HAPPENINGS WITHIN THE OLD NORTH STATE

GATHERED FROM OUR EXCHANGES TODAY

Newly Items of Interest Condensed for Busy Readers.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 14.—The Navy Department has decided to locate a wireless station at Frying Pan shoals, near Southport. This action was taken at the instance of Senator Overman, who has been working on the project for several months. It is believed that a wireless station at that point will do much toward relieving vessels in distress off the dangerous Carolina coast. The business people of Wilmington have been endeavoring for a long time to secure a wireless station at Frying Pan shoals, and the successful efforts of Senator Overman in that direction will make that city an important point in the search for crippled ships at sea.

Wilson, N. C., Feb. 14.—Saturday night after W. H. Drake & Co. had closed their place of business, George Briggs, a white man, made entrance from the rear and looted the cash register, securing eighteen dollars in money. Besides he took a quantity of cigars, cigarettes, etc. In a short while after the occurrence the police had him behind the bars, with $16.50 of the stolen money in their possession.

Raleigh, Feb. 15.—There is much anxiety felt about the condition of Corporation Commissioner B. F. Aycock, who has been confined to his home in Wayne county for more than two months past. He has been quite sick much of the time, but has improved somewhat within the past week or two. A serious chronic heart disease is one of the most alarming symptoms.

On account of an order which reduced the working time from 55 to 40 hours a week, which would have cut down their wages, every man in the Norfolk and Southern shops in this city except the boiler makers laid down their tools yesterday morning about nine o'clock and walked out. The officials of the road were communicated with and the matter was finally adjusted with the men and they returned to their work.—New Bern Journal.

A fine young mule was being shown off in front of Bevil and Vanstors' stable at noon today to a prospective customer, when the animal reared up, fell to the pavement and broke its neck. His body was turned over to the "mule coroner," Haywood Peterson, who after the usual dissection, pronounced his verdict, "that a mule is a fool, anyhow," and took charge of the corpse.—Fayetteville Observer.

The crows are migrating every evening from their feeding grounds to their roosts. In doing this they cross the Kannapolis road several miles above the city. A gentleman with some little curiosity on yesterday undertook to count the number passing a certain point in a given time, and by counting he found that there were an average of 700 passing in five minutes, making 8,400 every hour. They continued passing for two hours, which would make approximately 16,800 of the birds. It would be interesting to hear from others who have curiosity enough to want to know how many there are.—Concord Tribune.

WINTERVILLE ITEMS.

Newly Notes From Our Hustling Neighbor.

Winterville, N. C. Feb. 16, 1910. Miss Agnes Dixon, of Ayden, was visiting friends here Sunday. Miss Mary Whitehurst, of Grindool, was visiting friends near here last Sunday.

Miss Lilla and Addie Stocks, of Greene county, are visiting Miss Pearl Barber this week.

J. H. Smith, who lives near here, is very sick with pneumonia. We hope he may soon recover.

There will be services at the Baptist church next Sunday.

Rev. C. W. Blanchard, preached an excellent sermon in the Baptist church last Sunday night. He preached on the crucifixion of Christ. As we listened to this able sermon it carried our minds back to that horrible scene.

Clarence Vincent, an employee of the A. G. Cox Mfg. Co., cut one of his fingers very badly, though not seriously, while working at a shaper last Friday. The hurt was caused by a piece of bit which broke off the machine. We are glad he has not had to stop on account of it.

There will be a party at Ballard's school house next Friday night. It was to have been last Friday night, but was postponed till next Friday night, Feb. 18th. A good time is expected by all present.

Rev. E. T. Philipps filled his regular appointment at the Free Will Baptist church last Sunday morning.

We are glad to learn that Miss Dora Cox, who has been sick, is out again.

L. G. Whitley, a student of W. H. S., received a message last Monday that Miss Bessie Whitley, his cousin, was at the point of death. Mr. Whitley departed for his home at Saratoga Monday.

Remember the prayer service at the Baptist church tonight.

The son of Louis Worthington, near here, was killed late yesterday afternoon. He was riding along on a stalk cutter, when all at once, the team became frightened and threw him off, breaking his neck. The boy was about twelve years of age. We tender the bereaved family our deepest sympathy.

ROCHDALE ITEMS.

Rochdale, Feb. 15.—Mrs. C. D. Smith went to Wilson Wednesday to accompany her daughter, Miss Nannie, to the hospital for treatment.

We had a rainy day Thursday and Sunda was very cold.

Mr. Peterson, of Washington, passed through our burg one day last week selling eye glasses.

Miss Emma Joyner, of Greenville, came up Sunday morning and spent the day at Mills Smith's.

The farmers in this section have more up to date farming implements than they have been having and are preparing their lands for better crops, and are diversifying more than usual, which is a good plan. They are also improving their stock right much.

The boys had a debate at Smith's school house last night.

Assaults of Minister Fined.

S. M. Pollard and J. A. Burnett, who on Saturday morning assaulted Rev. Jesse McCarter on the street in Farmville, were tried before Mayor Turnage Tuesday. They were fined $10 and costs each.

SIDEWALKS BELONG TO TOWN.

Mayor Whedbee Replies to Inquiry of Citizen.

Mayor's Office, Feb. 15, 1910. Editor Reflector:

In deference to the inquiry made of me by Citizen through your paper, I beg to state that the streets and sidewalks of the town, no matter how or by whom made, are the property of the town and under its jurisdiction and control.

The sidewalks are for the exclusive use of persons on foot, and it is against the town ordinance to use them for any other purpose. Baby carriages are the only vehicles permitted on sidewalks, and side walks certainly cannot be converted into skating rinks.

H. W. Whedbee, Mayor.

PACTOLUS ITEMS.

Pactolus, N. C., Feb. 16 1909. J. P. Fleming and J. H. Gurganus went to Stokes Monday.

B. B. Satterthwaite went to Winterville Thursday to visit his daughter, Louise, who is attending school at that place.

Miss Eliza Evans went to Washington Saturday and returned Sunday.

W. S. Williams spent part of last week at Jeans.

M. B. Ward went to Washington Saturday to spend the night with relatives.

L. L. Ross spent Sunday at the camp of Jap Langley.

Miss Sadie Chauncey left for Washington Sunday to spend a few days there. She expects to go to Baltimore on business.

C. McGowans is on the sick list this week.

The Sunday school is gradually enlarging itself by its good works. Wish every one would attend at 3:30 each Sunday.

Every farmer is having his farm well ditched this year, looking for another wet spring.

Pactolus is on a boom this week.

Mr. Henry Paramore and Miss Lydia Eason were married at Parker's Chapel Sunday afternoon. We hope them a very pleasant voyage on the sea of life.

Big Profit From One Turkey Egg.

Master Howard Parrish, son of William Parrish, of Cox, Randolph county, found a turkey egg in the woods last spring, which he carried home and put under a setting hen. When the hen came off with her brood of chicks he gave the turkey egg, with other eggs, to another hen. At the end of a week, which made the fourth week, the turkey was hatched. The hen left her nest and raised the turkey. The boy sold the turkey for $2.20 and with the money bought a pig. He fattened the pig and sold it yesterday to Mr. Frank Delk for $19.20 cash. Mr. Parrish had no turkeys and it was thought that the egg was from a wild turkey.—Asheboro Courier.

Rural Carriers Must Forego Hunting.

The shooting and hunting of game by rural mail carriers while officially employed on routes, or the carrying of guns for that purpose, is now formally forbidden. An order to this effect has been issued by the postoffice department. Complaints were received that delays in the delivery and collection of mail were caused at certain places by the practice of carriers becoming nimrods.—Washington Dispatch.

A HERO OF THE HOME.

Self-Sacrificing Struggle of Young Man for Loved Ones.

The Floy's, a big family of nine, had scarcely settled in High Point when sickness seized upon them. A very respectable and self-respecting family they were quite slow to raise the cry of distress. The eldest son in the prime and pride of his young manhood cooked and nursed and went forth to the factory to his work to help the sick and struggling family in every way he could till his own health completely gave way under the strain.

Three of the family were sick of pneumonia and the rest were sick of gripe. Later measles came into the home and six in the family had this disease. The eldest son's sickness began with gripe, changed to measles and then pneumonia, which proved too much for him and he soon died. Disease brought the brave and loyal son down but he fell like a true soldier with his face to the foe, standing bravely at his post of duty till sickness slew him.

The beauty, the glory, the heroism, the self-sacrifice of life and death is a story worth telling. The glory of his death is grander than the heroic death of a soldier on the field of battle, because the soldier dies while he is trying to destroy life, but this brave boy died while trying to save life.

All honor to the memory of such brave boys, heroes of private life, heroes of peace, heroes of the home, and worthy of our highest praise.

The Church Relief Association has watched over his home and the Junior Order has lent a helping hand.—High Point Enterprise.

GETS HER DAUGHTERS.

Decision of South Carolina Supreme Court in Mrs. Tillman's Favor.

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 15.—Granting the mother's plea for the custody of her two little children, the Supreme court of South Carolina today handed down a decision in favor of Mrs. B. R. Tillman, Jr., who sought to recover her two little girls, Doushica Pickens Tillman and Sarah Stark Tillman, from the possession of Senator and Mrs. B. R. Tillman.

The decision is based on the ground that the deed of transfer by B. R. Tillman, Jr., was invalid, as applied to the mother, the act under which it was made being in violation of the State and United States constitutions. The court, therefore, granted the application for habeas corpus.

As soon as the decision was announced attorneys for young Mrs. Tillman took steps toward securing the children.

Mrs. J. Everett of Martin County.

Williamston, Feb. 14.—Many friends here sympathize with Mr. S. Justice Everett in the death of his mother, Mrs. Margaret Everett, wife of Mr. Justus Everett, an extensive planter of Palmyra, Mrs. Everett had been a sufferer for many years, and the end came on February 8. The interment was in the family cemetery near Hamilton, Martin county.

Tobacco Plants Up.

Mr. W. B. Tyson, of Grifton, who was in town today, told us that he has tobacco plants up in his seed bed. This is the earliest plants reported this season.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL BRIEFS.

The Visitors Here and People Who Travel.

O. L. Joyner went to Wilson this morning.

Dr. C. M. Jones, of Grimesland, was here this morning.

S. V. Laughinghouse, postmaster of Grifton, spent today here. "Vandierbilt" says the home folks thought he was running up to Washington to give the powers that be a few tips, but he only meant to look on and see how the capital of Pitt is progressing.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

Rip Van Winkle in the opera house tonight.

There will be prayer meetings in the churches tonight.

Munford's special sale opened this morning, and the folks were there.

If you want to see something real good do not miss Rip Van Winkle in the opera house tonight.

The Mystic Circle had a very enthusiastic meeting Monday night. The order starts off here with a very large membership.

Carolina Club will meet Thursday night and every member should be present, as there will be business of importance.

Don't Jump Out of Bed.

Unless you are in vigorous health and well rested don't jump out of bed. The majority of people wake more or less tired, and springing suddenly upon the feet after slumber is a shock which is as injurious as unpleasant.

People who habitually wake up tired, especially delicate women and children, should get themselves up gradually, taking at least five minutes for it.

It is wonderful how much is gained by a little preliminary stretching of the muscles to tighten them gradually with nervous force after they have been completely unstrung for many hours. At the same time one should stretch the lungs to their fullest capacity by half a dozen generous yawns, thus flushing all the esidum of carbonic acid and other poisonous exhalations out of the remotest air-cells. After five minutes of such preliminaries, one who has felt on first waking that the burden of the body was too great to be taken up and borne will be surprised to find it possible to stand quite comfortably.—The Designer for March.

Leave the Crap Shooter or Get All.

"I am getting tired," declared Judge E. B. Jones, in charging the jury in Mecklenburg county court "of officers allowing gambling to go on right under their noses."

"I don't know anything about your police officers here," he continued, "but I do know that in some places they think themselves smart and will pick up a few little negroes, like English sparrows, for shooting crap in a back lot, and then walk right past doors and hear the clink of coin without turning their heads."

If you are not going to bring up the "silk hatted violators," he declared with positive emphasis, "don't bring up the little negro crap shooters. Don't pick up the little negroes and let the others go. Oh, I know you are doing it here in Charlotte. They are doing it in my own county."—Charlotte News.

A WIFE IS INVALUABLE.

Instead of Being Brie a'Brac She is so Often Found Sponging Clothes.

"He travels fastest who travels alone"—folderol! Drop in upon your neighbor in the suburban town in which you live some bright morning, and what do you find to be the occupation of his wife? Massage? Manicuring? Evolving beautiful costumes for herself with the dressmaker by-the-day? Reading Ibsen? Pitying herself for the lack of romance in her life, asks Anne O'Hagan in The Designer for March.

No. She is in the laundry with her John's evening clothes on the ironing-board.

"You know a man must keep up appearances if he's to succeed in this day and generation," she tells you cheerfully. "And the sponging and pressing bill figures up to no trifle, if you have to pay for it. So I've mastered the gentle art, and I think we save a dollar a week just on John's things.

"And—never tell it, or John would perish of mortification—I make his silk cravats. You know the dollar and a half the haberdashers charge for the good silk ones—the only ones a poor man can really afford, my dear, for the others grow shabby in no time—is a ghastly price. So I buy half-yards of good silk, and with pattern I've made by ripping up old, worn-out ones, I keep John quite a dandy as to cravats on mighty little money."

New Farmville Firm.

The half page advertisement of Holmes & Overby, hardware dealers of Farmville, will attract the attention of every reader of The Reflector. These gentlemen recently moved to Farmville from another section of the State, because they believe Pitt is one of the best counties in North Carolina, and they have opened an entirely new stock of hardware and farm implements that is complete in every particular. They are also showing their enterprise by a liberal use of advertising space in the county paper, and through this invite the people to call and get acquainted with them and see the splendid stock they are offering.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 16, 1910

We complain of the ice itself in winter, and of the price of it in summer.

The ground hog must be sound asleep and ignorant of the fact that we are getting one or two pretty spring days.

The farmer who has something to sell is not worrying about the price it brings. It is the fellow who has it to buy that is making the noise.

Now they are talking of getting Hunter Roosevelt to head an expedition to go in search of the South Pole. That ought to give him sport enough for a while.

Strange as it may seem, as the passing years take us further away from the war, that pensions grow larger. Congress has just added two millions more to the budget.

It has been discovered that Virginia also has the child-deeding law on her statute books. Monday a bill was introduced in the South Carolina legislature to abolish the abominable law in that state. Go d. Let North Carolina and Virginia follow her lead as early as possible.

A preacher in Pittsburg district, a Presbyterian, has decided that he will not marry any couple where the prospective husband has an income less than $2,000 a year. He really bases his action on the high cost of living, because poverty, he says, leads to divorce, and he does not propose to boom the business of the divorce lawyers. The high cost of living leads to the poverty that he says leads to divorces.—Age Herald.

That preacher must have overlooked the fact that a large per cent. of divorces come from the upper classes, when the husbands have incomes of many times more than $2,000. Small incomes are not the causes of divorce. About all the happy married people we know live and love on less than $2,000. The old boy will have to guess again. Most divorces are the result of deceitfulness, ill temper, lack of insight and selfishness. Where would the race be today if only the $2,000 and above classes could marry?

The Staunton Plan.

The plan of Staunton, Va., of employing a general manager, in lieu of a mayor and a board of aldermen, to look after its municipal affairs, seems to be working well. The general manager is conducting the affairs of the town on a business basis. The Charleston News and Courier has been making a study of the Staunton plan and comes to the conclusion that Staunton is the best governed city in America. It says that Staunton now saves each year on coal bills alone almost enough to pay the entire salary of the general manager. Staunton within a year or two will be better provided with permanently paved streets than any city of its size in the world. Staunton has one of the best lighting systems in the country, and the cost is nominal. So, too, it has a very excellent water service. There is practically no department of the city that is not more efficiently conducted than ever before in the history of the town, and more economically. There is no waste in Staunton. All improvements are permanent and correlated.—Charlotte Chronicle.

It cropped out in a murder trial in Haywood county Superior court this week that the inception of the trouble that led to the killing was in the killing of a dog. If the wife had been insulted or the children slapped, the incident might have passed without bloodshed. But killing the dog—only bloodshed can avenge the wrong.—Statesville Landmark.

I was restless at night and arose in the morning unfit to commence the day's duties. I obtained no relief from the various remedies I used and had about dispireed of ever being cured when Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me. I began their use and could soon see that they were helping me. They soon disposed of the backache and improved my health in every way." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Bronchial Tubes All Stuffed Up.

"While a resident of Washington, D. C., I suffered continually and intensely with a bronchial trouble that was simply terrible to endure. I would have sworn that I could hardly breathe. I would choke-up, fill up in my throat bronchial tubes, and the doctoring that I did and the remedies used were of no benefit to me whatever. I heard about Booth's Hyomei being so beneficial in catarrhal and bronchial affections and procured an outfit. I received relief from the first by its use. I continued with it and received a cure. It is about two years since I have suffered at all from my former trouble.—Mrs. R. L. Pannel, 401 N. Augusta street, Staunton, Va., March 26, 1909." Hyomei is guaranteed by Coward & Wooten to cure catarrh, croup, bronchitis, coughs, colds and sore throat or money back. ## SNOPSIS

Chapter I—Truxton King arrives in Edelweiss, capital of Graustark, and meets the beautiful niece of Spantz, a gunmaker.

CHAPTER II

A MEETING OF THE CABINET.
At this time the principality of Graustark was in a most prosperous condition. Its affairs were under the control of an able ministry, headed by the venerable Count Halfont. The Duke of Perse, for years a resident of St. Petersburg and a financier of high standing, had returned to Edelweiss soon after the distressing death of the late Princess Yctive and her American husband, and to him was intrusted the treasury portfolio.

The financing of the great railroad project by which Edelweiss was to be connected with the Siberian line in the north fell to his lot at a time when no one else could have saved the little government from heavy losses or even bankruptcy.

The opening of this narrative finds the ministry preparing to float a new 5,000,000 garvo issue of bonds for construction and equipment purposes. Agents of the government were ready to depart for London and Paris to take up the matter with the great banking houses. St. Petersburg and Berlin were not to be given the opportunity to gobble up these extremely fine securities. This seemingly extraordinary exclusion of Russian and German bidders was the result of vigorous objections raised by an utter outsider, the American, John Tullis, long time friend and companion of Grenfall Lorry, consort to the late princess.

Tullis was a strange man in many particulars. He was under forty years of age, but even at that rather immature time of life he had come to be recognized as a shrewd, successful financial power in his home city, New York. At the very zenith of his power he suddenly and with quixotic disregard for consequences gave up his own business and came to Graustark for residence, following a promise made to Grenfall Lorry when the latter lay dying in a little inn near Brussels.

They had been lifelong friends. Tullis jestingly called himself the little prince's "morganatic godfather." For two years he had been a constant resident of Graustark.

His wide awake, resourceful brain, attuned by nature to the difficulties of administration, lent itself capably to the solving of many knotty financial puzzles; the ministry was never loath to call on him for advice and seldom disposed to disregard it. An outsider, he never offered a suggestion or plan unasked. To this single qualification he owed much of the popularity and esteem in which he was held by the classes and the masses. Socially he was a great favorite. He enjoyed the freedom of the most exclusive homes in Edelweiss.

There was but one man connected with the government to whom the popularity and influence of John Tullis proved distasteful. That man was the Duke of Perse. On more than one occasion the cabinet had chosen to be guided by the sagacity of John Tullis in preference to following the lines laid down by the astute minister of finance. The decision to offer the new bond issue in London and Paris was due to the earnest, forceful argument of John Tullis—outside the cabinet chamber, to be sure. This was but one instance in which the plan of the treasurer was overridden. He resented the plain though delicate influence of the former Wall street man. Tullis had made it plain to the ministry that Graustark could not afford to place itself in debt to the Russians, into whose hands sooner or later the destinies of the railroad might be expected to fall. The wise men of Graustark saw his point without force of argument and voted down in the parliament the duke's proposition to place the loan in St. Petersburg and Berlin. For this particular act of trespass upon the duke's official preserves he won the hatred of the worthy treasurer and his no inconsiderable following among the deputies.

But John Tullis was not in Edelweiss for the purpose of meddling with state affairs. He was there because he elected to stand mentor to the son of his lifelong friend, even though that son was a prince of the blood and controlled by the will of three regents chosen by his own subjects.

To say that the tiny prince loved his big, broad shouldered, ruddy checked, adoring mentor would be putting it too gently; he idolized him. Tullis was father, mother and big brother to the little fellow in knickers.

The young and witty Countess of Marlanx came often to Edelweiss. She was a favorite at the castle, notwithstanding the unhealthy record of her ancient and discredited husband, the Iron Count. Tullis had not seen the count, but he had heard such tales of him that he could not but pity this glorious young creature who called him husband.

At present we are permitted to attend a meeting of the cabinet, which sits occasionally in solemn collectiveness just off the throne room within the tapestried walls of a dark little antechamber known to the outside world as the "room of wrangles." The question under discussion relates to the loan of 5,000,000 garvos, before mentioned. At the head of the long table, perched upon an augumentary pile of lawbooks, surmounted by a little red cushion, sits the prince, almost lost in the huge old walnut chair of his forefathers.

The prince was a sturdy, curly haired lad, with big brown eyes and a laudably noticeable scratch on his nose, acquired in less stately but more profitable pursuits. (It seems that he had peeled his nose while sliding to second base in a certain American game that he was teaching the juvenile aristocracy how to play.)

About the table sat the three regents and the other men high in the administration of affairs, among them General Braze of the army, Baron Pultz of the mines, Roslon of agriculture. The Duke of Perse was discussing the great loan question. The prince was watching his gaunt, saturnine face with more than usual interest.

"Of course it is not too late to rescind the order promulgated at our last sitting. There are five bankers in St. Petersburg who will finance the loan without delay. We need not delay the interminable length of time necessary to secure the attention and co-operation of bankers in France and England. It is all nonsense to say that Russia has sinister motives in the matter. We need the money before the winter opens. Why should we prefer England? Why France?"

For some unaccountable reason he struck the table violently with his fist and directed his glare upon the astonished prince. The explosive demand caught the ruler by surprise. He gasped and his lips fell apart. Then it must have occurred to him that the question could be answered by no one save the person to whom it was so plainly addressed. He lifted his chin and piped up shrilly and with a fervor that startled even the intense Perse:

"BECAUSE UNCLE JACK SAID WE SHOULD, THAT'S WHY!"

It goes without saying that the innocent rejoinder opened the way to an acrid discussion of John Tullis. If that gentleman's ears burned in response to the sarcastic comments of the Duke of Perse and Baron Pultz, they probably tingled pleasantly as the result of the stout defense put up by Halfont, Dangloss and others.

The duke's impassioned plea was of no avail. His conferees saw the wisdom of keeping Russia's greedy hand out of the country's affairs—at least for the present—and reiterated their decision to seek the loans in England and France. The question, therefore, would not be taken to parliament for reconsideration. The duke sat down, pale in defeat; his heart was more bitter than ever against the shrewd American who had induced all these men to see through his eyes.

At this juncture the prince, gathering from the manner of his ministers that the question was settled in his liking, leaned forward and announced to his uncle, the premier:

"I'm tired, Uncle Caspar. How much longer is it?"

Count Halfont coughed. "Ahem! Just a few minutes, your highness. Pray be patient—er—my little man."

Prince Bobby flushed. He always knew that he was being patronized when any one addressed him as "my little man."

"I have an engagement," he said, with a stiffening of his back.

The Duke of Perse smiled grimly. In his most polite manner he arose to address the now humiliated princeling, who shifted uneasily on the pile of lawbooks.

"May your most humble subject presume to inquire into the nature of your highness' engagement?"

Jack at it and to review the books." Count Halfont interposed good humoredly: "There is nothing more to come before us today, your grace, so I fancy we may as well close the meeting. To my mind it is rather a silly custom which compels us to keep the prince with us—er—after the opening of the session. Of course, your highness, we don't mean to say that you are not interested in our grave deliberations."

Prince Bobby broke in eagerly: "Uncle Jack says I've just got to be interested in 'em whether I want to or not. He says it's the only way to catch on to things and become a regular prince. You see, Uncle Caspar, I've got a lot to learn."

"Yes, your highness, you have," solemnly admitted the premier. "But I am sure you will learn."

"Under such an able instructor as Uncle Jack you may soon know more than the wisest man in the realm," added the Duke of Perse.

"Thank you, your grace," said the prince so politely that the duke was confounded. "I know Uncle Jack will be glad to hear that. He's—he's afraid people may think he's butting in too much."

"Butting in?" gasped the premier. At this the Duke of Perse came to his feet again, an angry gleam in his eyes. "My lords," he began hastily, "it must certainly have occurred to you before this that our beloved prince's English, which seems, after all, to be his mother tongue, is not what it should be. Butting in! Yesterday I overheard him advising your son, Pultz, to 'go chase' himself. And when your boy tried to chase himself—'pon my word he did—what did our prince say? What did you say, Prince Robin?"

"I—I forget," stammered Prince Bobby.

"You said 'Mice' Or was it—er—'No, your grace; rats. I remember. That's what I said. That's what all of us boys used to say in Washington.' 'God deliver us! Has it come to this—that a prince of Graustark should grow up with such language on his lips? That confounded American has every one hypnotized," expostulated the duke. "His influence over this boy is a menace to our country. He is making an oaf of him—a slangy, impudent little—"

"Your grace!" interrupted Baron Dangloss sharply.

"Uncle Jack's all right," declared the prince, vaguely realizing that a defense should be forthcoming.

"He is, eh?" rasped the exasperated duke, mopping his brow.

"He sure is," pronounced the prince with a finality that left no room for doubt.

"He is a mountebank, a meddler, that's what he is!" exclaimed the over-taxed duke.

But the prince had slid down from his pile of books and planted himself beside him so suddenly that the bitter words died away on the old man's lips.

"You awful old man!" he cried, trembling all over, his eyes blazing. "Don't you say anything against Uncle Jack. I'll—I'll banish you—yes, sir—banish you like my mother fired Count Marlanx out of the country. I won't let you come back here—never. And before you go I'll have Uncle Jack give you a good licking. Oh, he can do it, all right! I—I hate you!"

The duke looked down in amazement into the flushed, writhing face of his little master. For a moment he was stunned by the vigorous outburst. Then the hard lines in his face relaxed, a softer expression came into his eyes, and he smiled kindly on the boy.

But Prince Bobby was still unappeased. "I could have you beheaded," he said stubbornly. "Couldn't I, Uncle Caspar?"

The Duke of Perse suddenly bent forward and placed his bony hand upon the unshrinking shoulder of the prince, his eyes gleaming kindly, his voice strangely free from its usual harshness. "You are a splendid little man, Prince Robin," he said. "I glory in you. I shall not forget the lesson in loyalty that you have taught me."

Bobby's eyes filled with tears. The genuine humility of the hard old man touched his tempestuous little heart.

"It's—it's all right, du—your grace. I'm sorry I spoke that way too."

As the prince strode soberly from the "room of wrangles" every eye was mountain road toward Ganlook beside the black mare which carried John Tullis. He had told Tullis of his vainglorious detour in the antechamber.

"Say, Uncle Jack, when are you going to take me to the witch's hovel?" The thought abruptly banished all else from his eager little brain.

"Some day soon," said Tullis. "You see, I'm not sure that she's receiving visitors these days. A witch is a very arbitrary person. Even princes have to send up their cards."

The witch's hovel was in the mountain across the most rugged of the canyons and was to be reached only after the most hazardous of rides. The old woman of the hills was an ancient character about whom clung a thousand spookish traditions, but who, in the opinion of John Tullis, was nothing more than a wise fortune teller and necromancer who knew every trick in the trade of hoodwinking the superstitious.

As they rode back to the castle after an hour, coming down through Castle avenue from the monastery road, they passed a tall, bronzed young man whom Tullis at once knew to be an American. He was seated on a big bowlder at the roadside enjoying the shade. At his side was the fussy, well known figure of Cook's interpreter eagerly pointing out certain important personages to him as they passed. Of course the approach of the prince was the excuse for considerable agitation and fervor on the part of the man from Cook's. He mounted the bowlder and took off his cap to wave it frantically.

"It's the prince!" he called out to Truxton King. "Stand up! Hurrah! Long live the prince!"

The man from Cook's came to grief. He slipped from his perch on the rock and came floundering to the ground.

The spirited pony that the prince was riding shied and reared in quick affright. The boy dropped his crop and clung valiantly to the reins. A guardsman was at the pony's head in an instant.

Truxton King picked up the riding crop, strode out into the roadway and handed it up to the boy in the saddle.

"Thank you," said Prince Bobby.

"Don't mention it," said Truxton King, with his most engaging smile. "No trouble at all."

Mean Advice.

Old Gent—On the eve of your marriage let me give you a piece of advice. Remember when your wife's next birthday comes and give her a handsome present.

Young Man—Yes, of course.
"Give her the best your pocket can buy every birthday, but at Christmas, New Year's and such times give her only inexpensive little tokens. Form that habit."

"Yes, but why?"
"It will pay."
"I presume so."
"Yes. In a few years you can begin to forget the birthdays, and she won't say a word."—New York Weekly.

His Recommendation.

During a blizzard in Canada once forty passengers from Montreal to Ottawa were snowed up for some fourteen hours in a Canadian Pacific railroad train. Some members of the party tapped the telegraph wire and sent the following message to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the president of the line:

"Only one egg and four sandwiches on this train for forty people; situation serious. What can you do to help us?"

Sir T. Shaughnessy, appreciating the situation, promptly replied, "Can do nothing; recommend prayer."
