The principal informs us that more new students are expected to enter W. H. S. next Monday.

MONUMENT FOR BOONE.

Rowan's Contribution to the Memory of "The Great Long Knife."

J. R. McCrary is happy today. He has just received a letter saying that E. C. Gregory, Esq., and Mr. Walter Woodson, of Salisbury, had made an order for a monument for the big Boone celebration to be held in Davidson county on Saturday, April 30. The monument will be of Rowan granite, in the rough, and about 12 feet high, with the upper half in the shape of a huge indian-arrow head. This monument will be Rowan's gift, and is very appropriate, for Boone and the Indians were deadly enemies. They dreaded his as the great "Long Knife." Two of his sons and one brother, Squire Boone, Jr., were slain by Indians in Kentucky. His daughter Jemima, and two other girls were captured by them and rescued by a party headed by Boone. He at one time was captured himself and lived with the Shawnee tribe over a year before he escaped, which he did just in time to warn the fort at Boonesborough of an Indian attack. This fort was named after Boone and was built by early settlers against the Indians. It consisted of thirteen log cabins set in a square and surrounded by a high fence or palisade with loop-holes. Around its sides many a wily red-skin bit the dust before the rifles of Boone and his companions.

Rowan's gift of the arrow-head monument is indeed a suitable one, and reflects honor on the givers.

The Boone celebration is coming along and promises to be a great occasion.—Lexington Dispatch.

Gornto Shoe Co.

The Gornto Shoe Co., that has just opened in the corner store of the Brady building, is an attractive place. The stock is coming in and embraces a complete line of shoes for men, women and children. Both Mr. Gornto and his salesmen are practical shoe men, having years of experience in this special line. An advantage to customers is that shoes are fitted right in the store and there is no risk to run. Their show window has an artistic display that commands the attention of all passers, and this is a good index of their stock which has been selected with great care. 3 19 t d l w

Millinery Opening.

Our opening display of spring millinery will be on Tuesday, March 22nd, and the ladies of Greenville and community are cordially invited. Our stock has been carefully selected and embraces the very latest shapes and styles. Mrs. I. F. Lee & Co. 3 16 t f d w

No Jury Cases.

Monday is the time for the March term of court to begin, but owing to having no court house there will be no jury cases at this term. The business of the court this term will likely be transacted in the clerk's office in the Proctor building.

New Grocery Store.

The Tobacco Grocery Co., composed of several gentlemen in the tobacco district of the town, have opened a grocery store in the building on Ninth street opposite the Liberty warehouse. J. O. Harris is manager of the store and a nice stock is carried.

Handsome Quarters.

There is not a handsomer suit of offices in Greenville than the new quarters arranged for the business use of the Farmers' Consolidated Tobacco Co. on the second floor of the Brady building. The entire second floor has been divided with a hall and partitions into separate offices for the president, secretary and auditor of the company, all communicating, and a consultation room for the board of directors. Each room is beautifully furnished and well arranged with modern office appliances. York & Cobb, contractors, also have an office on the same floor.

Walks Over Shoes.

C. S. Forbes has a window display of the famous "Walk Over" shoe, which he handles exclusively here, that is attracting much attention. The central feature of the display is a circular stand on which different styles of shoes are placed, and the figure of a man in evening dress is walking over these, taking regular steps over each shoe as he comes to it. The mechanism is operated by a small electric motor. Throngs of people gather before the window to watch the novel display.

THE CIVIC LEAGUE.

The Ladies Are On the Right Line for Cleanliness.

The Civic League met in regular session Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. C. T. Munford. We regretted that sickness kept so many away, however we were glad indeed, to have the names of three new members enrolled. We welcome them, and will be delighted to see them at our next meeting. We appreciate very much the many kind and encouraging expressions heard on all sides.

One burning question we have asked us frequently is, "Can't you do something to remedy this loose paper blowing everywhere? It is such a nuisance. Why must I have to spend hours and hours picking up paper that some careless person has thrown down?"

Friends, this is a question that we must face, and there never was a better time to do it than right now. Surely there never was a time when it needed to be done more than now. Let us begin at once and take care never to throw down another piece of paper for some other person to come after and pick up. It is a known fact that in many cities a person dare not throw a piece of paper on the street. What is the result to the offender? A policeman points to the offensive paper and tells him to pick it up, that is all.

No town can ever be spoken of as a well kept town until this nuisance is abolished. Our honorable mayor and board of aldermen are always interested in everything that pertains to the cleanliness, and beauty of "Our Greenville" and they will soon be forced to adopt stringent measures to prohibit this, unless the offenders co-operate with them in their efforts to keep our town clean, by each citizen looking to his own paper.

Another cry that we still hear is—"Can't you do something about this spitting evil?" Now, who do you suppose this complaint comes from? The ladies, you say? Partly yes, but far more men have said to us, "Can't you do something to keep men from spitting on my floor?" Alas! Is there a man so dead to public decency, and so dead to the thought of public health, that he will enter a man's office, or his store or any place of business, and deliberately spit on that man's floor? It is unspeakable yet it is a fact, or else the complaint had not been made by so many.

These requests for assistance tell us plainer than anything the attitude of the town to our League.

Again, the ladies wish to call the attention of the school boys and girls to the essay prize. There seems to have been a misunderstanding. The contest is open to any boy or girl in school in Greenville, either the graded or training school. The prize is $5 in gold to the boy or girl who writes the most practical essay on "Civic Beauty," and will be awarded during commencement. The essay must be in the hands of Mayor H. W. Whedbee on or before May 4th, 1910, who with Rev. B. F. Huske, Rev. Jno H. Shore, Mr. Ed Flanagan and Mr. D. J. Whichard will decide who the winner is. The winning essay will be published at once, and the next best will follow later. We hope many will enter the contest. Reporter.

There is just a week more of Lent.

COST OF FERTILIZER IGNORANCE.

According to the latest obtainable statistics, the farmers of six contiguous Southern States—Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, the Carolinas, and Virginia—spend over $50,000,000 a year for commercial fertilizers. The total public school fund of these States amounts to $11,000,000.

And of the $50,000,000 paid for fertilizers, it is not too much to say that over $11,000,000 is wasted through ignorance of crop and soil needs.

In other words, our Ignorance Tax on the one single, solitary item of commercial fertilizers alone is more than the total amount we are spending on public schools for increasing the intelligence of our children!

If the $50,000,000 spent by these States is profitable now, reasonable knowledge of fertilizer facts would make it twice as profitable. Or to put it differently: reasonably careful study of soil needs, crop needs, the functions of different fertilizing elements, etc., etc., would add $50,000,000 a year to the profits of our Southern farmers.

And $50,000,000 a year properly expended in bond issues, as interest and sinking fund, would put an eight months' centralized graded school within reach of every farm boy and girl in these States, would put a macadam road in these States, and would carry on a campaign against tuberculosis, typhoid fever, malaria and hookworm diseases that would probably increase by one fifth the average length of human life.

How fearful the waste of ignorance on one despised commodity!—Raleigh (N. C.) Progressive Farmer and Gazette.

Engagement Announced.

Friends here have been told of the engagement of Miss Mary Lee Woodard, of Wilson, to Mr. Cushing Biggs Hassell, of Williamston, the marriage to take place in Wilson early in April. The news has been received with great pleasure by the friends of these popular young people, and the wedding will be one of the leading society events of the post-Lenten season in Wilson.

Miss Woodard is the attractive daughter of Hon. and Mrs. John E. Woodard. She was educated in the Convent of Notre Dame in Maryland and is a young lady of personal charms and culture of the highest. She has visited Williamston often, and has always been a charming acquisition to its society.

Mr. Hassell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hassell, and a grandson of the late Elder C. B. Hassell, one of Martin county's most distinguished and highly respected citizens. Mr. Hassell is connected prominently with the business, social and club life of Williamston, and is very popular with his friends, who delight in the fact that he is to bring so charming a lady to live in Williamston.—Williamston Enterprise.

DON'T BE A QUITTER.

The Spring Hope Leader has been trying to awaken interest in the establishment of a tobacco market in that town, but seems to have become discouraged and quit the effort. It says:

The Leader has made its last call for a meeting of the citizens to consider the establishment of a tobacco market. The next time a call for a meeting is made it will have to be made by some one else.

A newspaper man is about the last one who should ever think of getting discouraged. He may get hard knocks, and even at times feel from the indifference of those for whom he is laboring that his efforts toward upbuilding the town are not appreciated, but he should never be a quitter. Often the newspaper man has to fight alone for an enterprise, and if he becomes discouraged and quits, all may be lost. Continued effort is the way to bring results, and when you start out after anything never give up. This is a good rule to apply in any undertaking.

The first execution by electrocution in this State took place in the penitentiary on Friday, when Walter Morrison, a Robeson county negro, was put to death. Owing to delay in getting the electric chair installed the condemned man was reprieved four times before being finally executed.

They had a regular monkey and parrot time with an all night session of congress, Thursday night, and the insurgents with the aid of the Democrats whipped out the regulars. And it made Speaker Cannon "cuss-er" mad.

It is mighty close to census taking time for some towns to be making large population guesses. The real showing may put the laugh on them.

A Story of Graustark
By
GEORGE BARR
M'CUTCHEON

SNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Chapter I—Truxton King arrives in Edelweiss, capital of Graustark, and meets the beautiful niece of Spantz, gunmaker. II—King does a favor for Prince Robin, the young ruler of the country, whose guardian is John Tullis, an American. III—Baron Dangloss, minister of police, interviews King and warns him against Olga, the gunmaker's niece. IV—King invades the royal park, meets the prince and is presented to the lad's fascinating Aunt Loraine. V—The committee of ten, conspirators against the prince, meets in an underground chamber, where the girl Olga is disclosed as one who is to kill Prince Robin with a bomb. VI—John Tullis is on the beautiful Countess Ingomede, who warns him that her hated and notorious old husband, Count Marlaux, is conspiring against the prince. VII, VIII, IX and X—King visits the house of the wren of Ganook gap and meets the royal household there. He sees an eye aiming through a crack in a door, and while searching for the person he is overpowered and dragged into a loft. He is confronted by Count Marlaux and then taken to the underground den of the committee of ten.

CHAPTER XI. UNDER THE GROUND.

THE second day after his incarceration began King was given food and drink. It was high time for he was almost famished. Thereafter twice a day he was led into the larger room and given a surprisingly hearty meal.

Peter Brutus had just voiced the pleasure of the majority by urging the necessity for physical torture to wring the government's secrets from the prisoner. King, half famished, half crazed by thirst, had been listening to the fierce argument through the thin door that separated the rooms. He heard the sudden, eager movement toward the door of his cell and squared himself against the opposite wall, ready to fight to the death. Then there came a voice that he recognized.

A woman was addressing the conspirators in tones of deadly earnestness. His heart gave a bound. It was the first time since his incarceration that he had heard the voice of Olga Platanova, she who still must be his friend.

"No! You shall not torture him. I have said he is no spy. I still say it!" she was exclaiming.

"God, girl, we cannot turn him loose now. He must die." This was from Spantz.

"We cannot release him, I grant you," she said, and Truxton's heart sank. "Not now, but afterward, yes. When it is all over he can do no harm. But hear me now, all of you. If he is harmed in any way I shall not perform my part of the work on the 26th. This is final."

"You cannot withdraw!" exclaimed Peter Brutus. "You are pledged. You are sworn. It is ordained."

"I, Olga Platanova, say this to you. It is not a plea, not a petition; it is an ultimatum. Spare him or the glorious cause must suffer by my defection."

"Sh! Not so loud, girl! He can hear every word you say!"

"Let him hear. Let him know that I, Olga Platanova, am to hurl the thing that is to destroy the life of Prince Robin. I am not afraid to have him know today what the world will know next week. Then the world will say that Olga Platanova was not a beast, but a deliverer, a creator! Let him hear!"

The listener's blood was running cold. The life of Prince Robin! An assassination! "The thing that will destroy!" A bomb!

For half an hour they argued with her, seeking to turn her from the stand she had taken. Then they came to terms with her. Truxton King owed his life to this strange girl, who knew him not at all, but who believed in him.

Truxton was brought into the room a few minutes later. He was white with emotion as he faced the committee of ten. Before a word could be addressed to him he blurted out:

"You cowards! Weak as I am, I would have fought for you. Miss Platanova, if I could have got through that door. Thank you for what you have done to convince these dogs! Only don't do this awful thing! Think of that dear little boy!"

Olga Platanova cried out and covered her eyes with her hands. She was led from the room by William Spantz. Peter Brutus stood over King, whose arms were held by two stalwart men. "Enough!" he commanded. "We spare you not for her sake, but for the sake of the cause we serve. Hear me! You are to be held here a prisoner until our plans are consummated. You will be properly fed and cared for. You have heard Miss Platanova say that she will cook the food for you herself, but you are not to see her."

King interrupted him. "I haven't the least doubt that you will kill me in the end. She may not be here to protect me after—the assassination."

"She is prepared to die by the same bomb that slays the prince," was all that Brutus would say in response to this, but King observed the sly look that went around their throats. He knew then that they meant to kill him in the end.

Afterward, in his little room, he writhed in the agony of helplessness. The prince, his court, the government—all were to be blasted to satisfy the end of this sickening conspiracy. Loraine! She, too, was doomed! He groaned aloud in his misery and awe.

"WEAK AS I AM, I WOULD HAVE FOUGHT FOR YOU."

There was a telegraph instrument in the outer room. He could hear it ticking off its messages day and night and could hear the discussion of reports as they came in or went out. It soon became clear to him that the wire connected the room with Marlaux's headquarters near Balak, in Asphahn, a branch instrument being stationed in the cave above the witch's hut.

On his third night he heard the committee discussing the conditions at the castle.

"The count is more afraid of this man Tullis than of all the rest," averred Peter Brutus. "He has reasons to hate and fear the Americans. That is why he desires the death of our prisoner. He has said time and again over the wire that King will in some way escape and play the deuce with our plans. It does not seem possible, however. We have him absolutely secure."

"This is the 22d; Saturday is the 26th. Nothing could be done to stop us in four days," said one of the women.

"Count Marlaux will be ready on the 26th. He has said so. A new strike will be declared on the railroad on the 25th, and the strikers will be in the city with their grievances. Saturday's celebration will bring men from the mountains and the mines to town. A single blow, and we have won." So spoke Brutus.

"We must not—we cannot fail," grated William Spantz, and the cry was reiterated by half a dozen voices.

The next morning, after a sleepless night, Truxton King made his first determined attempt to escape.

He knew that two armed men stood guard in the outer room day and night. The door to the stairway leading into the armorer's shop was of iron and heavily barred; the door opening into the sewer was even more securely bolted. Besides, there was a great stone door at the foot of the passage. The keys to these two doors were never out of the possession of William Spantz. One of his guards held the key to the stairway door. His only chance lay in his ability to suddenly overpower two men and make off by way of the armorer's shop.

When his little door was opened on the morning of the 23d Truxton King's long, powerful figure shot through as if sped by a catapult. The man with the candle and the knife went down like a beef, felled by a blow on the jaw.

The American, his eyes blazing with hope and desperation, kept onward, to find himself face to face with Olga Platanova!

She was staring at him with frightened eyes, her lips apart, her hands to her breast. He turned.

"He has not the key," she cried. "nor have I. You have no chance to escape. Go back!"

A key rattled in the door. When it swung open two men stood in the

"HE HAS NOT THE KEY," she cried, both with drawn pistols. The girl leaped between them and the helpless, defeated American.

"Remember!" she cried. "You are not to kill him!"

Peter Brutus had risen from the floor, half dazed, but furious. He made a vicious leap at King, his knife ready for the lunge.

"I'm glad it's you!" roared King, leaping aside. His fist shot out, and again Brutus went down.

"Miss Platanova, call your uncle," she was ordered. "It is now necessary to bind the fellow's hands. They are too dangerous to be allowed to roam at large in this fashion."

All day long Truxton paced his little prison, bitterly lamenting his ill timed effort. Now he would be even more carefully guarded. His hands were bound behind his back. He was powerless. If he had only waited! Luck had been against him. How was he to know that the guard with the keys had gone upstairs when Olga brought his breakfast down? It was fate.

The 23d dragged itself into the past, and the 24th was following in the gloomy wake of its predecessors. Two days more! He began to feel the approach of madness. His own death was not far away. It would follow that of the prince and of Olga Platanova, his friend. But he was not thinking of his own death; he was thinking of the prince's life.

Forty-eight hours! That was all! Early that night as he lay with his ear to the crack of the door he heard them discussing his own death. It was to come as soon as Olga had gone to her reward. She was not there to defend him. Spantz had said that she was praying in her room, committing her soul to God. Truxton King suddenly pricked up his ears, attracted by a sentence that fell from the lips of one of the men.

"Tullis is on his way to the hills of Dawsbergen by this time. He will be out of the way on the 26th safe enough."

"Count Marlaux was not to be satisfied until he had found the means to draw him away from Edelweiss," said another. "This time it will work like a charm. Late this afternoon Tullis was making ready to lead a troop of cavalry into the hills to effect a rescue. Santa Maria! That was a clever stroke! Not only does he go himself, but with him goes a captain with 100 soldiers from the fort. Ha, ha! Marlaux is a fox—a very exceptional fox!"

Tullis off to the hills with soldiers to effect a rescue! Truxton sat up, his brain whirling.

"A wise fox!" agreed Peter Brutus thickly. "I wonder what our fine prisoner will say to it when the new prisoner comes to keep him company over the 26th."
