TRAGEDY AT SCOTLAND NECK.

ONE MAN SHOTS DOWN THREE OTHERS.

E. L. Travis, A. Paul Kitchin, Policeman C. W. Dunn the Victims and E. E. Powell the Assailant.

Because of the parties being well known, much interest was felt here over the news of a shooting tragedy which occurred in Scotland Neck Friday evening. Particulars at the time were meagre, all obtainable being that a man named Powell had in one encounter shot and seriously wounded Senator Travis, Representative Kitchin and Policeman Dunn, that the three wounded men had been taken by special train to a hospital in Richmond, and it was thought neither of them was fatally injured.

A dispatch from Scotland Neck to the Raleigh News and Observer gives the following particulars of the tragedy:

Scotland Neck, March 4.—2:30 o'clock this afternoon, on Main street, near Woolard's stables, the deputy sheriff of the county and chief of police of Scotland Neck, C. W. Dunn; Representative A. Paul Kitchen, of Scotland Neck, and Senator E. L. Travis, of Halifax, were all shot by E. E. Powell, Sr.

From the best information obtainable, it seems that Powell asked Travis why he did not reply to a letter. Travis replied that some time having elapsed since receiving the letter, he did not remember its contents.

Kitchin placed his hand on Powell and requested him "not to get excited," whereupon Powell drew a revolver and shot Kitchin and Travis in quick succession. Officer Dunn then started toward Powell and while turning was shot somewhere in his left side, near the back.

Powell went to his store, a short distance away, got a shotgun and then went to his home.

Messrs. Kitchin and Travis are not considered seriously wounded. Officer Dunn's condition is more serious, but not necessarily fatal.

It is said that Powell, who is about 70 years old, says he will kill any one attempting to arrest him. Mayor Liverman and the citizens generally, are acting with a proper deliberation and will take Powell, but don't want to hurt him.

Mrs. Powell is an invalid, confined in bed, while her husband has barricaded himself in the same house.

Later—Powell has surrendered and arrangements are made to take him to Halifax tonight. The doctors say Dunn is resting quietly. It is a miracle no one was killed.

No one except the parties in the matter know of the contents of the letter in question in the shooting and there is only rumor as to what it contained. Some time ago a son of Mr. Powell was in some trouble, being tried at Halifax for the cutting of a man. In the trial some sort of a compromise was reached and the young man was acquitted. In that trial Messrs. Travis and Kitchin assisted the young man. All that is known of the letter is that Mr. Powell wanted Mr. Travis to tell him why he had not replied to the letter.

Both Messrs. Travis and Kitchin are well known throughout the State, and prominent in social, legal and political circles. Mr. A. P. Kitchin is a brother of Governor W. W. Kitchin and for the past two sessions has represented Halifax county in

WINTERVILLE ITEMS.

Newsp Notes From Our Hustling Neighbor.

Winterville, N. C. March 5 1910. J. D. Cox returned to Fairmont Wednesday.

Miss Kate Chapman left yesterday for Wilson to visit her sister, Miss Lafa Chapman, who is teaching near that town.

Ben Joyner, of Farmville, was in town yesterday and purchased a Hunsucker buggy.

Quite a crowd of young men, as their custom is, went to Ayden last night.

Herbert Cox, who has been at his home at Shelmerdine for the past few days, on account of his father's sickness and death, came in Wednesday to resume his studies in Winterville High School.

Miss Cillo Baldree, who has been spending a few days at her home near Macclesfield, returned Wednesday.

The Y. M. C. A. meets tonight.

Quite a number of books (40 volumes of standard literature) have been added to the Winterville High School library in the last few days.

Dr. Charles E. Brewer, professor of chemistry at Wake Forest College will lecture in the auditorium of Winterville High School Friday night, March, 19th. He is an excellent speaker and there is a treat for those who hear him.

Ernest Gray received a nice roe shad last night by prepaid express, from his father, L. H. Gray, at Pitch Kettle. There's a lot of us that would be pleased at such a gift.

Some of our sidewalks are being improved.

Mrs. Louisa Cox continues very sick.

High Flyer on $12 a Week.

Frank W. Coleman, a $12 a week bookkeeper in the local national bank of Cambridge, Mass. appropriated $144,000 of the bank's money. He received the money as well as kept the books. On his small salary he kept an automobile and was a general high flyer. When he disappeared, the president, the directors and national bank examiner were all surprised that he had taken $17,000 more than the total deposits of the bank. By false balances and padded figures he deceived them all and managed to escape with his loot. It is almost beyond understanding why bank officers and directors do not look closely when an employe is cutting the wind with automobiles and other extravagances. The wise bank official will soon get rid of an employe who on a small salary is living like a man of fortune. He is either robbing the bank or getting into trusting creditors—New and Observer.

W. F. M. Meeting.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church will meet at the home of Mrs. F. G. James at 3:30 Monday afternoon. A full attendance is asked, as the election of officers will take place at this meeting.

the house of representatives of North Carolina, while Mr. E. J. Travis, who is the county chairman of the Democratic executive committee of Halifax and a member of the Democratic State executive committee, represented his district in the state senate, having previously been a member of the general assembly and at one time chairman of the board of directors of the state's prison.

HAPPENINGS WITHIN THE OLD NORTH STATE

GATHERED FROM OUR EXCHANGES TODAY

Newsp Items of Interest Condensed for Busy Readers.

Charlotte, N. C., March 4.—Alleging that his wife's health was irreparably injured by the effects of ether, which was administered to her at the Charlotte Sanitorium, Mr. F. M. Sawyer, a prominent architect this city, has instituted suit against that institution asking damages in the sum of $100,000. Mrs. Sawyer was at the sanitorium sometime ago for treatment and while there underwent an operation, ether being administered, it is said, as an anaesthetic, and it is alleged that she has never recovered from the effects of it. The case promises to be one of unusual interest and strong counsel has been retained on either side.

A visitor to the city yesterday from Adams Creek, a small town several miles down the river, informed a Journal representative yesterday that a large bear had been killed near that place on last Tuesday night. The animal weighed about 300 pounds and was over 6 feet in length. The people in that vicinity have been missing their hogs for some time past and their disappearance was no doubt caused by the bear.—New Bern Journal.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, on Sunday the 2nd of Jan. in his innocent boyhood, Bruce Forbes Tucker, one of the best members of the Philomathian Literary Society of Utopia graded school, Standard, was visited by the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, who, in His infinite wisdom, removed Bruce from among us, therefore be it resolved,

1st. That in his death the Literary society has lost a most loyal member, and the school has lost a good student.

2nd. That the removal of such a sweet, bright and happy life from our midst has left a vacancy and a shadow that will be greatly realized by the school, the Literary society, and the whole community.

3rd. That we commend to God for His great comfort and protection the mother, brothers and sisters, bereft of a dear son and a loving brother.

4th. That a page in the minutes of the society records be inscribed to the memory of dear Bruce, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Daily Reflector for publication.

Mrs. Asa Parham Ill.

Mrs. Asa Parham, one of our most popular ladies has been critically ill with pneumonia and still is in a precarious condition, but her symptoms today are more favorable and inspire the hope of recovery. Dr. Ellis Malcom, of Louisburg, her uncle, has been at her bedside.—Heralderson dispatch to Evening Times, Raleigh.

All Now in Proctor Building.

Superior Court Clerk Moore and Sheriff Tacker have got their offices open in the Proctor building. Persons having business with any of the county officials can find them all there close together.

Make Your Home Beautiful.

So again we say, love your farm. Make it a place of beauty, a place of joyous fruitfulness, an example for your neighbors, a heritage for your children. Make improvements on it that will last beyond your day. Make an ample yard about with all the old-fashioned flowers that your grandmother knew; set a great orchard near it, bearing many manner of fruits; lay off walks and roads leading to it and keep them up, plant hedges along the approaches, and flowering bulbs and shrubs—crape myrtle, and spirea and Privet and roses—so that your grandchildren will some day speak of their grand-sire, who cared enough for the beautiful and loved the farm well enough to plant them.

Name the farm, too, treasure up its history; preserve the traditions of all the romance and adventure and humor and pathos that are in any way connected with it; and if some of the young folks must leave it, let them look back to it with happy memories of beauty and of worthy ideals and of well-ordered industry.—Raleigh (N. C.) Progressive Farmer and Gazette.

Week of Prayer.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Baptist church will observe the week of prayer for home missions, beginning Sunday, March 6th, and closing with the regular monthly missionary meeting Friday 11th. Meetings will be held in the church at 3 o'clock. Sunday's meeting will be led by Miss Maggie Doughty, Monday, Mrs. B. E. Parham, Tuesday, Mrs. E. B. Higgs; Wednesday, Mrs. S. J. Everett; Thursday, Mrs. J. W. Bryan; Friday, Mrs. Wells Browne. All ladies are invited to attend these meetings.

Masons Notice!

There will be a special communication of Greenville Lodge No. 284 A. F. & A. M. Monday March 7th, 1910, at 2 p. m., at the Red Men's hall. All members requested to attend. Ways and means for rebuilding the temple will be considered.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL BRIEFS.

The Visitors Here and People Who Travel.

Mrs. C. S. Forbes is visiting in LaGrange.

Miss Mollie Manning went to Hamilton today.

Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Outlaw went to Kinston today.

D. D. Haskett and son, Henry, went to Kinston today.

Miss Lissie Brooks, from near Greenville, is visiting Mrs. B. G. Albritton.

Mrs. M. Cherry, of Washington, came up Friday to visit her mother, Mrs. Mary Foley.

County Superintendent W. F. Ragsdale was at Smithfield today where he addressed the teachers of Johnston county.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

The first Saturday crowd was in town today.

The temperature took a little decline last night.

The Board of County Commissioners will meet Monday.

The work of clearing the burned district is being pushed on.

There have been more strangers in town this week than for some time.

The skating rink opening drew a large crowd Friday night. There were many tumbles among the skaters.

How He Got Even.

A traveling man who stutters spent all afternoon in trying to sell a grouchy business man a bill of goods, and was not very successful.

As the salesman was locking up his grip the grouchy was impolite enough to observe in the presence of his clerks: "You must find that impediment in your speech very inconvenient."

"Oh, n-no" replied the salesman. "Every one has his peculiarity. S-stammering is mine. What's y-yours?"

"I'm not aware that I have any," replied the merchant.

"D-do you stir y-your coffee with your r-right hand?" asked the salesman.

"Why, yes, of course," replied the merchant.

"W-well," went on the salesman, "t-that's your p-peculiarity. Most people use a t-teaspoon."—From Success Magazine.

Fight Over Small Matter.

There was a fisticuff today between Edgar Buck and D. C. James that grew out of the former's name being used jovially in a recent query in The Reflector signed "Tax Payer." It was a silly thing for a disturbance to take place about, as it was only a matter of pleasantry to call attention to something else, and not intended as any reflection whatever.

Cost Added After 15th.

Notice is hereby given that after the 15th of March costs will be added to all unpaid taxes due the town of Greenville for the year 1909.

CAROLINA CLUB.

Will Now Proceed With Equipment for Re-opening.

The damage done in the recent fire to the Phoenix building, a part of the upper floor of which is occupied by Carolina Club, caused a suspension for the time being of the work of refitting the club quarters for opening. The insurance on the building and club have both been adjusted. Mr. Mumford has already let the contract for repairing the building, and as soon as this is done the work in the club rooms will quickly follow, and be made very attractive.

To Protect the Roads.

The next legislature ought to put a special tax upon log and lumber wagons. That is to say, every man who runs a lumber or a log wagon ought to have to procure a license and add this to the road fund of the county. It is not just to other taxpayers the roads should be destroyed, as they now are, by the continuous running over them with these wagons. One such wagon will do a road more harm in a week than all the other travel of the neighborhood will do in a month. It's only right they should pay for this extra privilege.—The State Democrat.

BUILD FOR THE FUTURE.

Pitt county is growing. By a healthy reproduction and a desirable immigration, it is adding many people every year to its population. Its great strength is increasing. It is like unto a giant, whose powers have not yet been developed, nor its strength tested. It has only begun to grow. Its industrial and educational interests are in their infancy. Compared to what the future has in store for "Old Pitt," its present productiveness is small.

To men with a vision sufficiently broad, not to be bounded by the narrow horizon of the immediate present, and their own small communities; the county's possibilities are beyond description, hence it is that it behooves every citizen of the county who would prepare it for the great progress that the future has in store, to urge the county commissioners to purchase land enough on which to build a court house to meet the approbation of those who will pass judgment fifty years hence.

The Reflector certainly hopes some means will be provided for the End of the Century Club to re-establish the public library. The ladies labored long and earnestly for the library, and it was with sorrow that they saw the fruits of their labor swept away by the recent fire, and that without a penny of insurance. The library was a great convenience and comfort to many people of the community to whom it afforded an opportunity of reading good books that could not be obtained otherwise.

Give your co operation and support to those women who have set to work to make Greenville a more attractive town. There is plenty of room for improvement.

SNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Chapter I—Truxton King arrives in Edelweiss, capital of Graustark, and meets the beautiful niece of Spantz, a gunmaker. II—King does a favor for Prince Robin, the young ruler of the country, whose guardian is John Tullis, an American. III—Baron Dangloss, minister of police, interviews King and warns him against Olga, the gunmaker's niece. IV—King invades the royal park, meets the prince and is presented to the Jaded Fascinating Aunt Loraine. V—The committee of ten, conspirators against the prince, meets in an underground chamber, where the girl Olga is disclosed as one who is to kill Prince Robin with a bomb. VI—John Tullis is on the beautiful Countess Ingelmede, who warns him that her hated and notorious old husband, Count Marlanx, is conspiring against the prince.

CHAPTER VII. AT THE WITCH'S HUT.

IN the meantime our excellent young friend, Truxton King, was having a sorry time of it. It all began when he went to the cathedral in the hope of seeing the charming aunt of the little prince once more. Not only did he attend one service, but all of them, having been assured that the royal family worshipped there quite regularly and as religiously as the lowliest communicant. She did not appear.

More than all this, he met with fresh disappointment when he ambled down to the armorer's shop. The doors were locked and there was no sign of life about the shuttered place.

The next day King made a purely business call at the shop of Mr. Spantz. He looked long, with a somewhat shifty eye, at the cabinet of ancient rings and necklaces, and then departed without having seen the interesting Miss Piatanova.

At his room in the hotel he found a note addressed to himself. It did not have much to say, but it meant a great deal. There was no signature, and the handwriting was that of a woman.

"Please do not come again." That was all.

He laughed with a fine tone of defiance and went back to the shop at 5 o'clock, just to prove that nothing so timid as a note could stop him. On the occasion of this last visit to the shop he did not stay long, but went away somewhat dazed to find himself the possessor of a ring he did not want and out of pocket just $30, American. Having come to the conclusion that knight errantry of that kind was not only profligate, but distinctly irritating to his sense of humor, he looked up Mr. Hobbs and arranged for a day's ride in the mountains.

Mr. Hobbs led his patron into the mountain roads early the next morning, both well mounted and provided with luncheon.

It is a good three hours' ride to the summit of Monastery mountain. And after the height has been attained one does not care to linger long among the chilly, whistling crags, with their snow crevasses and bitter winds. The utter loneliness, the aloofness of this frost crowned crest appalls, disheartens one who loves the fair, green things of life.

It was 3 o'clock when they clattered down a stone road and up to the forbidding vale in which lurked, like an evil, guilty thing, the log built home of the witch of Ganlook gap, that ancient female who made no secret of her practices in witchcraft.

A low thatched roof protruded from the hill against which the hut was built. As a matter of fact, a thin chimney grew out of the earth itself, for all the world like a smoking tree stump. The single door was so low that one was obliged to stoop to enter the little room where the dame had been holding forth for three score years, 'twas said. This was her throne room, her dining room, her bedchamber, her all, it would seem, unless one had been there before and knew that her kitchen was beyond, in the side of the hill. The one window, sans glass, looked narrowly out upon an odd opening in the foliage below, giving the occupant of the hut an unobstructed view of the winding road that led up from Edelweiss.

The two horsemen rode into the glen and came plump upon a small detachment of the royal guard, mounted and rather resolute in their lack of amiability.

"Soldiers, I'd say," remarked Mr. King. His eyes brightened and his hat came off with a switch.

"Hello! There's the prince!" Farther up the glen—in fact at the very door of the witch's hut—were gathered a small but rather distinguished portion of the royal household. It was not difficult to recognize the little prince. He was standing beside John Tullis, and it is not with a desire to speak ill of his valor that we add he was clutching the slackest part of that gentleman's riding breeks with an earnestness that betrayed extreme trepidation. Facing them, on the same doorstep, was the witch herself. Behind Tullis and the prince were several ladies and gentlemen.

Truxton King's heart swelled suddenly. Next to the tall figure of Colonel Quinnox of the royal guard was the slim, entrancing lady of his most recent dreams, the prince's aunt, the lady of the goldfish conspiracy!

The Countess Marlanx, tall and exquisite, was a little apart from the others, with Baron Dangloss and young Count Vos Engo, whom Truxton was ready to hate because he was a recognized suitor for the hand of the slim young person in gray. He was for riding boldly up to this little group, but a very objectionable lieutenant barred the way, supported in no small measure by the agitated defection of Mr. Hobbs.

The way was made easy by the intervention of the alert young woman in gray. She caught sight of the restricted adventurers—or one of them, to be quite accurate—and, after speeding a swift smile of astonishment, turned quickly to Prince Bobby.

The prince broke the ice. "Hello!" he cried shrilly. "Hello!" responded the gentleman readily.

John Tullis found himself being dragged away from the witch's door toward the newcomer at the bottom of the glen. Mr. Hobbs listened with deepening awe to the friendly conversation which resulted in Truxton King going forward to join the party in front of the hut.

Truxton was duly presented to the ladies and gentlemen of the party by John Tullis, who gracefully announced that he knew King's parents in New York. Baron Dangloss was quite an old friend, if one were to judge by the manner in which he greeted the young man. The lady in gray smiled so sweetly and nodded so lightly that Tullis, instead of presenting King to her as he had done to the Countess Marlanx and others, merely said:

"And you know one another, of course." Whereupon she flushed very prettily.

Truxton King, scarcely able to believe his good fortune, crowded into the loathsome, squalid room with his aristocratic companions.

Never had Truxton looked upon a creature who so thoroughly vindicated the lifelong reliance he had put in the description of witches given by the fairy tale tellers of his earliest youth. She had the traditional hook nose and peaked chin, the glittering eyes, the thousand wrinkles and the toothless gums. He looked about for the raven and the cat, but if she had them they were not in evidence. At a rough guess he calculated her age at 100 years.

"Growsome lady, isn't she?" whispered King.

"I shall dream of her for months," whispered the lady in gray, shuddering.

"Would you mind telling me how I am to address you?" whispered King. They were leaning against the mud plastered wall near the little window side by side. "You see, I'm a stranger in a strange land."

"You must not speak while she is gazing into the crystal," she warned after a quick, searching glance at his face.

Although it was broad daylight, the low, stuffy room would have been pitch dark had it not been for the flickering candles on the table beside the bent gray head of the mumbling fortune teller, whose bony fingers twitched over and about her crystal globe like wiggling serpents' tails. The window gave little or no light, and the door was closed, her grinning grandson leaning against it limply.

The witch began by reading the fortune of John Tullis, who had been pushed forward by the wide eyed prince. In a cackling monotone she rambled through a supposititious history of his past, for the chief part so unintelligible that even he could not guess the meanings. Later she bent her piercing eyes upon the prince and refused to read his future, shrilly asserting that she had not the courage to tell what might befall the little ruler, all the while muttering something about the two little princes who had died in a tower ages and ages ago. Seeing that the boy was frightened, Tullis withdrew him to the background. The Countess Marlanx came next. She was smiling derisively.

"GROWSOME LADY, ISN'T SHE?" WHISPERED KING.

"You have returned from some one whom you hate," began the witch. "He is your husband. You will marry again. There is a fair haired man in love with you. You are in love with him. I can see trouble!"

But the countess deliberately turned away from the table, her cheeks flaming with the consciousness that a smile had swept the circle behind her graceful back.

"Ridiculous!" she said and avoided John Tullis' gaze. "I don't care to hear any more. Come, baron! You are next."

Truxton King, subdued and troubled in his mind, found himself studying his surroundings and the people who went so far to make them interesting. His eye had fallen upon a crack in the floor that led to the kitchen, although he had no means of knowing that it was a kitchen. To his amazement, a gleaming eye was looking out upon the room from beyond this narrow crack. He looked long and found that he was not mistaken. There was an eye glued close to the opposite side of the rickety door, and its gaze was directed to the Countess Marlanx.

Without pausing to consider the result of his action, he sprang across the room, shouting as he did so that there was a man behind the door. Grasping the latch, he threw the door wide open, the others in the room looking at him as if he were suddenly crazed.

There was instant commotion, with cries and exclamations from all. Quick as the others were, the old woman was at his side before them, snarling with rage. Her talonlike fingers sunk into his arm, and her gaze went darting about the room in a most convincing way.

Baron Dangloss was convinced that the young man had seen the eye. Without compunction he began a search of the room, the old woman looking on with a grin of glee.

"Search! Search!" she croaked. "It was the spirit eye! It is looking at you now, my fine baron! It finds you, yet cannot be found. No, no! Oh, you fools! Get out! Get out! All of you! Prince or no prince, I fear you not, nor all your armies. This is my home, my castle! Go! Go!"

"There was a man here, old woman," said the baron coolly. "Where is the man?"

She laughed aloud, a horrid sound. The prince clutched Tullis by the leg in terror.

"There is no window, no trapdoor, no skylight," remarked the baron, puzzled. "Nothing but the stovepipe, six inches in diameter. A man couldn't crawl out through that, I'm sure. Mr. King, we've come upon a real mystery—the eye without a visible body."

Suddenly the old woman stepped into the middle of the room and began to wave her hands in a mysterious manner over an empty pot that stood on the floor in front of the stove. Then before their startled eyes a thin film of smoke began to rise from the empty pot. It grew in volume until the room was quite dense with it. Even more quickly than it began it disappeared, drawn apparently by some supernatural agency into the draft of the stove and out through the rickety chimney pipe.

A deafening crash as of many guns came to their ears from the outside. With one accord the entire party rushed to the outer door, a wild laugh from the hag pursuing them.

"There!" she screamed. "There goes all there was of him! And so shall we all go some day. Fire and smoke!"

Just outside the door stood Lieutenant Saffo of the guard.

"Good Lord!" shouted Tullis. "What is the matter? What has happened?"

"The storm, sir," said Saffo. "It is coming down the valley like the wind." A great crash of thunder burst overhead, and lightning darted through the black, swirling skies.

Salvage Fire Extinguisher

Fire Department statistics show that some eighty per cent. of all fires are extinguished by chemical apparatus.

Nearly all fires are discovered at the start and are readily put out if means are at once available.

A stream is thrown to a distance of about fifty feet, carrying a large amount of carbonic acid gas, which excludes the oxygen and prevents combustion.

A fire cannot live if a small per cent. of carbonic acid gas is in the air.

It is forty times as efficient as water and will extinguish fires of oil, naphtha, gasoline, etc., which water only spreads.

Protect your home and property before it is too late.
