parties and for breaking in new shoes. Many people cannot wear heavy stockings comfortably without shaking Allen's Foot-Ease into the shoes. cause of a dislike of the person to be mentioned, or from prejudice or another cause. This is all bosh.

The editor has something like a million different things to think of in connection with the issue of one paper, and it is not surprising if he misses one item occasionally or sometimes forgets one which has been called to his attention. Nine out of ten people you ask for news items will tell you they can't think of any. But in most cases they expect the editor to think of them all and criticize him if he fails in a single item. The best way is to give the editor credit for what he does find and mention or some things he finds and doesn't mention.—Breathitt County (Ky.) News.

Newspapers, as a rule, are not money-makers. Perhaps no profession or avocation holds out as scant hopes of riches as the calling of newspaper men. As old as the art of printing is the picture of the struggling, weary-worn editor. But there always will be newspapers, for the reason that there always will be need for them. Somehow, it seems to us, there is more of charity and forbearance in a newspaper office than anywhere else under the sun. The merchant or business man gets in tough luck and people fail to patronize them, they "cuss" their town and say unkind things of those who do not patronize them. When the newspaper man gets in tough luck (and that is where he usually stays), he only speaks in kinder words of his town and says gentler things of those who do not patronize him. When the average man's bitterest enemy dies he breathes a sigh of relief. When the newspaper man's enemy (or the enemy of the newspaper man) dies, the editor places the last and sweetest flower upon his grave. That man is an ingrate who begrudges the dollar he gives to keep burning the fire in the newspaper office.—Webster's Weekly.

CHINA'S GREAT WALL.

It Would Be a Mighty Task to Duplicate It Today.

What man has done, we are told, man can do. But to erect today a great fortification comparable to the Great wall of China would be a heavy tax on both the resources and the resolution of Europe. A score or two of warships are all very well, but the cost of labor and the will involved in building fleets can hardly be compared to those devoted to the building of that great barrier about two centuries before the coming of Christ, when Rome was struggling with Hannibal.

Two thousand five hundred and fifty miles, including spurs, arms and loops, is the length ascribed to it by Dr. W. E. Gell, the only white man, we believe, who has traveled the whole length of it. It has been said that the Great wall is the only object of man's handwork which could be discerned from the moon, and one calculation has it that if the material of the wall were disposed about the globe at the equator there would be a wall girdle eight feet high and three feet thick around the earth.

One can believe that to this day the name of the Emperor Chin is cursed all along the wall by the posterity of the wretches who were forced to the gigantic task of building it. In the days of its greatest importance, when it was still holding back the Tartar hordes, it is believed to have had on its line 25,000 towers, each capable of holding 100 men, and 15,000 watch-towers. Even today there remains 20,000 towers and 10,000 watch-towers, with some 2,000 miles of wall that could, with moderate repairing, be made into a formidable military work.—London News.

Giants and Dwarfs.

In the seventeenth century all the abnormally large and small folks of Austria were assembled in Vienna in response to a whim of the empress. As circumstances required that all should be housed in one building, there was a fear that the imposing proportions of the giants would terrify the dwarfs. But the dwarfs teased and tormented the giants so that these overgrown mortals complained with tears in their eyes, and as a consequence sentinels had to be placed to protect the giants from their pygmy persecutors, for the smallest men had the biggest brains and the longest tongues.

Corrupted His Style.

"The late Richard Watson Gilder," said a New York poet, "always opposed the reading of light literature. A poet, he said, could not read such literature without corrupting his literary style."
"He once told me that the poet in this respect was like Brown's parrot."
"Brown bought a parrot for $20 from a pet stock dealer and a week or two later returned to the shop and insisted that the bird be taken back."
"What's the matter with it?" the dealer asked.
"W-w-why," said Brown, "the darned critter st-stutters."

THE CABMEN OF PARIS

Hailing One Is the Same as a Declaration of War.

THEY ARE INSOLENT ROGUES

Sneers and Caustic Advice Are Show-ered Upon Those Who Engage Them. On Wet or Festal Days the Cabbies Spurn Those Who Want to Ride.

Among Anglo-Saxons there is a general and instinctive desire to do business on the basis of an entente cordiale. In Paris the hailing of a cabman is looked on by both parties to the transaction as an implied declaration of war. The cabman takes your measure, and you take his number if you are wise. At once he will give you a reason to remark that he has a rooted and premeditated objection to drive you where you wish to go. Perhaps he prefers the opera quarter because it is central, or should the weather be fine his heart is probably set upon driving in the Bois, while you may have business at the bourse. He explains his views on the subject selfishly and rudely.

A foreigner alighted recently from the Calais train at the Northern railway station in Paris and ordered a typical Parisian cabman, bloated, pale and absinth soaked, to drive him to the Rue Blomet, which is a street in the relatively distant Vaugirard quarter. "Peut on habiter la Rue Blomet?" ("Is it possible to inhabit the Rue Blomet?") exclaimed the ragged ruffian in an epigrammatic note of disdain which would have done honor to Beau Brummel.

But it is when the Paris cabman has once started on his "course," a war-path in the strict sense of the term, that he proves to what a limitless extent he is the enemy of mankind. His hatred of the "bourgeois," the "man in the street," in spite of and indeed because of his being a potential client, is expressed at every yard. He constantly tries to run him down, which makes strangers to Paris accuse the Paris cabman of driving badly, while in point of fact he is not driving at all, but playing with miraculous skill a game of his own which suggests cannon billiards in the hands of a world's champion.

But it is not with the public alone that he is at war. On all other cabmen whose path he crosses, on omnibus drivers, motorcar men, bicyclists, private coachmen, costermongers with barrows and (sotto voce) the police he heaps deadly insults, the least outrageous of which are "Ours?" ("Bear?") and "Fourneau?" ("Oven?"), the latter containing a subtle double meaning, intelligible only to those who have Paris "argot" or slang at their finger ends and too long to explain.

The cabman's wild career through the streets, the constant wavering and slashing of his pitiless whip, his madcap hurtlements and collisions, the frenzied gesticulations which he exchanges with his "fare," the panic stricken flight of the agonized women whose lives he has endangered, the ugly rushes which the public occasionally makes at him with a view to lynching him, the sprawlings and fallings of his maddened, hysterical, snorting horse, contribute as much as anything to the spasmodic intensity, the electric blue fire diabolie, which are characteristic of the general movement of Paris.

All that can be said in mitigation of the Paris cabman's method is that "he has them in the blood." Every Parisian (and the cabman is no exception) has the soul of a dictator and the spirit of an artist. To exercise autocratic power and, failing this, to enjoy the maximum of personal freedom from all restraint, moral or social, is the goal at which he is ever aiming, openly or secretly.

Watch a Paris cabman, for instance, on a wet day or on some festival occasion, such as the New Year, when there is a big demand for his services. With what haughty disdain does he drive along the streets, deaf to every appeal, refusing every fare, rejoicing in the discomfort and inconvenience he is causing, triumphant in the thought that at last he has "the bourgeois" at his feet; that the clientele which he detests and which detests him is now a humiliated, bemuddled or bedraggled mob of supplicants waiting on his will, whom he can enrage to boiling point with his sneers and his silence or lash with his sarcasms as cruelly as he beats his horse. Cheerfully does he sacrifice half a day's earnings to the enjoyment of this exquisite revenge, for at least he can say to his hungry wife and children when he gets home: "J'ai vecu." They may not have dined, but he has lived.

It is because the Parisian recognizes in himself a certain community of sentiment with the cabman in this attitude toward life that he tolerates him, though he does not forgive him.—Harper's Weekly.

Her Only Course.
Lady Anne Lindsay, the author of the old poem "Auld Robin Gray," was not only a delightful conversationalist, but she was a great story teller.

This gift made her not only a welcome guest abroad, but a valuable member of the home circle, for it is related in "A Group of Scottish Women" that at a dinner party which she was giving to some friends an old manservant caused some amusement by saying in a perfectly audible undertone:

"My lady, you must tell another story. The second course won't be ready for five minutes."

HATS IN LONDON.
Unless You Wear One of Three Kinds You Are a Marked Man.

When some years ago one of the doorkeepers at a London theater retired from his drafty calling and was pensioned off, by the management it appeared that this old man in all the years of his service had never given a "pass out" check to any one of the thousands of men who must have passed his doorway.

But he never made a mistake. No one entitled to return was ever refused, and no one could pass in at the end of the interval who had not passed out at the beginning of it.

The secret of the old man's success was a curious one. He depended on his memory entirely, but he had trained his memory in a very curious way. He did not remember the men by their faces, their clothes, their hats, their boots or by any peculiarity of gait or appearance. Manifestly such a feat would have been impossible, for ordinary "pitties" are very much alike in these details.

He took the one detail on which men do differ and remembered them by that—he recognized them by their neckties.

Gaze around you in the railway carriage as you are reading this article and ask yourself if there is any of your fellow passengers that you could remember well enough to recognize again in, say, an hour's time. You will find there are very few people you could be sure of. There may be one old man with a large and conspicuous white beard or a very young man with a pair of spectacles of unusual size. But nine out of ten have the same sort of hat, the same sort of clothes and the same sort of figure.

The Londoner, in fact, seems to be standardized. He is built on a settled pattern. He is modeled to a type. His necktie is his sole bit of variety.

Into this world of standardized human beings comes, let us say, a colonial. Mighty London, with her vast crowds swarming over four counties, swallows him up. Yet somehow he preserves his individuality. He is conspicuous wherever he goes. He feels that all London, as far as it has time, is staring at him.

Cabmen persistently hail him. The map sellers in the Strand pester him as he passes. Those very acute people—the "confidence" men—sight him afar off. But it is not his necktie that distinguishes him, or his face, or his clothes, or his walk. The conspicuous feature of the newly arrived colonial's outfit is his hat.

London permits three sorts of hat—the top hat, the bowler and in the summer the straw. Any break from this settled order is to make yourself conspicuous.—London Mirror.

Unexpectedly Became a Model.

An authoress of note was once in Naples and very much desired to know Morelli, the famous painter, but could find no one to act as inter courage in her hands and resolved to introduce herself, but not without qualms. As she approached she found the studio door open, one more cause for embarrassment, and, pushing a curtain to one side, stood before the artist at work, who, looking at her absentmindedly, said: "These lines seem to be all right. What do you say?" And to her murmured response he went on: "But the eyes of the nuns do not suit me. Pray sit down a moment. Yours are just the thing."

With inward delight the lady sat down and acted as model for an hour and a half, during which writer and artist talked as though they had been friends all their lives. At a certain point Morelli stopped abruptly, took off his glasses, peered at his handsome model and said, "But, excuse me, who are you?"

At Second Hand.

A highland laird who could not afford to keep his own piper was accustomed to employ the village piper when he had company. On one occasion, through some oversight, Donald had not been given his preliminary glass of whisky before he began his performance. Accordingly he found his bagpipes in a most refractory temper. The laird asked him what was the matter, and Donald replied that the leather was so hard that he could do nothing with it.

"What will soften it?" asked the anxious laird.

"Och, just whusky!" said Donald.

A tumbler of whisky was at once brought, which Donald immediately drank.

"You rascal!" said the laird. "Did you not say it was for the bagpipes?"

"Och, yess, yess," said Donald, "but she will be a ferry peculiar pipes this. She aye likes it blawed in."

Expert Opinion.

"What do you think made Hamlet so suspicious of the ghost?" asked Mr. Stormington Barnes.

"He probably thought," answered the psychic researcher, "that no well regulated ghost would manifest himself without ringing bells or tipping tables."—Washington Star.

Putting Him Wise.

"I'd like to make you my wife," said the practical young man. "but they tell me you can't keep house." "Don't you believe all they tell you," rejoined the girl in the case. "You get the house and put it in my name, and I'll prove to you that I can keep it."—Exchange.

A Water Telescope.

Norwegian fishermen use a water telescope to ascertain the position of the herring shoals. This is the way to make the water telescope:

Procure a tube made of tin and funnel shaped about three and a half feet long and ten inches in diameter at the largest end. It should be wide enough at the top to take in the observer's eyes, and the inside should be painted black. At the bottom, or wide end, a clear, thick piece of glass must be inserted, with a little lead in the form of a ring to weight the tube. When the instrument is immersed in clear water it is astonishing how many fathoms down the observer can see.

The Sybarites.

The Sybarites were the inhabitants of the ancient city of Sybaris, in southern Italy, founded 720 B. C. They were so greatly addicted to voluptuousness and self-indulgence that their name became a byword among the peoples of antiquity. The word "sybarite" is used at the present day to denote a person devoted to luxury and pleasure.

PROPERTIES OF ICE.

Why Skating is Easier When the Temperature is Not Too Low.

Why can we skate more easily when the weather is not too cold? Why do our skates "bite" or take hold of the ice better when the temperature is not far below the freezing point? The explanation of this simple and universally recognized fact will enable us also to see the reason for another, the truth of which is recognized by every school-boy—namely, that snow will pack better into snowballs when nearly at its melting point.

The explanation of both these facts lies in an almost unique property of water or, rather, ice, which causes it to melt or tend to melt when pressure is applied to it. When the pressure is relieved, if it is still below its normal freezing temperature, it at once solidifies again.

This property is beautifully illustrated in a familiar experiment in which a large cake of ice is used, supported at each end. If a loop of fine wire is passed around it and a weight attached to the end it will soon be noted that the wire is slowly cutting its way through the ice, but curiously enough without causing any division of the cake, for the ice is melted into water by the pressure directly beneath the wire, which water at once freezes into ice again above the wire, so that perhaps after an hour's time the wire will have cut its way completely through the cake, leaving it, however, as solid and whole as ever.

In the case of the skater, then, the weight of his body carried on a narrow skate may produce a pressure on the ice sufficiently great to melt a small groove under the edge of the runner. This enables it to take hold of the ice more readily, and, furthermore, the water acts as a lubricant on the ice and makes it slippery. Since considerable pressure is necessary to produce melting even when the temperature is only a degree or so below the normal melting point, this effect will not take place on a very cold day, for, as is well known, very cold ice is not slippery. The same explanation holds for snowballs. But the pressure developed in this case is much less, so that melting enough to "pack" well will not occur unless the snow is nearly warm enough to melt anyway.

This effect is noted on a grand scale in the case of glaciers, which flow slowly down a mountain side much as if ice was a viscous fluid. The great pressure developed along the bottom as well as at the turns and other points causes a slight melting, which is immediately followed by freezing again as soon as the pressure is relieved. This enables the ice to adapt itself to the shape of the valley as it proceeds on its way.

Ice is one of the few substances that show this effect of melting under pressure, and it does so because of the fact that water expands on freezing. The great majority of substances contract on solidifying and hence would show the reverse effect—that is, pressure applied to them in the molten state would tend to cause solidification.

This is one reason for believing that the interior of our earth as a whole is solid rather than molten, for, while we believe that the temperature of the interior may be much more than enough to melt rock under ordinary conditions—and indeed volcanoes show that there is plenty of molten rock not so very far below the surface—the enormous pressures that exist deep down in the earth are enough to keep the material in a solid condition.—Minneapolis Journal.

The Czar.

"Czar," "kaiser" and "Caesar" mean about the same thing, czar and kaiser doubtless being derived from Caesar. After the twelfth century the Russian annalists gave the title of czar to the mongrel princes of Russia. In general, however, the rulers of the various Russian provinces were called grand-dukes till the sixteenth century. Ivan IV., crowned in the year 1547, was the first independent Russian prince who assumed the title. From this time the Russian monarchs called themselves czars of Moscow and after the conquest of Little Russia and Smolensk, "czars of all the Russias."—New York American.

Travel on Their Stomachs.

Certain devotees in India in their fanatical zeal practically travel from place to place on their stomachs! Their method of progression is rather peculiar. Throwing themselves forward full length on the ground, they make a mark with their hands as far in front of them as they can reach. Then, springing up, they put their toes to the mark and repeat the process. Some of these devotees travel half way across the Indian continent in this extraordinary fashion.—Wide World Magazine.

CAUTION IN THE MINT.

They Almost Strain the Air to Save Particles of Gold.

It has been aptly said that no miser guards his treasure more religiously than Uncle Sam watches over the precious metals that pass through his mints. Then, too, the precautions against waste are almost innumerable.

Every evening in each of the mints of the United States the floors of the melting rooms are swept cleaner than a New England housewife's kitchen. The dust is carefully put aside, and about once in two months the soot scraped from every flue is transferred to the same precious dust heap. This is then burned, and from its ashes the government derives no inconsiderable income. The earthenware crucibles used in melting are employed no more than three times. They are crushed beneath heavy rollers, and in their porous sides are found flakes of the precious metal.

In the melting room when the casters raise their ladles from the melting pots a shower of sparks fly from the molten surface of the metal. For the most part they are bits of incandescent carbon, but clinging to the carbon is often a minute particle of metal. Lest such particles should escape, the ashes and clinkers below the furnaces are gathered up at night. This debris is ground into powder by means of a steam crusher and then is sold to a smelter, like ordinary ore, at a price warranted by the assayer.

The ladles that stir the precious metal, the big iron rods, the strainers and the dippers, all are tested in a most curious fashion. After considerable use they become covered with a thin layer of oxidized silver, closely resembling a brown rust. The implements are then laid in baths of a solution of sulphuric acid, which eats away the iron and steel and leaves the silver untouched.

Gradually the ladle, or whatever the implement is, will disappear, and in its place remains a hollow silver counterpart of the original, delicate as spun glass. These fragile casts reproduce the ladle with perfect accuracy in all its details, although their surfaces are perforated with innumerable little holes. Scarcely have they been molded, however, before they are cast into a crucible to become in time dollars, quarters and dimes.

In one corner of the melting room there is a large tank into which newly cast silver bars are dropped and left to cool. Infinitesimal flakes of silver scale off and rise to the surface of the water, which acquires the metallic luster of a stagnant pool. Here is silver that must not be lost, so beneath the pipe through which the tank is emptied is banked a thick layer of mud. As the water filters through it the mud retains the precious residuum. Four times a year this mud is removed, and each experiment discloses the fact that some $50 has been saved.—Baltimore American.

His Text.

The three-year-old son of a Methodist minister was with his mother at a gathering of ladies. At the proper time he was given a cookie. He ate it in short order and asked for another. The hostess said:

"I'll give you another if you will sing for us."

"Can't sing," was his reply, "but I know something I can say."

"That will do all right," the lady answered, expecting to hear "Twinkle, twinkle, little star," or some other nursery classic.

But the little fellow drew himself up in real Sunday school fashion and said his piece:

"God loveth a cheerful giver."

The lady gave him the cookie, and the whole company seemed to be very cheerful about it.—Harper's Magazine.
