REV. J. N. COLE DESCRIBES HIS RECENT VISIT HERE SPEAKS IN GLOWING TERMS OF EX-GOV. T. J. JARVIS

Highly Pleased With the Church Work Under Pastorate of Rev. Mr. Shore

I spent Sunday in Greenville, and was a guest in the home of the State's most illustrious living citizen—ambassador, senator, governor and servant of the people through two generations—and doing probably his best work now as promoter of education and servant of the church. As I sat in that home and held converse with that sage of serene and benevolent wisdom, I felt like I had come to one of the mounts of God and to one of "the seats of the mighty." It is beautiful to see with what child-like faith and simplicity this great man—chief among many—sits at the feet of Jesus and is teachable as when in the long vanished years he sat at his mother's knee. This is the supreme act of wisdom—there sat the peerless Lee and there sat the great Gladstone. I remember, years ago, in a heart-to-heart talk with the late Chief Justice Merriman, when he had told me of his religious doubts and of how he had wrestled with them, I said to him: "Judge, you are the chief justice of North Carolina, and you are trying to work out these problems by the processes of human philosophy, but you've got to become as a little child and sit at the feet of Jesus." And to that lowly seat he came—and he entered the Kingdom.

There are two themes upon which Governor Jarvis delights to dwell—his church and the East Carolina Teachers Training School. What plans he has in his heart for that school—if his State will allow him to work them out! And the legislature should deal generously with him, for that school means the training of the teachers that are to teach the children of the State in the generations to come.

And what plans he has for his church! With what desire for her good does he think upon her! As to legislation in the approaching session of the general conference the governor said that his church suited him just as it is—bishops, presiding elders, and all—that it had been honored of God above any other church since the apostolic age as a chosen instrument for the building of His Kingdom in the earth—and what God had so honored he did not propose to tinker with. He said that he would be willing to change the name, and just call it the Methodist Church without prefix or suffix, and in this way strip the name of all provincial limitations, and let her swing out upon her world mission and be just the Methodist Church wherever she planted her banners. The word South has probably as great a charm to him as to any living man—he has loved the South and served her with the devotion and courage of a knight—he followed the flag of Lee and afterwards in times of stress and trial when her friends were few, he rose up in the midst of her enemies and helped to set her in her true place again; but he is willing to give up the name for the larger success and wider achievements of the church.

I would that the youth of North Carolina might see this great man wearing many honors and that elect woman by his side dispensing hospitality in their home. It would call back

NEGRO GETS TWO SUITS CLOTHES

Called for Them in Name of Owner and Sells Them—Both Suits Recovered.

Saturday a strange negro appeared in Greenville and did some slick sealing. He went around to several houses, having previously learned who lived there, and would tell whoever came to the door in response to his knock that Mr. So and So, (using the name of the gentleman of the house) had sent him to get his clothes to be pressed. In this way the negro got suits belonging to Mr. J. G. Moye and to Mr. Oscar Greene, which he sold to other negroes. At supper time both the gentlemen referred to learned of their loss, and after diligent search were fortunate enough to recover their suits from the parties to whom they had been sold. In the meantime the negro who worked the trick had skipped.

Later a phone message from Tarboro stated that a negro had worked a similar trick there on Friday and lifted about a dozen suits from people of that town, and it is supposed to be the same negro who visited Greenville. Housekeepers should take warning of this occurrence and not deliver to irresponsible parties articles that are called for in the name of their husbands or sons. It is an old scheme to steal things in this way.

A negro was arrested today on suspicion and is being held for investigation.

New Enterprise.

Two of our young men, Zeno Brown and Alex Blow, have formed a copartnership under firm name of Brown & Blow, to conduct a general electrical supply business here. They occupy a part of the Perkins building, on Fourth street, which has been fitted up very nicely for their business.

The Old South and show a pattern of the dignity and grace with which a kindness can be done, and it would teach this truth that the greatest are never too great to serve.

Our Methodist people are well to the front in Greenville. It makes me happy to see how finely fitted they are for working the works of God. The Rev. J. H. Shore is their pastor. It occurs to me that I have heard of him before. Were you ever in Casewell or in Franklinton or in Smithfield? Then probably you've heard of him, too. It is a piece of daring presumption for a man to stand in his pulpit. Those Greenville saints have the regular Casewell County infection as to Shore—then think that he is well-nigh the best preacher in the State. He has the genius for the pulpit—he is really a rare preacher—but he does much work in his study and on his knees first. And he is a man of so many lovable qualities. He is getting Greenville in his grip, and he is lifting it nearer to God.

What a massive and imposing temple we have in Greenville! And what a large and choice company crowd that spacious auditorium Sabbath after Sabbath! And what an enthusiastic Sunday-school they have! Shore has a Baraca class of a hundred men. And what great friends of the Orphanage they all are!

And George Smith is not the only man that has the best choir—there are two of them.—Rev. J. N. Cole, in Raleigh Christian Advocate.

HOW GIRLS BECOME POPULAR.

There are Many Ways, but Sincerity is Best of All.

I am sure there never was a healthy-minded girl in the world who did not want to be popular. What will make us popular? asks Hope Canby in The Delinquent for March. Well, there are dozens of things that would be helpful. I know one girl who added a great deal to her popularity by learning to tell fortunes by palmistry. No one seriously believed in them, nor did she; but it was always interesting and made fun and conversation.

Another girl I know has a sweet voice. She never had it cultivated, but she has learned a number of lovely and very simple old-fashioned songs, Scotch, Irish and English, which she is willing to sing when asked. Another has a fund of good stories, which she jots down and remembers, and tells at the right moment. Another, who has very little money, still manages generally to be the most daintily-dressed girl in any gathering. Another girl is an especially good dancer; another has cultivated pleasing and gracious manners.

Most of these accomplishments are within reach of every girl, yet they do not touch the real root and reason of popularity. To be lastingly popular there must be things deeper and better than these.

There must be, first of all, kindness, and plenty of it. The popular girl must be tactful; and tact is nothing in the world but kindness. The very word "tact" means touch. If we want people to like us, they must know that our lives are not aloof from theirs, but that they touch, and touch them kindly.

Others will tell you to dress neatly and becomingly; to speak softly; to cultivate powers of conversation and observation; to read books of high life; to go to the theatre and see plays of high life and observe how the thing is done there; never to be "loud" or vulgar; never to be conspicuous; to cultivate any talents you may have. All this is good advice, I am sure, and will help immensely; but I would say to you that beyond all these things other things are needed. Be kind; forget yourself; read good books and think nobly; strive to express whatever is good in you, and, finally, bring all the beauty of every kind into your life that you can.

HAPPENINGS WITHIN THE OLD NORTH STATE

GATHERED FROM OUR EXCHANGES TODAY

Newsp Items of Interest Condensed for Busy Readers.

Raleigh, Feb. 19.—This afternoon there were new developments growing out of the seizure of the theater by police Monday evening, the shutting out of Manager Upchurch and the arrest of Electrician Brewer and Stage Hand Anderson. All filed summons against Mayor Wynne and Chief Stell for damage suits, the amount not having yet been stated. Upchurch says Monday there will be two more suits—one in the Federal court by the "The Girl From Rector's."

Salisbury, Feb. 19.—Mr. Rome Swicegood, an aged farmer, who lived about seven miles west of this city, on the Wilkesboro public road, dropped dead on West Monroe street just before noon today, death being due to heart trouble. Mr. Swicegood came to Salisbury this morning with his son and when near Livingston College he got off of the wagon to see a party in regard to collecting some money due him, the son driving on. The older Swicegood was walking up the street when the attack came on and he fell in the street.

To Mark Historic Sites.

Judge Walter Clark, chairman, has appointed the following members to act with him as the central committee on marking historic sites: Hon. T. M. Pitman, Henderson; Major E. J. Hale, Fayetteville; Dr. Geo. T. Winston, Asheville; Capt. S. A. Ashe, Raleigh; Col. J. Bryan Grimes, Raleigh; Mr. R. D. W. Connor, Raleigh; Col. Joseph M. Morehead, Greensboro; Major H. A. London, Pittsboro; Mrs. John Vanlandingham, Charlotte; Miss Mary Hilliard Hinton, Raleigh.

The Raleigh News and Observer says:

It is proposed to have a meeting of this committee in the State Library at noon, Friday March 18th. It is probable that this committee at this meeting will appoint a general committee of one member from each county in the State and have every county representative make a report on the historic places that should be marked in his or her county, and perhaps authorize each county committeeman to try to raise funds by private subscription or from county commissioners for marking these historic sites.

"The purpose of this committee is not to secure the erection of costly monuments, but to mark with inexpensive tablets and signs all the buildings, roads and other places which have acquired historic interest from any association with the State's eventful past."

Big Sale Continues.

The big sale started on the 16th at C. T. Munford's, will continue until March 5th, and on that day $25 in gold and a $25 suit of furniture will be given away to holders of tickets obtained during the sale. All goods have been marked way down and are going cheap during this sale.

Heralding the Great Visit

A fine view of Halley's comet on this appearance is promised us by the astronomers. In 1835 the visitor was on the other side of the sun from our planet when opportunities for observation would otherwise have been best; its tail streamed out in the opposite direction and could not be seen. On May 18, 1910, we shall pass right through the tail though at a distance of some 12,500,000 miles from the nose and consequently where no damage can befall. The comet will also pass very near Venus, whose close resemblance to the earth in size will make some interesting comparisons possible. Though many times larger than these planets in volume, the comet is much inferior in mass or weight, and as compared with such huge bodies as Jupiter and Saturn possesses hardly any mass at all. Its fragmentary and gaseous bulk has negligibly little gravitational influence over the planets as it penetrates their orbits, while it is itself influenced powerfully. Free from all apprehension and with a magnificent spectacle in prospect, we can all anticipate eagerly those weeks when the most famous comet attached to our sun shall blaze before sunrise in the morning sky.—Charlotte Observer.

The hatchet and cherry tree story will be retold many times tomorrow.

Cairo, Ills., is in the midst of another race riot. Must be a bad set out there.

The long expected electric chair has at last arrived at the State prison and is being placed in readiness for use in executing condemned criminals.

If the money the government and the States waste in printing worthless documents was put to a better use, there would be a big cutting down of expenses.

Now the holders of those old bonds are trying to make a cat's paw of the State of Nevada to bring suit against North Carolina. The crowd certainly die hard.

The Sunday school lesson of the Sunday just past is one that everybody should practice. "Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you." With that motto lived up to there would be no need for any more law.

Jurors and Newspapers.

During the selection of a jury in a Missouri court a few days ago one of the lawyers, with the evident purpose of challenging, asked a venireman if he had read accounts of the case in the newspapers. The question is a familiar one, and may be heard in many courts when there is a criminal case on trial that has aroused a good deal of interest in the community. The Missouri judge in this instance would not permit the venireman to answer the question and turning to the lawyer said: "What's the difference if he has read the newspapers? He'll make the better jurymen. To say that a man ought not to serve because he has read the newspaper accounts is saying in effect that a jury of intelligence is objected to. That is not justice neither is it law."

It sometimes occurs that a jury of intelligence is not wanted. A tricky lawyer with a poor case will endeavor to get on the jury as many ignorant men as he can, because ignorant men are the most easily moved by specious pleadings. The position taken by the Missouri judge might well be assumed in other courts. If reading of a case in the newspapers is to lar a man from service on the jury, then ninety-nine out of every hundred intelligent and literate men within easy reach of a newspaper will be debarred. Newspaper reading has become practically universal among those who can read. People out of touch with the daily papers read the weeklies, and both dailies and weeklies carry stories of news value bearing upon criminal cases; and the man who failed to read of such cases would be lacking in the proper interest in his community or surroundings. The good citizen keeps himself informed with respect to what is going on around him. To do this he must read the papers. There is no other means of distributing information that is so prompt and reliable. Because a man reads of a case in the newspapers and forms an opinion from his reading, it doesn't necessarily follow that he is incompetent to give a just verdict in accordance with the law and the facts.

The best informed man, the thoroughly newspaper read man, is more than apt to be broad minded enough to change his opinion after hearing the testimony and the law in the event that he had formed a contrary opinion from reading of the case in the prints. The test should be, whether a venireman will take the oath to render a true verdict on the court proceedings, and not whether he has read of the case in a newspaper. When that rule has been adopted we shall have better juries.—Savannah News.

Slander and Seduction.

"God Almighty intended that if a man could repent a woman might repent."

This sentence was spoken in the midst of Judge E. B. Jones' charge to the jury of Mecklenburg county court, under that section of the law dealing with slander and seduction, and he declared that these two crimes, slander of a pure woman and seduction, strike a greater blow at the heart of our civilization, society and religion than do any other two sins in the catalogue of crime. He declared to be among the most dangerous criminals the man who would inveigle himself into the good will of a family and then, through his persuasive art, steal from "the pure and blushing daughter the brightest jewel in her crown." Then he turns his back on her and deserts her. And following out the belief, said the judge that a woman who has lost her virtue will lie and steal, a jury, when such a fallen creature has gone on the stand to testify against the man who wronged her, will discredit her story and believe that of the scoundrel who was the cause.

"No man," declared his honor, "ever seduced a woman but that the woman is good enough to be his wife."—Charlotte News.

The back aches because the kidneys are blocked.

Help the kidneys with their work. The back will ache no more.

Lots of proof that Doan's Kidney Pills do this.

It's the best proof, for it comes from this vicinity.

Joseph Savage, Church street, Tarboro, N. C., says: "For some time my kidneys were disordered, the passages of the kidney secretions being scanty and at times painful. I had sharp pain in my loins and, if I stooped suddenly, sharp twinges caught me across the back, making it hard for me to straighten. After trying a number of remedies without finding relief, I procured Doan's Kidney Pills and began their use. They removed the aches and pains and regulated the passages of the kidney secretions. I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the benefit I derived from their use."

SOME FIFTH CENTURY JOKES

The Absentminded Professor Was a Prolific Source of Merriment to the Jesters of Those Days—The Source of Many Modern Jokes.

The maxim that there is nothing new under the sun applies, it would seem, more truly to jokes and witticisms than to anything else. The chief differences between the jests of one generation and that of another lie mainly in their form. The kernel is practically the same. Nevertheless it is interesting to examine some of these ancient jokes and to recognize in them the ancestors of the things at which we laugh today in the pages of our humorous publications.

Some humorous writers dearly love to make fun of the absentminded, unpractical university professor, who outside of his own subject lets his wits wander and is very slow to grasp anything in ordinary life. Such jokes as these were cracked centuries ago by the students and graduates of the great universities in ancient Greece, for it is a mistake to suppose that what we now call "college life" was unknown to the ancients.

As a matter of fact, the student at the University of Athens or at the University of Alexandria was very much the same sort of mortal, as is the student today, and his professors were not so very different.

A witty Greek named Hierocles, a graduate of Alexandria, collected some time in the fifth century a volume of jests which were current among the students with regard to the woolgathering type of professor. A number of them are translated here as being of considerable interest in the history of humor and especially of college humor:

A professor, wishing to swim, was nearly drowned, whereupon he swore that he would never touch water again until he had learned how to swim.

Of twin brothers, one died. A professor thereupon, meeting the survivor, asked, "Is it you that died or your brother?"

A professor, learning that a raven would live for more than 200 years, bought one to test the matter.

A professor, wishing to cross a river, went on board the boat on horseback. When some one asked the reason he answered that he wanted to get over in a hurry.

A professor, looking out of the window of a house which he had bought, asked the passersby whether the house was becoming to him.

A professor, meeting another professor, said, "I heard you were dead." "And yet," replied the other, "you see that I am still alive." "Well," said the first in perplexity, "I don't know what to believe, for the man who told me about it is a much more truthful man than you!"

A professor, in danger of being shipwrecked, called for his tablets that he might make his will. Seeing thereupon his slaves lamenting their fate, he said, "Do not grieve, for I am going to set you free."

A professor dreamed that he had trodden on a nail and that the wound pained him. On waking he bound up his foot. Another professor, having learned the cause, remarked, "It served you right, for why do you sleep without sandals?"

A professor, meeting a doctor, hid himself behind a wall. Some one asking the cause, he answered, "I have not been sick for so long a time I am ashamed to come into the sight of a physician."

A professor, wishing to teach his horse to be a small eater, gave him no food at all. At length, the horse having starved to death, the professor exclaimed, "I have suffered a great loss, for just as he had learned not to eat he died!"

A professor, visiting a sick person, inquired about his health. The invalid, however, was not able to reply. Thereupon the professor, being angry and scolding the man, said, "I hope that I shall be sick some of these days, and then when you come to ask how I am I will not answer."

A professor sealed up a vessel of wine which he had bought. His servant having made a hole in the vessel beneath and drawn off some of the wine, the professor was astonished to see the contents diminished while the seals remained unbroken. A neighbor having told him to look whether it had not been taken out from below, he replied, "Why, you fool, it's the upper part of the wine and not the lower that is missing!"

A professor, a bald man and a barber travelling together agreed to keep watch in turn four hours, each while the others slept. The barber's turn came first. He quietly shaved the head of the sleeping professor and when the time elapsed awoke him. The latter, scratching his head as he got up and finding it bare, cried out: "What a rascal that barber is! He's waked the bald man instead of me!"—Exchange.

Gladstone and Tobacco.

One of the few accomplishments which Gladstone never acquired was the art of smoking. His few attempts in this direction are reported to have been dismal failures. Only once was he known to try a cigarette, the occasion being one evening when King Edward, then Prince of Wales, was his guest at Downing street. After dinner the prince desired to smoke, and Gladstone, with fine courtesy, sought to place his guest at ease by at least lighting a cigarette. In later years the "grand old man" one day accused his secretary of smelling of the weed. "No wonder," was the reply. "I've been over half an hour with Sir William Harcourt." "What! Does Harcourt smoke?" exclaimed Gladstone. "You must tell him to be careful always to change his clothes before he comes to me!"—Westminster Gazette.

What Accountancy Means.

Accountancy is not and never can be a matter of abstract knowledge to be transferred by means of lectures, but is the art of knowing how to apply that knowledge to the requirements of business under very varying conditions. It is essentially something that cannot be taught in lectures or classes, but can only be acquired as a result of careful individual study and a reasonable amount of actual practice.—Bookkeeping.

Two Cases.

The clerk of arraigns on assize was swearing the jury when a jurymen said:

"Speak up! I cannot hear what you say."

The presiding judge asked him if he were deaf.

"Yes, my lord, of one ear."

"Well," responded the judge, "you may go, for it is necessary that jurymen should hear both sides."

Another judge, however, on a like objection, said:

"Oh, let him be sworn. We only hear one side of a case at a time."—Exchange.

Manias of Authors.

Darwin always practiced on his old fiddle before writing; Chateaubriand while dictating to his secretary was in the habit of walking in his bare feet; Schiller and Goethe could not write unless their feet were on ice; Lord Derby always filled his mouth with brandy cherries; Fenimore Cooper used to chew gumdrops; Byron filled his pockets with truffles; Theophile Gautier burned incense.

Logical.

"A disease should be attacked at its source."

"Then if a man's disease is hereditary I suppose you'd doctor his father for it, eh?"—Exchange.
