POKER ROOM RAIDED.

The police of the city made a raid on the reputed "poker joint" in the Shaw building, Main street, Friday night, with the result that nine of the participants are now under a $50 bond for their personal appearance at the next term of Beaufort county Superior court. It is an old saying, "Those who do the dancing must pay the fiddler." The boys were caught right in the act. Some anteing, others passing and a few raising, when the familiar faces of Chief Howard and Policeman Pedrick appeared on the scene. It is needless to state the serenity and quietude of the evening pastime was quickly changed into turmoil and consternation. Implorations for pity, appeals for mercy, chased away the stillness. It was indeed a moment of will I or will I not. But duty had to be performed, and the officers could do nothing but summon those present to appear before the mayor Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at which time the following named persons appeared and through their counsel waived examination: Z. M. Potts, T. J. Harding, Lester Simmons, M. C. Cutler, Ed. Matthews, C. Stancill, R. D. Kear, Hugh Paul and Walter Windy. Thus for a time things are resting quietly while those on the outside are wondering how the trick was done by the chief and his assistant.

This place of retreat for indulging in the game has been known to the police for months; their eye has been centered there for many nights, but it was not until last Friday night they could so arrange things as to notify the participants they were on to the racket.

The police made their way up to the room by the back stairway. On reaching the door the chief tapped on the door and said, "Boys, open the door." "Who is there?" came the response from a familiar voice known to the officers. "Open the door," quietly spoke the officer. This was done, but mind you, only a small crack, but this was a sufficient opening for the officer to jump on the inside. When those sitting around the table saw who the intruder was it is said pandemonium reigned supreme.

While the officer was securing the names of those in the room there came a gentle tap on the door. "Who be you?" "Open the door, boys, you know who I am." As the request was not complied with quick enough there was another request from the visitor, more urgent than the first. "Please open up." The chief, who was master of ceremonies along about this time, did so. When the additional party saw who was his host up went his hands with the exclamation: "Excuse me, I have made a most serious mistake; I have gotten to the wrong door. If I have erred allow me to depart in peace."

Those who witnessed the episode state the sequence of the raid was well worth a $1 admission. What will be the outcome can not be surmised. The affair created no little excitement on the streets Saturday. It is the talk of the city.

It appears that all who were present were not participating in the game and will probably have no trouble in convincing a jury that such was the case. The police seem to have become

"NATIONAL FLOWER".

Operetta by Quinerly High School Friday Night.

On Friday evening, Feb. 18th the high school of Quinerly (near Grifton) celebrated the close of its regular public school session by an entertainment of much interest and enjoyment.

The main feature of the evening was the presentation by the pupils, of "The National Flower" an operetta in three acts. Young ladies attired as roses, daisies and lillies entered the ivy-decorated stage, each claiming, by appropriate songs, her right to be called the National flower. In this they were opposed by the boys who, as weeds and onions, also endeavored to impress their claims upon judge and jury.

The rivalry between these disputants proceeded in this manner with songs and drills until "Uncle Sam" entered the court-room bringing with him a sack of flour which he claimed as the staff of life deserved to be recognized above the more "flowers of spring." Judge, jury and claimants all heartily acquiesced in this decision and the court-room was cleared of the disputations. Space forbids a personal mention of each participant in the operetta, yet a word of hearty approbation is due each.

Aside from the above exercise, other features entered in which still further contributed to the evenings pleasure. Among these was an agricultural address by Mr. Josephus Quinerly, a former student of the school and who is now pursuing his studies in A. & M. College, Raleigh.

Miss Lady Doles, of Carey, also favored the audience with several choice readings which were well received, while Miss Helen Chapman rendered vocal music much to the enjoyment of her hearers.

These several features together with piano selections from the pupils made the evening one long to be remembered by the large number present. The affair was pronounced by some to be the best entertainment ever given in Quinerly school house.

Much of the success of this occasion is due to Miss Hazel Doles, the efficient principal of the (Hazel) school, and her assistant, Miss Helen Chapman both of whom labored faithfully in drilling and training the people. It might also be said in this connection that under the guidance of these two young ladies the school is making marked progress. The entertainment on the eighteenth cast much credit upon both teachers and pupils.

Mr. J. S. Fester Dead.

Mr. J. S. Hester died at one o'clock this afternoon at his home a mile from town. He was taken with pneumonia not quite a week ago. Mr. Hester was 44 years of age and leaves a wife and four children. The burial will take place Wednesday afternoon at the Warren Tucker place.

The Free Press says that clothes lifting negro also worked Kinston last week and got several suits under the pretext of taking them to the pressing club.

GRADUATE SCHOOL NOTES.

The Henry Grady Debating Society Had Interesting Meeting.

The Henry Grady Debating Society held its regular bi-monthly meeting last Friday night. Instead of a debate, each of the members rendered a declamation, as follows:

Linda Smith, Spartacus to the Gladiators.

Adrian Brown, Mark Anthony's Speech over Caesar.

Alfred Schultz, Regulus to the Romans.

Ben Taylor, The Independence Bell.

Chas. Haskett, Patrick Henry Against British Aggression.

David Moore, Brutus's Speech on Caesar's Ambition.

Spruill Spain, The Passing of the American Indian.

Chandler Zahnizer, the Doctor's Story.

Milton Pugh, Rienzi to the Romans.

David Whichard, the Southern Soldier.

The boys have devoted two or three meetings to declaiming recently, and their improvement is very marked. Most of them now declaim in a most creditable manner.

The next meeting will be given over to debating, the query being, "Resolved, That the Federal Government Should Subsidize Our Merchant Marine."

Today being the anniversary of the birth of General Washington, the school will take holiday this afternoon. Mr. F. C. Harding, chairman of the Board of Trustees, talked most interestingly to the children at the opening of school this morning on the life of Washington.

The management of the school is still making war on tardiness, that insidious and damaging, and generally inexcusable, habit. Superintendent Smith read the February list of tardiless grades and sections this morning. They are as follows:

First grade; boys of section A of the third grade; boys of the fifth grade; the sixth grade; boys of section B of the third; the tenth grade.

In January there were eight hundred tardies—just eighteen too many. Parents should strive to get their children to school on time. Tardiness, poor lessons, slow progress and low grades all go hand in hand.

ONE MORE IN JAIL.

Farmville Sends a Negro for Stealing Clothes.

Chief of Police G. A. Clark, of Farmville, came over this morning to make a contribution to Sheriff Tucker's roll of county boarders. He brought along with him one Clarence Black, same color as name, and placed him in jail to await the next criminal court. On Saturday Black went into the store of W. M. Lang and swiped a suit of clothes. The negro was discovered and crowded so closely that he dropped the clothes and fled. A crowd chased him out in the woods and he was shot in the shoulder while fleeing. He eluded his pursuers for the time being, but later Chief Clark captured him.

Mr. J. W. Grainger, of Kinston, Dead.

A telegram came from Kinston this morning, to ex Gov. T. J. Jarvis, announcing the death of Mr. J. W. Grainger, a prominent citizen of that town. The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon.

UNIVERSITY NOTES.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Feb. 21.—Of the investigators at work today none are doing more determined work than Dr. L. H. Dolley and Dr. W. de B. MacNider of the medical faculty. In the pathological laboratory Dr. Dolley is at work upon the functional activity of the nerve cells and in the pharmacological laboratory Dr. MacNider is doing research work upon the kidneys. Dr. Dolley has written articles on his work for the "Medical Journal of Research" and the "American Journal of Physiology" and has made addresses concerning his theories before the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists. Dr. Dolley will give demonstrations in March at Johns Hopkins University. Dr. MacNider's work is concerned with the recuperative power of kidneys and the acute stages of Bright's disease. His work will be of practical value in aiding the recuperative power of kidney and in relieving acute stages of Bright's disease. Both of these young professors have a passion for their work and may yet make even greater contributions to the medical science.

Sunday, February 13th, was a significant day in the religious life of the University. On that day Eugene E. Barnett, a graduate student in the University, accepted the commission of the international committee of the Y. M. C. A. to become a missionary in Brazil. The students contributed $400, to his support on the foreign field, and 315 students enrolled in voluntary mission study.

Barnett is not the only Carolina alumnus who will soon go to the front. W. J. Gordon, of the class of 1903, will in a few months sail as a missionary to the Orient. Otto B. Ross, '05, is now in a hospital in New York City preparing for his work in China. A. F. Jackson, an alumnus of the University Medical School, will go within a year's time as a medical missionary. In the present student body A. R. Morgan, C. E. Norman, Totten, W. L. Cooper, Jr., and J. W. Freeman are among those beside Barnett who have volunteered to go into the non-Christian fields. In the mission study room of the Y. M. C. A. building are Chinese curios presented by R. T. Bryar, '82, Lacy Little, '89, and George Woith, '91, who have been on the foreign field since graduation.

The present awakening of interest in missionary activity is not an ephemeral outburst but is the result of a steady preparation. The contributing forces in this preparation have been Bible study, the Student Volunteer and Laymen's Movements. The Bible study classes with a voluntary enrolment of 380 gave a more religious tone to campus life. Enthusiasm of the delegates to the Rochester and Greensboro conventions quickened the interest in missions. The missionary spirit of the twenty students who walk miles every Sunday afternoon to teach in the Sunday school prepared the way for larger enterprises. When Mr. E. T. Colton, member of the executive board of the international committee, came to Chapel Hill he found the student body ready for larger enterprises. 315 men in mission study! $400 raised for the support of Barnett on the foreign field!

GREENVILLE'S PUBLIC BUILDING.

Congressman Small Looking After Our Interests.

In the house of representatives on February 9th, 1910, Congressman John H. Small introduced the following bill, which was referred to the committee on public buildings and grounds and was ordered printed:

Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that the secretary of the treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be erected on the site heretofore acquired a suitable building, including fire-proof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, approaches, and other necessary appurtenances, for the use and accommodation of the United States as a postoffice at Greenville, North Carolina, the cost of said building not to exceed the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars, which sum is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Changes in Mail Service.

Mr. J. W. Brown, who for some year has been mail carrier on R. F. D. Route No. 6 out of Greenville, has been transferred to a clerkship in the post office to succeed Mr. B. C. Pearce, Jr., who resigned because of his health. Mr. A. B. Moyer is serving as carrier on No. 6.

You can put your eye on Greenville when you want to see a town that does things.

Charlotte is up against it again, the grand jury having indicted several of the social clubs of that city for dealing in beer and whiskey.

A Pilot Mountain man sixty years of age has just been granted license to practice law. He waited pretty late in life for a thing like that.

The bill which Congressman John H. Small has introduced in congress to erect a public building in Greenville on the site already acquired by the government, at a cost of $75,000, gives our people a decidedly good feeling.

In remembrance of his own propensity to smile, President Taft should not be too harsh on the bunch of girls who tittered at a speech he recently made to them in Washington, when he said it was foolish for them to want to vote.

The Washington police are to be commended for their skill in raiding a poker joint in that town. Now if the judge before whom the case comes up for trial sustains the work of the police officers, the effect will be beneficial.

Our neighbor town, Kinston, has suffered a great loss in the death of Mr. J. W. Grainger which occurred this morning. He was one of Kinston's wealthiest citizens and a man foremost in all good works for the upbuilding of his town and section.

The serious illness of Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, is regarded with much concern throughout the country. Late reports give indications of improvement in his condition. Senator Tillman is one of those men who has forced his way in spite of opposition and antagonism.

Durham did better than was expected. "The Girl from Rector's" was to show there Monday night under the surveillance of a committee of censors. To be on the safe side an afternoon matinee was called for by the committee, and after seeing this the committee voted against the night performance and it was not given.

Death has robbed the Raleigh bar of eight of its brightest lights during the past two years. It was not confined to Raleigh, either, but the entire state is the loser. The list is as follows: Fabius H. Busbee, Samuel G. Ryan, William H. Day, Thomas R. Purnell, Thos. M. Argo, Charles M. Busbee, James E. Shepherd, and Thomas B. Womack. All of these men stood high in the profession, and had state-wide reputations, not only as able lawyers, but as active participants in all the affairs of life. Let Mrs. Griffith tell you about Mi-o-na, the greatest prescription for stomach troubles ever written: "For years I have doctored for acute gastritis, but only received slight benefit, and had to be careful what I ate. But, thanks to Mi-o-na stomach tablets, I can now eat anything. Last Christmas, after partaking of a hearty turkey dinner, I was seized with an attack of acute indigestion, and the doctor worked over me for hours before I got relief. He paid me eight visits before I could say I was well enough to sit up. But since then I have taken Mi-o-na tablets, and I have not been troubled since. Before using Mi-o-na I had attacks about every month."—Mrs. Ida Griffith, 12'8 C St., Washington, D. C., July 6, 1909.

HIS GOLF OUTFIT.

He Didn't Drink Tea, So His Wife Didn't Get a Caddie.

She was in the sporting goods department of a universal provider looking for her husband's birthday present. She had it vaguely in her mind to get him some golf clubs, although the man never had played the game or even expressed a desire to play. He needed more exercise, and she wanted a present that would lure him on to take it.

A young clerk sought her custom. "Something in tennis rackets, madam?" he asked.

"No; I want some golf clubs." "Yes, madam. Right over here. For yourself?"

"No; for my husband. I don't want a whole set. He never has played before," she explained.

"Then you want a beginner's outfit—a driver, brassie, putter and either a mashie or a midiron will do to start," the young man went on, drawing from the stand a long handled club and flourishing it before the woman.

"Is that a driver?" "Yes. You see, madam, first you make your tee"—

"But he doesn't drink tea," she interrupted.

The clerk opened his eyes and would have laughed but for the thought of the sale he was about to make. Instead he explained tactfully what a tee was and seemed not to see the flush of chagrin that mounted to the rather pretty little woman's face.

"We haven't even a course," she explained, "but I thought he could bat the balls around the place to begin—to get a fancy for the game."

"Then it's a brassie, not a driver, that you want. Now, here is one with a good shaft—it's all in the shaft. I used to be a professional on"—

"And what else do I need?" the woman interrupted.

"I would suggest a midiron. You won't need a putter if you have no greens. Here is a good one—$2."

"All right. I'll take those two. And how about a caddie? I suppose if we have no tees we don't need a caddie—is that it? But at least I'd like to see what one looks like, so that for his birthday I can get a bag and a caddie and a couple more clubs to complete the outfit."—New York Press.

THE HOMEMAKER.

Man's Chivalry to the Fried Goddess of the Fireside.

As we men frequently admit, it is our chivalrous regard for woman which leads us to desire that she shall confine her wholly admirable energies to the making of our home and the keeping of our houses. She is tender and frail, and so we urge that she shall not for a moment drop her role as the goddess of the household. There is nothing that so rouses our almost sacred admiration as to see our own particular goddess with a dishrag in one hand and a frying pan in the other. Let us never desert this high ideal of womanhood and its lofty purpose in life.

Particularly let us not do so because if a woman does not keep the house it will not be kept. Would we men engineer and prepare 1,005 meals in one year? Would we wash dishes 1,005 times, wipe them 1,005 times, sew, darn, mend, devote our lives to a gray monotony of treadmill effort? Not on your life! Our chivalrous regard for adored woman would not permit it. And we would go crazy within six months if we tried. I know of nothing that we should cling to more closely than this chivalrous regard for our womankind. It saves the cost of many and many a hired girl.

I have penned this little tribute to man's chivalrous regard for woman because anybody can see that it deserves it. Woman, the housekeeper (and nothing else), the fried goddess of the fireside, the queen of her domestic domain, with a stewpan for a tiara and a store hook for a scepter, let us together pledge her, while we register our chivalrous vow that we will keep her as a stenographer or something else, in which event our chivalrous regard may stretch a few points.—California Monthly.

Ancient Ropes.

Ropes made of various kinds of fiber and leather are of very ancient date. Ropes of palm have been found in Egypt in the tombs of Beni-Hassan (about 3000 B. C.), and on the walls of these tombs is also shown the process of preparing hemp. In a tomb at Thebes of the time of Thothmes III. (about 1600 B. C.) is a group representing the process of twisting thongs of leather and the method of cutting leather into thongs.

Legal Advice.

"Prisoner," said the justice, "you are charged with having struck the defendant." "Yes, judge; I poked him, but he called me a liar." "That's no excuse." "Well, judge, it was my first experience. What do you do in such cases?"—Judge's Library.

The Perverse Comma.

That curious and now stereotyped blunder of punctuation which gives us "God rest you, merry gentlemen," as an inferior substitute for the quaint old greeting, "God rest you merry, gentlemen," turns up regularly every Christmas. It is a pity for the ancient formula to be thus perverted since "God rest you merry" or "Rest you merry" was a recognized form of salutation in Elizabethan days and may be found in the works of Shakespeare and of many contemporary writers, while for the modernized form, which obscures the original sense of the phrase, there is, of course, no authority whatever. If any one will have the curiosity to look up the old Christmas carol which begins with the words in question he will find them correctly punctuated.—London World.

Alaskan Glaciers.

An interesting fact about Alaskan glaciers is that some are "dead" and others are "alive." Davidson glacier, which is really a tongue of the Muir glacier, has been ascended by travelers for a number of years. It is a dead glacier, having a moraine of several miles between it and the sea. Looking at it from the boat, it represents a kaleidoscopic appearance as the sun shines upon it, and the surface seems scratched with tiny pin lines. These are in reality deep crevices, which must be approached cautiously, for they are lurking pitfalls for the unwary.—Vancouver Providence.

Drink and Diplomacy.

Prince Bismarck once boasted that in his youth he drank a bottle of champagne at one draft from a "puzzle goblet" so constructed that one could not bring it close to one's lips, yet one was not allowed to spill a drop. Not a single drop fell on my waistcoat. Every one was immensely surprised, but I said, 'Give me another.' Such tricks were formerly an indispensable part of the diplomats' trade. They drank the weaker vessels under the table, wormed all they wanted to know out of them and made them agree to things contrary to their instructions. When they got sober they could not imagine why they had acted so."

What They Were Hawking.

At an exhibition of paintings in London in one of the galleries hung the notable picture "Hawking in the Olden Times." An elderly farmer and his wife paused before this picture, viewing it with evident satisfaction.

"John," said the old lady, "what's that?" "John then turned over the leaves of the catalogue he carried. "They call it 'Hawking in the Olden Time,'" said he. "Hawking? Why, what are they hawking?" she inquired. "I dunno," he replied, "but I spects they're trying to sell them birds."

Logic.

"A disease should be attacked at its source." "Then if a man's disease is hereditary I suppose you'd doctor his father for it, eh?"—Exchange.

ROCHDALE ITEMS.

Rochdale, N. C., Feb. 22.—Miss Carrie Belle Smith went to Wilson Saturday morning and returned Sunday evening. We failed to have any Sunday school last Sunday evening on account of sickness in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Agnes Blount, of Ayden, was at Rochdale Wednesday evening looking after having some lumber cut for building her house in Ayden.

Mrs. C. L. Tyson and children were visiting her father, R. A. Willoughby, Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. S. W. Sumner will preach at Smith's school house next Sunday, Providence permitting.

R. A. Willoughby was taken Saturday night about ten o'clock with a stroke of apoplexy and has been speechless and unconscious ever since. He is in a critical condition. Last Wednesday was his seventy-fifth birthday.

More Comfortable and Less Noisy.

The open space around the head of the stairway in the gallery of the court house is being closed with a partition. This will add to the comfort of the court room as well as keep out noise that has been going up through the stair opening. To note the improvement in the change makes one wonder that this had not been thought of years ago, as it keeps out both cold and noise.

We don't believe there is any other stopping place until Good Friday.

George Washington can now rest for another year, and the cherry tree can bloom as before:

Wilmington wants the next meeting of the North Carolina Press Association, and the Chamber of Commerce of that city is stirring itself to get it.

Greensboro and Charlotte are both having municipal muddles. If the large towns cannot govern themselves well, they might take lessons from some of the small ones.

Death is certainly reaping a rich harvest. We do not recall when so many prominent North Carolinians have passed away in the same length of time as during the last few weeks.

Let us now hope "The Girl from Rector's" is a closed incident so far as North Carolina is concerned. And it would be better for the reading public if some other things were closed along with it.

South Carolina has a law requiring railroads doing a local business to pay a penalty of $50 if they fail to adjust within ninety days a claim for lost goods in transportation. In a recent test case the Supreme court of the United States held that this law is constitutional.

Some knotty problems arise occasionally to trouble the public mind. Under the tariff law eggs are taxed five cents per dozen, while bird eggs are listed as free of tax. Now comes a fellow who says a hen is a bird, and forthwith contends that her eggs should be admitted free of tax. Now the authorities want an answer to the question: Is a hen a bird? Some of the debating societies might take it up and help out the solution.

A Marital Question.

The Greenville Reflector prints a letter from a subscriber desirous of procuring light on the situation of the gentleman convicted of having married his own daughter. The subscriber wants to know:

"In your issue of 18th I saw where the man who married his own daughter was convicted and sentenced 18 months in prison. Now is he still married to her after he comes out, having served his sentence for the crime, or how will it be?"

The Reflector "passes it up" and also passes it along. Such a marriage is, of course, prohibited under the laws of this State and is itself a crime in addition to the more serious felony growing out of the relation. It is doubtless true that the legal effect of such an attempted marriage is that it was in the beginning a nullity, so that when the term of the "husband" is finished, he will not be married any more than he was in the first instance. An attempt on his part to again assume the relationship of marriage would be simply another offense similar to that of which he has been convicted, and would subject him to another prosecution.

The remarkable point about this case is that it should have arisen in North Carolina, in the first place, and that the sentence should have been so little as 18 months in the second. The defendant claims that his "wife" is only a step and not a natural daughter, and the term to which he was sentenced by the judge indicates that the evidence that she was in fact his daughter was not all that it might have been in conclusiveness. We should rejoice were it found that the view of the defendant is right, and that of the State wrong.—Wilmington Star.

Our friend, the Greenville Reflector, has put on a new head. Yes, a-head. That's characteristic of the Reflector.—Wilmington Dispatch.

TRUXTON KING

Copyright, 1909, by George Barr McCutcheon
Copyright, 1909, by Dodd, Mead & Company

SNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Chapter I—Truxton King arrives in Fdelweiss, capital of Graustark, and meets the beautiful niece of Spantz, a gunmaker. II—King does a favor for Prince Robin, the young ruler of the country, whose guardian is John Tullis, an American. III—Baron Dangloss, minister of police, interviews King and warns him against Olga, the gunmaker's niece.

CHAPTER IV.

TRUXTON TRESPASES.

THERE was a sparkle in King's eyes as he struck out across town after breakfast the next morning. He burst in upon Mr. Hobbs at Cook's.

"Say, Hobbs, how about the castle today—in an hour, say? Can you take a party of one rubbernecking this morning? I want you to get me into the castle grounds today and show me where the duchesses dawdle and the countesses cavort."

"Of course, sir, you understand there are certain parts of the park not open to the public. The grotto and the playgrounds and the Basin of Venus—"

"I'll not trespass, so don't fidget, Hobbs, I'll be here for you at 10."

Truxton hurried to the square and across it to the shop of the armorer, not forgetting, however, to look about in some anxiety for the excellent Dangloss, who might, for all he knew, be snooping in the neighborhood. Spantz was at the rear of the shop talking to a customer. The girl was behind the counter, dressed for the street.

She came quickly out to him, a disturbed expression in her face. As he doffed his hat the smile left his lips. He saw that she had been weeping.

"You must not come here, Mr. King," she said hurriedly in low tones. "Take your broadsword this morning, and please, for my sake, do not come again. I—I may not explain why I am asking you to do this."

"Just a minute, please," he interrupted. "I've heard your story from Baron Dangloss. Are you in trouble? Do you need friends, Miss Platanova?"

"The baron has told you all about me?" She smiled sadly. "Alas, he has only told you what he knows. But it should be sufficient. There is no place in my life for you or any one else. There never can be. Do you question me? I can say no more. Now I must be gone. I—I have warned you. Do not come again."

She slipped into the street and was gone. King stood in the doorway, looking after her, a puzzled gleam in his eyes. Old Spantz was coming up from the rear, followed by his customer.

"Hello, Mr. Spantz! Good morning. I'm here for the sword."

The old man glared at him in unmistakable displeasure. Truxton began counting out his money. The customer, a swarthy fellow, passed out of the door, turning to glance intently at the young man. A meaning look and a sly nod passed between him and Spantz. The man halted at the corner below and later on followed King to Cook's office, afterward to the castle gates, outside of which he waited until his quarry reappeared. Until King went to bed late that night this swarthy fellow was close at his heels, always keeping well out of sight himself.

"I'll come in soon to look at those rings," said King, placing the notes on the counter. Spantz merely nodded, raked in the bills without counting them and passed the sword over to the purchaser.

Truxton picked up the weapon and stalked away.

A few minutes later he was on his way to the castle grounds, accompanied by the short legged Mr. Hobbs.

A Story of Graustark By GEORGE BARR M'UTCHEON

Hobbs led him through the great park gates and up to the lodge of Jacob Fransch, the venerable high steward of the grounds. Here, to King's utter disgust, he was booked as a plain Cook's tourist and mechanically advised to pay strict attention to the rules.

"It's no disgrace," growled Hobbs, redder than ever. "You're inside the grounds, and you've got to obey the rules, same as any tourist. Right this way, sir. We'll take a turn just inside the wall. Now, on your left, ladies and—ahem!—I should say—ahem!—sir, you may see the first turret ever built on the wall. It is over 400 years old. On the right we have—"

"See here, Hobbs," said King, stopping short. "I'm dashed if I'll let you lecture me as if I were a gang of hayseeds from Joshville."

"Very good, sir. No offense. I quite forgot, sir."

"Just tell me, old chap. Don't lecture. Hobbs, this is all very beautiful and very grand and very slow," said King, stopping to lean against the moss covered wall that encircled the park within a park, the grounds adjoining the grotto. "Can't I hop over this wall and take a peep into the grotto?"

"By no means!" cried Hobbs, horrified. King looked over the low wall. The prospect was alluring. The pool, the trickling rivulets, the mossy banks, the dense shadows—it was maddening to think he could not enter.

"I wouldn't be in there a minute," he argued. "And I might catch a glimpse of a dream lady. Now, I say, Hobbs, here's a low place. I could jump!"

"Mr. King, if you do that I am ruined forever. I am trusted by the steward. He would cut off all my privileges!"—Hobbs could go no further. He was prematurely aghast. Something told him that Mr. King would hop over the wall.

"Go and report me, Hobbs; there's a good fellow. Tell the guards I wouldn't obey. That will let you out, my boy, and I'll do the rest."

He strode off across the bright green turf toward the source of all this enchantment, leaving poor Mr. Hobbs braced against the wall, weak kneed and helpless.

"What are you doing in here?" demanded a voice.

Truxton, conscious of guilt, whirled with as much consternation as if he had been accosted by a voice of thunder. He beheld a very small boy standing at the top of the knoll above him, not thirty feet away. His face was quite as dirty as any small boy's should be at that time of day, and his curly brown hair looked as if it had not been combed since the day before. His firm little legs, in half hose and presumably white knickers, were spread apart, and his hands were in his pockets.

King recognized him at once and looked about uneasily for the attendants who, he knew, should be near. It is safe to say that he came to his feet and bowed deeply, even in humility.

"I am resting, your highness," he said meekly.

"Don't you know any better than to come in here?" demanded the prince. Truxton turned very red.

"I am sorry. I'll go at once."

"Oh, I'm not going to put you out!" hastily exclaimed the prince, coming down the slope. "But you are old enough to know better. You are the gentleman who picked up my crop yesterday. You are an American."

"Yes, a lonely American," with an attempt at the pathetic.

The youngster looked cautiously about. "Say, do you ever go fishing?" he demanded eagerly.

"Occasionally."

"You won't give me away, will you?" with a warning frown. "Don't you tell Jacob Fransch. He's the steward. I—I know a fine place to fish."

The prince led the way up the bank, followed by the amused American, who stooped so admirably that the boy, looking back, whispered that it was "just fine." At the top of the knoll the prince turned into a little shrub lined path leading down to the banks of the pool almost directly below the rocky face of the grotto.

The prince scurried behind a big rock and reappeared at once with a willow branch from the end of which dangled a piece of thread. A bent pin occupied the chief end in view. He unceremoniously shoved the branch into the hands of his confederate and then produced from one of his pockets a silver cigarette box, which he gingerly opened to reveal to the gaze a conglomerate mass of angleworms and grubs.

"A fellow gets awful dirty digging for worms, doesn't he?" he pronounced. The prince took the branch and gingerly dropped the hook into the dancing pool. In less time than it requires to tell it he had a nibble, a bite and a catch. There never was a boy so excited as he when a scarlet nibbler flew into the shrubbery above.

On the opposite bank of the pool suddenly appeared two rigid members of the royal guard, intently watching the fishers. King was somewhat disturbed by the fact that their rifles were in a position to be used at an instant's notice. He felt himself turning pale as he thought of what might have happened if he had taken to flight.

A young lady in a rajah silk gown, a flimsy panama hat tilted well over her nose, with a red feather that stood erect as if always in a state of surprise, turned the bushes and came to a stop almost at King's elbow. He had time to note in his confusion that she was about shoulder high alongside him and that she was staring up into his face with amazed gray eyes. Afterward he was to realize that she was amazingly pretty; that her teeth were very white and even; that her eyes were the most beautiful and expressive he had ever seen; that she was slender and imperious and that there were dimples in her cheeks so fascinating that he could not gather sufficient strength of purpose to withdraw his gaze from them. Of course he did not see them at the outset. She was not smiling, so how could he?

The prince came to the rescue. "This is my Aunt Lorraine, Mr.—Mr.—" He swallowed hard and looked helpless.

"King," supplied Truxton—"Truxton King, your highness." Then, with all the courage he could produce, he said to the beautiful lady: "I'm as guilty as he. See!" He pointed ruefully to four goldfish which he had strung upon wire grass and dropped into the edge of the pool.

"Please put those poor little things back in the pool, Mr. King," said the lady in perfect English.

"Gladly, with the prince's permission," said King, also in English. The prince looked glum, but interposed no imperial objection.

It must be confessed that King's composure was sorely disturbed. He glanced up to find her studying him, plainly perplexed.

"I just wandered in here," he began guiltily. "The prince captured me down there by the big tree."

"Did you say your name is Truxton King?" she asked somewhat skeptically.

"Yes, your—yes, ma'am," he replied, "of New York."

"Your father is Mr. Emerson King?"

Are you the brother of Adele King?" she asked.

"I am."

"I've heard her speak of her brother Truxton. She said you were in South America."

She was regarding him with cool, speculative interest. "I wonder if you are he?"

"I think I am," he said, but doubtfully. "Please pardon my amazement. Perhaps I'm dreaming. At any rate, I'm dazed."

"We were in the convent together for two years. Now that I observe you closely you do resemble her. We were very good friends, she and I."

"Then you'll intercede for me?" he urged, with a fervent glance in the direction of the wall.

She smiled joyously. "More than that," she said, "I shall assist you to escape. Come!"

He followed her through the shrubbery, his heart pounding violently.

"Say!" whispered the prince a few moments later, dropping back as if to impart a grave secret. "See that man over there by the fountain, Mr. King?"

"Bobby!" cried the lady sharply. "Goodby, Mr. King. Remember me to your sister when you write. She—"

"That's Aunt Lorraine's beau," announced the prince. "That's Count Eric Vos Engo." Truxton's look turned to one of interest at once. The man designated was a slight, swarthy fellow in the uniform of a colonel. He did not appear to be particularly happy at the moment.

The American observed the lady's dainty ears. They had turned a delicate pink.

"May I ask who?" began Truxton timidly.

"She will know if you merely call me Lorraine."

They parted company at once, the prince and the lady in the rajah silk going toward the castle, King toward the gates, somewhat dazed and by no means sure of his senses.

What's in a Name.

Returned Traveler—By the way, Mr. Mann, your daughter, Miss Etta, is married, isn't she? Old Resident—No; she could have married a fine young fellow once, but she threw him over on account of his name. She said it was bad enough to be Etta Mann, but she drew the line at Etta Knox.—Chicago Tribune.

Punctuation.
In the earliest Latin inscriptions and manuscripts no system of punctuation is followed. The full point (.) was gradually introduced, being placed on the level, middle or top of the letters. In the minuscule manuscripts of the eighth, ninth and following centuries the period, on the line or high, was first used; then the comma and semicolon and the inverted semicolon, whose power was rather stronger than that of the comma. Some say that the Caroline minuscules of the ninth century exhibit the note of interrogation, for which the inverted semicolon, which was gradually dropped, may have furnished the mark. The Greeks use the semicolon as an interrogation point. In English the colon is said to have been introduced about 1485, the comma about 1501 and the semicolon about 1570. In Sir Philip Sidney's "Arcadia" (1587) all the punctuation points appear, including the note of interrogation, asterisk and parentheses.

TERRIBLE STRAIN RESULTED NOT AMISS

A Lenoir Lady, After Two Weeks Grinding Labor, Feels Better Than Ever.

Lenoir, N. C.—"I am not tired at all, and am stouter than I have ever been," writes Mrs. Kate Waters, of Lenoir, N. C., "although I have just finished a two weeks' wash. I lay my strength to Cardui, the woman's tonic. I have taken a lot of it and I can never praise it enough for what it has done for me. I can never thank you enough for the advice you gave me, to take Cardui, for since taking it I look so well and am stout as a mule."

You are urged to take Cardui, that gentle, vegetable tonic, for weak women. Its use will strengthen and build up your system, relieve or prevent headache, backache and the ailments of weak women. It will surely help you, as it has helped thousands of others, in the past 50 years.
