HAPPENINGS WITHIN THE OLD NORTH STATE

GATHERED FROM OUR EXCHANGES

Newsp Items of Interest Condensed for Busy Readers.

Asheboro, Feb. 11.—The Board of Commissioners for the town of Asheboro, at their regular meeting last night, authorized the issue of $50,000, 5 per cent. bonds for the water works and sewerage in town.

Wilmington, Feb. 11.—Fire early this evening, originating either from a defective flue or defective wiring in the rear of the portion of the building occupied by the Wilmington Savings and Trust Company, resulted in large damage by smoke and water to the wholesale dry goods stock of Morris, Bear & Bros. on Front street. The stock is valued at $125,000 and volumes of smoke poured through the upper floors, where large stocks of white goods were carried, some placing the damage as high as 50 per cent.

New Orleans, Feb. 11.—Four of North Carolina delegates attending the Editorial association's meeting, W. K. Jacobson; W. B. Harker, Miss Thorns and Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer, will go from here to Panama on a two week's trip.

Raleigh, Feb. 11.—More than one-third of the class of fifty three young men who applied for license at the present term of the Supreme court, to practice law and who were examined by the justices of the court last Monday, failed to successfully pass the examination.

Concord, Feb. 10.—A negro baby was found dead in the branch near the Buffalo mill, just opposite the power station of the Southern Power company today. Fannie Jeffries, grandmother of the child, a negro woman who has been living at the double-tracking camp of the Southern railroad, is in jail charged with the murder of the child. The body of the child was discovered by two little negro boys, who immediately told some of the men in the neighborhood, who notified the officers. The police started an investigation and in a few hours they had found sufficient evidence to cause the arrest of the Jeffries woman.

SILK PETTICOATS—MARRIAGE.

Psychologist Says Girls Set too High Standard of Living for Young Men

In writing about ideal of marriage a noted psychologist cited the following incident: "I recently heard a lady reproaching two well-to-do bachelors and asking them what stood in the way of their marrying. They replied that silk petticoats stood in the way; and when pressed for a more general information of the obstacles to marriage, they said that they were not able to offer to any girl in their set the standard of living to which she had been accustomed." They chose single blessedness rather than to humiliate themselves or marry out of their own station in life, Helen Corinne Lambidge points out in The Designer for March. Few men after they have passed the stage of romance where any pair of starry eyes is a light to lead them into matrimony but calculate in some such way.

The living problem nowadays is becoming such a difficult one that such forethought is absolutely necessary to insure the man's own happiness, as well as that of the woman he would ask to become his wife. His newspapers, the books he reads, the plays he sees, all teach him that marriage spells either misery or happiness—there is no middle ground that is worth occupying. And it is so, from the man who earns a dollar and a quarter a day to the one who makes a magnificent living.

If you don't believe this, read the letters written the "Aunt Betty" or "Cousin Kate" of the daily newspapers and the magazines. These letters, though often ill spelt and poorly written, are sometimes real literature because they touch the very heart of life. "Would you advise me to marry on six dollars a week?" writes one; another, "What is the smallest amount two people can live on comfortably?" and so on, running over the whole list of questions matrimonial, day after day.

Yet the poets would have us believe that every man and woman rush wildly into marriage as into a tourney. Love may be blind, but there is always some one to lead him by the hand and collect the pennies due him.

Suffering With Carbuncle.

The Reflector regrets to learn that its life-time friend, Mr. G. T. Tyson, of Beaver Dam, is having much trouble with carbuncles. One on his neck has kept him confined to his bed for the past ten days, with the prospect of holding him in for some days yet. Any one who has ever suffered with a carbuncle knows how to sympathize with him.

Truxton King.

The first chapter of the serial story "Truxton King" is given in this issue of The Reflector. Our readers will find this an exceedingly interesting story, and should not miss any of it. If our readers appreciate this story we will follow it with others after it is completed.

Next Wednesday Night.

Wherever they have appeared the Spragues have been accorded high praise for their interesting presentation of Rip Van Winkle. They will appear in the opera house next Wednesday night under the auspices of the End of the Century Club for benefit of the public library.

TWELVE THINGS

To Do During the Month of February—Begin Now.

- (1) Break all the lands possible, so as to have it ready when spring comes. Plow deeply all clay soil.
- (2) Keep the fire out of the fields; do a little more work if necessary to get the trask worked into the soil.
- (3) Open up ditches, or make new ones—the broad, shallow kind,—straighten up terraces, clean up banks, fence rows, etc.
- (4) Get stumps and brush out of the field; fill in the gullies.
- (5) Look over the machinery and see that it is ready for use. Arrange now for the purchase of new implements needed.
- (6) Begin getting the horses and mules ready for the spring rush; put them to work by degrees; increase their feed gradually, groom well once each day.
- (7) Prepare the hot beds, if not already done, and sow tomato, pepper, etc. Sow cabbage, lettuce, onion and radish seed. Plant peas and early potatoes.
- (8) Get good seed of corn, cotton and other field crops ready for planting. If there is any question of their quality, test seeds for vitality.
- (9) Fence off the lots for the pigs and begin preparing a pasture rotation for them.
- (10) Set the hens; clean out the poultry houses; whitewash; prepare coops and brooders.
- (11) Prune the fruit trees. If you suspect San Jose scale, spray with lime-sulphur solution.
- (12) Get the tobacco beds ready. Sow only clean and heavy seed.—Raleigh (N. C.) Progressive Farmer and Gazette.

Oldest Woman in North Carolina.

How many people in the community know that the oldest person living in Davie county and most probably in North Carolina is living in Cooleemee? Such is true. There lives on Duke street with Mr. J. W. Crews, her son, Mrs. Cynthia Malinda Crews, who according to her statement is 101 years old having been born early in the year 1809. We had a very interesting hour's conversation with the old lady the other day, must say in consideration of her great age that she is a physical marvel. She has never worn a pair of glasses, uses no such thing as a stick to steady her steps, has a fairly clear memory, and in spite of the weight of a century of years in normally healthy and moves about with the alacrity of the average woman of 65. Mrs. Crews has seen four wars, the second war with England, the Mexican war, the civil war and the Spanish-American. She also remembers seeing Halley's comet on its last tour, and the great meteoric shower "falling of stars" in 1837. Her husband, Wm. Martin Crews, it appears was killed during the civil war as he joined the Confederate army and was never afterwards heard from.—Cooleemee Journal.

The Fair Deceivers.

In sending valentine mementos, the dear girls prefer to disguise their hand writing because a valentine gift is a love gift, and no mistake about it. And so, with papa's stub pen in hand and one of Jack's big plain envelopes, they direct the little token which carries with it the pretty little message which no man at all, would misconstrue or take advantage of.—Waxhaw Enterprise.

WINTERVILLE ITEMS.

Newsp Notes From Our Hustling Neighbor.

Winterville, N. C. Feb. 12, 1910. Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Cox went to Greenville yesterday. J. J. Satterthwaite, of Pactolus, was here Thursday visiting his daughter, Miss Louise, who is in school here. Everything up at the school seems to be moving along lovely and lively as usual. The Y. M. C. A., of Winterville High School meets tonight. Dr. B. T. Cox received a call to Haddock Cross Roads yesterday evening, where one of Mr. William Cox's children was badly burned. We are glad to learn that the burn is not very serious. The new road which is being made between Mr. Redden Tripp's and Winterville, is almost completed. This road will be very convenient. It is with sadness that we chronicle the death of Master Jasper Barber, who died near here Wednesday. We extend to the bereaved relatives our deepest sympathy. Remember the services, at the Free Will Baptist church tomorrow, second Sunday.

The Legend of St. Valentine.

Perhaps you have heard the legend of St. Valentine, but if you have not, here it is in as small a nutshell as such a saint could be well condensed; St. Valentine lived long ago. An emperor ruled him, and the emperor, whose name was Claudius, became very jealous of St. Valentine or Fr. Valentine as he was then called. And one day Claudius cut Fr. Valentine's head off and banished his remains, so that nobody should know that he had been beheaded.

"Now why did Claudius do that?" you ask. Well, he did it because Fr. Valentine became so great a favorite with young people that Claudius was not in their affections at all.

"But how did Valentine make himself such a favorite?" you still query. Why, how indeed? How do you suppose? How does any man, or woman either for that matter, become solid with young people? Why, by helping along their love affairs, to be sure, and by giving them every opportunity to be alone and talk it over. Now, Fr. Valentine was a born matchmaker, and he was always busy making matches. If he saw two young people looking at each other with sheepish eyes, he cast his toga over his head and sat still, never stirring for five minutes.

And Fr. Valentine got himself disliked by the Emperor Claudius and after Claudius had cut his head off the young people canonized him, and, upon the good old saint's birthday, would exchange little love tokens, just to keep his memory green. The people who had known St. Valentine when on earth told their children about him in after years, and their children told their children's children and so it has come down to us through many children of children.

Operetta at Quinerly School.

On Friday night, 18th the pupils of Quinerly school, near Grifton, will render the operetta "National Flower." A splendid program has been arranged and the entertainment is going to be very interesting. No admission charge will be made.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

Not many shad here yet.

It is best to be careful about fire.

Valentines will be in order Monday.

It is too wet for much farm work now.

The Farmers Union held a meeting here today.

You will find that the business people are talking in The Reflector.

Today, Feb. 12th, is the anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

For the 24 hours ending at 8 o'clock the morning the rainfall here was 1 1/4 inches.

J. H. Keel is wearing that pleased expression over the arrival of a son in his home.

Clouds and sunshine kept up a spasmodic chase today with first one and then the other ahead.

Points up the State caught snow and sleet plentifully Friday. Down here we took it all in rain.

The corner store in the Brady building, that will be occupied by the Gornto Shoe Co., is undergoing much remodeling.

The teachers had a disagreeable day for their meeting, but in spite of preceding weather there was a good attendance and much interest.

There will be an entertainment at Mill's school house Friday night Feb. 18. All are cordially invited. Given for the benefit of the school. Admission 20 cents.

When the weather does get settled sufficiently, people living along the paved streets should not overlook beautifying the sidewalk park strips.

Lent—What it is and What it Means.

1. Lent is a time for renewal of spiritual life by true repentance, acts of faith and deeds of charity.

2. It is a time for strict self-examination.

3. It is a time for special prayer, intercessions and worship.

4. It is a time for abstinence from worldly pleasures.

5. It is a time for special study in the Holy Scriptures.

6. It is a time for definite duty; definite spiritual growth; moral insight.

7. It is a time to compare ourselves, our ideal of living, our standards of conduct and character, with the lessons which Christ has presented to us.

Man is a strange combination. He can rise or fall. He can drift or resist the current. He can yield to temptation or resist and overcome it. He can be an animal or a saintly man. He can be a devil or a son of God. He stands at the parting of the ways. And Lent is the testing time to determine whether he tends and to turn his steps to the right.—Ex.

Since Raleigh has a prospect of an auditorium the city is going to put in a bid for the next Democratic State convention. It having taken a disposition to rotate around may make it harder for Raleigh to get.

Senator Overman's bill, which permits a citizen who pleads poverty to institute without paying the usual costs an action in any United States court and prosecute same to a conclusion before any circuit court of appeals, has passed the senate.

The Remedy.
Some things that cannot be cured must be endured, but smallpox is not one of them. It can be prevented and ultimately uprooted. It is a shame to endanger a whole community, because some few men are too prejudiced to be vaccinated. No serious danger attends proper vaccination. A great many come very near losing their arms, to hear them tell it, but did you ever see one who really lost his arm? We are in favor of compulsory vaccination. We will never be rid of periodic outbreaks of smallpox so long as we fail to apply the only remedy for it known to medical science. In some cases a law compelling everybody to be vaccinated would work some hardship, but, as in many other things, the good such a law would bring would far overbalance the evil. Prohibition in spots, while helpful and wise, is not nearly so desirable as prohibition all over the State. It is so with vaccination. The law must be general to be really effective. A general law compelling everybody to vaccinate will settle the smallpox trouble in short order, and nothing less drastic ever will. It is all right to respect individual liberty, so long as it does not interfere with the comfort, happiness and safety of others; but when it does it becomes a menace to society at large and should no longer be respected.—Charity and Child.

Those who do not wade through the pages of The Congressional Record, are always missing good things. For instance, in the issue of last Monday, which contained Heyburn's speech on the Lee statue, a demonstration in the manipulation of saltpetre at which the Senators laughed and made merry. At its conclusion Mr. Bankhead arose and addressing the presiding officer, said: "I am sure, Mr. President, that the Senator from Idaho feels much better now, and I ask for a vote." And when the historic vote was recorded everything went yea except Heyburn's solitary nay vote for himself. On this occasion sectionalism seems to have died the death. The occupation of the bloody shirt saunters is gone.—Charlotte Chronicle.

AWFUL PAINS FULLY DESCRIBED

A Lady of Pizarro Tells Story of Awful Suffering That Cardui Finally Relieved.

Pizarro, Va.—"I suffered for several years," writes Mrs. Dorma A. Smith, "with that awful backache and the bearing down sensations, so fully described in your book.

"I tried doctors and other medicines and found little relief, until I was induced to try Wine of Cardui, when I found instant relief and today I can heartily recommend Cardui to all suffering women and think there is no other as good."

In some instances, Cardui gives instant relief; in others, it may take a little time. But in all cases of female trouble Cardui can be depended on to be of benefit, as it is a specific remedy for women and acts in a curative way on the womanly organs.

As a general tonic for women, to build up your strength, improve your appetite, bring back rosy cheeks and make you look and feel young and happy, nothing you can find will do so much for you as Cardui.

Your druggist has it.

"OLD HICKORY'S" NERVE.

An Arrest by Jackson and a Time He Didn't Dance.

It was a fighting age in which Andrew Jackson lived, and every man who expected to command the respect of the world went prepared not only to fight at a moment's notice, but also to meet his man on the field of honor.

It can easily be imagined that Andrew Jackson, with his excitable nature, his domineering manner and his habit of regarding every opponent as a personal enemy, was by no means the most peaceably disposed citizen of the new settlements of Tennessee. The stories of all his brawls and duels would fill a volume.

Jackson's superb nerve is well illustrated by the following anecdote which comes down to us from the time when he was supreme judge on the Tennessee bench. One day a desperado named Bean paraded up and down in front of the log courthouse and threatened to shoot sheriff, judge and jury. Twice Jackson ordered the sheriff to arrest the man, and twice the sheriff was overawed by the desperado's threats and formidable appearance.

"Deputize me. I'll arrest him myself!" said Jackson, losing patience at last.

The sheriff complied, and Jackson, taking two pistols, walked out into the street. Bean at once meekly surrendered.

"When the judge come walkin' out," Bean afterward explained, "I looked him in the eye, an' I saw shoot, an' there hadn't been shoot in nary other eye in the crowd. So I says to myself, says I, 'Ole boss, it's about time to sing small,' an' so I did."

On another occasion, while Jackson was riding circuit, he was stopped by two rivermen—of the class whose boast it was that they were "half horse, half alligator, tipped with snapping turtle"—and was told that he would have to dance for their edification. Jackson meekly answered that he was not accustomed to dancing without his pumps, but that they were in his saddlebags and if his captors would permit he would put them on before giving the performance. Nothing loath, they consented. Jackson accordingly opened the bag and, plunging in both hands, drew them out with a pistol in each. Pointing them full at the men, he roared:

"Now we'll see who does the dancing! Dance, you devils! Dance!" They danced.—Chicago Tribune.

Helping the Minister.

A Scotch preacher had in his congregation an old woman who was deaf. In order to hear the sermon each Sunday this old lady would seat herself at the foot of the pulpit stairs. One day the sermon was about Jonah, and the preacher became very rhetorical.

"And when the sailors threw Jonah overboard," he said, "a big fish swallowed him up. Was it a shark that got 'im? Nay, my brethren, it was n'er a shark. Was it a sword-fish that eat him? Nay!"

"It was a whale," whispered the old lady excitedly.

"Hush, Biddie," said the preacher indignantly. "Would ye tak' th' word o' God out o' yer ane meenister's mouth?"—Success Magazine.

The Pleasure Was Mutual.

The friends of two American celebrities, one a stammerer and the other somewhat deaf, succeeded after much maneuvering in getting them to meet, and the event aroused considerable unholy glee.

Some time thereafter the stammerer was asked how the interview passed off.

"Oh, w-we g-g-got along f-f-fine-ly," he stammered. "I c-c-couldn't t-t-talk, and s-s-she c-c-couldn't h-h-hear me."—Lippincott's.

THE GOOD OLD TIMES

When Hunting Was Good and Gray Mares Were Wonders.

REAL SPORT IN THOSE DAYS.

Old Jimmy Chambers Tells About One Haul He Made When He Got More Than He Expected—The Willing Old Horse That Cracked Her Skin.

"Talk about yer huntin' trips," said ole Jimmy Chambers. "Why, there ain't no huntin' nowadays; no, not none 'tall—leastwise none worth mentionin'."

"It was different when I wuz a young feller. Them wuz huntin' days! When ye went out to hunt ye got sumthin', I tell ye. An' most a'ways ye got a dum sight more 'n ye expected. I remember onct down in ole Pennsylvania when I had a hunt as wuz a hunt. I had er ole muzzle loader rifle that could shoot some, I tell ye. An' I wuz no slouch at shootin' in them days myself. I could shoot about as well as ther next feller. Well, I went down to ther river lookin' fer er deer. I seen one standin' right in front of er big tree. I pulled up ther ole muzzle loader an' let her go. Jest as I fired a big fish jumped out of ther water, an' my shot went plum through him. I seen by ther way he fell I'd plugged er hole in him. The deer jest dropped where he stood—never stirred, jest fell stone dead.

"I rushed out into ther river an' grabbed my fish 'fore it could float away. With ther fish under my arm I started fer ther deer. An' what d'ye suppose? S' help me, jest back of where that deer stood ther bullet had knocked er hole in that tree as big as yer fist, an' out of that hole er regular stream of honey wuz flowin'! That good honey wuz goin' to waste dum fast, an' I hadn't nary er thing to stop it. Jest then er rabbit jumped out of er hole I hadn't noticed, an' I grabbed him by ther hind legs jest as he wuz leapin'. I wuz goin' to stuff him in ther hole when er flock of quail flew up on ther other side of ther tree. They wuz goin' straightaway, an' ther wuz more 'n 10,000 of 'em. Ther ole muzzle loader wuzn't loaded, an' them quail wuz gettin' away fast. I wanted some of 'em bad, so I jest let go that ole rabbit right in ther middle of 'em, an' ther way he kicked an' clawed as he wuz goin' through ther air wuz a caution. He landed right on top of ther whole bunch, an' when I got over ther seventeen of 'em wuz dead on ther ground—yes, sir, jest seventeen of 'em! An' ther shock had killed ther rabbit too. He wuz all smashed up. I stuck his head in ther hole to stop ther honey till I could go home fer sum barrels.

"I hitched up ther ole gray mare to ther sled an' went back. I chopped that there ole tree down, an' ther wuz honey enough to fill all my barrels. Well, I slung ther deer an' ther fish an' ther rabbit an' ther quail on ther sled an' started home. It wuz some load fer ther ole mare, an' I walked at her head, kinder coaxin' her along. I wuzn't payin' any attention to ther load, an', by gum, when we got up to ther house ther wuz that ther load way back in ther middle of ther river. Of course I knowed what wuz ther matter. That ole groundhog harness had got wet an' jest stretched. I wuz kind of hungry, so I jest thrived ther harness over a stump an' went into dinner. When I cum out again ther sun had dried ther harness an' ther load wuz just pullin' up to ther stump. That wuz some hunt. Yer don't get nothin' like that nowadays, I tell ye. Them wuz good old days!

"An', speakin' of ther ole gray mare, she was ther willin'est mare that ever wuz. She'd pull anything yer hitched her to. I tried her, an' she pulled ev'rything. One day I sez to myself, 'By gum, I'll give yer er load yer can't pull,' an' I hitched her to er stone boat loaded with all ther bowlders in ther county. She got right down an' pulled an' pulled an' pulled, but ther load didn't budge. I heard er little crack, but fer er minute I didn't suspicion anything, an' before I noticed that ther skin on her face had cracked it wuz too late. I yelled at her to stop, but she wuz so dum mad she kept right on pullin', an' s'help me, before I could stop her she'd pulled herself clean out of her skin! I didn't want to lose that there mare, an' I got busy an' did er little skin graftin' fer myself. I had some fresh sheep pelts, an' I sewed them on as fast as I could sew. Well, sir, them pelts took root fine. They grewed on that there ole mare jest like they'd always been there, an' ther next season I sheared jest 375 pounds of wool off'n her. She wuz er good ole mare, I tell ye, an' every year I got 375 pounds of wool so long as she lived. Yes, sir; it wuz always jest 375 pounds. Yer don't have no such horses nowadays, I tell ye."—Outer's Book.

The Pimpernel.

The common pimpernel, "poor man's weather glass," has the disadvantage of being a native plant and has been almost completely expelled from our flower gardens in favor of exotics which are rarer, but lack much of being as pretty. The pimpernel is a charming little flower which opens about 8 in the morning and closes late in the afternoon, but has the remarkable peculiarity of indicating a coming shower by shutting up its petals.

A Deadly Insult.

"Do you like my new hat?" asked Mrs. Brooke. "Yes, indeed," replied Mrs. Lynn. "I had no just like it when they wuz in style."—Lippincott's Magazine.

A COMEDIAN'S TRICK.

Ruse by Which He Escaped Arrest and Had His Debts Paid.

Many amusing stories are told of Joe Haines, a comedian of the time of Charles II., sometimes called "Count" Haines. It is said that he was arrested one morning by two bailiffs for a debt of £20, when he saw a bishop to whom he was related passing along in his coach. With ready resource he immediately saw a loophole for escape, and, turning to the men, he said, "Let me speak to his lordship, to whom I am well known, and he will pay the debt and your charges into the bargain."

The bailiffs thought they might venture this, as they were within two or three yards of the coach, and acceded to the request. Joe boldly advanced and took off his hat to the bishop. His lordship ordered the coach to stop, when Joe whispered to the divine that the two men were suffering from such scruples of conscience that he feared they would hang themselves, suggesting that his lordship should invite them to his house and promise to satisfy them. The bishop agreed, and, calling to the bailiffs, he said, "You two men come to me tomorrow morning, and I will satisfy you!"

The men bowed and went away pleased, and early the next day waited on his lordship, who, when they were ushered in, said, "Well, my men, what are these scruples of conscience?"

"Scruples?" replied one of them. "We have no scruples! We are bailiffs, my lord, who yesterday arrested your cousin, Joe Haines, for a debt of £20, and your lordship kindly promised to satisfy us."

The trick was strange, but the result was stranger, for his lordship, either appreciating its cleverness or considering himself bound by the promise he had unintentionally given, there and then settled with the men in full.

Misnamed.

During a geography lesson in a Baltimore school one day the teacher spoke at great length touching that wonderful stream, the Mississippi. Incidentally she afforded the pupils some interesting account of the historic events associated with the great river. "Finally," said she, "we must not overlook the poetic value of the name Mississippi. It means 'Father of Waters.' Don't forget that, boys and girls."

One lad, however, was not much impressed by this later contribution to his store of knowledge. "I beg pardon, ma'am," said he, "but if the name of the river means 'Father of Waters,' why don't they call it 'Mister Sippi?'"—Circle.

A LUCKY LOCATION

has advantages over every other real estate investment around Norfolk by reason of its being located adjacent to the terminal of the Virginia Railway.

It is a well known fact that wherever the terminal of a Railway is located a city of many thousand people is quickly built up with homes for the employes, who must necessarily live near their work.

The Virginian Railway will employ men of the highest standard, who will require a nice, high class home section with pleasant surroundings and in order to meet these requirements, GLENWOOD PARK is being developed with every desirability for nice homes; and lots are being rapidly sold.

Beautiful wide avenues extend through the property and in the center of these avenues small Parks are being laid out, so that the children will have plenty of fresh air and nice play grounds.

City improvements, such as granolithic side walks, shade trees, city water, electric lights and telephones are being established, and residences to cost $2,000 or more, are being built.

Only a few lots now remain for sale, and these will be quickly taken up, as the lots are being sold on payment of $5 cash and $5 per month without interest or taxes, which places the investment within the reach of all, and no reasonable excuse can be had for neglecting such an opportunity.

If you want to make a profitable investment, on small monthly payments, an investment in the most rapidly growing section of Norfolk, where you will double your money in a short while, buy lots in GLENWOOD PARK.

TRUXTON KING

A Story of Graustark

BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

Copyright, 1909, by George Barr McCutcheon
Copyright, 1909, by Dodd, Mead & Company

Truxton King, a millionaire's son, sets out in search of adventure. Where better could he look for stirring events than in faroff Graustark, where the age of chivalry yet survives in all its romantic opportunity; where rules Prince Robin, the most precocious boy monarch in the realm of fiction; where the reds of Europe plot his murder in mysterious underground retreats; where gallant Truxton King and brave "Uncle Jack" fight valiantly for the preservation of the prince and the love of beautiful princesses; where American pluck and manhood are pitted against foreign intriguers, and where honesty and courage are mightier than the sword? Read of Prince Robin, son of an American princess; of Olga Platanova, the girl with the dread mission; of Marlanx, the Iron Count; of John Tullis, the American bulwark of a foreign throne; of lovely Loraine and of daredevil Truxton King, and then you will understand why an American lad is Prince of Graustark and an American author prince of story tellers.

CHAPTER I. TRUXTON KING.

HE was a tall, rawboned, rangy young fellow with a face so tanned by wind and sun you had the impression that his skin would feel like leather if you could affect the impertinence to test it by the sense of touch. His clothes fitted him loosely and yet were graciously devoid of the bagginess which characterizes the appearance of extremely young men whose frames are not fully set and whose joints are still parading through the last stages of college development.

This tall young man in the panama hat and gray flannels was Truxton King, embryo globe trotter and searcher after the treasures of romance. Somewhere up near Central park, in one of the fashionable cross streets, was the home of his father and his father's father before him—a home which Truxton had not seen in two years or more. It is worthy of passing notice, and that is all, that his father was a manufacturer; more than that, he was something of a power in the financial world. His mother was not strictly a social queen in the great metropolis, but she was what we might safely call one of the first "ladies in waiting," which is quite good enough for the wife of a manufacturer, especially when one records that her husband was a manufacturer of steel. It is also a matter of no little consequence that Truxton's mother was more or less averse to the steel business as a heritage for her son. Be it understood here and now that she intended Truxton for the diplomatic service.

But neither Truxton's father, who wanted him to be a manufacturing Croesus, nor Truxton's mother, who expected him to become a social Solomon, appears to have taken the young man's private inclinations into consideration.

Young Mr. King believed in romance. He grew up with an ever increasing bump of imagination, contiguous to which, strange to relate, there was a properly developed bump of industry and application; hence it is not surprising that he was willing to go far afield in search of the things that seemed more or less worth while to a young gentleman who had suffered the ill fortune to be born in the nineteenth century instead of the seventeenth.

We come upon him at last—luckily for us we were not actually following him—after two years of wonderful but rather disillusioning adventure in mid-Asia and all Africa. He had seen the Kongo and the Euphrates, the Ganges and the Nile, the Yangtsekang and the Yenisei; he had climbed mountains in Abyssinia, in Siam, in Tibet and Afghanistan; he had shot big game in more than one jungle and had been shot at by small brown men in more than one forest, to say nothing of the little encounters he had had in most unoccidental towns and cities.

For twenty days he had traveled by caravan across the Persian uplands, through Herat and Meshed and Bokhara, striking off with his guide alone toward the sea of Aral and the eastern shores of the Caspian, thence through the Ural foothills to the old Roman highway that led down into the sweet green valleys of a land he had thought of as nothing more than the creation of a harebrained fictionist. Somewhere out in the shimmering east he had learned, to his honest amazement, that there was such a land as Graustark. At first he would not believe, but the English bank in Meshed assured him that he would come to it if he traveled long enough and far enough into the north and west and if he were not afraid of the hardships that most men abhor. The dying spirit of romance flamed up in his heart. His blood grew quick again and eager. He would not go home until he had sought out this land of fair women and sweet tradition. And so he traversed the wild and dangerous Tartar roads for days and days, like the knights of Scheherazade in the times of old, and came at last to the gates of Edelweiss.

Not until he sat down to a rare dinner in the historic Hotel Regenetz was he able to realize that he was truly in that fabled, mythical land of Graustark, a quaint, grim little principality in the most secret pocket of the earth's great mantle. This was the land of his dreams, the land of his fancy. He had not even dared to hope that it actually existed.

And now it becomes my deplorable duty to divulge the fact that Truxton King, after two full days and nights in the city of Edelweiss, was quite ready to pass on to other fields, completely disillusioned in his own mind and not a little disgusted with himself for having gone to the trouble to visit the place.

Where were the beautiful women he had read about and dreamed of ever since he left Teheran? On his soul, he had not seen half a dozen women in Edelweiss who were more than passably fair to look upon. True, he had to admit, the people he had seen were of the lower and middle classes—the shopkeepers and the shop-girls, the hucksters and the fruit vendors. What he wanted to know was this: What had become of the royalty and the nobility of Graustark? Where were the princes, the dukes and the barons, to say nothing of the feminine concomitants to these excellent gentlemen?

One dingy little shop in the square interested him. It was directly opposite the Royal cafe, with American bar attached, and the contents of its grimy little windows presented a peculiarly fascinating interest to him. They were packed with weapons and firearms of ancient design. Once he ventured inside the little shop. Finding no attendant, he put aside his sudden impulse to purchase a mighty broadsword.

On several occasions he had seen a grim, sharp featured old man in the doorway of the shop, but it was not until after he had missed the Thursday train that he made up his mind to accost him and to have the broadsword at any price. With this object in view, he inserted his tall frame into the narrow doorway, calling out lustily for attention.

"What is it?" demanded a sharp, angry voice at his elbow. He found himself looking into the wizened, parchment-like face of the little old man.

"That broad— Say, you speak English, don't you?"

"Certainly," snapped the old man. "Why shouldn't I? I can't afford an interpreter. You'll find plenty of English used here in Edelweiss since the Americans and British came. They won't learn our language, so we must learn theirs."

"What's the price of that old sword you have in the window?"

"Three hundred gnyvos."

"What's that in dollars?"

"Four hundred and twenty. It is genuine, sir, and 300 years old. Old Prince Boris carried it. It's most rare."

"I'll give you a hundred dollars for it, Mr.—er— he looked at the sign on the open door—"Mr. Spantz."

"I don't want your money. Good day."

Truxton King felt his chin in perplexity. "It's too much. I can't afford it," he said, disappointment in his eyes.

"I have modern blades of my own make, sir, much cheaper and quite as good," ventured the excellent Mr. Spantz.

"You make 'em?" in surprise.

The old man straightened his bent figure with sudden pride. "I am armorer to the crown, sir. My blades are used by the nobility—not by the army, I am happy to say."

"I say, Herr Spantz, or monsieur, I'd like to have a good long chat with you. What do you say to a mug of that excellent beer over in the cafe garden? Business seems to be a little dull. Can't you—er—lock up?"

Spantz looked at him keenly.

"May I ask what brings you to Edelweiss?" he asked abruptly.

"I don't mind telling you, Mr. Spantz, that I'm here because I'm somewhat of a fool. False hopes led me astray. I came here looking for romance—for adventure."

"I see," cackled Spantz, his eyes twinkling with mirth. "You thought you could capture wild and beautiful princesses here just as you pleased, eh? Let me tell you, young man, only one American—only one foreigner, in fact—has accomplished that miracle. Mr. Lorry came here ten years ago and won the fairest flower Graustark ever produced—the beautiful Yette—but he was the only one."

"No. I'm not looking for princesses. I've seen hundreds of 'em in all parts of the world."

"You should see Prince Robin," went on the armorer.

"I've heard of nothing but him, my good Mr. Spantz. He's seven years old, and he looks like his mother, and he's got a jeweled sword and all that sort of thing. I daresay he's a nice little chap. Got American blood in him, you see."

The old man retired to the rear of the shop and called out to some one upstairs. A woman's voice answered.

"My niece will keep shop, sir, while I am out," Spantz explained.

They paused near the door until the old man's niece appeared at the back of the shop. King's glance became more or less in the nature of a stare of amazement.

A young woman of the most astounding beauty, attired in the black and red of the Graustark middle classes, was slowly approaching from the shadowy recesses at the end of the shop. His heart enjoyed a lively thump. Truxton King, you may be sure, did not precede the old man into the street. He deliberately removed his hat and waited most politely for age to go before youth, in the meantime blandly gazing upon the face of this amazing niece.

Across the square, at one of the tables, the old man, over his huge mug of beer, became properly grateful. He was willing to repay King for his little attention by giving him a careful history of Graustark, past, present and future.

The old man was rambling on. "The young prince has lived most of his life in Washington and London and Paris, sir. He's only seven, sir. Of course you remember the dreadful accident that made him an orphan and put him on the throne with the three 'wise men of the east' as regents or governors—the train wreck near Brussels, sir. His mother, the glorious Princess Yette, was killed and his father, Mr. Lorry, died the next day from his injuries. That, sir, was a most appalling blow to the people of Graustark. There never will be another pair like them, sir. God alone preserved the little prince. The collision was from the rear, a broken rail throwing a locomotive into the prince's coach. This providential escape of the young prince preserved the unbroken line of the present royal family."

"I say, Mr. Spantz, I don't believe I've told you that your niece is a most remarkably beau—"

"As I was saying, sir," interrupted Spantz so pointedly that Truxton flushed, "the little prince is the idol of all the people. Under the present regency he is obliged to reside in the principality until his fifteenth year, after which he may be permitted to travel abroad."

Spantz was eying him narrowly.

"You do not appear interested in our royal family," he ventured coldly.

Truxton hastened to assure him that he was keenly interested. "Especially so now that I appreciate that the little prince is the last of his race."

"There are three regents, sir, in charge of the affairs of state—Count Halfont, the Duke of Perse and Baron Jasto Dangloss, who is minister of police. Count Halfont is a granduncle of the prince by marriage. The Duke of Perse is the father of the unhappy Countess Ingomede, the young and beautiful wife of the exiled Iron Count Marlanx. No doubt you've heard of him."

"I remember that he was banished from the principality."

"Quite true, sir. He was banished in 1901 and now resides on his estates in Austria. Three years ago in Budapest he was married to Ingomede, the daughter of the duke. Count Marlanx has great influence at the Austrian court. The Duke of Perse realized this when he compelled his daughter to accept him as her husband. The fair Ingomede is less than twenty-five years of age. The Iron Count is fully sixty-five."

"I'd like to see if she's really beautiful. I've seen but one pretty woman in this whole blamed town, your niece, Herr Spantz. I've looked 'em over pretty carefully too. She is exceedingly attract—"

"You will not find the beautiful women of Edelweiss in the streets, sir," snapped Spantz.

"Don't they ever go out shopping?"

"Hardly. The merchants, if you will but notice, carry their wares to the houses of the noble and the rich. But tomorrow the garrison at the fortress marches in review before the prince. If you should happen to be on the avenue near the castle gate at 12 o'clock you will see the beauty and chivalry of Graustark. The soldiers are not the only ones who are on parade."

There was an unmistakable sneer in his tone.

"You don't care much for society, I'd say," observed Truxton, with a smile.

Spantz gave him a withering look, as

A SLY, IMPULSIVE SMILE PLAYED ABOUT HER RED LIPS.

American's charge and begged him to stand by him through thick and thin until the lad is able to take care of himself. As if there were not loyal men in Graustark who might have done as much for their prince!"

King looked interested. "I see. The people, no doubt, resent this espionage. Is that it?"

Spantz gave him a withering look, as much as to say that he was a fool to ask such a question in a place so public. Without replying, he got to his feet.

"I must return. I have been away too long."

The American sank back in his chair. Suddenly he became conscious of a disquieting feeling that some one was looking at him intently from behind. He turned in his chair and found himself meeting the gaze of a ferocious looking, military appearing little man at a table near by. His waiter appeared at his elbow with the change.

"Who's the devil is that old man at the table there?" demanded young Mr. King loudly.

The waiter assumed a look of extreme insolence. "That is Baron Dangloss, minister of police. Anything more, sir?"

"Yes. What's he looking so hard at me for? Does he think I'm a pick-pocket?"

"You know as much as I, sir," was all that the waiter said in reply. King pocketed the coin he had intended for the fellow and deliberately left the place. As he sauntered across the little square his gaze suddenly shifted to a second story window above the gunshop.

The interesting young woman had cautiously pushed open one of the shutters and was peering down upon a trio of red coated guardsmen. Almost at the same instant her quick, eager gaze fell upon the tall American, now quite close to the horsemen. He saw her dark eyes expand as if with surprise. The next instant he caught his breath and almost stopped in his tracks.

A shy, impulsive smile played about her red lips for a second, lighting up the delicate face with a radiance that amazed him. Then the shutter was closed gently, quickly. He felt his ears burn as he abruptly turned away.

In the meantime Baron Dangloss was watching him covertly from the edge of the cafe garden across the square.

Spantz's eyes flamed for an instant and then subtly resumed their most ingratiating twinkle. "We cannot all be peacocks," he said quietly. "You will also see that the man who rides beside the prince's carriage wheel is an American, while Graustark nobles take less exalted places."

"An American, eh?"

"Yes. Have you not heard of John Tullis, the prince's friend? He, your countryman, is the real power behind our throne. On his deathbed the prince's father placed his son in this Cat's Sense of Locality. A kitten about six months old was taken to a house a few miles distant from its birthplace, confined in a room and tenderly cared for during a week and then set at liberty. It was supposed to have become habituated to its new surroundings, but it returned to its old home on the day of its release.

The sense of locality and direction was exhibited still more strikingly by an old tomcat which was stolen and carried a distance of twenty miles, confined in a bag. The cat was imprisoned, but made its escape and in a few days reappeared in a pitiable state at the home of its former master, which was separated from that of the thief by a high wooded cliff.—Scientific American

Greenville Cotton Market reported by J. G. Moye 14 1-2

Manager Frank J. Shaughnessy, of the Virginia League Champions, found Noah's Liniment best for bruises, scratches, stiffness. One trial will convince you. Noah's Liniment penetrates. Requires but little rubbing.

Here's the Proof "I have had occasion to use Noah's Liniment on two of my players' arms, and the result was gratifying. Both were immediately relieved of soreness and able to resume throwing with their former speed. Have also used it myself, and consider it the best Liniment I ever tried. It is fine for bruises, scratches, stiffness, etc. Frank J. Shaughnessy, Manager, Roanoke Champions, Roanoke, Va."

Noah's Liniment is the best remedy for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lame Back, Stiff Joints and Muscles, Sore Throat, Colds, Sprains, Cuts, Bruises, Colic, Cramps, Neuralgia, Toothache and all Nerve, Bone and Muscle Aches and Pains. The genuine has Noah's Ark on every package. Sold by dealers in medicine. Sample by mail free. Noah Remedy Co., Richmond, Va.
